To be classed as a novice a boxer can not have won any previous tournaments. The curtain-raiser was a hard fought bout at the 133 pound level. Warren Bonisteel of S.P.S. out-pointed J. Davies of PHE.

In the 140 pound class Pat Duffy of St. Mike's decisioned M. E. Wright of Trinity in one of the better fought bouts of the meet. Duffy was given all three rounds by the official press score card but Wright landed several good left hooks and made Duffy go all out to win.

The 147 pounders put on a blood-drawing tilt with Mel Lister of U.C. copping the duke from R. Webster of S.P.S. after the Skule man had landed far more solid blows and appeared to have won. However Lister was the aggressor and won on that merit.

The comic piece of the card was the 155 pound classic. J. Boddy, S.P.S. got the nod after a wild melee with R. Culliton of St. Mike's. Culliton got points for aggressiveness in the second round when he gained the first fall with a beautiful flying mare, with tuck. Boddy climbed to his feet and promptly bloodied his opponent's nose and went on to win handily. The finale was halted before the end of the first round when R. Baird of Meds obviously out-classed his less adept rival, Hart of Vic. Baird staggered his opponent right after the bell with a series of hard rights and lefts and had him hanging on the ropes when referee Tony Canzano stopped further slaughter.

Dents, Forestry Winners In Interfaculty Hockey

SPS IIIs went down before Dent A's to the tune of 5-1 in a intramural hockey fixture in Varsity Arena yesterday. Dents came from behind a one goal deficit in the starting period and held the hapless engineers scoreless for the remainder of the contest while they scored five counters.

Young provided the inspiration for the dentists as he potted in their first two goals, the only Dents scoring in the first period. Le May notched the first marker of the game after only five seconds of play to give the Skulemen the lead they held for roughly four minutes.

MacMillan garnered another Dents goal at 21:10 and Hurton scored the fourth goal for the winners approximately ten minutes later. Walker came through for the final score for the embyro dentists. Wilson of Dents and Brace of SPS both garnered assists.

Lineups

Dent A. — Goal, Diefenbacker, defence, McMillan, Cudmore; centre, Glenny; forwards, Walker, Hurton. Alternates, Mewha, Wilson, Kennedy, Young, Langmaid, Halbenese.

SPS III—Goal, McKay; defence, Stallwood, Lawrence; centre, Coates; forwards, Brace, LeMay. Alternates, Cole, Jeffries, Woolatt, Frid, Todkill, Watkins.

The Forestry B intramural hockey entry handed the newly born Institutional Management aggregation a decisive 5-0 thumping at Varsity Arena yesterday. Scoring three markers in the first twenty minute stanza and copping another duo in the final, the woodchoppers showed too much speed and experience for the business men.

Clarke packed the biggest scoring punch for the winners as he netted three goals to qualify for the top scorers position. Prendergast and Daley added singles to the green and white total. Prendergast and Cunningham picked up two assists apiece and Clarke was in on another.

Prendergast potted the opening goal of the game at 1:12 of the first frame. Clarke majored at 2:35 and Daley's goal at the 9:55 mark ended the scoring in the first period. With only ten seconds gone in the second half another at 20:55 only forty five seconds later.

Lineups

Forestry B—Goal, McPherson; defence, Daley Fingland; centre, Prendergast; forwards, Cunningham, Clarke. Alternates, Tamosetis, Burton, Anderson, Banks, Beatty, Fr ken, Wilson, Booth.

Christmas 1948

In the past years it has been traditional for the last fall issue of The Varsity to editorialize on the spirit of Christbas.

Today's issue is the last of the fall term but in spite of the fact that Christmas is fast approaching, we find it somewhat difficult to voice the traditional message of peace on earth and goodwill to men.

There still seems to be something lacking, even more than the customary blanket of snow. The Christmas message, sung for almost two thousand years, is still potent and will continue to be for another two thousand years but it rings a slightly hollow note today.

The three wise men who heralded the approach of the original Christmas are dead and none have arisen to take their place.

Peace on earth . . . the ageless words of the Gloria proclaimed it, but the message falls on deaf ears.

Goodwill to men . . .too often the babble of discord and the hymns of hate drown out its eternal message of hope.

But we cannot look for Christmas where Christmas is not. It would be trite to observe that there is not peace on earth. The peace is in the hearts of men of good will and as long as there are men of good will there is still hope.

There is still meaning in Christmas. It has its shrine in the family grouped around the Christmas tree, in the spirit of giving . . . in a world apart, of peace, and a sort of magic.

COLLEGE BEAUTY CONTESTS—

May they continue until the Judgment Day! Everyone likes to look at co-eds who have a little more of this and a little less of that. And in Canada's colleges, it's natural to look to Player's Cigarettes for fresh, cool smoking.

Marriage Rate Not Raised By Blackouts

Eybrows around the campus raised perceptably last week when the Toronto Marriage Licence Bureau reported that marriages for the first half of November were twice the number for the corresponding period in 1947.

There was really no reason to jump to any conclusions however, especially the ones that most seemed to have jumped to. A survey by Herb Bird-dog, six-star (Big Dipper) reported for The Varsity, shows that the blackout had no effect on this rise in conjuga' bliss.

Dim-Outs

In compiling his figures, Bird-dog interviewed all couples applying for licences between Nov. 1 and 15 and in addition polled three single subjects as to whether offers increased during the dim-outs.

Here is what he found to be the reasons given by the 60 couples for applying for licences.

Part A: Girls

1. Love—One girl was sure she was marrying for love, three were fairly certain and 27 were undecided. Of the undecided 10 thought they weren't getting any younger, four said, "their best friends had just told them" and this was the first offer that came along since and 13 were just undecided but did not want to face the winter alone.

2. She uses Pond's five cold cr... was the only reason they had planned marriage but did not feel they were being high-pressured into it. One who had been using Pond's for a month said about that after reading magazines for an afternoon there seemed no other alternative.

3. He buys me cigarettes—A girl from Wawanesa Ill. said she was so shocked at the price of cigarettes when she moved to Canada last Summer that she was marrying the first man who would buy her a pack.

4. I like his father as rever...

Anthropologist Recovers Relics In Pacific Area

At an informal meeting of the Trinity Arts and Letters Club yesterday, Mr. E. S. Carpenter of the Department of Anthropology, told of his experiences on an archaeological expedition in the Central and South Pacific. The expedition was undertaken by the United States for the purpose of recording native customs and tradition by engineers who were employed in the construction of airfields on the islands in the area.

Likes Area

During the war, Mr. Carpenter, who is an American national, was stationed in the Pacific theatre. He liked it so much as you can see by the fact that he has come back to take an active part in the excavation of ancient monuments and art from the islands.

Dr. Carpenter has visited the islands of Melanesia, Micronesia and Polynesia, examining the tremendous stone monuments of the islands and constructing parks on the island.

Renegade Japs

The main interests of the expedition were the large volcanic islands of the Central and South Pacific. As laborers the party had 50 Japanese prisoners-of-war. These workers were supplemented by renegade Japs who hid in the hills watching the party's activities. Mr. Carpenter related that the week's rations for the laborers would be cached in the fields and the next day there would be no food left. The renegades had taken the food. The trick of leaving the tins empty backfired, so the party raked the surrounding country with machine-gun fire. That night they returned with 16 extra laborers—renegades.

Engineering Feat

The work was the shifting of the gigantic stone columns from the path of construction workers. The bulk of the work was done with bull dozers and cranes. The members of the expedition cannot understand how the natives were able to move these 24 foot columns, each weighing 20 tons, without the help of hard-wood rollers. Most of the island, have no hard wood on them and the bamboo and banana wood are too soft to make good rollers.

The huge pillars, carved out of solid rock and capped with a punch-bowl-shaped piece of coral were found in parallel rows indicating that they were foundations of the bachelor houses in the native society. Many of these pillars had their masculinity defaced by the Spanish priests in an effort to convert the natives to christianity. The bachelor houses were the residences of the unmarried men of the community and in most societies served in a fashion similar to our houses of prostitution," said Carpenter.

Graves Robbed

The expedition covered 32 islands in the South Pacific island, paying special attention to Guam, Saipan Rota and Tinian. In all these places the columns were moved into parks constructed for the purpose. The expedition uncovered many graves. One curious fact about the graves was the discovery that all bodies were placed with the feet towards the sea and their heads toward the hills. The custom survives today in the sleeping habits of the natives.

Entire islands in the group visited by the expedition have been flattened by the workers. Now, even the natives become lost when travelling through their own back-yards.

LAST ISSUE

To enable the staff of The Varsity to attend the lectures of the fall term this will be the final regular issue of the year. The annual literary issue will be published Monday, Dec 13. The first issue of the new year will be published Thursday, Jan 6.

The Trinity College French Club will present a Nativity Play in French in Cartwright Hall on Wednesday, Dec 15 at 8 p.m.

All-Varsity Magic

It is easier to make a rabbit materialize out of the air than it is to organize and produce an all-campus show, according to the directors of the All Varsity Revue. Shown here is Mike Roth, All-Varsity magician, performing the easier of the two feats. Mike is an accomplished sleight-of-hand artist and has performed for several celebrities including Mrs. Roosevelt.

First All-Varsity Revue To Feature Serious Magic

From a monk on an island in the Bristol Channel to the stage of the All Varsity Revue. This was the route taken by Michael Roth, O.C.E. student.

Roth, an accomplished magician, will be performing in one of the large production numbers of the All Varsity Revue when it is staged in Hart House Theatre, Jan. 10, 6.15. "I call my act 'Magic of the Hand'," Roth said recently. "I attempt to do the absolutely impossible—pulling lighted cigarettes out of the air, stretching a cigarette to the length of eight feet. There is also one stage illusion that I will perform. I can't explain what it will be without spoiling the effect, but it is physically impossible. This is a big act and I will be assisted by five other people—four boys and one girl."

Roth entered the sleight-of-hand field in an unusual manner. A chance meeting with a monk on an island in the Bristol Channel when six years old started Roth on his magician's career. "This old friar asked me for a farthing," Roth explained. "And when he had it in his hand, he changed it into a ten-cent piece. I was so fascinated I determined to make a study of the art."

Since then, Roth has progressed beyond the coin-changed-into-coin routine. Last year, while a student at Queen's, he staged a performance for Eleanor Roosevelt when she was awarded an honorary degree at a special convocation.

"My act is not a series of gag routines," Roth says. "It is serious magic, presented in a serious manner. I will have a total of six assistants in the All Varsity Revue. They will be dressed in long cloaks with heads completely covered to give the proper atmosphere.

"The last trick I will do in the show is a 'Box Trick'," he says. "My assistants put me in a box, seal the box, and then—well the conclusion is quite novel."

The All Varsity Revue will run from Jan. 12 to 15 with six evening performances and a Saturday matinee. It is sponsored by the S.A.C.

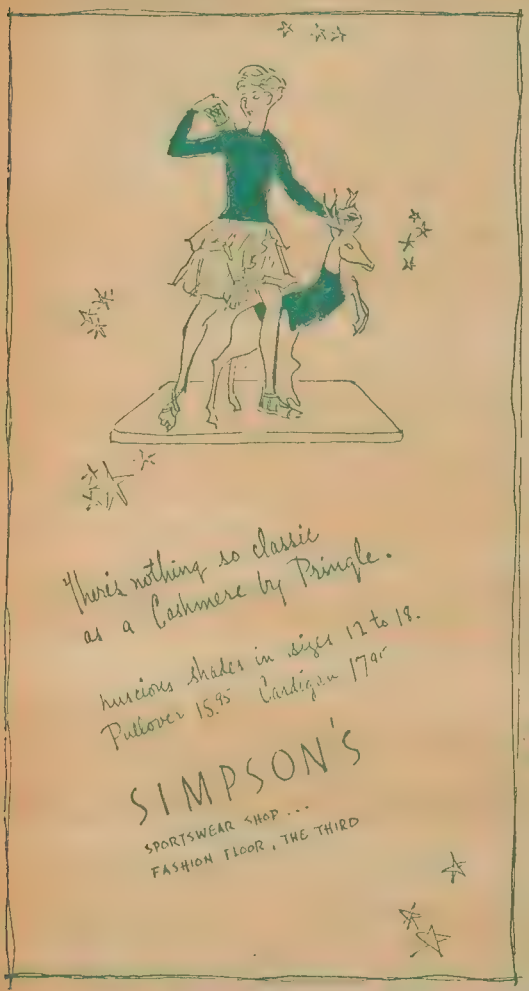
Supports Hogan

The Editor, The Varsity:



We, members of various political parties, were present as independent observers at the evening session of the Toronto Peace Council on Friday, Dec. 3, when Dr. J. G. Endicott rendered his keynote address". Having read Mr. George Hogan's speech as reported in the downtown papers and The Varsity, we would like to state that, contrary to the claims of certain elements it was an excellent refutation of Dr. Endicott's stereotyped Communist propaganda.

Also, we must compliment the Peace Council on its smooth organization which effectively choked off any discussion or questioning of the speakers (one of whom was not present later) on Friday night. Lastly, after witnessing that illuminating performance we did not consider it worth spending a further 50 cents to attend Saturday's spectacle.

Yours very truly,

Movie Review

Johnny Belinda

The movie-goer who recalls having seen Jane Wyman's early pictures may also recall a shallow, overly-talkative chorus or shop girl who inevitably drew from her co-performers as well as from her audience a loud "Aw shut up'" Well, in this latest film, Miss Wyman has shut up. In fact so completely that we don't even get a grunt out of her. But what we do get is her finest performance, and a performance which proves that the breaks she got in her roles in "Lost Weekend" and "The Yearling" were wisely given. Belinda MacDonald, the misunderstood "Dummy" in a humble Maritime community becomes as the film goes on a dignified, sensitive and even appealing girl. Credit for this is due not to a melodramatic handling of the story by the producers, but to Miss Wyman's own contribution. If it is possible for an actress to become progressively better, and at the same time have progressively less to say, then such has been Wyman's unique accomplishment.

The male lead features another convincing performance, this by Lew Ayres. As the village doctor and the first person to appreciate the state of the deaf-mute, Ayres' sincerity seems, I think, to incorporate his real-life experiences in helping the distressed. Perhaps this last statement sounds like press-agent publicity but this movie-goer could not help regarding Mr. Ayres' portrayal as one based on something more than a careful study of script and directions.

It is due to the two star characterizations then that "Johnny Belinda" deserves whatever favorable reputation it may achieve. As for the story, well, it's a sad reflection on movie-makers, or on movie-goers, but it seems that the handicap of muteness is not enough to move people; nor is the triumph over this handicap sufficient. And so Belinda MacDonald must be the victim of rape, the doctor must be wrongly accused, and finally Nova Scotia justice prevails. Added to this are the stock gossips, cranks, and "characters" of a rural society.

To lend "local color" Hollywood has nearly everybody speaking most of the various accents of the British Isles, plus some Western European. The result is a Maritime village resembling something out of a travel folder or a grade-school geography text.

Some of the scenes are nicely done, however. Miss Wyman's first encounter with music finds her watching a party of gay dancers. Her fingers are placed on one of the fiddlers' instruments and as she becomes imbued with the sound and rhythm, she attempts herself to dance. Her attempts are clumsy but the movie-goer, rather than laughing at her, shares in her joyous discovery.

Other scenes which ought to have impressed this movie-goer unfortunately failed to do so. How great must be a father's emotion when his mute child addresses him for the first time in sign language. And how moving it must be when the child repeats the "Lord's Prayer" for the first time thus. Yet, when these incidents occur in "Johnny Belinda" they are either underdone or overdone. In the case of the prayer, the producers had to place the body of Belinda's father—killed pursuing her attacker—in the foreground, and a crowd of sad-eyed seamen in the background, all very melodramatically.

Wednesday Five O'clock

This presentation in the Conservatory Concert Hall was the first public exhibition of Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, pianist, newly arrived at the Conservatory from Hungary. Opening with the Bach Toccata and Fugue in E minor, the programme proceeded with a Mozart Adagio, the Beethoven C minor Sonata, Opus 111, three Brahams Intermezzi, two Bartok folk music adaptations, and two Debussy Etudes.

The Beethoven Sonata, one of those later works where the changes of mood and of volume and speed are sudden and frequent being the biggest chunk of music on the programme, was its centre. It was also one of the most taxing from a performance and interpretation standpoint. The coupled, I'm sure, with an apprehensive sense of a first impression to be made, gave the Beethoven something of the aspect of a hurdle artistically to be leapt. Whether or not this is a correct psychological reconstruction, I had yet much the feeling that Mr Boszormenyi-Nagy did not relax until after this sonata, which made him, perhaps, ride the music a little hard at first.

He showed transparent clarity, a fine ability to bring out the important melody line against its supporting accompaniment, symptoms of authoritative technical control. Lyric passages were played with almost vocal fluidity, but when sharp attack was demanded the effect was agreeably percussive. He used considerable rubato in melodramatic phrases but never lost track of where the phrase was going. The freedom was entirely within the passages and was prevented from sentimental soupiness by the intensely architectural proportioning, anchored firmly in the structure by the logical definition of natural landing places. There seemed a tendency to exaggerate differences in volume, to achieve dramatic contrast by either whispering or screaming. In general, also, there seemed a consistently introspective quality about slow movements; rather veiled or detached, extremely soft.

It was an interesting and most pleasant afternoon. Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy is a man I want to hear again.

The Marriage Of Figaro

I do not know which bad old days we are worse: before Mozart had written Figaro, or before Toronto had its Royal Conservatory Opera to perform it. But why speculate about the past? Last night's performance was so reassuring that predictions regarding a glorious future are much more dependable. It is a sure sign of the wisdom of its directing spirits that the Opera School grows into every new project it undertakes. And Figaro is something pretty big to grow into. It calls for a comparatively large number of singers each of whom must carry a heavy part and carry it without showing the slightest strain. It also calls for a sustained exercise of tact on everybody's part, if the pure flavor of the music is to be conveyed. Nicholas Goldschmidt did just that with his instrumentalists and his singers and may confidently be called the hero of the piece. How he got his orchestra to sound as clear and articulate as it did and maintain the greatest possible integration with the sounds from the stage is a tale of sheer genius.

One hates to pin prize ribbons on individual singers in a venture that is so deeply rooted in the idea of the ensemble, but this is hard to avoid with Louise Roy as Countess in the cast. Hers is a truly great voice as a few bars from "Dove sono" proved beyond dispute, and she is happy to find [illegible] crowned with such exquisite [illegible]. Andrew MacMillan as Figaro had to live up to very high expectations indeed, with his previous performances not easily forgotten. He did and delighted all with his vigorous humor, expressed in voice and posture. Long before he reached his masterpiece, "Deh vieni" Margaret [illegible] had established herself in the affection of the audience as a [illegible] of considerable charm and gifts with brilliance and almost [illegible] vocal resource. 5. Money—The remainder of the boys spoke on the money we involved in their marriage. Sums from $2 up to $10,000 were mentioned. These and how or that they were still torn between money and love, two were torn between money and their parents' cigarettes and one was torn between love and cigarettes.

while in the army in Europe. "It's a different type of culture," he explained.

Words of Wisdom

Other words of wisdom from Suds: "From what I've seen of our young men in action at engineers' dances, they are aggressive enough. We ask women to men and they expect too much attention. They sit in a car and wait until you get out, run around to the other side, (in the middle of heavy traffic) and open the door, before they make a move." On double dates—"It's better if you've got some other spook to talk to besides the one you're with."

A campus thinker, IV Philosophy student Tom Sloan said that men had not been particularly aggressive in his opinion but refrained from generalizing with respect to women.

An American pre-med, Don McCorvie of Lansing, Mich., was of the opinion that Canadian girls were not nearly as aggressive as their American counterparts. "It may be because they don't drink so much liquor," he said. Men too are not as aggressive here as in the U. S. either, though, he concluded.

A pre-med cohort speaking on the come-hither look added that "It's a matter of what appeals to the eye, not of using the eye to appeal". He also scorned the charge that university men sought "high romance". "They're only out for a bit of fun."

Defensive Attitude

A Knox divinity student, George Hotton, said he had not noticed many come-hither looks and felt Canadian girls' attitude was more one of defence. "Men are not aggressive", he pointed out, "because in most cases, they wish to avoid entanglements."

Two Trinity freshies, Fran Moss, Soc and Phil and Marg Leake, Pass, came out with the prize statements of the day. Their answers were as follows:

Are men aggressive?—"The majority around Trinity aren't."

Do Canadian girls use the "Come-hither" look?—"Well, we can try but we don't know whether it's working or not."

Take it easy girls, you've got three years to go.

Montreal Is Destination As Varsity Senior Icemen Meet McGill And Carabins

By HAL HOLDEN

Varsity Blues left yesterday afternoon for Montreal where they will meet McGill and University of Montreal in two Intercollegiate hockey engagements. Tonight the Blues are entertained in the Montreal Forum by their usual rivals for top honors, McGill Redmen. After hacking it out with the tribe, Ace Bailey moves the Blues into Verdun and Carabin territory, for a Saturday set-to. Captain Harry Boyd, out with football injuries returns to the team for the double header.

It will be the first look at McGill for the Blues and only their second league encounter. Last Friday they gave the Indian Chiefs the once-over with a 6-2 victory. The Blues hope to make it two in a row over the Frenchmen, Saturday.

Now Tied For Second

At present the Blue and White are tied for second place with McGill, each team having posted 2 points. Carabin are on the bottom with a total of six points. These two clubs the Blues play tonight and tomorrow ete the one they will have to beat if they hope to move up a notch or two in the standing before the New Year.

After the two week-end games Varsity has a rest from league competition until the Queen's game here January 14. But the Blues aren't packing away their skates until the New Year. That week of next week will find them taking in the sights of Chicago's Windy City and among other things tangling with the University of Michigan Wolverines.

To Ann Arbor

The following day the Blues journey to Ann Arbor Mich., and a return game in the Wolverine's backyard. Despite the fact that American Colleges are noted for football and baseball players rather than hockey stars, Michigan has in recent years fielded a powerful squad.

In games with the Blues during the past several seasons the Wolverines have just about broken even [illegible] Varsity, coached by Warren Wilson, [illegible] Michigan [illegible] the Blues [illegible] game.

DINGHY AUTHORITY TO ADDRESS TARS

The U of T Sailing Club has secured Mr Charles Bourke to address members on "Boat and Yacht Design". Mr Bourke is probably the world's foremost authority on the international dinghy and certainly the most qualified man in Canada to speak on this subject. It is an opportunity for all yachtsmen to learn what goes into a good boat. Mr Bourke will speak at the Women's Union, on Wednesday, Dec. 15, at 4.30.

Sports Night

Albion Hoop Group To Lose Blues' Blues

By ED VOIGHT

The first and only Sports Night of the 1948-49 season takes place in Hart House on Saturday night.

Albion Cagers from London, Ont. are here to provide the feature attraction of the evening when they take on the Varsity Blues in an exhibition basketball game. For the Blues, tomorrow's engagement will be the third of the season. Another one of the series and in which they are still seeking their first victory.

Arrival of the Albion squad from Albion is unconfirmed, so just what kind of opposition the Blues are likely to run into is hard to say. It is the first time that the Albion boys have ever visited the U. of T. Tonight, the Western Mustangs are warming up the Albies in London, so the situation should be fully cleared up for the Blueboys.

In the opening game the Varsity Intermediates play the Central "Y" seniors.

But that isn't all. No sir. There is boxing and wrestling in the upper gym, and swimming in the pool—the pool, that is. Ten p.m. is dancing time in the main gym.

All this for a buck a couple, or what amounts to almost the same thing, 50c a person.

ALL YANKS ARE BASTIDS

By Alan Atkins

Time, in the spring of "D" day in Southern England, was a vast and formless sort of thing about which there was nothing for me that was familiar. Each day was suspended in a void which seemed timeless but which you knew wasn't really. No day had any real connection with the day which had gone, save in the deadly regimen of pre-invasion training which each held in common. And you couldn't be too sure of a following day until you had awakened in the morning to find it there. There were no Tuesdays and Thursdays; there were no weekends. All leaves had long since been cancelled Such a reprieve as being posted on a course was unthinkable. And yet, one bright March morning my officer informed me that Brigade had ordered a man from our intelligence section to be sent up to London on course. It was my turn to go. I agreed with him that it would be a shame if I couldn't get back in time for the Big Show, and in a short time I was in Winchester and on the train to London. Perhaps I should have died then: I shall never again be on such good terms with the Infinite.

Once settled in Chelsea Barracks I sat up, metaphorically, and took notice. It was no ordinary "course" on which I was embarked. A three-storied wing of the building had been set aside for a group of American, British and Canadian soldiers. It was our job to prepare models in precise relief of the Normandy coast. We were encouraged to think of ourselves as civilians as it was felt that a rigid regimental discipline might stand in the way of our completing our job in the time available. Needless to say, the British NCO's never drew a well-adjusted breath for the entire two months the job required.

It was all, of course, very TOP SECRET. Every Wednesday morning a British staff officer from above arrived to impress upon us the absolute necessity of maintaining secrecy as to the details of our work. However, once it became apparent that German agents weren't going to ply us with beer in the local pub and waylay us in a handy lane, life took on the most pleasant of routine.

I even found the spell of guard duty expected of us pleasant enough. Our work rooms on the second and third floors were never to be left unguarded. This meant that once a week you shared this responsibility with another chap, moving your blankets to one of the two iron beds in your allotted workroom. In the event of an air-raid one guard was to proceed downstairs and help patrol the main entrance, the other was to remain in the workroom. As to further details we were never too clear. There was a poster downstairs with instructions as to how to cope with a Butterfly Bomb, accompanied by a picture. I always suspected these instructions of being over-simplified, nevertheless they had to be equated as the sum of our preparedness. As it happened, the blitz in progress at that time was a minor one, and we never got into trouble.

It fell my lot to share this guard-duty with an American lad from Rhode Island whose name was Peter Hesse. There was nothing extraordinary about Peter, but he was a thoroughly good scout and we struck up quite a friendship. Many were the weekly bull-sessions which we enjoyed as we sta at the fireplace in our room, talking into the night until the coal supply ran out.

Details of his background picked up from his conversation are lodged in my mind, which has always been capricious in its selectivity. (I can tell you at the drop of a hat the name of the Blues singer in "Cavalcade", and the date of

by Michael Hornyansky

Let me stand, for an hour. Let me stand above the hours and the tumbling land; for the wide design weaves obscurely, the current bears me blind. Let me be still for a time above the going and reason where the stars are blowing.

Patient I read, and can full forgive.
My fugitive brothers will not speak to me, nor acknowledge what they seek nor why. Forgive them: I also live impatient of chains, and would forget
I am ruled by shadows out of time.
Choric I chant the grim circled rhyme:
I am ordained by all I have met.

They sleep, they love, they kneel, they run. Then I shall not, nor brook fated days and morrows precedented. Yet how stand uncompassed? —Give me my gods again.
Yet these are no gods, but goblins or dark ghosts, coercive in antique modes.
The subtle drug of worship corrodes the single heart. I will kneel no more.

I have stood, for an hour: I have stood apart, and discerned. O that I could be blind again, and take for comfort traitor Eden, and the green desert that fed me once, and water from stone.
I was blind, then: now I am alone.

Put aside yesterday:
dim driving rain, under the gray sky's caged thunder, multiplying mirrors in the mind and only death behind.

Put aside the nightmare congress of the gods in haunted darkness:
nodding in ironic judgment alien, exultant grinning: "Let us prey."

At dawn, while the soul slept these might decide, having long kept my watch. But each dies with sunrise, and the sea gleams. I will devise a firmer paradise within, and trust to the wind and my own dreams.

Cling then to this, and dare invite the darker wind and the cold starlight the crashing cataclysmic midnight rimming the gulf with silence stilling each star.
and final, far
gathering among the destined planets ancient upon that stage a laughter breaks soundless and vast: uproots the frame of things, centres me here, and spins this little world.

Tragic I stand—forgiven—on sand.

Invisibly I hear the black tide surge forever on the hidden shore. The sea remains: I measure madness from within.
The planets lone abide. Reason with pride contending, set the well-remembered scene, laughed, and traced God's accent in the echo.
Even so. The dark stars but mirror me.
Now the last ghost is broken. Now I stand alone: and doubt dimension, for the world spins yet. But trust the sea, nor put aside this little cynic idol—it will serve.

I have watched thunder from my window: known them pass, the rain, and midnight, and the blown stars, under glass and under glass the sun, warmer but warped. Thinking

Frost-hammered colors of leaf dropped
Slow bruise the eye;
Black roses float at going light
Small immaculate fears;
Season of only-remembrance of other weather
Preludes zero of desire.

Young as May, once plucked willing blossoms;
Reading printed flowers
Now, I find economy sufficient luxury,
Conscious of accumulated time,
Shelves of diverse opinion thickening my walls,
A window and ruined garden.

Stale smells of carpetting and old paper
Steep in movelessness flesh.
Necessity now is renewal of lost sensation,
Forgetting of only-remembrance,
Loving November's hour, and calling, calling
Midwinter sun to turn.

now to have done with windows, I myself a glass seeming, convene centuries in a crystal ring.

For now the narrow solitude which I designed, the limit whence I first defied chaos, fades; set futile to mark this isle, the wretched parapet of self. Nor, while the sun melts that margin from mind, regret; I am a part of all that I have met.

Conceive me as a glass, curving the grains of time convergent: this frail cup contains infinity, aware or not, collects past ages at this prime hour, and directs wide their dispersal—every clime to me familiar, every panther, rock, and tree.

Not islanded then, but boundless consider me, synoptic without end. I bid these sands unite, govern their blend and fall. They endure; the glass quite breaks. Yet in all of them, once ruled, I keep; subtly and free, return to look upon the changeless sea.

Break now the tyranny of shadows: now deny the bitter grip of past. Compounded in this glow, this crystal catalytic ring, past may comply, past may submit, be wrought in focal heat. I so survive, diffused where I have lived, nor wholly die.

These latter days, I lecture for my bread to young men whom I cannot understand.
Cold-eyed and clear they speak, in oblique phrase, casual precision in every jest.
Yesterday's wisdom is their axiom, yet they accept me: solemn at my feet they mock me, an old man who sees visions.

Sunset across the waters. The wind dies, but the abstract waves succeed unchanged. Night can never calm them, nor clever young men infringe the spoken sea. There I began, and there I shall return; this shadowed shore,
the witness of decision, shall attend new signatures under another sun.

The sands hold footprints only at the verge, nor even these long keep. Preserve my path further within your own fulfilled: I live as you remember me, and most endure where least my self. The sea will reconcile my pattern; but my brothers walk abroad, whom once I scorned, and through them I remain.

Here on the shore at sundown, do I rue rebellion, and the age before? Weather rules my regrets: when it is gray for days together, days circled and compelled, then the tale seems truth and cause enough to mourn.
But wind and sunlight weigh the battled soul against its dream, and count the fable apt.

I am an old man, without rhetoric, finding wisdom in paradox; half-blind, requiring shadows to discern the sun.
I end at a beginning, having come strange circle from my first awakening here to this wider land, the heritage of long denial, Eden unexplored.

the battle of Actium.) He had attended a commercial art school. After the war he planned on giving himself two months in which to out-rival Peter Arno in the cartoon field.

Failing that, he would yield to his father and join him in a flourishing real estate business. His mother, to whom he was devoted, had remodelled their house, putting in false ceilings. She had increased the value of the property by some thirty-four hundred dollars. The family owned two Skye terriers.

Peter was a personable chap, angular and fair, I thought of him as being naive, although not in any pejorative sense. To Peter, every day was a drama into which he entered with fresh enthusiasm: a drama which he enjoyed as much in the relating as in the experiencing. His face lent itself to an unaffected animation which enhanced the charm of his anecdotes. Either his implicit "why-does-everything-always-happen-to-me?" was never overdone, or else you didn't mind because it was Peter.

Late one evening as we sat before the fire in our workroom, Peter was momentarily silent. I was aware that he was busy arranging a vignette in neat narrative form. "O.K.," I said, "what's on your mind?"

"I didn't tell you about last night, chum, did I?" He was well launched into his story with the first sentence. "Well, last night Iris and I were ... Iris, she's my girl friend :.. we were walking down Coventry Street. Just off Piccadilly Circus. It was getting sort of dark, and I don't have a very good idea of just what happened. Anyway there were mobs of people, and Iris ... she was looking at the shop windows ..."

The sirens had set up their threnody. Peter delivered himself of a substantial curse, directed more, I suspected, at the circumstance of his having to give up his story. He put on his tin hat and his greatcoat and went downstairs. It was his turn with the Butterfly Bombs.

I can't say that I ever enjoyed sitting out an air-raid in our workroom. I always had a feeling of vulnerability. It was a barren sort of room with little that was warm and reassuring about the two serried rows of worktables between the door at one end and the fireplace at the other. I can only describe it as long and high-ceilinged, the most reasonable of dimensions ... yards, feet, rods ... never having had any meaning for me. I turned off the lights, and sat down in front of the fire. Chimneys and fireplaces had a way of standing intact although surrounded by bomb debris.

This evening differed from routine only in that I had a visitor to keep me company. As he approached the fire I recognized him. I had seen him before without paying much attention. He was English, a short, slight man in his thirties. I remembered that he was an artist of some sort ... he had been interested in Peter's collection of nudes (What would my Ma say? She cuts them out and sends 'em to me!"). Apparently he was on duty in the room across the hall. The fact that the secrets entrusted to his custody could be marching down the stairs in pairs for all he knew occasioned me some worry. I was very young in those days.

He drew a chair up to the fire and took out a deck of cigarettes.

"Smoke?" he said.

"No, thanks."

"Do have one. They're awfully good, really." They were long black cigarettes, the kind I usually associated with the word "cheroot".

"Thanks, I don't smoke."

"You won't change your mind?"

"No."

"Sure, old man?"

"Positive". I wish I knew now what happened to the resolution formed at that time that I'd be caught dead than smoking.

He lit his cigarette with obvious relish and settled back expansively in his chair. He was a singularly drab looking individual, although he might have looked different in civilian clothes. He resembled an under-developed photograph whose features weren't clearly distinguishable. It wasn't at once apparent where his forehead ended and his brownish hair started. His flesh was of a curious wax-like texture which took on something of the shade of his uniform.

I remembered my duty as host. "What do you think of our ... of the work we're doing?" Even among ourselves we were accustomed to speak guardedly of our work.

"Mm. You mean the work we're doing now? Here in Chelsea? Well, of course, the Americans haven't the right idear at all. I mean, their idear is all right as far as it goes. But you can't imagine carting around one of these cumbersome models on the battle-field, can you? As a matter of fact, I have worked out a system which is much better, actually. But the trouble is, of course, you can't get anywhere in the Army and be a ruddy Private, can you?"

"Well," I countered, "why don't you tell the American in charge about your idea?" I think I also expanded somewhat on how approachable the Americans all were.

"Mm. Fat chance there. It's just like everything else. A bloke gets an idear, then he gets busy and gets himself a bit of power, then he sees to it that nobody comes along with anything better. To get anywhere you have to more or less have a lot of ... well, what I mean is ... Take our blokes in the other wing. The Guards. Have you seen them marching up and down on the parade ground out there. like they owned the earth? Well, it's just like goose-stepping, isn't it?"

The raid was noisy. The guns opened up their clamour in Battersea, in Chelsea, and, afresh, up South Kensington way. It put me in mind of a grotesque theme tracing its course through an imaginary Brandenburg Concerto heavily scored for brass.

"In point of fact," continued my guest, "I'm trying to get in touch with Beaverbrook." He drew his chair up to mine. "I thought when I got up to London I'd be able to get somewhere at last. But what can I do, really? I know one of Beaverbrook's secretaries who promised to do something for me. The trouble is, you see, I'd have to telephone her, take her out to dinner several times. Frequently. And in this ... this uniform. I mean to say, it's sort of hardly worth it, is it?"

I rose to examine my blackouts. Guardee arrogance was stalking up and down outside in the night. "Check those blackouts upstairs there!"

The fire was burning low. I put on fresh coal. The fire warmed my back, casting distorted figures into the uninhabited spaces of the room. My guest wasn't nearly so nondescript as at first I had thought. There was an intensity about his eyes. His hands were extremely fine and I had a brief feeling that in the dark they would shed a soft glow. He resumed talking.

"Of course, I don't expect you have seen the new exhibit at the Royal Academy which everybody is raving about? Fools! I tell you the pictures this year are ruddy awful. Nothing but wild strokes of a brush. No discipline. No technique. I tell you I mean to fight it. And I'm not alone. My friends in the Service urge me ... every letter ... not to give in to this ... this decadence. I tell you ... I tell you, once this mess is over, there will be one place in England where art will live ... true art ... and that will be in my studio in Manchester. I'll see that my pupils see the true light. I'll see to it that they know the meaning of work ... that they know the meaning of humility! Well, I mean, it's just as Somerset Maugham says, isn't it?"

"Well, yes ... I ..."

"Exactly!" He paused, beginning again more quietly. "But then ... but then you'll never see my work hung in the proper places. It's the same thing there. Know the right people. Sleep with the right women. The trouble is, that sort of thing is hardly my cup of tea."

The guns had quietened down and I awaited the all-clear.

"Can you imagine, can you think," he demanded of me, "what they did to me when I got into the Service? I who have studied in Italy, won the Prix de Rome ... travelled in Greece, Syria, Mesopotamia and ... all those countries ..."

I said that I couldn't imagine.

"They put me to driving lorries! Me ... a lorry-driver!" He writhed in his chair in recollection.

The all-clear sounded. My guest suddenly was aware of the exigencies of a practical existence. "My mate will be coming back upstairs. The blighter will want to know what the ruddy Hell I'm doing in here!"

Escorting him to the door, I turned on our lights again. He looked at me as though for the first time,

"I should like to ask ... you don't mind? ... what you did on Civvy Street?"

I was caught off guard. "I was a student, studying music. In Canada."

"How very stupid of me. I should have known! Of course! Tell me, was it piano? Was it violin?" He took a stricken look at my shoulder-flash. "Don't tell me they've got you in the infantry!"

He continued. "You know, I find this most interesting. I say, do let's get together some evening. We should have so much in common. I know London ... there's ever so posh a club on Jermyn Street I could take you to." Look here, my name's ..."

"Sure", I replied. "I'll look you up. Look you up some evening. Next week perhaps."

Peter hove around the corner of the staircase.

Mayaro Beach

By JOHN GONZALEZ

There it was I loved to be Down beside the sighing sea
And to feel the sifted sand
Run out from my listless hand.

'Twas there we talked my friend and I
And great world problems with a sigh
Were oft dispelled beneath the trees
Sitting in May evenings breezes

I doubt if I shall ever be Quite so free from mental cares,
As I was beneath the stars
Gazing on a moonstreaked sea
Beneath a whispering coconut tree
That seems to sigh and say to me
"Age has come and manhood's here
"Gone are days without a care
"Take your last fling while you may
"Tomorrow you must cease to play".
And as it whispered soft and low
I softly cried for it was so.

Second Prize Short Story

The Lost One

By Frances Leyland

Burnie mudged open the door and slipped quietly into the kitchen. Empty. His sleepy eyes wandered round the room and were attracted by the play of the morning sun on the syrup jar which stood in its usual place on the breakfast table. Dishes were clean—no one had eaten yet. Must be about quarter to seven—seven at the most because Cob hadn't brought the milk can in yet. Burnie knelt on a chair and propped his elbows on the window sill. Through the glass he could look down the path and watch for Cob.

He is coming now, swinging the milk can in his hand, and carrying him on his shoulder. Cob is saying something to him, and now they're laughing. Look at him, as he laughs. He's ugly—his head wobbles and his dark eyes flash like the light of the fire on the kettle. Father said the devil himself was in those eyes. Father said . . . Cob pushed open the door and stooped as he passed through. Burnie waited while he set Keith on a chair, then turned to his brother and smiled. "Were you in Red Deeps this morning, Cob?"

"Yes, the river's almost dried up. Need a heavy fall rain like the one we had last year, or was it the year before? Remember, Burnie?"

"The year before". How could Cob forget? Mother used to speak of it as the storm that brought Keith. Cob had returned home late, exhausted from the wildness of the night and the weight of his burden. The shivering form he carried had whimpered and clung to him as he put it down. Then it had toppled over and sprawled helplessly on the floor—because its legs were twisted.

Burnie looked at his brother's clenched hands and knew that he remembered.

"You needn't wait for father, Burnie, or you'll be late for school. Come and get your breakfast." The boy sat down and waited while his brother took the pot from the stove and filled his bowl. Burnie ate quietly ,and tried not to notice Keith clumsily spooning cereal into his mouth, nor Cob bending over him to steady his hand. Burnie pushed back his chair and stood up from the table.

"Finished"?

"Yes".

"You didn't eat much".

"Not hungry".

"Going now?"

"In a minute—where's my jacket?"

"Behind the door—Burnie, get home as soon as you can, will you?"

"Bye, Burnie."

Cob moved to the window and watched his brother jump the gate and disappear down the road. He turned slowly and looked at Keith, and swallowed hard . . .

When Burnie returned from school, he was surprised by the smell of baking bread. Strange. Since mother died we've been getting our bread from Mrs. Melvis. Driven by curiosity the boy glanced into the kitchen.

"Burnie is it?" A girl lifted her face the oven door and shyly smiled at him. "You are Burnie, aren't you?"

"Yes." The boy shifted uncomfortably.

"I'm Mona".

"You don't know me?"

"No."

"Oh . . . I've come to live with you." Mona blushed. Burnie sensed her discomfort but could not force himself to speak.

"If you'll bring me some potatoes I'll get them ready for dinner. How many do you thing we'll need?"

"There'll be five of us—including Keith." Mona stiffened. "Well bring about twelve good-size ones."

Keith doesn't eat much."

"We'll need twelve I think, Burnie."

Supper was very quiet. Everyone was uneasy. Burnie noticed his father's eyes didn't leave his plate, and Cob looked only at Keith. After the meal the two older went into the sitting-room, and Burnie thought it strange that Cob didn't take Keith with him. But he said nothing since Keith seemed content to sit and watch Mona.

Weeks passed and more and more the winds brought the stinging coldness of winter. Cob couldn't find enough work to keep himself busy outside now, and he became irritable and moody. Long hours in his room he sat, silent and brooding.

Burnie often wondered what he would have done without Mona. Always she was there, calm, strong, understanding.

Mona hadn't realized it had rained during the night as she came down in the morning to light the kitchen stove. The window was blurred and rain-streaked; outside the water had made gullies in the path. Cob would have to be careful this morning when he brought in the milk can—he might slip. She turned to the preparation of breakfast. As she measured the oatmeal into the boiling water she remembered the words Burnie had said the first day she came. "There'll be five of us—including Keith." Why including Keith?" Was he really so different from the others?

Breakfast was eaten silently. Mona had grown used to seeing Cob and his father take their meals without a word. Keith's slobbering mouth went unnoticed by Cob; and Burnie had a funny feeling as Mona leaned over and dried it. Cob saw, his jaw tightened; but he said nothing.

"I'm going to Red Deeps."

"In this rain, Cob?" Burnie asked.

"The boat might have been washed away."

"If it has there is nothing you can do about it now," said Mona.

"Maybe not. Where are my boots?"

"Behind the stove."

"You're silly to go, Cob."

"Don't you tell me what to do Burnie. I'm going. Get Keith's coat."

"Keith's not going," Mona said quietly.

"He is. He wouldn't understand if I didn't take him."

Mona didn't protest, but sat staring at the floor until Cob and Keith had left.

"Burnie."

"Yes, Mona."

"Would you go after them? Cob couldn't have taken Keith. You needn't wait. Just see that Cob—that Keith's all right and then come back. I'll-I'll have your lunch packed for you."

"You really want me to go, Mona?"

"Please, Burnie."

The Revellers

By Michael Hornyansky

Beloved, come: there's a wind abroad tonight a dark wind among the trees sighting vastly under the sky and the moon a circle of bright bone.
I am most ill at ease. Going for air, I was sung to by the wind ironic lullabyes alone.—
Solace me with the saxophone.

Beloved, come and pace me to the frantic drum or shadow slow the slumbrous beat — pattern your feet to mine and choke my breath with clinging.
Let us pretend this is the sum of our desires: the blind embrace
(so that I need not see your face) your lips at my ear to hum the song that everyone is singing — most novel, yet most like a circus tune remembered from an ancient afternoon.

All that I do I have done.
The second circuit of the wheel's begun and every aged moment mirrors thousand yesterdays and bound tomorrows.
Webbed with futile repetition.
dull, and stale
and weary of admission, pledge me with a brimming skull of neat despair and ginger ale; bemuse me with a lamplit glass as the circled colours pass, and build a brittle bridge of little talk across the near abyss—conspiracy will keep it firm. Kiss me, and walk with me the path prescribed and timed to the smooth sweet surge of clarinet and horn.

Cling to me then, and never mourn.
The bubbling moment antidotes bleak time and braves eternity with poisoned rhyme.
Resign the cynic wind, the moon above, and cling to me, and call it love.

"All right."

Mona watched him cut through the field until he was swallowed up by the dark bush. Her body trembled and she moved closer to the fire: she was cold.

Burnie couldn't see Cob when he reached the Deeps, so he decided he must have gone further up towards the bend. Yes, there he is up ahead, standing on the bank and p inting out the torrent to Keith. Can't call to Cob yet—wind's too strong. Burnie stumbled and fell to the path. When he stood up he saw his brother standing on the bank, alone. . .

Cold and frightened Burnie fled.

Mona was still sitting by the fire when he pushed through the door.

"Burnie"?

"Yes."

"What's wrong "

"Keith's gone."

"Gone?"

"Drowned."

Mona's shoulders sank, her voice was soft but steady. "Come here, Burnie." The boy fell into her arms and sobbed hysterically. "What are you crying for, Burnie?"

"Keith."

Her smile was slow and said. "No Burnie, not for Keith. For Cob." The boy looked up to Mona's face. Her eyes were shinning — like the light of the fire on the kettle.

Think, Look and See

By Pete Newman

Think of all the useless webs,
That busy spiders spin;
Think how great the host of men,
Who never laurels win.

Look and watch the motley herds,
That in dull tumult fight,
Look at all their downcast eyes,
Whose blinks shut off no light.

See how all the others live,
By culture held in chains,
See if not these tutored souls,
Do dread the earthly pains.

Fireside

By Alistair Macrae

In the hearth the fire burns brightly,
Smoking pine log, snapping, cracking,
Fibrous womb gives birth to countless sparks that Flash and die.

Round about it we are staring,
Looking at the shapes and figures
Pictures in the lurid colour'd flames that Dance and play.

There we see our thoughts and fancies
Shapeless, formless, always moving,
Disappearing into smoke and ever changing,
Go away.

Hypnotized, in silence fallen,
Listening to the lapping of the flames that Rise in graceful tongues, we sit and stare at Things that change.

He was out of breath.

"Hijah fellahs!" he said.

The English chap smiled at him. "This guard business is really a lot of bollux, isn't it?"

He turned from Peter to me.

"I forgot to ask you ... are you married?"

"Sure. Married and three children. A boy and girl. Two girls. Cheerio."

Peter and I prepared for bed.

"So what happened on Coventry Street?" I said.

"Not too much." He climbed between his blankets, watching me to see if I were really listening. "Well, Iris and I were walking along this street, minding our business. All of a sudden, all of a sudden ... Wham! ... somebody packed me a terrific wallop to my jaw. Helluva blow! And I hear a dame scream at me. She yells, "All Yanks are bastids!"

"The Hell you say," I accommodated.

"I see her fat black rump disappear in the crowd. Never saw her before in my life. I was sure taken by surprise. Iris, too. She said, 'What the Hell ...?'"

Peter was sitting in bed with an incredulous look on his face, holding his jaw in an extravagant gesture. "So this dame just ups and socks me one. Says 'All Yanks are bastids!' You sure can't tell me that there ain't any anti-Yank sentiment in Britain!"

I turned off the lights and got into my bed. The fire was burning low in the grate at the far end of the room. I watched it for a long time. A vehicle sped down Chelsea Bridge Road toward the Thames. An ambulance driving through the blackout, probably. There would be a red glow in the sky beyond Battersea.

I heard Peter stirring. "Hey chum," he called softly, "I don't get it! What's the idea, shooting the Limee Joe the line about you being married?"

There still remained a steady glow in the grate. As I watched, a persistent flame reached upward, tottered lambently, and fell.

"Hey chum, you asleep?"

Short Stories

In judging the short stories, Professor Endicott felt that compared to the best work published in the college magazines he did not think that any of the stories submitted were really of prize winning quality.

Essay Prizes

There was no award made in the essay contest. Professor Robins considered that no entry was worthy of an award.

Bewitched

By AUDREY FEASEL

Truly my love is a winsome wee witch,
My attentions to win when she pleases;
She rides on a broomstick of pearly-toothed smiles,
While with eye-darts of blue me she teases.

Aware of the purpose alive in my life,
Of the fame-famished hopes in me burning,
She laughs in my face, and with siren-like grace,
Wrests from me the tools of my learning.

Caught in the net of her spider-web wiles,
My heart hopes in vain for survival;
My conscience competes with resolve she defeats,
While enchanting my brain from reprisal.

Yet if, overcome by those laugh-crinkled curls,
I tell her how deep my dejection,
At my weakness she riles, and with elfin-eared smiles,
Me she mocks, and completes my subjection.

My pen and my papers this long time untouched,
As I write on my desk lay reproving;
But imbued is my blood with the laugh of my love,
And less zest has my work than my loving.

Short Story

AND THE WORLD SPUN

By A. R. Marchment

It was 6:30 a.m. The sun was already sending long streamers of gold across the cold blue sky. It was empty for a few straggling mares' tails.

We were on our way out of the long harbour. Everything seemed still and peaceful but already signs of waking and hustle were showing. Every now and then a honking horn or a clang of a distant streetcar could be heard. As we slipped past the waterfront we could see the occasional late-night reveller wending back to home. Suddenly a bang of a door or a screech of a gull would defy the mood but then all would settle again and the steady throbbing of our engines and the soft swish of the water took over.

I switched on the radio. Headquarters was trying to contact one of the rescue ships.

"Glendore, Glendore, come in please, come in please," it snapped.

No answer. Again, and again the call went out but still no answer. Each time the woman's voice became harder and more exasperated.

"Listen to her!" said the Chief to me as he nodded his head in disgust, as if to say "that's a woman for you."

I switched on the local radio station. The announcer was babbling about the miracles of the latest soap, then came a hot piece of jazz. I switched it off.

Ahead of us was the Admiral's barge, behind another diving tender that was to be in company with us. Ships were forming up.

Soon we hit open sea. The waves were long and smooth. We lazily sloshed up and down. The coastline looked like a National Geographic picture. Bright carmine cliffs jutted out in bold defiance to the emerald sea. Behind stretched the green and brown patchquilts of the farm lands. And all was bathed in the rich golden sun.

We looked and looked and looked. Still no ship. This was the third day. Eighteen men in a little lost craft, no food, no water, nothing! Where were they? What a beautiful morning.

"Get me a cup of coffee, will you?" said the Captain in a broad Oxford accent.

"Yes, Sir."

Down below the Chief was ranting and raving.

"What's wrong?"

"Who is the . . . who ate some of my pickled eggs?"

"Sorry, I don't know Chief. Give me some coffee for the Captain will you?"

"If I ever . . ."

"Thanks."

Still the peace, the beauty, the little concern, and eighteen missing men. Still the world spun, the radios blared, the farmers worked, ships sailed, and eighteen men drifted.

Three days. No sleep. I was conquered, and slumbered. Suddenly I pitched and and awoke.

"What time is it?"

"Quarter to twelve."

"To twelve! Hell! I would fall asleep. Have any luck?"

"Sure, look out there."

And there she was, a grey battered tootsy-toy being towed by our escent Churinga.

"We're on our way back, the turn must have awakened you."

The sun shone, the water sparkled, the ships ploughed, the craft bobbed, the sleepless dream ended.

As we left ship a newsy held a noon edition with the headlines

"LOST MEN RESCUED AT SEA"

Back at the base we met our chums.

"Hello heroes, we haven't had to do anything today. Got a Maker's. Suckers, was the implication.

Six o'clock and the evening edition, "Russia . . ."

What rescue? And still the world spun.

Identity And The Future

By Joan Walsh

Time will erase,
No doubt,
The heart-ache, and the dry tears
By night, and the watching fear by day.

Some time we shall laugh
And gaily remember.

The hours now are harshly wrung together;
The pain of pretence and the misery
Of self-knowledge fold in a ceaseless rhythm
Of anxiety.
Joy-sparked moments are feathered
With a lowering gloom.
Forgetful hours are pain-punctuated
By the twisting dart of self-remembrance.

The dreaming days, the ordered, slowly smiling days,
Of Gothic visions and Mozartian harmony,
Are paled into spectres by the neon-lit economy
Of a world, poised on an atom, futureless.

In after years, will there come a time,
Some time we shall laugh
And gaily remember?

Short Story

THE BEST LAID SCHEMES

By DOUGLAS VALLEAU

Oh I know the company doesn't like the extra work, they say the union dues are no concern of theirs, but I still say there's nothing like the check-off system. After all, a man's only human and by the time he pays rent and food and this and that out of his wages, and maybe some big extras like doctors' bills, the dues don't seem so important after all. Still, a man should be paid up and, if the company could take it out when they take out the unemployment insurance, it'd be just automatic like, not much trouble; and there'd be a lot less grief. Take the case of a friend of mine.

Back before the war we were all working for the motor works. And at the same time there was an old guy worked at the bench right next to this friend of mine. This guy's name was Jim Brady. He got into some kind of trouble when he was a young man over in the old country. It must have been pretty bad cause his family kicked him out. So Jim came over here and went to work. He never married, and being a disagreeable sort with an ugly temper, he didn't make any friends to speak of.

The motor works has a check-off system now but in those days they didn't and you had to pay your own dues by the month. Well, this Jim Brady was a member in good standing and a pretty steady man on the job and my friend knew this, though he'd never had overmuch to do with him.

Then one day old Jim took very sick and went to the hospital. None of the boys paid much attention at the time. The employees' association sent him a lot of magazines and flowers and a card with our sympathies, but that was all.

Then the word got around from the personnel department that Jim Brady was going to die. When this friend of mine heard that he got to thinking of poor old Jim and how he had no family around nor no friends to speak of. And he thought it might be a nice gesture — being as he worked right next him on the bench — if he called at the hospital to cheer old Jim up.

You see this union had an insurance plan. Over a stretch of years, as long as you were paid up, you got a sum of money built up to your credit as life insurance and this sum increased with the time of your membership. Now my friend got out pencil and paper and figured out that Jim had about five hundred dollars coming, and he sort of wondered how the money'd be left in Jim's will, him not having any relations or friends to speak of.

So my friend got some flowers and a couple of bottles of Molson's in a basket and went down to the hospital. The nurse showed him into the ward and told him not to stay long, that Mr. Brady was very ill.

"Hello, Jim," says my friend, "just thought I'd drop along and see you Jim, for old times' sake, as you might say, and to see if there was anything you'd be wanting."

"It was good of ye to come, Michael," says Jim, "Sure I'm a very sick man, I am (he was Irish, was Jim). The doctor says I'll not be getting up again."

"Tush man, you'll be fit as a fiddle in no time at all, you see," says my friend — cheery like — but he could tell from Jim's look that he wouldn't last long. He was all thin and yellowish and his hand was crippled up. It was a sort of stroke he'd had.

"You know, Michael," says Jim weakly, "you're the first man to come in and see me since I'v been lying here. And I appreciate it I can tell you. It's times like these when you find out who's your friends and who isn't." Jim looked sort of weepy and my friend didn't know quite what to say so he just smiled and thought to himself how old Jim, being flat on his back, wouldn't be able to drink the beer he'd brought.

"Michael," says Jim.

"Yes," says my friend.

"They won't be allowing you to stay long and I've got something has been weighing on my mind all these long weeks."

"Yes," says my friend.

"I've no family, Michael, and no one here that belongs to me, and no friends at all except for you, Michael."

"Yes," says my friend.

"I've been thinking of my funeral, Michael. I'm a sick man and I'll not be up again. Indeed, Michael, I've had a stroke."

"Yes," says my friend.

"Now there's my money that the union has. There's been no will made up to this day and you know that if no will is made, all that money goes back to the union. And there's no one will look after my corpse, Michael."

My friend felt very queer. There were tears running out of old Jim's eyes and his voice was all husky and quavery.

"Now, Michael, I'm going to ask you a great favor. You're the only real friend I have in all the world."

"Yes," says my friend.

"Will you take the money from the union and see that I have a decent Christian burial when I'm gone?"

"I'd be glad to do anything in my power that will help you," says my friend, sort of like speaking a line out of a play.

So they had the doctor in for a witness and a sort of will was made out and my friend became old Jim's beneficiary with the union.

Then my friend took the beer in the basket and left. He made a few more trips to the hospital and Jim wept each time and said how Michael was a true friend; and my friend said yes. Then one day they didn't let him in. "Mr. Brady is sinking," they said, "he's in a coma." So my friend went home and cancelled his order with the florist and just sat tight.

Before another week went by, Jim Brady was dead. Now, like I said, my friend figured old Jim had about five hundred dollars coming. So he went down to the undertaker — old Mr. Bateman, you know, used to call himself the family undertaker, complete, dignified funerals at moderate cost — and soon he settled on a nice proper funeral for three hundred dollars. Everyone said how nice it was, how dignified; if only old Jim could have seen it I'm sure he would have been pleased.

Then bright and early the next morning my friend appeared down at the union. He felt pretty good, he did. After all he'd made a man's dying moments happy, and he stood to make a clear two hundred dollars on the deal.

But what he didn't know and what old Jim hadn't told him was that once a few years back Jim had let his dues lapse for a month or two. Now this meant that his insurance only ran from then and not for as long as my friend had figured. The man behind the wicket smiled and paid my friend the one hundred and fifty dollars old Jim had coming to him.

Now you can say what you like about your dues being no business of the company's; but just as sure as my name's Michael, if they all used the check-off system there'd be a lot less grief in this world.

Short Story

Inheritance

By BETH THOMPSON

John Firth has a narrow frame and a narrow face that stares out quite apart from his features, and eyes that are large and circled and do not smile. He is nine years old in the noon of this summer day with no space between earth and sky to walk and breathe in. What might have been blue is green, created green by the yellow of the sun, all a green heat, washing his body in dryness.

(Oh for the boat and the loneliness of white water and the skimming gull! Let me die and watch the water.)

School is past for a morning—indefinite time filled with breathless pain at being noticed, being asked and unable to answer, sitting still. Hands damp and throat beating in fearful anticipation of the inevitable. Relief in the lull of noon oblivion. Back to sharp light and voices and trembling; and then, night, and sleep.

Suddenly, the loud curve of brakes and a thud and a gathering crowd.

There it was, the small, inert, cocker body, bathed in clotted fur; lying, lifted up, dead.

John's throat stretched and stretched and was plucked with nausea. Tears were in his throat and his soul was crying but no tears fell.

"—Coming to meet me and it happened—" and the arms of his mother protected his eyes, but he was inside his grief and it smothered him. His had been the dog's soul and he had seen the hurt and the blood and the quivering stillness. Now there was nothing but the emptiness of climbing shadows on his wall and the clustering heat of a summer night.

(Nothing to do and no one to tell and tomorrow.) His union was lost; he was alone with his pain and death was tragedy.

The other boys twitched at their posts on the field, every fibre in their bodies crying to the rhythms of the game, the wind. This was Saturday morning on the impromptu diamond—scuffled mud and apples and sun of freedom, before their paper routes of the afternoon. John felt the sting of the bleak autumn air and saw the leaves falling.

(Oh God why did I come? Let them not laugh, God, let me hit it and let me breathe and run.)

Third base is weaving bodily patterns in the expectant air, exhorting his comrades, who wait, alert. A quick round of practice play, and batter up! The ball is a good one, and "Boston", a small dark streak of a boy with a wizened nose slips a low one to left field. Second it!

"Come on, Firth, you're up! Get a move on!

(That is my name and they are calling me. My body is wet and I cannot swing my arms in the wind because I shall be cold. Marilyn is on the fence again, watching, and sucking her broken tooth where she fell last year, and the bird above her head is free to go or stay. Think of a bird in the night with a cool dry body, free to fly or rest! But I am here to play ball with "Boston" and Hank and Carl and Marilyn is waiting. God let it be over with darkness.)

John, his arms pressed to his sides, moved stiffly to the home plate and stood a clumsy ghost in face of insistent reality.

Strike one!

Poem

By JOHN GONZALEZ

I

To love . . . what?
A signpost that says:
"Yonge and Queen"?

The carpet, door, and kitchen mats?
Dull pastry-like patched up squaws
That strut in mawkish pink-titted-ness
Sweating and odorous?

II

To pour passion . . . where?
In mad dreams of subtle confusion?
The Staring Emptiness and grande-vide of frozen veal?
Slabs of fat . . . cold and unheated,
Slopping in unamorous decadence
Conceal underneath jugfuls of paint
And similar slop
With heads lolling, tied to their feet
Breasts crabbed or swollen
With the perspiration of the man-hunt
For sexual achievment.
Love . . . . what?
A pillar at Yonge and Bloor?

Spiritual Suicide

By MARSHALL BRUCE EVOY

The moonlight over Bigwin Isle in silver streams was pouring.

He walked alone through forest glades deserted by his fair one
And thought on brighter yesterdays when Fortune fondly smiling
Seduced his wild impassioned youth and left him oddly yearning
To be loved, and to be loving, and to lift his soul to God.

While glowworms, trimming tiny lamps,
lit his ascent to Heaven
All nature spread a carpet green and can-opied his walking.
Enclosed within the foliage, frustration
strangely tightened Until a sigh escaped his lips—"I miss you my beloved!

"We live but in a world accursed where love seems oft so fleeting
That one might claim it courted hate to cool the scorching embers;
I now discover in despair that love is an illusion,
A product of Utopian minds, an instrument of Satan."

He reached the opening of the glade where there appeared a tower
And scaling it as in a dream he touched the stars of Heaven
Before whose sharp contrasting spheres his failing spirit shuddered
Then, wildly shrieking, plunged to earth and silently entered Hell.
The moonlight over Bigarin Isle in silver streams was pouring.

Lady Moccasins

By GEORGE HUBBERT

In some secluded spot they bloom
In all their yellow loveliness—
The chrysalis—the sun's cocoon,
Nurtured between the cleaved rock.
Above their gold and green pines swing
And rustle in the summer breeze,
While far and near cicadas sing
And talk of loneliness and these.

They bob and bob or gently sway
To challenge the sweet columbine,
Reposeful just across the way,
His four red goblets filled with wine—
Wine stolen from the summer sun
Or sucked from rock, who dares to say?
Perhaps 'tis wine of loneliness,
A wine you've drunk for many a day.

Then back to mocassins and mirth
I lead you my deluded friend.
Think not of stolen wine or worth
Of things that make too sad an end.
Take schoolboy's carefree attitude
Or lesson from this flower caught,
Here at the corner of the wood
Where none disturbs profoundest thought.

is falling and I hate it all! It is raining leaves and I cannot sing because there are leaves everywhere.)

"Sorry, gang, I've gotta run an errand—Jus' remembered—"

John dropped the bat and walked and ran from the grey and brown of the autumn faces, from the blowing of the sky, from the pressure of the leaves. He hated summer and autumn because he was locked from other lives and times. He would like to be Marilyn and watch John Firth hit a homer; and the bird, and hear distant waters; and his dog, and know death.

The night was so blue and quiet that he awoke to the sound of their voices. White upon blue and the frost pressing at his window. "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" flooded upon the tree-stillness and was gone. And again the voices.

"By God, we'll see if I can come into my own room or not!"

He sat up from his blanket and pushed his hands into his ears; his arms were cold and he stared at the sound until the darkness pained his eyeballs.

The memory of his sixth birthday party clutched at him again and gave him the vision of his father with his thick tongue and empty, empty eyes, and his sudden vomit. Then the shock and the sharp wing of shame in them all.

A dreariness, a hollow dreariness like the moan of a train whistle that is too loud, settled into him and he fell back and lay still.

John Firth knew joy that spring for his mother received a white rose and a card with the rose that made her smile from behind her eyes and made the happiness spill around her. John came to love this love and when his mother played "Jerusalem" on the piano which had not known music before the rose, he could leave his body and fly to the distant waters.

NFCUS - IUS AFFILIATION REJECTED IN MONTREAL

Claim Grants Drop Behind Living Costs

A resolution calling on the Federal Government to raise the basic grant to student veterans was overwhelmingly carried at the Conference of the National Council of Student Veterans held at Kingston during the Christmas vacation. Delegates felt that the $60 a month decided on in 1944 was no longer adequate in view of the increased cost of living.

Varsity Supports Move

The resolution was supported by University of Toronto delegates, Fred Umansky, IV Vic, John Gwynne-Timothy, IV Trinity, and Mary Eckold, IV Vic.

A recommendation, proposed by the University of Toronto and the University of British Columbia, that the Federal Government retain the university training plan as a permanent institution was passed unanimously by representatives from the twenty universities participating in the conference.

Affiliate With Legion

Over the objections of the Toronto delegation, NCSV voted to affiliate with the Canadian Legion. This decision, and the question of affiliation with the National Federation of Canadian University Students will be reviewed at a later date.

A discussion of the employment services available to graduating students led to a suggestion from the Toronto delegation that an enquiry into the possibility of establishing an integrated employment bureau be made. At present most universities maintain 'employment services of some sort, but they have made no successful effort as yet to effect liaison with each other or with the National Employment Service.

Graduate Student

Keith Ralston, School of Graduate Studies, representing graduate students, introduced resolutions requesting that the requirements for DVA support of graduate students be clarified, and that limitations on earnings from fellowships and research grants be eliminated.

Resolutions urging that Merchant Navy veterans be granted eligibility for DVA benefits, that the Federal Government extend rent controls to 1950, and that the provincial governments sponsor facilities to provide for Masters and Doctors degrees not now available in Canada to stop the flow of Canadian students to the United States were also passed.

Ace Plunger Tom Waldon Wins Coveted Copp Award

Tommy Waldon, ace backfielder with the intercollegiate champion Varsity Blues football team, has been awarded the Johnny Copp memorial trophy—highest honor that can be paid a Varsity football player.

The announcement came late yesterday afternoon from the office of athletic director Warren Stevens. With most of the voting completed, Waldon holds a sufficient majority to assure his victory.

Awarded Annually

For the benefit of some of the newcomers to the U of T flock, the Johnny Copp memorial trophy is awarded annually to the member of the Senior Rugby team who, in that season, by his sportsmanship, character and playing ability, is adjudged the most valuable member of the team. The trophy is in memory of John C. H. Copp, a student in the faculty of medicine who died in 1933. To make the award more significant the choice is made by the football players themselves.

For Tommy Waldon, the award culminates a brilliant athletic career. In his final year at Varsity he has realized two of his greatest ambitions. The first was the winning of the intercollegiate football championship, after biting Western dust for two previous seasons. Now he will see his name engraved for posterity beside Varsity football "greats" of the past.

Played In Navy

Tommy came out of North Toronto Collegiate where he played under Bobby Coulter. He spent one year at Varsity before entering the Navy where he stayed for three years. While in the services he played with the great Navy team that included such notables as Royal Copeland, Steve Levantis and other outstanding Canadian footballers.

After the war he returned to Varsity and for the past three seasons has won himself a starring role in the Blues' backfield. Tommy was a vastly underrated operator in his first two seasons, but really came into his own this year as the Blues rolled to their first intercollegiate football championship since 1936.

Great Play

Most of the Blue followers will remember Tommy best for a dazzling display of headwork performed in the final game of the season against Western. The Blues had possession on the Western six-yard line, first down. Then, with the Western team bunched in the centre for a presumed crack at the centre of the line, Tommy took a direct pass from centre, and, head down, started for the mass of players directly in front of him. At the last possible moment, he straightened up and shot a beautiful pro pass straight over the line to Jack Gray, standing all alone in the end-zone. Many believe that was the proverbial straw that broke Western's back. A sidelight to Waldon's career is the fact that he's one of the few Canadian footballers who has successfully worn contact lenses while performing on the football field. Tommy first started wearing them in 1946, and has been doing so ever since.

To say that Mr. Waldon is walking on air these days is putting it mildly. And everyone who knows Tommy, is just as happy about it as he is. The entire student body can well be proud of the 1948 choice for the Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy.

Contentious Issue Threatens Split In National Union

By JACK GRAY
Varsity Staff Correspondent

Defeat of a resolution to affiliate the National Federation of Canadian University Students and the International Union of Students at the NFCUS Conference held in Montreal during the Christmas vacation returns NFCUS to the position it was in two years ago.

Maritimes Opposed

The final vote of the 1948 Conference, ten to seven against affiliation, indicated that a majority of the universities who are members of NFCUS opposed affiliation. Opposition centred mainly in the Maritimes, with Central Canadian universities strongly in support, and Western universities split.

The 12th Annual Conference did not completely close the door to affiliation but voted in favor of sending two 'observers' to the IUS Assembly meeting to be held in Europe next summer. The observers, if they go, will have their expenses up to $1000 paid by NFCUS. The money will come from grants from student councils of member universities. If the money is not granted NFCUS will not send anyone to the IUS Assembly.

By far the most controversial issue that NFCUS had to deal with, the question of IUS threatened to split the national organization in two. In the commission meeting which considered the problem, the question of whether or not any universities would leave NFCUS should it affiliate, was thrashed out. With the exception of Acadia and the University of New Brunswick, who were not sure, members agreed that their universities would abide by the majority decision.

In an entire day of discussion the commission finally passed a resolution calling for 'conditional affiliation'. This resolution passed by a vote of six to five.

Students Protest Dutch Aggression Picket Embassy

Five University students, members of the Students' Peace Council, were among a group of approximately 15 young people who picketed the Dutch Embassy in protest against reported Netherlands aggression in Indonesia early last week.

The picket, organized by Steve Endicott, secretary of the Peace Council, included youthful representatives of labor unions and church groups.

Pamphlets demanding that Canada stop supplying arms to the Dutch and stand against Dutch aggression in the UN were handed out by the picketters.

Later in the week the Students' Peace Council Executive held a meeting to formulate a program for the new term. Plans were made to have Indonesian students speak at the first open meeting on the situation in their home country. Resolutions put forth by the Toronto Peace Council are to be discussed, as previously voted on, at the next meeting. Study groups to scrutinize various aspects in the Council's drive for peace are to be formed.

Lord Salisbury to Lecture In Robert Falconer Series

The Marquess of Salisbury, Opposition Leader in the House of Lords, is coming to the University of Toronto this year to deliver the Falconer Lectures, Dr. Sidney Smith, U. of T. president, announced today.

"Lord Salisbury is a courageous and brilliant parliamentarian," Dr. Smith said. "He proved himself a man of principle when he resigned from the Government in 1938 in protest against appeasement and denounced the Chamberlain era as 'one of the most humiliating episodes in our history'."

Born Robert Arthur James Gascoyne Cecil, Lord Salisbury is better known to Canadians as Viscount Cranborne, the title he used while his father was alive. He returned to the British Cabinet in 1940 with Winston Churchill and served successfully as Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, Colonial Secretary and Lord Privy Seal.

In the House of Lords he has been a leader in the drive for Western Union. "We must act swiftly to prevent the swallowing up of western Europe by the east," he said recently. "No one wants war but war may ultimately result."

The Sir Robert Falconer Lectureship was established in 1938 by friends of the late Sir Robert Falconer, president of the University from 1907 to 1932. The lectures are designed to commemorate Sir Robert's interest in the promotion of an intelligent understanding of international happenings. They are delivered by people qualified to awaken and confirm in students an inberest in world affairs.

The lectures were inaugurated in 1939. None has been given since 1945 when Sir Richard Livingstone was the speaker.

REFRESHER COURSE

A refresher course in the combined subjects of practical ophthalmology and oto-laryngology will be held at the University of Toronto under the auspices of the Faculty of Medicine, January 24 to January 29, 1949.

Guest speakers will be Dr. Ramon Castroviejo of New York, and Dr. Lawrence R. Boies of Minneapolis, who will speak on "General problems of interest to the practice of Oto-laryngology."

Appoint Toronto Delegate NFCUS National President

Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, president of the University of Toronto SAC, was elected National President of the National Federation of Canadian University Students for the coming year by delegates to the 12th annual NFCUS Conference held during the Christmas vacation at the University of Montreal. He will hold office only until next September, when, under a change in the NFCUS constitution, the next annual conference will be held.

Change Dates

The change from a September to a December conference was made in order that the NFCUS year will coincide with the university year, to allow a longer time for the actual conference, and in hopes that the work of NFCUS will be speeded up and made easier.

Delegates to the conference decided that NFCUS will not affiliate with the Intergational Union of Students this year. A motion of affiliation was defeated in plenary session by a vote of ten to seven. Under NFCUS voting rules each university sending delegates has one vote. The University of Toronto, along with McGill, Western, Saskatchewan, Montreal, Laval and Bishop's College voted for affiliation. British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Dalhousie, New Brunswick, McMaster, Ottawa, Mount Allison, St. Dunston's and Acadia were opposed.

Harwood's Report

Retiring NFCUS President, Bob Harwood, of the University of British Columbia, in his report at the beginning of the sessions, called on delegates to preserve the unity of the national student organization at what he termed "the most significant conference in our history." He reviewed the past year's activity, pointing out that more work on a Dominion Intercollegiate Union has been done, the first national debating finals held by the National Debating Union were held, investigation of the possibility of forming a Canadian University Federation was made, and a number of inter-regional student exchanges were held.

In the international field NFCUS has offered their fullest assistance and co-operation to the Canadian Committee of ISS who are bring-

Back To Scratch

After almost two years of heated dispute and wearisome discussion the problem of affiliation between the National Federation of Canadian University Students and the International Union of Students has been resolved.

At its recent conference in Montreal NFCUS finally vetoed plans for affiliation with the international organization. But it seems that NFCUS has still not profited by its past mistakes.

After the bumbling, half-hearted affair last year when NFCUS voted for "conditional" affiliation and had its sincerity questioned by IUS, it seemed that a more decisive and positive stand was needed. Delegates at last week's conference recognized this and voted against affiliation but passed an additional resolution which held out some vague hope of compromise to those who favored affiliation by calling for two "observers" to attend next summer's IUS conference in Europe.

Such a policy seems inconsistent. If NFCUS has definitely turned its back on IUS—and it seems to have done so—there is little point in appropriating $1,000 from its meager coffers to send representatives to a meeting of an organization which it has deliberately flouted.

There are probably many students who will heave a sigh of relief if only because NFCUS has removed a cumbersome weight from its shoulders. With the welter of dispute and constant wrangling over the IUS issue, the work of NFCUS was slowly bogging down. What should have been a minor technical arrangement was built up into a colossus completely out of proportion to its importance. What might have been a reasonable working arrangement, beneficial to both organizations, was smothered in a mass of distorted, irresponsible accusations and counter-accusations which threatened to destroy the basic work of NFCUS.

It is unfortunate that NFCUS chose to remain out of the international group. It betrays a form of ostrich-like behaviour, a vestige of isolationism which took a bloody world war to shatter.

And it indicates that university students—who should know better—are lacking in political maturity. If any excuse can be offered it is that many of our elders are currently showing the same lack of maturity.

If IUS is communist-dominated then the only way to eradicate the undesirable element is to join the organization and fight tooth and nail for a more liberal policy. By failing to do so NFCUS failed Canadian students and failed millions of students elsewhere who could have profited from the democratic strength represented by the voice of 40,000 Canadian university students.

The Cat's Own New Year Honors List

George Drew: For restoring to national politics the dignified tone that has been lacking.

Mayor McCallum: For exposing the appallingly large number of Communists in Toronto—23,777 of 'em.

The Toronto Police: For their vigilant safeguarding of civil rights.

The Toronto Star: For steadfastly resisting the temptation to use emotional arguments in matters of fact.

Premier Duplessis: For his intelligent and co-operative interest in the international scene.

The Varsity: For supplying the only real competition to "HUSH."

The Economics Department: For its clear use of simple, precise English.

The Toronto Peace Council: For inducing Russia to disarm.

Toronto Voters: For refusing to allow themselves to be fooled by the capitalistic newspaper owners into thinking that they would safeguard democracy by voting.

William Lyon Mackenzie King: For not attempting to influence the choice of his successor.

William Lyon Mackenzie King: (again) For his swift decision to resign.

George McCullagh: For showing his desire to keep the press free by buying The Evening Telegram in order to keep it independent.

The Toronto Star (again): For its aid in electing George Drew to Carleton riding.

Jack Benny: For giving variety to the radio listeners, not by changing jokes, but by switching networks. And showing his faithfulness to the U.S. treasury by keeping it well-supplied with money.

Rev. T. T. Shields: For his willingness to be unbiased, unprejudiced, and allowing his seminar students freedom of thought and choice.

Dave Balfour: For promising to keep the Kremlin from creeping into the City Hall, and for his sensible banning of the evil Kinsey report, which he refuses to read.

The House UN-American Committee: For selecting carefully inspected evidence, and protecting the American way of life.

The Globe and Mail: For keeping politics from influencing the presentation of its front page news.

Jack Kent Cooke: For impartially reporting the election of Mickey Lester as Canada's number one disc jockey in an independent poll carried by Liberty Magazine, (which he owns). Lester happens to be on CKEY, which Cooke also happens to own.

The S.A.C.: For the swiftness with which it carries out its investigations, as in fees and constitution reform.

The Champus Cat: For being a humor column that refuses to be humorous. Harpo, Panurge.

ISU Skirts Down Men Lose Hope

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Jan. 5. — (Exchange) — A revolution has taken place on the campus of Louisiana State University. The traditionally brief skirts of the three drum-majorettes that prance in front of LSU's band on festive occasions have been drastically altered by the decrees of fashion.

The majorettes, long immortalized in picture and prose with shapely, flashing legs, will have skirts that cover their limbs to an inch below the knee!

As the hemlines on the drum majorettes' skirts dropped to below-the-knee length, so did the faces of the male students.

An Arts student proposed a solution. "Since the leg view is 99 and 44/100 percent of the show and baton twirling is the remaining .56 percent, why not have the majorettes wear pants and masquerade as men?"

"I don't think long skirts go with the band. We're supposed to have a good, flashy band, and I've never seen a band that didn't have two pairs of good-looking legs in front of it," said a Journalism student.

CCUF Members Ask Scholars Be Subsidized

Resolutions calling for extension of DVA-type assistance to all students capable of university education, and for "high minimum standards" of primary and secondary school education throughout Canada, were passed by the third annual convention of the Co-operative Commonwealth University Federation, which met in Ottawa, Dec. 29 and 30.

Attending the convention from U of T were members of the retiring executive, Reid Scott, Dave Corbett and Elgin Blair; Gord Milling as delegate, and alternates Toni Grube and Audrey Renwicke. Visitors to the convention included representatives from the CCYM and from the American Students' League for Industrial Democracy.

The convention heard addresses from M. J. Coldwell, national leader, and David Lewis, national secretary of the CCF. Lewis called for strengthening of the "third force" in world politics, to provide an alternative to "the ruthlessness of Communism on the one hand, and the heartlessness of reaction on the other." He said that CCF foreign policy aimed at achieving democracy and peace abroad, but not one without the other.

Speaking at the closing convention, M. J. Coldwell stressed the importance of young people's activities in the political field, pointing out recent examples of successful participation by youth in active politics.

CCF clubs from coast to coast reported on their activities in the past year. Progress reported varied from small unrecognized nucleus clubs at UNB and Western, to older and larger clubs at Toronto and UBC. The latter reported a paid-up membership of more than 500.

Election

Claude Ellis, John Burton and Jim McNeil of the University of Saskatchewan were elected to the 1949 executive of the CCUF as president, secretary and treasurer. The new regional vice-president for the Ontario division is Morgan Bebee of Queen's.

Resolutions dealing with foreign policy passed by the delegates supported admission of the State of Israel to the United Nations, and appealed to the Canadian government to put a stop to arms shipments to the Chinese Nationalists and to urge the UN to effect "a peaceful solution" of the Chinese civil war.

Martin Wolfish and Calvin Ezrin, both in Fourth Year Medicine at the University of Toronto, will divide the Charles E. Frosst Scholarship this year, Dr. Sidney Smith, University of Toronto president, announces.

Back Home

The Bracken Trophy was presented to the Canadian University Press five years ago by the Hon. John Bracken, then leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, to be awarded annually to the college paper with the best editorials. As usual it has gone astray in transit between Western, last year's winner, and Laval University. The trophy was last won by The Varsity in 1946-47. Precious winners were the McGill Daily, and the Dalhousie Gazette.

Bracken Trophy

Returns To Varsity

The Varsity, the McGill Daily, and The Gazette of the University of Western Ontario took top honors among Canadian university student newspapers last week when they were awarded trophies at the annual Canadian University Press Conference held in Quebec City December 28-31.

The Bracken Trophy, won by The Gazette last year was awarded to The Varsity which, in the opinion of the judges, contained the best editorials among student papers. Originally awarded for best editorial content, the Bracken Trophy during the past few years had been awarded on the basis of all-round newspaper superiority but reverted to its original basis this year. It was last won by The Varsity in 1946-47. Runners-up were the Ubyssey, of the University of British Columbia in second place, and the McGill Daily, third.

Two new trophies, the Southam Trophy and the Ryan Trophy, were put up for competition this year for general newspaper competence. The Southam Trophy, awarded to the best of the three dailies, The Varsity, the McGill Daily and the Ubyssey, was won by the McGill Daily followed by The Varsity in second place and the Ubyssey in third place.

The Ryan Trophy, emblematic of superiority in the semi-weekly and weekly class, was won by The Gazette of the University of Western Ontario. The McMaster Silhouette was second and the Queen's Journal, third.

Judges for the awards were Mr. M. E. Nichols, former managing editor of the Vancouver Province; Mr. Herve Major, news editor of La Presse and vice-president of Canadian Press; Mr. C. J. Albon, publisher of the Springhill Record and president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. Chief judge was Mr. T. D'Arcy Finn, executive editor of the Ottawa Citizen and honorary president of the Canadian University Press.

The awards were announced by Mr. Finn at the CUP banquet held at the Chateau Frontenac December 30.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Jan. 9, at 9.00 p. m. Pierre Boutet, tenor, in a group of English, Italian, and French songs, with Marjorie Lea accompanist.

Resigns

G. P. de I. Glazebrook, Professor of History has resigned his post at the University to take up duties with the joint intelligence bureau of the National Defense Department. A graduate of Toronto (B.A.) and Oxford (M.A.), Professor Glazebrook joined the Baldwin House Staff in 1924 and has served since with a break when he was loaned to the External Affairs Department from 1942-46. His duties have been of a general nature though he specializes in International relations and Canadian external affairs.

CUP Member Papers Hold Meet At Laval, Want Foreign News

Thirty-eight delegates from the 20 member Canadian university newspapers gathered at Laval University, Quebec City, December 29-31 for the annual Canadian University Press Conference.

The delegates discussed problems of their various papers and set up new services to be undertaken by CUP, as well as reviewing the present operation of the organization.

Essential Information

The University of Saskatchewan Sheaf will put out a calendar in February containing essential information on all the students papers, including publication dates and news deadlines.

A survey in connection with national advertising in student publications will be conducted by the Georgian, a report to be presented at the CUP conference next year.

The possibility of the CUP developing Unipress, an organization to be based on exchange of newspapers and articles with European student newspapers, was discussed. It was decided to have McGill and the University of Montreal go ahead with the exchange immediately, and also conduct a full investigation into the possibilities of the scheme, and make a report at the next conference.

The feature, The Editors Speak, will be discontinued; the Queen's Journal is working on a feature of general campus information, and will be responsible for this feature during the coming year.

The University of British Columbia Ubyssey will make a test of the efficiency of the fire service on January 15, sending out a trial story to discover how soon distribution across Canada is completed.

A resolution was sent to the National Federation of Canadian University Students, affirming the technical feasibility of a national publication, and assuring NFCUS of full co-operation.

The Brunswickan, University of New Brunswick, will publish a CUP handbook, to contain the constitution, a style guide, explanation of the wire service and other features of the CUP.

Mr. Grant Dexter, managing editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, was elected honorary president of the CUP, succeeding Mr. T. D'Arcy Finn, who held the office this year.

The Manitoban, University of Manitoba, was elected as executive for the coming year.

Next year's conference will be held at Montreal, with the University of Montreal acting as host.

Mark Harrison, editor-in-chief, and Dorothy Herring, CUP editor, represented The Varsity.

Board of Review Raises Eyebrows At Revue Script

Less than a week from opening night, the All-Varsity Revue may be held up by the board of review.

The board of review is the "Johnson office" of the All-Varsity Revue, its purpose to pass on the suitability of the script. Members of the board are professors I. R. Pounder, C. T. Knox, T. A. Goudge, C. T. Bissell, and E. A. Macdonald, general secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., and Joe Potts, IV Pol. Sci.

Potts said last night that a meeting of the board was held yesterday to discuss the final script and certain parts of the book were regarded as "too risque" for presentation. No cuts were made in the script, Potts said, but another meeting of the board will be held today to discuss possible deletions.

Professor Knox said there was nothing to be excited about. "Nothing was settled today. We are having another meeting today to discuss the script," he said.

"I don't think there will be any hold-up of any kind," Prof. Goudge said. "I do not think it appropriate to say anything at this time. We are meeting again today."

Dr. Pounder said, "I prefer not to say anything about the meeting yesterday. The business is still unfinished and I feel it would be inappropriate to comment."

Mr. Macdonald said he felt sure the show would not be held up by the censoring. "There have been objections to certain parts of the script but with a word changed here and there it will be all right. There are suggestions but the show will not be delayed."

Joe Grittani, business manager of the Revue said 2,000 tickets out of the 3,500 printed had been sold "Most of those left are singles but a few doubles for all nights are left if you look hard enough," Grittani added.

Aim of New NFCUS Leader To Be Inter-Campus Unity

"The most significant work that NFCUS can do next year is to aid in bringing about a better understanding between university students in Canada," said Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, IV Trinity, recently elected president of the NFCUS. He stressed the need for more association between French-speaking students, and others, particularly, and stated that the furtherance of this unity was one of his main reasons for accepting the position.

He said that committees throughout the country should concentrate on 4 major operations, student exchange between Canada and the United States, international exchange, the summer exchange plan, and summer travel schemes. All that is needed is effective publicity on all campuses in Canada, said the new president.

The reason for the defeat of the IUS-NFCUS merger proposal was the feeling that the need for a strong NFCUS was paramount in Canada before the international field was entered. At no time was there any suggestion of student isolation and ultimate affiliation is still desirable. In becoming president Gord adds another activity to another already impressive list of enterprises which he heads.

LPP Conference Plan Asks Democratization

A call for increasing democratization of campus life, a wider number of representative assemblies of the type now held by Victoria College, and a DVA-like plan for the general public was made by members of the U. of T. LPP Club at a conference held last Monday.

A program dealing with the questions of peace, university fees, democracy on the campus, free speech, racial discrimination, and "the securing of responsible and unfettered student government" was adopted.

In a press release the LPP students condemned the "right-wing policies of the leadership of the CCF" and expressed the belief "that increasing sections of the CCF membership are becoming uneasy under their reactionary leadership."

The press release also stated that the club proclaimed its support of the seamen of the CSU, and that it condemned "Canadian economic and military attachments to the U. S."

World Renowned Scientist To Be Wallberg Lecturer

Karl Taylor Compton, one of the great scientists of the world will deliver the second Wallberg Lecture at the University of Toronto January 11. He will speak in Convocation Hall at 8:30 p.m. on "The Scientist and the Engineer". The lecture will be open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Author of about one hundred scientific publications, member or head of over fifty Committees, Councils, Commissions or Boards, Dr. Compton has made an incalculable contribution to the scientific and technological advances of our time. He has received 28 honorary degrees.

Dr. Compton is a member of a remarkable family. His father is Dean and Professor of Philosopsy in the College of Wooster. One brother is President of the State College of Washington. Another brother is President of Washington University in St. Louis and Nobel Prize Laureate in Physics in 1927. A sister is the wife of the President of Forman Christian College of Lahore, India.

Grads Open Ski Club Designed For Students

Last week-end two university graduates opened their new Skye-Hye Ski Club located only twenty-three miles from Toronto in the Bolton district.

Dune Smith, from Toronto and Jack Renz, from the University of Saskatoon, have put a great deal of work in getting the club started and feel that it has been especially designed for student use.

There is a new ski tow serving a variety of trails that have just been cleared, as well as lots of rolling hills for those who like to get away from it all and set off across country.

Food and warmth can be found in the comfortable chalet near the tow which will operate every day except Mondays and Tuesdays. Those wanting some help with their skiing will like Ernie Schreiber who learned to ski in the Alps of Czechoslovakia and Austria.

The route taken is along No. 7 Highway to No. 50 Highway leading to Bolton. A sign at the right hand side marks the way to the club.

conference on the fact that IUS was only a minor part of NFCUS activity. Many delegates charged that during the past year IUS had taken up most of the attention of NFCUS and had prevented other work from being done.

The commission report reached the floor of the plenary session late in the afternoon. It was put at the end of the day's agenda in order that time needed for other questions would not be taken up in argument on affiliation. First the question of secession was cleared up for the benefit of those delegates who had not been able to take part in the commission debate.

As the debate progressed speaker after speaker rose to oppose affiliation. The main argument in almost every instance was that NFCUS was not strong enough to join IUS. Delegates argued that if NFCUS joined IUS it would not be able to carry on a strong national program. Other speakers claimed that NFCUS had taken nothing but a beating from IUS and charged that all the publicity given the question had been detrimental to our organization.

U. of T. For Affiliation

Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, speaking for the Toronto delegates, called on NFCUS to affiliate now. "We believe that we have something to give to IUS, not something to get from it," he stated. Bob Gill, of McGill University, who had opposed affiliation the previous day in commission, rose to support the motion. "We are a responsible body," he declared. Maintaining that the delegates present at the conference were leaders, he called on them to "make up your minds as to whether we have enough faith in NFCUS to go out and work in the international field."

Henri Schmidt, from Laval University, in the afternoon's most stirring speech urged delegates to affiliate. "It is a question," he said, "of whether we have enough faith in ourselves to go out and support our ideas." He charged that those who would not affiliate were victims of "fear", and were too tired to go back to IUS again." Answering the arguments that we had been kicked around last year, Schmidt declared: "We failed last year, not because we were not right, but because our methods were wrong."

Roll Call Vote

Vote was taken by roll call in an atmosphere intensified by thhe strong feelings and opinions which had been expressed. Ten universities, British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Dalhousie, New Brunswick, McMaster, Ottawa, Mount Allison, St. Dunston's and Acadia voted against affiliation. Seven universities, Toronto, McGill, Saskatchewan, Western, Montreal, Laval and Bishop's voted in favor.

ing European students to Canada to study under the ISS "Reconstruction Scholarship" plan. ISS hopes to bring at least 35 students to Canada next year.

In addition to this, Harwood reported that commissions of enquiry had worked on the following projects: student council organization and activities, student income and expenditures, university radio, student free loan fund, international exchange of students, national tours, exchange exhibition in fine and applied arts, co-operatives and credit unions, and employment services.

Under a proposal passed in plenary session on the third day of the Conference, NFCUS set up a commission to seek Federal aid for university education. Maintaining that a precedent had been set by the Federal Government in the DVA scheme, NFCUS will prepare a brief calling on the government to continue aid to Canadian universities through continuation and extension of the Dominion-Provincial Scholarship Plan, and by grants to universities on a per student basis, as is now being done through DVA. The present Federal grant to universities is $150 per student veteran. Preparation of the brief was given to the University of Toronto, because of the work that they have already done in this field.

A move to postpone holding of a summer seminar of Canadian students on "Problems of Canadian Unity" was defeated. The proposed seminar will be held this August, if possible, in the province of Quebec. About 100 students will take part. Definite arrangements are yet to be completed.

Essential James Joyce

An excellent collection has been made by Mr. Harry Levin for "The Essential James Joyce" (Clarke, Irwin, $3.25). The value of the volume is largely due to the amount of material included in the selection, but much credit goes to Mr. Levin for his critical introduction, and for his preface to each work.

The collection includes the complete books—"Dubliners", "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man", "Exiles", "Chamber Music", and "Pomes Penyeach". In addition, there are three other poems, and excerpts from "Ulysses" and "Finnegan's Wake".

"Dubliners" is a collection of short stories, part of the author's earliest works. They are not short stories, in the accepted sense, but anecdotes, or more correctly, as Mr. Levin calls them, encounters. The story is implied rather than stated, just as a person's character may often be read from a single action.

There is nothing cheerful about any of these tales; neither are they morbid. All are tinged with the bitterness of one who faces life without illusion. It is a familiar bitterness, oblique and thought-provoking.

"A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man" goes far beyond the autobiographic novel into philosophy, theology, and especially aesthetics. It is the best possible introduction to "Ulysses" which is populated with some of the characters from the earlier work, and is concrete evidence of the development of Joyce's aesthetic theory. The selections from "Ulysses", giving an outline of the Odysseyan structure, are designed to arouse the reader's interest in the novel. No brief excerpts can do justice to the scope of the work.

"The Exiles", Joyce's only important play, shows his indebtedness to Ibsen. The domestic quadrangle revolves around one complex character, a writer. As in his other early works, Joyce fails here to reach the complete objectivity for which he strove, and which he probably never achieved as fully as he desired. Mr. Levin points out, that despite its limitations on the stage, the play makes excellent reading.

In the thirty-six short poems—"Chamber Music"—we find Joyce more concerned with the music of words rather than with their meanings. All the poems are filled with delicate imagery, predominantly the imagery of sound.

The thirteen "Pomes Penyeach" are the incidental bits written while he was working on the later prose works. They seem the overflow of nostalgia which Joyce tried to avoid in the rest of his writing. Like the short stories, they tell much in few words.

The other poems are a combination of Swiftian satire and Joycean autobiography. "Gas from a Burner" is a publisher's monologue on Joyce's works.

"Finnegan's Wake" may be read in part and at random. Levin has given us two complete sections—"Anna Livia Plurabelle" and "The Tales Told of Shem and Shaun". At last, Joyce abandons himself to sound. For full appreciation of the humor and poetic quality, the work should be read aloud. Then, too, the meaning becomes apparent.

Mr. Levin has done well, not only by the new reader, but also by the old admirer, in his choice of works for "The Essential James Joyce". It is essential, both to those who would keep up with the best in modern literature, and those who would try to understand the confusion of our own age.

Nary A Victory For Hoop Blues

The Varsity Blues basketball team's exhibition tour ended on a double sour note towards the end of December, 1948. For on Dec. 17, the Blues lost to the U. of Buffalo, 68-42, and the following night, the U. of T. boys were knocked off by Rochester U., 62-44.

Thus the Blues managed to play seven games and lose seven games with American Colleges. And over the seven games, the Blues rang up an average of 40 points. Now all they have to do is to meet a team that they can hold to 38 points and they'll be away.

They get their next chance to break into the win column at the start of next week out in Ajax when the Blues meet the Ajax A Interfaculty team. This exhibition contest will be the feature of an Ajax Sports Night.

The Blues' hopes were dealt a severe blow when Adam Smalley sprained his ankle in a practice session just prior to the Buffalo-Rochester trip. Coach Masterson says that Smalley is finished for the year, and that he has added Brennan and Adams, two boys from last year's St. Mike's Western team, to the big Blues.

Barry Lowes' Junior crew continue their schedule here in Hart House gym tonight when they play the Jr. YMHA quintet. The juniors have won one and lost one so far this year.

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT

Students requiring summer employment are being asked to register or re-register with the Students' Administrative Council Employment Service as follows:

Beware The Angry Victim

Not the least of the services rendered to this city by the late Roly Young were the spankings which he administered from time to time to the customers. During the last few weeks he had a few very harsh and necessary words to say on the question of financing The Ballet Festival to be held in Toronto this year and, shortly before that, he had written a lengthy column on the basic rules of audience behaviour.

I never cease to marvel at the number of people who undoubtedly pride themselves on being conscientious providers, affectionate mothers, loving children, punctual tax-payers, considerate tenants and sincere dog-lovers, how so many of such people turn into reckless destroyers of concentration and enjoyment the moment they happen to become one's neighbours in a theatre or concert hall. And all this only because they have never been taught, or refuse to remember, that the only civilized behaviour during performances is the kind that permits their neighbour to come close to the illusion of being the only listener present. In other words, one's senses (ear, eye, nose) should be permitted to receive no impressions at all from this side of the footlights. Worse even, perhaps, than the actual disturbances are the lulls, because they are filled with the gnawing and distracting fear as to when the unchecked barbarian will resume his or her fiendish tricks.

A word about countermeasures. It has been established that it is relatively simple to stop the average whisperer, hummer, leaner-over, wriggler by means of a sharp shush of half a second's duration, if action is taken early in the performance. This is likely to intimidate the barbarian for the balance of the evening. I wish that all those who have undergone this type of torture would drop their inhibitions for the length of that sharp half second shush or hiss. The benefits are cumulative because, eventually, the thoughtless few will come to realize that they have to deal with potentially very angry victims. Then they will think twice and desist on second thought.

Classical Heritage

The exhibition at the Art Gallery on the classical influence in Western art is a loan from the Metropolitan Museum Of New York. First there are the actual remains-vases and statues, and then examples of classical motifs in later architecture and painting. A charming figurine whose stone is almost flesh, and a statue of Hercules and the lion, both Hellenistic, are the best of the sculptures. There is one early vase whose design shows great purity of line and color, but as a whole, the vases are inferior to our own in the museum.

Two pieces of wood-carving, one of a leaf and the other an Italian renascence panel of a bird and foliage, are examples of excellent craftsmanship, and it is instructive to notice, in a wall-size photograph, that the capitals of the columns in the Capitol at Washington, are corncobs. Among the paintings, there are a few minor works of great painters—Rubens, Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Poussin — and also many, alas, of the lesser painters.

Actually, no attempt was made to illustrate the classical influence on style but only on choice of subject matter; if there happens to be a Greek statue in the corner, toss in the painting. The lack of critical insight in the organizers is reflected in the first caption, whatever it means: 'In the arts, government and philosophy the Greeks worked along such basic principles, that any intelligent study of similar conditions elsewhere would evolve similar results.'

COLE SCAN

Over the Christmas holidays we heard a gory glut of children's stories, and a more spine-chilling lot of tales we have never heard. It's quite obvious that they were written more to release the authors' pent-up malice than they were to enthrall the pop-eyed little codgers. This morbid pre-occupation with the baking, mutilation and spell-binding of little children is, we think, the calculated sublimation of some monstrously sadistic minds. Any comfort to be drawn from these stories rests with the disturbed parent who may have regarded his recalcitrant offspring with a speculative eye, and from them (the stories) finds some re-assurance for his own guilty stirrings. But, if it ever reaches that stage, look out, children, look out!

Hockey Blues Stand Second, Carabins First

By HAL HOLDEN

Prepping for their first Intercollegiate game of 1949, Varsity Blues move into Stouffville Friday night for an exhibition contest. One week from Friday the Bailey Blueshirts tackle Queens at the Arena in their first league game since December 11, when they lost to Les Carabins in Montreal.

The defeat at the hands of the U. of Montreal league-leaders was the first loss in three games for the Blues and it left them in second place in the Intercollegiate standings, four points behind the Montreal Carabins and two points ahead of the McGill Redmen. The winless Tricolor from Kingston are mired in the cellar.

After taking it on the chin from the Montrealers Varsity embarked on a disastrous two-game exhibition road trip south of the border. In two games with the University of Michigan Woverines at Chicago and Ann Arbor the Blues suffered 12-1 and 6-4 defeats. In the thirteen game rivalry between the two schools through the years it was the first time the Wolverines took the annual two-game series. Last year the Michigan outfit, boasting mostly Canadian players, won its first game in history from the Blues.

Rich Howson continued the fine play which has marked his efforts since he was brought up from the Junior Bees netting the only goal against the Michiganders in the Windy City, to save the Blues a whitewashing. Bob Henry scored a brace of goals the following night in Ann Arbor while Captain Harry Boyd and Artie Bell rounded out the holiday scoring for Varsity.

Who Gets It

Cup Search Continues

The end is in sight for the Interfaculty Lacrosse League and the playoffs for the Dafoe Cup. One of the semi-finals goes today at 1:00 p.m. in Hart House gym when Meds I take on U.C. IV.

The second semi-final will be played tomorrow at 1:00 between Sr. Skule and U.C. I.

Both games are sudden-death, and the two winners will play a two-out-of-three final set next week.

Meds firsts are the present holders of the Dafoe Cup and are strongly favored to repeat again this year. U.C. firsts should get by Sr. Skule, and should give Meds a good fight for the marbles.

VARSITY SPORTS

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB JONES

SOMETHING OLD

Varsity's Senior basketball team continues its preparations for the 1949 League opener some time this month. The annual exhibition tour of some proximate American hamlets must have resulted in a generous measure of experience, though not glory, for the Blue quintet. Each year the Athletic Directorate finances an expedition during the course of which U of T's representatives are soundly thumped by Yankee basketballers of varied repute.

This year's squad has most handsomely maintained the tradition, having failed, as yet, to leave the floor a winner. It would be a pity should such a dismal exhibition record be a token of things to come in the Intercollegiate loop; there is no reason to expect such mishaps up here, though, because in tackling such competition as Colgate and Syracuse the Blues are admittedly stepping out of their class.

The close of the '47-'48 season was featured by Varsity's upset of the championship Western team in Hart House. It is to be hoped that Bob Masterson's current crew can take up where its predecessors left off.

SOMETHING NEW

Habit has made for a gracious acceptance of the yearly basketball ignominies but what true Blue could stem the flow of tears when reading of the hockey squad's holiday debacle at the University of Michigan. Our side was dunked twice by the Wolverines, and once by the score of 12-1. Shades of Halder, Bark and Kryzanowski ! ! ! The blow was in no way lessened by the thought that the Anne Arbour sextet was composed largely of local talent.

Before the season's opening we feared somewhat for the Blues' '49 chances because they lacked an outstanding spark-plug and had been hit by vital injuries. But in their debut against the University of Montreal they proved that they could handle the best the Intercollegiate loop had to offer. If they played the opportunist brand that they showed that night, then there's no stopping them. But their performances, league and exhibition, since that time, have been slightly erratic and the direct will have to be remedied to ensure success in the coming stretch drive.

Busy Hoop Season 36 Major Entries And 84 In Minors

By BOB DNIEPER

Flash—Flash—Double Flash—The Basketball Season is upon us.

The Interfaculty Office reports that the Basketball schedule starts tomorrow with a mad scramble of 120 (count 'em.) teams shooting for championship honors. This is fifteen teams more than were entered last year.

Every faculty is represented on the roster of teams. There are 36 entries in the major league and 84 in the minors.

"Through greater co-operation between the University Athletic Directorate and Victoria College", said Mr. McCutcheon of the Interfaculty Office, "we were able to secure the use of the Little Vic Gym for a number of our games. With the increased number of teams registered this year we would have found it impossible to accommodate them on Hart House floors".

Majors In Hart House

The major league games will be played on the main gym floor of Hart House and the Minor league games will be played at Little Vic and the Upper gym. "Even with the use of Victoria's floor," continued Mr. McCutcheon, "every available hour will be used for basketball".

From all indications the calibre of the major teams will be greatly improved over last year. St. Mike's should be one of the top contenders, by virtue of the influx of some St. Mike's Western Course men from the United States. Strong bids for the major titles will also come from the UC-PHE combines and from Victoria.

For the majors, a high calibre of play will be stressed, while participation will be the theme for the minors. All the faculties seem to be enthusiastic over this year's schedule of teams, and almost all of them tried to get additional teams entered. Basketball interest seems to be at a new high this season.

Refereeing Better?

The refereeing squad which the Interfaculty office has lined up is a better one than they have had in recent years. This is probably due to the fact that there will be no High School teams playing a regular schedule, and their referees will be available for Intramural games. "However," said Barry Lowes "we can always use several more good referees." He stressed the word "good", so if any of you "good" refs want assignments, just hop up to the intramural office.

The setup for eliminations will be changed this season. Instead of the regular three teams in the Minor leagues, the groups will be composed of four. This will give each faculty a greater number of games. The majors will continue their four team groups, the same as formerly.

The eliminations will be, as usual, in the form of a double round robin, giving each team a minimum of six games exclusive of the play-offs.

Eligibility Change

One of the rules of former years regarding eligibility has been relaxed. Till now, anyone playing on an intermediate city team was ineligible for the intramural minor league. It is almost impossible to check on every player, so there were many ineligible men playing on College teams. It was decided that, to give the honest players an even break, the rule would be rescinded.

Bees Buzz

Moxy Boosts Bees To Top Rung

By HANK WESTCOTT

They may need a photo to distinguish the winners of the Varsity junior B Varsity circuit come playoff time in February.

Currently three of the four teams are deadlocked for first place with eight points, and it's pretty tough to tell which triplet has the toniest look.

Varsity Bees have a slight edge, with 29 goals in six games—one more than Marlboros. The Bees also lead in the goals against department with 19. Marlboros have been dunked 24 times.

Corner Boys, the other third of the three-way tie, have played one more game than the other two, but have scored only 23 times, while allowing 22. St. Mike's are trailing in fourth place with two points.

Varsity and Marlboros moved into top rung Tuesday night when the Bees drove to a bang-up 4-3 decision over Corner Boys, and the Marlboros eased to a 9-2 win over St. Mike's.

Nothin' From Nobody

And the Bees got there because they take "nothin' from nobody". Time and again through the opener, both squads forgot about the puck and played the man—with Varsity getting the better of the exchanges. As one fan mentioned, "they must practice without a puck, you know, just take turns crashing each other into the boards to sharpen up their reactions."

At one point tempers rose to the boiling point behind the Cornerites' goal and all the players on both teams paired off in a wild fistic discussion. Varsity even won that bout, getting two of the three resultant penalties.

Arrowsmith Hits Twice

Phil Arrowsmith took time from his body checking experiments to pace the Bees scoring attack with two. Rich Howson and Bill Walters clicked for the others. Nick Romagnola hit for two for Corner Boys, with Mel Hawkrigg adding the other.

The Marlboro juniors, strengthened by additions from the 'A' team that is creeping up in the outsize OHA junior A series, looked smooth in their easy conquest of St. Mike's in the late half of the evening.

Varsity takes on Upper Canada College in an exhibition game Friday night in Varsity Arena and it should be worth looking at—especially if the boys still have their dander up.

Trinity, Vic Impressive In Hockey

Turnbull of Forestry A and Leishman of Trinity A share the scoring lead in the intramural hockey league with four goals apiece. Following closely are Clarke (Forestry B), Dawson (Pre-med), and Crerar, Huycke, and Wardrop of Trinity, all of whom have fired three.

Turnbull, Leishman, and Clarke, have each pulled the hat trick. Clarke holds the best goals-per-game average, having played but one game, while the others have two games under their belts.

Owing to the fact that in some games, assists are not accurately recorded, only goals are counted in the scoring statistics.

Welcome back!

Now that you have had plenty of rest, no late nights, no smoking and no . . . anything else, you must be all ready to swing into a term of hockey, skiing, volleyball, bowling and badminton.

The hockey season opens tomorrow. Vic I and PHE I, last year's finalists meet tomorrow at 1.30 in Varsity Arena. Vic were the top dogs last season but have lost four star players. Via the grapevine we hear that PHE I, who is minus only one player from last year's lineup, claims they will ice a strong, championship team.

The intercollegiate basketball team will be picked by the end of this week, according to Rosanna Kelly, university basketball rep. There will be a practice today from 5:30 to 7:00 at OCE and another tomorrow—same time, same place. Twelve players will be picked from the 40 women who were asked to return after the last practice. The all-important games this year will be those in the round robin against McGill, Western and Queen's in Hart House on February 26 and 27.

SKI BUS

A bus to the University of Toronto ski property will leave Hart House at 9:00 a.m. Sunday, January 9th., weathering permitting. A sufficient number of tickets to justify chartering the bus must be sold by 5:00 p.m. Friday. Tickets on sale at Athletic Office, Hart House.

Vin, Fromage For Visitors Say Carabins

Effects of the Carabin Weekend are still echoing back and forth between Montreal and Toronto. Immediately following the weekend visit held early in December, there was a flood of 'Merci' notes from the Carabins to their Toronto hosts. Some showed their appreciation in other ways for occasionally a Toronto student can be seen with a U. of Montreal pennant or crest. One hostess even received an oil painting, painted and framed expressedly for her by one of her Montreal guests.

Christmas was the occasion of a renewal of the exchange of good wishes in both French and English. Cards bearing 'Joyeux Noel' often carried words to the effect 'looking forward to seeing you on Jan. 21.' This is the date of the return weekend in Montreal. One card from Gilles Bergeron, U. of Montreal, added to the conventional wish of the card 'Wish 1949 brings many friendly meetings between Toronto and Montreal.'

Varsity Weekend

The return weekend, called 'La Varsity Weekend' by the Montreal hosts, promises to be a visit "sans egal" and there are committees hard at work in both universities. Besides the letters of thanks, the Christmas cards, and the return visit, the effects of the Carabin Weekend have shown themselves in even stranger ways. It was certainly a big surprise and also a welcome greatly appreciated by the Toronto delegates to the NFCUS conference in Montreal when they heard in unmistakable accents "Toronto, Toronto, Torgnto Varsitee . . . ."

Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, president of the S.A.C., besides bringing back from the NFCUS conference the presidency of that body, also returned with the plans for the return visit of Toronto students to the University of Montreal. It will be called the Varsity Weekend, and will take place on Jan. 21, 22 and 23.

Outstanding Program

"The Carabins frequently mentioned to me how much they enjoyed their visit here, and they are making preparations for an outstanding program for the Toronto students when they come to Montreal," said Gordon Gwynne-Timothy. Approximately 40 are invited and a railway car has already been booked for the fortunate 40 to leave on the morning of Jan. 21. The program, of which only a few features have been released, include a réception by the City of Montreal, a sleigh-ride, an item labeled 'vins et fromage', and so on.

In Toronto the S.A.C. with the co-operation of I.S.S. is working on the details of this part of the Varsity Weekend. Nancy LeSueur, vice-chairman of I.S.S. stated that there definitely will be some of the 40 places open to students of any college or faculty who can fulfill certain requirements set by the S.A.C. Further information will be outlined next week.

New Year's Resolution

One of the University of Toronto's ambitions for 1949 is planning a student Union. Lounges, reading rooms, and common room, all facing inwards on the garden court, are a part of the auditoria building at the University in Basle, Switzerland. The auditorium on the left seats 500.

Reveals Heraldic History Behind University Crests

Everyone in the campus is familiar with mad rushes. There are mad rushes for books, meals, tickets of one sort or another, streetcars and even lectures. One mad rush that never fails to take place each year is the one for class pins. Each undergrad seems to acquire a certain sense of satisfaction and accomplishment when one of these small objects is securely fastened to his or her lapel.

The same emblems that appear on each of these pins also confront us in dozens of other places — on page three of The Varsity, on blazer pockets, college stationery, SCM timetable forms, pennants, and so on. It is probably because we see them so often that we are willing to pass them by as "one of those things," and never wonder what they mean.

But each college emblem has an interesting story behind it, even though to learn them we had to leave the campus and find Mr. T. A. Reed, former U. of T. historian, and an authority on the subject of its heraldry.

The emblem above the "Velut Arbor Aevo" which we shout so lustily at rugby game consists, in the language of heraldry, of: "Azure, two open books and in base a Beaver, all proper, upon a Chief Agent the Royal and Imperial Crown also proper, and for the crest on the wreath of the colors an oak tree proper stemmed and fructed Or," and in ordinary Canadian: "On a blue field, two open books with a beaver below, all in their proper colors; on the chief, or upper part, the Royal and Imperial Crown in proper colors; and for a crest, on a wreath of the colors (blue and white, in case you've forgotten) an oak tree, with branches and golden acorns."

The oak tree suggests the motto, "Crescit velut arbor aevo," or (for those who are not in Honor Classics) "May it grow as a tree through the ages." The crown, the symbol of King's College, is set on a white background, while the open books, which speak for themselves, and the beaver, emblem of Canada, are on a background of royal blue.

The U.C. coat of arms is closely linked to that of the university, and they are sometimes placed side by side on one shield, as on the dedicatory tablet at the head of the grand stair in the U.C. tower. The background is of the U.C. colors, red and white. Instead of the tree the U.C. crest is a burning lamp, symbol of intellectual enlightenment, and on the shield itself the open books are placed above the crown.

The coronet surmounting the Vic shield is that of the Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII, who visited Canada in 1860. The cross which appears on the shield is red on a silver or white ground. The owl, a wise old bird, which appears in the first quarter of the shield represents the Faculty of Arts, the Lamp of Learning, theology, and the sphinx and phoenix respectively, Law and Medicine, which ceased to exist upon the federation of Vic with the university in 1890.

The coat of arms of Trinity consists of the arms of Bishop Strachan "impaled" with the badge or seal of the Diocese of Toronto. Bishop Strachan was the founder of Trinity. On the right half of the shield is a stag of gold on a blue field, and on the left, a crown indicating its Royal Charter, the Bible and prayer book, the Shepherd's Crook, symbol of the authority of a Bishop, a key, symbol of the Church's authority, and a dove, bearing the olive branch of peace and goodwill. The stag was part of the arms of Sir John Beverly

Skiers Plan Collingwood Week-end Trips As Varsity Opens Ski Lodge For Season

Something new has been added to the skier's world in the form of a Varsity Ski House in Collingwood, that will accommodate 30 skiers each week-end throughout the season.

After weeks of planning, long distance telephone calls, trips to Collingwood and meetings with various ski committees, Ian Fraser, Vic III, the one responsible for this novel idea, finally overcame all the red tape and obstacles in his path and the job was finished. A ski house is open to Varsity students and the first week-end starts on Jan. 14.

Reservations for each week-end can be made in the Athletic Office in Hart House through either Miss Rose or Willi Boyd and a down payment of two dollars will be necessary. However, this will be refunded not later than 12 o'clock noon on the Thursday before the week-end if the person is unable to go.

Cheap Week-end

What has been designated as a long week-end consists of Friday and Saturday nights with four meals—two breakfasts and two dinners—costing $4.50, while a short week-end is Saturday night with two dinners and a breakfast — amounting to $2.50. The down payment has been subtracted from both these prices.

Transportation by bus from Collingwood to the ski grounds will be thirty-five cents, and lunches can be bought in the various cafeterias located near the ski tows.

Toronto University has never had this sort of a set-up for those who like to get away from town with their friends for a week-end of skiing and fun in the snow, and there is no better place to do just that —then in the Blue Mountains outside of Collingwood.

Ski Teams

Both the men's and the women's Intercollegiate Ski Teams train here each winter, finding plenty of snow most of the time. Six tows are in operation—some right to the top of the mountain. Besides the steep, treacherous trails, there are numerous slow, easy ones for those who want to learn how to ski.

Johnny Anderson, Forestry, is a qualified instructor, having received his R.S.I. in December. He will give ski lessons all winter and will be found somewhere on the Granny with a lot of eager people.

President's Report Asks Scholarships For Able Students

A scholarship system designated to promote equality of opportunity for students of proven ability was advocated by President Smith in the Annual Report made to the Board of Governors for the session ending June 1948 and issued in booklet form recently. The problems of overcrowding specialization and the possible need for affiliated junior colleges were discussed in the Report.

Lauds Independence

The President remarked that Canadian Universities, in his opinion have concentrated unduly on formal instruction. After the introductory year the student should attend fewer lectures, do more work on his own. Dr. Smith said that the experience of the past three years of crowded courses has demonstrated to the University staff in general the fact that scholarship of the highest calibre comes from students who have had to develop intellectual independence.

In the light of comparatively high registration figures which are predicted for the U of T even after the exodus of ex-service students, the Report mentioned the ever-increasing need for competent instructors. "A true University is a community of scholars eager to learn," said the President, and since a program of more guidance and less lecturing would be more time-consuming than the present system, students unsuited for membership in the community should not be allowed to waste the time and energies of the staff.

British Students Aided

"Scholarships and bursaries must be provided on a scale hitherto unheard of in this country, to enable those who are intellectually and morally qualified to join the community of scholars," said the Report. The percentage of students in Canada receiving financial assistance from scholarships other than DVA grants was compared with corresponding figures for the United Kingdom. While 60 per cent of British students are aided in this way, only 8 per cent of Canadians do not have to meet the entire cost of education themselves. The President stressed his belief that something must be done about this, mentioning that scholarship had been found to be the most significant single index of success in occupations which require competence and judgement.

Higher Standard for Pass Course

The problem of liberal education as opposed to specialization in honour courses and the professional faculties brought forth a recommendation from the President that the Pass Course be "re-shaped and strengthened". The course which purports to give a general education should have a certain unity in the final years as well as academic standards comparable to those maintained in the honour courses.

Mission Meets Spiritual Needs

In conclusion, Dr. Smith called for a new focusing of attention upon the student as a person with both spiritual and intellectual needs. Modern education, he said, encourages a religious illiteracy which denies to many students an adequate spiritual integration of what they have learned at the university. The President endorsed the program of the University Christian Mission and of the Roman Catholic and Jewish retreats planned for this term. These projects, he said, would help students to strengthen religious convictions 'in an age in which materialism is rampant."

HAMLET MATINEE

More than 6 000 University of Toronto students have already attended five university matinees of Sir Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet". Outstanding was the response of engineering and medical students to a performance run specially for them before Christmas. Student demand has once again been so heavy, that an additional all-university performance of this remarkable film is being given at reduced prices this coming Friday afternoon at 4 15

Military Vehicles To Demonstrate On Front Campus

President Sidney Smith will review from a tank the C.O.T.C's "Operation Snowball" being held on the front campus today between 12 p. m. and 2 p. m., Don Alan, publicity man for the corps, announced yesterday.

The display will be a demonstration of mechanized operations the student soldiers have learned during their training, Alan said. He explained that, weather permitting, tanks, gun carriers and other military vehicles will be drawn up in review order, be reviewed by Mr. Smith, and then move across the campus, maintaining formation. On the other side of the campus they will be halted and left there for inspection by the public. Officers with each vehicle will answer questions.

"The operation," Alan stated, "gives us an opportunity in the winter for some outside exercises during the winter." He said the vehicles will be driven by Reserve Army men, but will otherwise be manned by C.O.T.C. members.

When asked whether any combat exercises would be included in the demonstration, Alan explained that the idea had been considered but had been rejected as impractical. He said, "It was difficult to do that sort of thing, due to confined space and the danger of breaking windows."

Classics And Comedies Featured in New Season By Varsity Cine Guild

The University of Toronto Film Society will begin its winter season of movie presentations on Jan. 16, Raymond Baker, chairman of the Film Society, announced recently that the feature film to be shown then would be "Film and Reality".

Future programs will probably include several of the short Chaplin comedies, Eisenstein's classic "The Battleship Potemkin", and the same director's recent "Ivan the Terrible". The German cinema will be represented by "Kameradschaft". An increased number of highly reputed documentaries and shorts is also planned.

Membership cards for the winter season of five programs may be reserved at the S.A.C. offices in Hart House or U.C. or by contacting any member of the executive. The cards may be picked up and paid for at the first meeting of the Society.

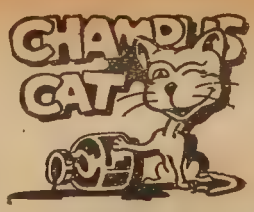
Hope Springs Eternal

One of the unpleasant things which we face in our confused society is the periodic exposure to dire predictions that the world is hurtling pell-mell toward destruction—and soon.

With almost monotonous regularity eminent individuals appear on the stage to announce solemnly that Man is doomed, civilization is facing destruction, and Armageddon is just around the corner.

Newest in the long line of pessimistic prophets is Sir Osbert Sitwell. In an interview here earlier this week the noted English author, poet, and essayist is reported to have said that civilization faces annihilation within the next seven years. "I've always been pessimistic", he explained. "But I never expected to see the world in such a terrible mess as it is today. It's just a case of mass stupidity."

In a sense, we have a good deal of sympathy for those who utter such doleful statements. It is easy enough for them to allow themselves the luxury of pessimism when they are constantly confronted with examples of the world "in such a terrible mess". Too close a study of the daily headlines is probably the reason.



It is easy to look at reports of the Dutch-Indonesian situation and become depressed enough to conclude that the United Nations is a failure. Reading daily accounts about the prospects of war between Britain and Israel readily evoke another sneer for the efficacy of world peace agencies.

Even relatively minor front page reports do little to increase any sense of serenity. When an American O. C. in Berlin forbids his personnel to wish the Russians a Happy New Year because of ideological differences it reminds the pessimists that the spirit of Christmas has already receded into the background. And their frowns become even deeper when they hear of an American club in the beleaguered German capital which caters to American officers and Germany frauleins but forbids entry to G.I.'s because they are "barbarians".

And, if our pessimistic friends still manage to hurdle the New Year's news with equanimity, they can derive a morose satisfaction in reports that the South African Parliament has deprived the native population of representation by abolishing the native council and has increased discrimination against Indians.

But things may not be as bad as they seem. If Sir Osbert and his friends will turn from the front pages to the back pages of the newspapers they may yet find a ray of hope to cheer them up. Like the story of the thirty-nine year old matron in Detroit who courageously faced the realization that she was about to become a mother only five minutes before the birth of her offspring.

As long as such events continue to take place even the pessimists must retain some hope for the indestructible nature of the human race.

Are You Frustrated, Hmm

A hot stove philosopher once remarked, "Well, you know, civilization certainly is a wonderful thing." I think he has something.

For instance, according to one ancient volume of lore, "Civilized living restricts the expression of our emotions and limits the satisfaction of our drives." Apparently it all depends on civilization, then, whether we make a million dollars, or just give up and crash around slaughtering people like cattle and trampling on little children.

So you see, you have some things to be thankful for after all, unless you don't like children. Civilization, however, does have its ugly side—it produces frustration.

It wasn't until after I got out of high school that I learned frustration actually doesn't have to apply to sex. By this, I mean that there are other things in life, too. (Such as mice and cheese, and Aristophanes, an old Greek, who unfortunately didn't know much about frustration. Not as much as I do, I mean.)

Anyway: What is frustration, and and why doesn't it involve sex?

First, let's try an example.

Suppose you want to go to the library. It so happens that there is an extremely important book on bull-fighting in there which may be gone if you wait till tomorrow. But (and here's the catch), you also have a date to break a goal-post in Montreal. In addition to this (just to complicate matters) there's a letter in your pocket which you were supposed to mail last week, and Babe LaToure's last performance at the Casino is scheduled to start in 10 minutes.

So there you are. Involved in a typical problem of frustration. According to this book I was talking about in the second paragraph, the absurdity of your behavior when you try to solve the problem is supposed to "strike you with such exasperation that you say aloud, 'make up your mind! make up your mind'."

And the book adds, "It doesn't help at all when passers-by stop and stare at you." Obviously, the author knows whereof he speaks.

Presumably, after you start talking to yourself, your voice gradually grows hoarse, you take to dope, begin to see little red men (or women—this is frustration, remember?), and by and by you have to be led away sobbing by people in white doilies.

Incidentally, this is a type I conflict. As such, most people solve it by going to the Casino. I won't even go into type II. It involves little boys who are afraid to pick water lilies because they are in deep water, and other even sillier examples.

However, Type III:

This is the sort of thing you get into here—you want to go to bed, but you are afraid of falling out, which has happened much too often lately.

Or perhaps you want to get out of bed, but are worried about falling back in. This frustration works both ways, depending on what happens to be in the bed. ("Depending on what happens", I said; remember, we are talking about frustrations not applying to sex, in this case I was thinking of an alligator.)

In any event, the book says, "Type III conflicts are usually solved by going out of the field.

So, snapping shut the book, you go out to get good and drunk, and eventually fall into an open manhole. This solves the whole problem of living.

So much for type III. Now, how about frustrations as applied to people. In a practical way, I mean.

First of all, you probably remember back to the time when daddy or mommy explained about the flowers and the bees. (Shocking, wasn't it?) Well, I'm going to tell you all about the birds.

Perhaps you will recall the strange rain of birds which took place over New York last September. They came crashing down about New Yorkers' ears one morning, and newspapermen had a wonderful time turning out reams of copy about taxi drivers who heroically drove their cabs through piles of feathered bodies, and janitors who ran up and down 98 flights of

U. C. AMALGAMATION NOTES

For years amalgamation of the University College Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association has been the topic of discussion and investigating committees within University College. Last year an exploratory step was taken when the Joint Open College Meetings were added to the Constitutions and put into effect this year. The first of these meetings was held last November when complete amalgamation was discussed.

....On the walls of the Junior Common Room are inscribed the names of the executives of the Literary and Athletic Society since 1854. Amalgamation would bring to a close the organization and traditions of 96 years; such a step is not one to be taken merely for the sake of change.

Since there are twice as many men as women in University College, there is an obvious danger that the interests of the women might be submerged by the preponderance of male votes both in open meetings and in elections.

At the present time, women occupy a very favorable position since they form one-half of the Joint Executive. The co-operation between the Lit. and the W.U.A. in the last two years has been so satisfactory that no difficulties have arisen which amalgamation would have prevented.

The present situation, however, would lend itself to a complete deadlock if one or other society refused to compromise on some issue. When a decision is made by the Joint Executive it has to be ratified by two separate societies either or both of which may alter it and thus make it necessary for redrafting and compromise. All of this is unduly lengthy and harbors the possibilities of stalemates. Since most activities within the College are jointly sponsored, the separate executives have actually very few duties to perform. An exception to this is athletics where both societies operate separately because there is no community of interests. An amalgamated society would no longer consider its members as men-students or women-students but as students of University College.

To give the matter the attention it deserves, amalgamation will be the subject of a debate in the U.C. Parliament, of controversial articles in The Varsity, and of detailed consideration in the Joint Open Meeting of January 19. Finally, a plebiscite will be held on January 20 and 21 to gauge opinion within the College.

Score Apathy In SCM Forum Student Brief

The purposes of a university, the place of religious teaching in it and the basic meaning of truth found room for differing views in the SCM Open Forum yesterday when the recent 'Report of a Student Study Commission' was discussed.

"I believe any thinking individual does feel that there is something wrong with society and the university is part of society," chairman Mary Pierce (III Vic) said in her introduction of the Report. She summed up the main faults found in typical contemporary universities by the Commission. They found that universities are turning out self-centred specialists; that memory work and not independent thought is stressed by the examination system; that racial and economic discrimination are prevalent, and that there is a rift between staff and students.

Society Changing

"We have to remember that these criticisms are based on the assumption that our civilization is a rapidly-changing one—perhaps deteriorating," she warned.

A spirit of honest enquiry and the necessity for freedom were stressed by Bob Munro, speaking from the platform. He said he was not sure that these now existed and he instanced the apathy shown to SCM (despite publicity there were only 20 at the meeting). He did not mind disagreement but he had little use for the type of people who had rejected the report without even opening it simply because it was put out by the SCM. 'There is general apathy to anything except a person's own interest', he said maintaining that rejection came not through honest intellectual disagreement but through sheer laziness.

Keith Davey, the next speaker, favoured compulsory religious instruction but warned against unwary campaigning of a tactless nature which might turn the apathy into antagonism. He felt that the matter of apathy, runs much deeper than Christianity' and is to be found in all activities.

Wording Vague

Dean H. Bennet said he felt that the report was all very well as far as it went but he felt that the wording was vague. A university is a place where truth is sought—"What is truth?", he asked. He could see the validity and usefulness of scientific truths but he felt that 'you cannot explain the beauty of a sunset, either you feel aesthetic beauty and truth or you do not.' It was the same with justice.

As to the criticism of the universities on the grounds that they give not thought but facts, Dean Bennett said 'The more facts you

Rendezvous for students and alumni of the university who like to skate and fool around on the ice is Varsity Stadium on Bloor Street near the Economics Building. Here, every afternoon and evening, young and not so young people race around the ice to the music of the 48th Highlanders Band and make dates for a cup of coffee in the restaurants across the street. In the middle of the ice surface is the area reserved for future Barbara Ann Scotts where the more adept practice figure-skating. For those who may not yet know, admission is free to all university students every weekday except Friday and Saturday. The only prerequisite is a pair of skates and the athletic portion of the registration card.

Masaryk Memorial Lecture Recounts Life of Patriot

"One of the greatest statesmen of the century was Thomas Masaryk, the first president of Czechoslovakia", stated Professor S. Harrison Thomson in the Masaryk Memorial Lecture yesterday in University College.

Thomas Masaryk lived his philosophy of democracy, rather than following an intricate system of philosophy, according to Professor Thomson. For this reason Masaryk was accused of being too logical and practical. He fought against ideas which were accepted without question.

The speaker cited three instances when Masaryk supported unpopular beliefs, and was later proven correct. The Czech manuscripts case involved two early manuscripts which Masaryk was convinced were forgeries. On another occasion he was convinced of the innocence of a man named Hilsner who was accused of murder, and he derided the anti-Semitism which the trial produced. In the third case he believed that a number of Austrian Serbs were being convicted of treason on forged evidence. Each time Masaryk was eventually proven to be right.

Professor Thomson described Masaryk's recognition that there is inequality in society, where the strong must help the weak. He feared inadequate education of the masses, and wanted people to become better informed. The Hapsburg idea of "the divine right of kings" and the Marxian belief in the "ideal of labor" were both criticized by Masaryk.

"While heroes of most peoples of the world are their great warriors, the heroes of the Czechs and Slovaks are Masaryk and men like him", pointed out Professor Thomson. For this reason Czechoslovakia went very far in twenty years towards the goal of a good society.

Professor Thomson is on the staff of the University of Colorado, and is editor of the Journal of Central European Affairs.

NFCUS Lays Plans For Cheap Flights To The Continent

A plan to obtain reduced travel rates for students and to set up a permanent Travel Office to facilitate travel arrangements for students was laid down by delegates to the Twelfth Annual Conference of The National Federation of Canadian University Students held at the University of Montreal during the Christmas vacation.

Investigation into the question of costs and methods of getting students overseas revealed that it may be possible to fly students to Europe in chartered planes for as little as one hundred and fifty dollars one way. A committee at McGill University will investigate other phases of overseas travel as well and will prepare a booklet of information for the use of university students. In addition a permanent Travel Office is being set up at McMaster to handle travel arrangements.

Undergrad Exchange

A Canadian-American undergraduate exchange plan formulated by the University of Toronto NFCUS Committee was adopted, and exchanges will take place during the next year. Ten Canadian universities are taking part in the scheme. At present students of the University of Toronto are not eligible to take part in the exchange.

Maintaining that closer co-operation was deemed desirable between NFCUS and the United States National Students' Association, delegates instructed the National Executive of NFCUS to take steps to obtain closer relations with the American Student Union. Delegates hoped that such liaison would lead to the carrying out of such joint projects as student exchange, athletic exchange, publication exchange and joint work in the cultural fields of drama, debate, music and art.

Affiliation

On a motion by Grant Livingstone, University of British Columbia, and Chairman of the Canadian Delegation which sought affiliation with the International Union of Students in Paris last last summer, n International Activities Commission was formed which will have charge of all matters in the international field

Relations between NFCUS and The International Student Service were clarified by the conference, in order that the work of the two organizations will not overlap. The conference also pledged active support for the ISS scheme to bring European students to Canada to study. ISS hopes to bring at least 35 students to Canada next year under their 'Reconstruction Scholarship' plan.

A move to set up a radio school in one of the Canadian universities was begun. Investigation will be made as to the possibility of such a school and federal aid for the scheme will be sought.

Complete Report

Delegates also endorsed the work of The Toronto NFCUS Committee who have been conducting an investigation on the cost of text books. A complete report from the Toronto Committee is expected within the next two weeks.

An organizational change made at the conference regroups the former French-speaking and English-speaking Central regions into two new regions, Ontario and Quebec. Delegates felt that the fact that some of the universities in the new regions speak different languages is insufficient reason for splitting them from their geographical grouping.

Robinette Debates Open To UC Men, To Begin Jan. 17

The UC Robinette Debates will begin Jan. 17. The debates, which have been held every year since 1912, are open to all UC undergraduate men.

The object of the debates is to give experience in impromptu public-speaking to the students taking part. The speeches are limited to four minutes, and judging is done by faculty members who attempt to give constructive aid to the debators.

Students who are interested should submit their names and phone numbers to the UC Lit office in an envelope marked "Robinette". Names should be submitted in pairs, since all debates are in team competitions. Each member of a team must be in the same year.

No entries will be considered after Jan. 14.

Winning Plays at UC Will Be Cast Monday

Castings for the three prize-winning plays of the Robin Godfrey contest will be conducted by the UC Players Guild on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week. The first prize winner is "Bonanza" by Alec Dixon and will be directed by Sheila Craig and Jane Hamilton. It will be cast on Monday in Room 73, Tuesday Room 51, Wednesday Room 59.

"Double Engagement" by Hugh Shaw won second prize. It will be directed by Pearl Parnes and Bill Gagnon and will be cast on Monday in Room 33, Tuesday Room 66, Wednesday Room 51.

"Farewell Hope" by Ray Baker, winner of third prize, will be directed by Eric House and Barbara Dillon. Its casting will be Monday in Room 51, Tuesday Room 60, Wednesday Room 67. All rooms referred to are in University College.

Man's Paradise

Faculty Of Forestry

By HERB WOOD

The common room in the Faculty of Forestry building, opposite the Reference Library, is a man's paradise. There you can enjoy a pipeful of tobacco and let the ashes fall where they may. There you are always among friends; lining the walls are framed class pictures of those who have blazed the trail before you (there are only 374); and above these are mounted-heads of deer, mountain sheep, and moose. You look at the moosehead . . . yes it is . . . there's a model hangman's noose dangling from one antler-spur. Some guys these "Foresters."

Soon after the turn of the century, public attention was focused on our dwindling forest wealth through developments in the United States, but more so through the efforts of the Canadian Forestry Association. In 1907, the University of Toronto was the first in Canada to open up a Forestry School. In rapid succession Forestry schools were opened up in the Universities of New Brunswick (1908), Laval (1910) and British Columbia (1921).

Two years ago, a tall, grey-eyed, young man by the name of Sisam, John William Bernard Sisam, (rhymes with ice-m), became dean of the Faculty of Forestry. He is a graduate of the University of New Brunswick and took his M.F. at Oxford.

Broad Education

"Our policy here is to set out a course giving the broadest professional forestry education", he said. "Extensive specialization can only be dealt with adequately in post graduate work or by extending the undergraduate course to five years. At present, our four year course leads to B.Sc. in Forestry."

"What about girls in Forestry?" we asked. "Well, we have no girls enrolled here now, but I knew of one in New Brunswick who graduated," he said. "But I see no reason for a girl not to be admitted as long as she is interested. There would be work in forest-product laboratories, in entomology or pathological research."

The Course

The undergraduate course is divided into lecture, laboratory, and field work. Every student in the first and second years must spend three years at the University Forest. This is a woodlot used for instructional research and demonstration purposes, located in Haliburton County, five miles south of Dorset. In the third year, students visit a logging operation for one week, taking pictures and observing methods; later incorporating the whole in a book to be placed in the Forestry library.

During the final year the students work one week in a nursery at St. Williams, Ont., studying silviculture; that is, the principles underlying forest production, improvement, and methods of regeneration.

Besides field work, the student must work every summer in some branch of forestry, preferably in active timber work. This summer work is hard but the boys love it. Their day often begins at 5 a.m. and sometimes doesn't end until 7 at night. One chap we talked to about summer work was Jack Stone, III Forestry.

"This summer I was timber cruising. That's going through the bush measuring and estimating tree growth from which maps are constructed showing where particular types of trees predominate. We use compasses, tape measures, and calipers. Incidentally, the best timber land is in the Ottawa Valley, and the area north of Port Arthur is the pulpwood district. It's a rarity to see animals, but the black flies . . . occasionally, the fellows see a moose like we did last summer.

"Don McPhail, IV Forestry, and I were paddling down a stream when I noticed what looked like a rock. 'I don't remember seeing that rock when we came up", Don said. Just then, there was a bellow and a geyser of water and foam as a moose threw his head into the air. You should have seen us backpaddle! He was feeding on lily-roots and so all we saw was his shoulders."

OUR READERS WRITE

The Editor, The Varsity:

This letter comes in the nature of a complaint about smoking in the Hart House lunch-room during meal hours. As a non-smoker, I think it highly inconsiderate of smokers to fill the atmosphere of any eating place with smoke, where ventilation is practically nil. I ask you, who can enjoy a meal or even properly taste it when with every mouthful you eat you automatically get a mouthful of tobacco smoke with it, and much of it second hand?

Considering all the places in Hart House and on the campus where one may smoke in comparison with the number of places alloted to eating, I should think that a smoker would show a little more consideration for those who don't smoke.

MODERN LANGUAGES

The Editor, The Varsity:

There is an alarming situation arising of which the student who will graduate in the Modern Languages and Literature course, if he is not aware now, will certainly be cruelly awakened to when he graduates. It is obvious that this extremely specialized course leads only in one direction—that of spending a year at O.C.E. with the eventual prospect of becoming a high school teacher.

Enquiries made with regard to other positions, such as the civil service, always receive a consistent response: a knowledge of history or economics, political science or law is required, languages in themselves do not rank high in those things accredited to your possibilities of acceptance. Further, the limited and generally mediocre positions available in the business world for a student who has just studied languages is obvious. No person solely devoted to the job of translating is ever overwhelmed by a prodigious salary or the possibilities of promotion. Hence we are driven back to the primary purpose for which the Modern Languages and Literature course was devised—the production of high school teachers. However, the once uncrowded field of teaching in the high school has now become seriously congested. O.C.E. is to experience difficulty next year in finding positions for all its graduates. Clearly there must be some search made for a means of remedying the unilateral object of this course.

The most obvious remedy to the situation is to broaden the course. A series of lectures in history, other than literary history could be included. Certainly there should be a course in English Literature. It is disturbing to consider how little English Literature the students in this course have read—practically nothing beyond what they have studied, under duress, in high school. Yet the year after they leave university they may be teaching English. Finally there could be a concise course in Political Science and Economics.

It is quite just to ask: why didn't the student enter another course if he wasn't desirous of becoming a high school teacher? Most students when they begin, know in a general way what they wish to study but often definite plans are formulated during the four years of study. Moreover there are few hints given when a student enters a university as to the practical possibilities of each course: In the Modern Languages and Literature course the source which is to absorb its product is rapidly becoming saturated. The course, however, remains essentially unaltered.

The Editor, The Varsity:

The Students' Administrative Council Committee on Intercultural Affairs is planning to hold a conference on Jan. 18, 1949, to which you are invited to send an instructed delegate.

The purpose of this conference will be to draw to the attention of the students the need for better understanding between the various ethnic cultural and religious groups on the campus and in our community.

It is hoped that a large number of groups on the campus and affiliated with the University will actually participate in the important work of your S.A.C. in this field.

Tentative plans have been drawn up for a concentrated program to coincide with a brotherhood week throughout the country. This to occur from Feb. 20 to the 27.

May we suggest that you and your organization give some thought to this matter before you or your delegate attend the conference. Perhaps you can formulate a definite program for your own group to be carried out by it alone or in conjunction with other organizations on the campus. So far the following activities have been suggested: press, radio, publicity and educational programs, a concert, a dance, debates, the showing of films, an essay contest, a special speaker, etc.

Would you please let me know by informing the S.A.C. office whether you or an instructed delegate from your organization will attend the conference in the evening on Jan. 16. A further letter will be sent you with the agenda for the proposed meeting and an indication of where it will be held.

Yours sincerely,
Susan Burgess,

Book Review

Poems of the Year

Often anthologies of poetry seem to be non-cohesive patchworks, their method of selection ordered by purely arbitrary standards. There is, however, an important role performed by a certain type of anthology. By including more than merely the major figures, a volume which samples a representative group of poets can display the principle currents of thoughts and technique in a cross-section of any given period. POEMS OF THE WAR YEARS (Macmillan, $3.50), was selected and edited by Maurice Wollman with the intention of doing this for English poetry from, roughly, 1939 to 1946.

One hundred poets are represented in this volume, including, among the more established, Yeats, Edith Sitwell, Dylan Thomas, Sassoon, C. Day Lewis, De la Mare and Auden. Reading such a varied selection, one gradually becomes aware of certain problems, beneath the individual differences, of interest to practically all the poets represented. It would be expected that the war would have an effect on these central poetic problems, even those which, superficially, appear remote from contemporary events. This anthology seems to prove it.

The fact of living in a world at war acted as a fusing, maturing force on many of the younger poets. The work of Alun Lewis and Sidney Keyes shows this very distinctly. The maturing effect of the war on youth generally, is a commonplace; that it should have extended to the young and presumably more impressionable poets is not surprising. The interesting fact is, however, that it had an effect on practically all poets. Perhaps the best known example of the war's influence on a major poet, was the change in Edith Sitwell's work.

One of the chief characteristics of the poetry in this anthology is a tougher, more coherent and more objective attitude. This not only shows in the literal content but also in the selection and ordering of imagery and the rhythms, grammatical, structural and thematic. In other words, the war effected, in serious poetry, a final break with the tendency to sloppiness that grew out of one aspect of Romanticism. The general stream of poetry, under the immediate and violent impact of immediate and violent events was directed along the path already taken by the major figures (the explorers as Keyes would call them), Eliot, Yeats, Rilke, Joyce. That Yeats showed little apparent interest in the shifting political scene is not a symptom of escapism. The point is that Yeats had already made his mature fusion when he took the step which separated his early and his late poetry.

In many ways this is the best war anthology yet to appear. The arrangement of the poems, roughly in large, subject groups, though a little confusing is not mechanically departmentalized. There are poems one feels should have been included, for instance, Alun Lewis' "Raiders' Dawn"; some poets are not included at all, such as Henry Reed. On the whole, however, the choice is just and representative. Little more may be asked of an anthology.

The Young Lions

Among recent war novels, Irwin Shaw's "The Young Lions" (Ambassador Books: Random House: $4.00) is by far the ablest at interpreting the effect of modern war on the men involved in it. The story follows the careers of three men—Diestl, a German; Whiteacre, an American; and Ackerman a Jew—from 1938 to 1945, and brings them together at the end near a concentration camp in Germany. Whiteacre, by profession a producer, acutely feels his responsibilities towards his ideals but is continually prevented from fulfilling them by the pressure of circumstances. Finally, he is inducted into the American army and arrives in the combat zone as an infantry private. Ackerman wants passionately to join the army but is prevented on medical grounds. But through some oversight, he gets into the infantry and is in the same platoon as Whiteacre. Diestl becomes a sergeant in the Wehrmacht and participates in the 1940 Blitzkrieg, the African campaign, the Russian battles, the Italian retreat, and is stationed in Normandy when the allied invasion takes place. The effect of the war on Diestl is to transform him from a deluded idealist to a ruthless killer with a calculating loyalty to the principles of Nazism. The effect on Whiteacre and Ackerman is a simplification of life to the essentials of survival, but in spite of this simplification, they retain a spark of hope in the possibilities for good in human nature. Set against this spark of hope is the doctrine of nihilism, articulated completely in the character of the German lieutenant, Hardenburg. If Ackerman and Whiteacre are considered representative of the ideals of the western nations, it is characteristic that these ideals can only be stated vaguely and nebulously compared with the precise and detailed enunciation of Hardenburg's values.

"The Young Lions" is Shaw's first novel, and it is big in size and accomplishment. Shaw is at home in almost any situation. He can present a New England village, a New York cocktail party, an American army camp, or a chaotic battlefield with unvarying accuracy and skill. His characters, both major and minor, are completely realized; none of them ever appear as shadowy half-beings whose motives and deeds remain unexplained. His dialogue, perhaps owing to his experience as a playwright, is alive, natural, and never falsely witty. His prose is accomplished and versatile, able to shift easily from the graceful to the brittle with a change of subject and mood.

The novel is not without faults: the technique of following three men's careers simultaneously gives a disjointed effect at first, and one senses a definite manipulation of the plot. But because it deals with serious human problems, and because it contains some of the most memorable passages ever written about men at war, "The Young Lions" is a must on your reading list.

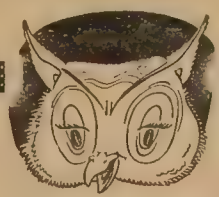
give 'em the better they can think.' He felt that a university should seek this elusive truth and allow freedom but he thought that the students should be given facts and 'skills' that they might be in a position to think soundly to him a Christian university, envisaged as the ideal by the report was quite impossible for this Christianity was a violation of that freedom which had been so strongly upheld by all.

Held Over



He welcomed the idea of a Jewish, or Budhist or any other denominational college, saying "Let's not try to force our views down the throats of others." Christianity has changed down the ages and perhaps their culture could add something and help in the growth to ultimate perfection, he said.

The discussion was held over until next Monday when the questions of apathy, compulsory religious instruction and the respective merits of free thought and facts will be open to discussion by the floor.

stairs in the Empire State building with rakes, gathering the fowl into piles like fall leaves.

Ornithologists had the most fun. They were the people who tried to explain just why migrating Oven Birds should crash headlong into the Empire State. Well, to really get at this thing, we have to dig deep into the darker regions of psychology—and some of them are pretty dark, in a dull red sort of way.

Real Story

The real story came to light when one of the small creatures lurched into my basement office. (I was working in New York at the time.) Ormand, I think he said his name was—Ormand Oven Bird—and a very unprepossessing name, too.

"Jotay," he said, (don't ask me how he knew my name. Perhaps because I had it written on the door), "Jotay, I want to be psychoanalyzed."

"OK," I said, "go ahead."

"Well," twittered Ormand, "I dreamed we were all flying up a long corridor entirely paved with copies of the Atlantic Monthly for August, 1932. Then two men came along on a horse, one facing the wrong way. When he yelled "right shift", everybody changed into a tea-party listening to a monologue by Cornelia Otis Skinner.

"Suddenly, it seemed we were all running, only we weren't running at all, because it was more like flying, only something had me by the suspenders and I couldn't keep up even though I was taking longer steps. We all looked down, and Harry called out, 'Look, I've got a building right by the window.'

"That's when I decided I'd better see you," murmured Ormand, wiping the remains of a lepidopterous insect off his beak. "You see, I wasn't asleep."

I considered for a minute, loafing through the reams of psychological data contained in the fine instrument that is my mind.

"Well," I said, "this looks like a clear case of parasympathetic corticular encephalization. In other words, your verticular endocrine glands have twutched with your binocular fusion of colors."

"Gee, doc," he said, "Is that bad?"

I paused, mainly for the effect, you know, and then said, "Well, I don't know—(business of stroking my goatee)—I would suggest about 100 sittings, at, say, (business of stroking his wallet)—25 dollars a sit."

There was a sudden flutter of little wings, and that was the last I ever saw of him. In a way, it was a pity, too, for Ormand was representative of the very trouble that is eating at the heart of psychiatry today—"In no other field of medical knowledge does the average man know so many things that ain't so."

In any case, I didn't let it bother me. I went right back to my copy of the "Proceedings of the Association for Research on Nervous and Mental Diseases" for 1935. There's a wonderfully human chapter in there on "Cortical localization of somatic sensibility."

I simply must finish it before 1953.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Montreal Artist

When a thoughtful man goes to see the exhibition of the Montreal painters now on display in the Hart House Art Gallery, he must ask himself these questions: is original interpretation of nature competent enough to take the place of representation? Can an emotion or idea be contained in a picture painted on such a radical material as burlap? And is color capable of shouldering the load that these painters are making it shoulder?

I believe that an original interpretation of nature can take the place of straight representation, provided that the interpretation is completely original and shows some aspect of life as it has never been conceived before. But when interpretation becomes as child-like as M. Pierre Garneau's "The Bat", the result is boring. M. Garneau has chosen to represent the bat in about the most obvious way possible, completely ignoring the bat's flickering movements and its air of mystery.

There seems to be no reason why truth and beauty cannot be as adequately expressed on old burlap as on the traditional canvas. The picture should be subjected to the same critical tests and neither received nor rejected because of the materials employed. In "L'Enfant A La Dent D'Or", M. Albert Dumouchel has used the novel method of painting on burlap. I confess an inability to see L'Enfant, or La Dent D'Or, or indeed anything of value or interest in the picture. The inability to get through the medium troubles the majority of these artists, only in one or two cases do their ideas work loose from their pictures.

They are forcing color to carry a load which is beyond its power, this results in a forgetting of drawing and an unfortunate emphasis on color. Mr. Gordon Webber, who is one of the most competent painters in the show, bases his entire work on color. His choice of color is excellent and his pictures are pleasant to look at. Only one fault can be found with Mr. Webber's "Vermont" series, these compositions are not entities but merely pieces cut from an endless roll and hung in frames.

These artists have failed in their attempt to bridge the gap between painter and viewer. They have not utilized to best advantage the limited assistance that their manner of painting supplies. It requires a genius to produce great art without discipline, old burlap and novelty do not make a Picasso.

Choroideremia Student Receives Reeve Prize

According to an announcement by the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto, Dr. J. C. McCulloch has been awarded the Reeve Prize. This award is made for the best scientific research by one who has held an appointment on the staff for not more than five years.

Dr. McCulloch was awarded the prize for his study in conjunction with Dr. R.J.P. McCulloch on "A Hereditary and Clinical Study of Choroideremia"; this has added greatly to the knowledge of the previously obscure hereditary ocular condition. The disease was found in over 80 descendants of a family of 500 individuals who were studied.

Dr. J. C. McCulloch is Ophthalmologist-in-Chief at Toronto Western Hospital and was recently appointed Associate Professor, Department of Ophthalmology, in the University of Toronto.

Announce Gifts And Fellowships For University

Bequests totalling $75,000 under the will of the late Dr. Helen L. Vanderveer have been received by the University of Toronto Board of Governors for medical fellowships. A third of this sum will be added to the $25,750 previously donated by Dr. Vanderveer for the Arch Hutchison Fellowship. Another $25,000 will be added to the $25,750 which Dr. Vanderveer donated to the Frances Esther Hutchison Fellowship. The remaining $25,000 will be used to establish a fellowship for post graduate study in medicine and for the promotion of research in Paediatrics. This fellowship will be a memorial to Elizabeth Arbuthnot Dyson.

The Board of Governors also acknowledged the following gifts:

Four fans for the new air-conditioning laboratory in the Mechanical Building, valued at $1,200 from Sheldon's Limited, Galt;

$1,200 from Swift Canadian Company for nutrition research;

$100 from Heintzman and Co., Limited, to assist students in the third year of the School of Music;

A residuary bequest under the will of the late Dr. William B. Boyd of Coldwater, Ont., for research work by the Connaught Laboratories, and, or to assist in radio research within the Province of Ontario;

One hundred dollars from Dr. E. E. Shouldice towards investigations and expansion work in the Department of Art as Applied to Medicine;

Twelve hundred and fifty dollars from Canadian Industries Limited to renew their fellowship in Chemistry;

Seven hundred and fifty dollars from the Community Chest of Greater Toronto for bursaries in the School of Social Work;

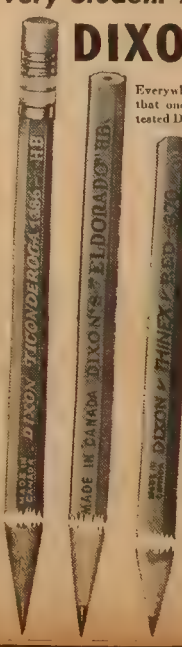
$250 from Fred Orpen to cover his award for this year;

$500 from the Alumni and students of the Faculty of Forestry to support the Forestry Memorial Scholarship;



$300 from Dr. G. M. Cameron, Kirkland Lake, Ont., for the Department of Physics research in co-operation with Dr. J. A. Sullivan, Department of Oto-Laryngology;

$1000 from Canada Cycle & Motor Co., Ltd., and Canadian Acme Screw and Gear, Limited, to finance the T. A. Russell Memorial Research Fellowship;

$250 from the Ontario Forest Industries Association to finance their scholarship.

Molehill to Mountain Describes It He Says

By HANK WESTCOTT

The current charges being levelled at Vic Obeck are strictly belonging to the "no hum" department according to Warren Stevens. (Reports from Vancouver have had Obeck offering to provide jobs for any and all football players who wish to leave the moist British Columbia clime to pursue their studies at McGill.)

"What probably happened," says Stevens, "is that this student from McGill went home to Vancouver and suggested to some of the footballers there that they should move to Montreal. There they could pick up part-time jobs to help pay tuition.

"If this opportunity were offered to any one else, no one would say a word, but as soon as an athlete is approached with a breath of matters financial in the wind, the screaming commences.

"Perhaps the student approached Vic Obeck with the idea before he left for the coast, and Obeck told him 'go ahead, we can use a few football players.'

"This sort of thing could be the first step to subsidization around the intercollegiate loop. And that, I think, we should forestall as long as possible. But there's nothing in the rules that says you can't recruit.

"McGill is not as fortunately situated as the other three Universities in the football circuit. They have only five high schools in Montreal to draw football players from. Western has a farm system in WOSSA, Toronto has central Ontario, and Queen's, the eastern part.

"Every University is glad to get good athletes, or good students academically, and here we have the SAC employment service which provides jobs for all of them, athletes or not. But we don't believe in direct subsidization of players, and the report from Vancouver doesn't say that Obeck is doing that either."

For nearly an hour yesterday Warren Stevens discussed the "to pay or not to pay" situation in College football. He mentioned the over-commercialism of some of the American brands. "We hope it doesn't happen here," he said. "We try to keep athletics secondary to academic life."

SEED POTATOES FOR SPAIN

During the crop year 1947-48 Spanish seed potato imports amounted to 33 thousand tons 1.2 million bushels) of which the 'Netherlands supplied 20.7 thousand tons (760 thousand bushels). The remainder were shipped from Ireland, Denmark, the United Kingdom and Luxemburg.

"The Fly-Tie Club" is another group that meets regularly under Phil Pointing. The undergrads are proud of their magazine "The Annual Ring" that maintains a link between graduates and the Faculty. There are seven scholarships, (total value $1,550), awarded to Forestry students on a wide basis of scholastic standing, and interest shown in their work. Some of these awards have picturesque names: "The White Pine Bureau Scholarship", and "The Society of the Men of the Trees", an award given for the best essay dealing with some phase of Forestry.

"They have excellent spirit and are doing a good job," said Dean Sisam. "As you remember, they won first prize for the best float, and in inter-faculty rugby won four out of their six games. Keep your eye on them during this hockey season."

The tree in the fourth panel indicates federation with the university. The shield is encircled by the wings and sword of St. Michael. The Greek motto, "Eusebeia, Moustika, Gymnastika" is an adaptation of a verse of the 118th psalm: "Teach me true understanding and wisdom."

Boxla Meds Forge Ahead Drop UC Fourths 17-2

Reach Finals For Fourth Straight Yr.

By ED. VOIGHT

For the fourth consecutive year, Meds Fours earned the right to enter the Interfaculty lacrosse finals as they trampled U.C. Fourths 17-2 yesterday in Hart House gym. Before a large crowd, the Medicos completely outplayed the game but thoroughly outclassed U.C.'ers, and now await the winner of today's Sr Skule-U.C. I encounter as their opponents for the Dafoe Cup play-off.

In spite of the lop-sided score, the U.C boys didn't go down without a fight. "Dutch" Young scored the first goal of the game for them, but from then on it was just a case of how many Meds would run in. And even though they ran up those 17 markers, the Doctors earned them as the Artsmen concentrated mainly on roughing up the winners.

Seven In 2nd Term

Heatherington evened the score with the first shot that Meds had on U.C. goalie Smith, and by half-time, Meds were away out in front, 10-1. U.C. played their best lacrosse in the first quarter when they stuck to playing the game and held Meds to three goals.

In the second quarter, Meds ran wild to lop in seven counters without reply as U.C.'s roughing tactics backfired. Haliburton, who along with McKay and Heatherington, sparked the Meds' attack, took quite a going-over in this period.

Moher Impressive

Medsman Moher seemed to enjoy the rugged play immensely, and turned in one of his best games of the season. Although held off the score-sheet, Moher came up with a solid defensive game, and with a bit more luck around the U.C. nets would have had a couple of markers. Twice within 20 seconds in the first period, he deked Smith only to hit the post on each occasion.

Haliburton Fires 6

Haliburton played his usual aggressive game, and topped the Meds scorers with six goals. He was dangerous every time he got the ball, faking the U.C. defense right out of their shoes on numerous occasions to set up a goal-mouth play for his mates.

Jimmy McKay followed with four counters, and like Moher was outlucked on more than one occasion. He was solid as a rock defensively. Beaton with three, Heatherington and Utsonomya two each, completed the Meds scoring.

Young scored both the U.C goals. Davis and Miller played well in a losing cause.

Feudin' and Fightin'

This same Miller and Medico Heatherington engaged in their own private feud, much to the delight of the crowd. Late in the third period, the two were given the official heave-ho for roughing, and in the fourth period they went at it hammer-and-tong, when Heatherington took exception to the U.C. player's solid checking. Both were given roughing penalties again.

Not to be outdone, U.C.'er Davis broke his stick while checking Haliburton just seconds later. Davis presented a humorous sight indeed as he continued to play with his busted weapon. Young missed what would have been the easiest goal of the game early in the third quarter when he couldn't hit the open nets, with Firman, who had little more to do than lean back and count the crowd for most of the game, away out of position.

Girls' Hockey

Watson, Jeffries Score In First Tilt of Schedule

The hockey season started off with a whistle yesterday, when Vic I and PHE I battled to a 1-1 tie at Varsity Arena. Although individual Vic players showed superior stick-handling PHE dominated the play in the first two periods and the last of the third. However, the unassisted goal scored by Alison Jeffries half way through the first period gave Vic a 1-0 lead which they kept until Ferne Watson tallied in the third.

The first two periods were more or less the same. PHE's determination kept the puck near the Vic goal the majority of the time but goalie Jean Rose aided by defenceman Jean Meyers foiled all scoring attempts. Part way through the first period, Alison Jeffries got away with the puck but was unable to score. A short time later she broke away again and this time her fast skating, neat stuck-handling and accurate shooting gave Vic its first goal of the year.

In this same period Di Rogers displayed smooth hockey know-how but was unable to get the puck past PHE goalie Joan Summerville on either of her two break-aways.

At the beginning of the third period it looked as if Vic had the game sewed up. The red and gold were dominating the play and Fizz Ed seemed disheartened by the low end of the 1-0 score. Then things began to happen.

Fizz Edder Ferne Watson broke away, carefully aimed and shot the puck knee-high past goalie Jean Rose, robbing her of the shout-out she fought so hard for. With the score tied, PHE regained new vigour and for the rest of the period did everything to win the game. The backchecking of the defence and good net minding stemmed the tide until the bell.

Trinity, Vic, Dominating Mural Hockey

With almost a third of the season over, a glance at the intramural hockey league standings reveals that senior and junior Vic hold down the top positions in the first two groups.

The untied and unbeaten and untied Trinity teams lead groups three, five and eight.

In group one, senior Vic will encounter stiff competition from Ajax and senior School, last year's Jennings Cup winners, who lost 1-0 to Vic in their only outing so far.

Senior Meds appear to be the chief threat to junior Vic in group two. The high-scoring Trinity A team which has registered 11-0 and 10-1 victories so far, appear to be too strong for the rest of group three.

The hapless UC teams have only eked out one point in eight games to date, but the New Year might usher in better fortune for them.

Here are the standings in the eight groups:

	W	L	T	F	A	Pts

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MACFARLANE

There follows herewith a plug for Varsity Blues hockey team which has, for the information of the lesser followers of the game, won the intercollegiate championship for the past two seasons.

No one has been able to explain just why the hockey team fails to command more support. Usually a winning team can count on a large following, but in recent years, the Blues have found that the teams they are beating week after week are drawing larger crowds than are the Blues.

This season, Varsity has another good hockey team—a team that appears to have every chance of copping the Queen's Cup again. A little more support may assure victory, just as student support boosted the moral of the football Blues.

Anyone who sees one the of the better intercollegiate hockey games will never need urging to go back for more. Anyone who watched the great McGill games of the last two years will support this assertion.

There is an aggressiveness and freewheeling spirit exhibit in intercollegiate sports of all types—this is one big reason intercollegiate football receives so much support from the general public. The only apparent reason why the same feeling doesn't exist towards intercollegiate hockey is that the public hasn't been educated to the possibilities of the game. This seems to apply only to the University of Toronto, which wryly boasts the poorest crowds in the league.

So let's transfer that great support that was given the football Blues this fall, over to the hockey team. The attitude of the teams of the past two seasons is that they won the title in spite of the undergraduate body.

Overruled

Protests of PHE captain Ferne Watson are to no avail as referee Joan Hume explains rule infringement and enforces penalty against PHE, during the first game of the women's hockey season yesterday. Shortly afterward however, Ferne Watson broke through the Vic defence to score on goalie Jean Rose. Later the Scarlet and Golden Girls tied the fast-playing phys-edders and the first game of the year ended as a 1-1, no decision, contest.

Armored Behemoth

—Courtesy, Globe and Mail

After riding around the front campus in a heavy tank Friday noon at the C.O.T.C. display, "Operation Snowball", World War I veteran Sidney Smith talks over the armoured vehicle with two World War II vets from the Camp Borden R.C.A.C. School.

Students Mature? Definitely—Parkes Entirely—President

Centuries-old Oxford has a new vice-chancellor. He is Dr. John Lowe, Canadian-born, and a graduate of the University of Toronto. The new vice-chancellor took office during the Christmas vacation.

Commenting on his new charge, Dr. Lowe says that post-war students at Oxford are more sensible, more interested in current affairs and religion, and more conservative than pre-war youth.

University of Toronto students are equally adult, according to campus officials.

"Of course, the predominance of veterans has something to do with it, but our students do work harder to take advantage of higher education."

"This was not entirely the case in the post-war period 1920-21," he said. "There was not the same yearning for spiritual values as there is today. The age of the '20's, my own generation, was characterized by skepticism; in many cases by nihilism. Literature then was one of stark realism. That is an attitude one does not find in this generation. They are still skeptical, but they are searching."

Dr. Smith agreed that Toronto students are more interested in contemporary affairs. He pointed to the innumerable campus clubs, debating clubs, international relations clubs and the active political clubs.

Rev. R. S. K. Seeley, dean of Trinity College, also found an awakening interest in spiritual things, saying: "On the whole, students are not particularly interested in organized religion but they are seeking spiritual values."

Speaking for the women of the campus, Miss E. A. M. Parkes, associate secretary of the Students' Administrative Council, said: "They are definitely more mature. My feeling has been that the presence of ex-service personnel has generally matured the undergraduate level. But even the freshmen coming out of High School seem to be more mature."

Vets' Condition In NCSV Brief On Living Cost

"A standard statistical survey of living conditions of student veterans in Canadian Universities will be completed in time for the NCSV brief to be presented in Ottawa this March by the official delegation," said Prof. Curtis of Queen's at the Christmas Conference held in Kingston. "Previous surveys," Prof. Curtis pointed out, "have been undertaken by individual veterans' groups, but their varying nature makes it impossible to assemble a comprehensive picture of the situation."

Jack Gwynne-Timothy, IV Trinity, of the Toronto delegation was elected Secretary of the NCSV executive which will represent the resolutions of the committee to the Dominion Government. Other officers include Peter Kohl, (McGill), president; Don Mathews, (Queen's), treasurer; and vice-presidents from the Universities of Saskatchewan, British Columbia, and Dalhousie.

Skule Cannon Takes On COTC

A big battle boomed on the front Campus Friday afternoon —the COTC with all their armament against Skule and its cannon. The COTC captured the front campus during their "Operation Snow Ball" and the Engineers attempted to regain the lost field with the aid of their artillery.

School opened fire first and kept on firing, attempting to attract the heavy artillery for a duel. The COTC refused to recognize Skule and their cannon as an enemy and ignored them completely except to hold their ears when the Skule cannon went off.

The battle was very one-sided. The COTC had all the equipment and armament while Skule was the only one doing the shooting.

Vote Vindicates Male Who Doesn't Give Her Flowers

There won't be any corsages at the Vic-At-Home this year. In a referendum at Victoria College Friday, the voters came out strongly against the traditional posy for the fairer sex.

The heavy voting was equally divided between the men and the women, but the male vote expressed itself much more emphatically than did the weaker sex. While the women were divided on the question, the men voted three-to-one against. Jim Nethercott, social director of the Victoria College Union, has announced that the no corsage rule will prevail at the "Dance of Distinction" on Feb. 1.

Comment of Vic students was not very enlightening on this perennial question. Co-eds seemed to be of the opinion that if he loves me enough he won't complain about the paltry four or five dollars that a half decent corsage would cost him. Some of the residence girls have expressed a determination to make their own bouquets out of old pipe-cleaners and things like that.

A Bloor Street florist when queried about his reaction to the no corsage rule, said in rather a wry voice that the Vic male's contribution wouldn't be missed too much. "After all, the Skule-at-Home is coming up and the Skule men are gentlemen."

A Vic male comented in rather a

Claims Chinese Situation Reflects Social Evolution

Conditions in China are not as serious as most people imagine, stated Dr. R. McLure, United Church missionary, in his address last week to the students of Emmanuel College.

Dr. McLure has recently returned from China, and he was speaking to the students about the rapidly changing political scene in that country. He claimed that "the greatest sociological transformation since the French Revolution" was now taking place, and furthermore, that there are elements of evolution and constructive changes which never hit the headlines. He briefly described the effects of the shifting social order in different areas of the population, and indicated that the years of suffering and insecurity have given many of them a determination to find new solutions for their problems.

Hits Shipment of Planes

"The fault of the Central Government has largely been one of omission," said Dr. McLure. "They have not progressed; have failed to understand the power of an unseen idea." In this regard, he mentioned North America as perhaps the most materialistic country in the world, and tending to make the same mistake as the Chinese Government has made. He gave the example of the 185 Mosquito bombers sent to China which were a good business investment but endangered the future relationships between the Canadian and Chinese people.

The position of students in China is extremely precarious, said Dr. McLure. Many college students have had no routine classroom study since public school, and some post-graduate students cannot remember ever having a library in their educational institutions.

Says Russian Influence Small

Dr. McLure said there was no more evidence of Russian influence among Chinese Communists than could be expected from persons who had studied in Russia, and that similar effects could be seen among personnel trained in Great Britain or the United States.

Despite all the conflicting reports, Dr. McLure said he believed that the happenings in China could not help but raise the standard of living.

Students At Queen's Financially Stable

Kingston, Jan. 10—(CUP)—Students of Queen's University Science Department are evidently well-fixed financially.

University authorities have had to extend the deadline for scholarship applications because no one had yet applied for a bursary worth $150.

Rhodes Scholar

"Ralph Campbell, Foxboro, Ontario"

By HARRY RASKY

He had won the highest possible honor and had gone back to work on his father's farm. This was not Abraham Lincoln of Illinois, but rather Ralph Campbell of Foxboro.

On the evening of December 11, Ralph Campbell returned to his 73 St. George Street residence to find a message waiting for him, informing him that he had been selected as a Rhodes Scholarship winner. A week later he was back on his father's farm helping him chop wood during the holiday. These two widely different facts are symbolic of Campbell's life.

He has a life story that would make Horatio Alger heroes blush with envy. Born thirty years ago on a small ("we have 20 or 21 cows") farm two miles outside of Foxboro, Ontario ("Foxboro is a village you know"), he is an only son. He attended a one-room red brick school house. Getting up at 5.30 each morning he would perform his chores and then cycle six miles ("I drove a horse one winter") to Sterling High School. He graduated with 11 firsts and two seconds.

The Foxboro farm was his next stop. Turning down a bursary he spent the next four and a half years behind a plow and beside the cows. They were successful years ("We won the provincial oats championship and built up a Holstein herd of cattle"). The days were long for him then—breakfast at 4.45—but well spent. Travelling like a country preacher, he organized 22 study groups among the local farmers. He attended many agricultural schools by day and took a correspondence course in history from Queen's by night.

Campbell would probably still be on the farm if Canada had not gone to war. He has a record that would astonish anybody who knows his modest nature. Working his way up to flight lieutenant, he finished the war with a DFC and bar. These were presented to him by the King in Buckingham Palace. ("He asked me how I liked England. He was a pleasant fellow.")

At all times Campbell speaks in a very quiet unassuming manner. No one can remember him raising his voice. He has a broad pleasant smile, and an honest face that would look equally at home in The House of Commons or behind a piece of watermelon.

Although he has no scars to show for his war record, on one occasion he was shot down in flames. The gunner was killed and Campbell was the only member of the crew that ever flew again. The D.F.C. and bar were both presented after two occasions on which he flew with one or two motors missing. Flying over the channel, a propeller flew off one engine and put another out of commission. They landed in the water and were picked up a day later. ("Nobody was hurt—except for a few black eyes.")

There was no brass band to welcome him back to the farm when the war ended. Once again he took his place beside his father in the fields. During this year he again took up organizing study groups and organized a Community Centre.

In 1946 he had the unusual honor of being the first one from his community to attend any university.

As a certain rusty-haired lady friend said recently, "Ralph can do anything." She may have been exaggerating slightly, but his academic record proves she was not far from wrong. His first year was completed with all firsts and four different scholarships. Scholarships are nothing new to the soft-spoken student. Last year he again received two.

No bookworm is the fellow from Foxboro. He played halfback on his high school rugby team and has been utilizing his 195 pounds in the middle position of the U.C.

Too Much Formal Instruction

The lead story on page one of today's issue indicates that officials of the University believe undergraduates today are more mature than those of 20 years ago.

This is, to a great degree, the result of a huge influx of ex-service students during the past four years who have had somewhat of a sobering influence on the younger undergraduates. And the effect has been a desirable one.

The self-reliance and sense of responsibility of the veteran students has been noteworthy. It is reflected in the general academic standards achieved by veteran undergraduates throughout the country. Given the opportunity to attend university they have come through with flying colours and have made good use of the initiative developed during the war years.

Most students, veteran and non-veteran, faced with overcrowded classrooms and a minimum of personal instruction, have had to rely on their own efforts to a large extent, and, although the disadvantages were many, they learned to think for themselves. With no spoon-feeding or coddling they emerged more alert. They had to, or else be lost in the crowd. And the experience proved to be a beneficial one.

In his recent annual report to the Board of Governors President Sidney Smith asserted that the past three years had made it necessary for students "to develop their own self-starting and self-motivating power." "We are convinced," he wrote, "that they are keener in mind and stronger in resolution by reason of this fact."

"There is a lesson to be learned from this experience," he continued. "It is that Canadian universities have been giving too much formal instruction to their students. In the later years (of a university course) the student must be afforded the opportunity to assimilate, to search, and to think. In some of the faculties and schools of the University, students may have, throughout the whole week, only one, or two or three periods during the day which are not allotted in a rigorous schedule of lectures or laboratory work. That is not education. To invoke a homely metaphor: a university course is not the stuffing of a fowl with dressing for the oven; it is really the feeding of a fowl with nutritious food and then enabling it to grind and digest that fodder."

The same idea, figuratively speaking, was reflected in the letter of a Queen's student recently published which pleaded for less formal education. He wrote: "Let us tear down the lecture halls and build coffee houses."

Tosh Topic

Feeling a little tired after a five-hour lab in Sex Education, I dropped into the KCR for a short glass of tomato juice. I think they make their tomato juice out of green tomatoes, 'cause it's sort of pale yellow in color and bubbles when you pour it in the glass but it's sure beneficial. Well, anyway, I'm sitting there squishin' the stuff between my teeth and swallowing the bubbles when who should come up the aisle but my old pal Brotherskill Ordure from Pumpherly Collegiate.

I leaped to my feet crying, "Oomfam, Oomfam Bavelivitch. B. O. you old P. C., how are you?"

Immediately we went into the P. C. greeting which all alumnae use. After we had explained to the cop that we weren't fighting, we sat down to swap stories of Pumpherly. Eventually the conversation, as all conversations do, got around to women. (Topic no. 1.)

"Gee, B. O., I'm new here and I don't know any girls."

He looke furtively around, leaned across the table and whispered in my ear, "Keep this under your hat kid, I think I can get you a blind date with a girl from Whitney Hall."

"Swell," I said, "phone her up and we'll go to a show."

Ask For Mabel

"Listen closely," he said, "she lives in Falconer House. You show up at the St. George street entrance, knock on the door and ask for Mabel. If you bump into the night watchman, slip him a five and everything will be O.K."

"Check, J. B., I mean B. O."

Leaping into my 28-cylinder Cadillac, I rushed home, showered, changed into my orange slacks and mauve shirt, knotted my pink tie with a double windsor, slipped into my pea green jacket to match my green shoes, and arrived promptly at 8 p.m.

I dashed thru the door only to bump into a big bruiser in the

B. A. Scott on Video Deep River Vocals For Skule-At-Home

The biggest dance of the Schoolman's year, the School-at-Home, will take place Thursday night, January 13, at the Royal York Hotel. The entire convention floor has been booked by the Engineering Society and the Engineers plan to use every square inch of available space.

Entertainment by the Deep River Boys, who will be in Toronto at that time, directly from the States, will be one highlight of the evening.

Two of the convention floor's largest halls will be used for dancing. Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen will play from 9.00 p.m. till 2.00 a.m. in the Banquet Hall. The Crystal Ballroom will be decorated in a nautical theme to represent the traditional HMS Ajax. Ellis McLintock will provide the music for this scene.

Jack Breithaupt, decorations committee head, has about 20 men working with him on decorations.

Video in Lounge

Part of the Hall will be converted into a lounge, complete with soft lights and music. The lounge will feature a television set borrowed through the courtesy of General Electric. Contacting the nearest television station, which is in Buffalo, the committee have been informed that a special School-at-Home programme may be televised and also that a showing of Barbara Ann Scott will be a feature of the evening.

The rest of the concert hall will hold a complete Parisian Sidewalk Cafe scene. The usual personalities associated with the scene such as cigarette girls, boot blacks, urchins, street walkers, etc., will be included in the scene.

Jack Breithaupt points out the fact, "The cigarette girls are for cigarettes only, so hands off."

Can-Can Show

To ensure that the evening will not be too boring for the Engineers and their guests, the School-at-Home committee have arranged a stage show that will be presented three times during the evening. The show includes eight chorines who will perform the French Can-Can.

Throughout the entire Foyer of the Convention Floor, various gadgets and machines will be on display. Some of the machines that intrigued the guests at the Engineers Ball at Ajax will be available for observation.

"A complete Hydraulics Lab with hot and cold running spooks is nearing completion for the occasion," exclaimed Pat Suddick, Chairman of the School-at-Home Committee.

Pat continues, "There'll be so much to do that I doubt if I'll have time to dance with my spook."

Brian Judges, vice-president of the Ajax Engineering Society remarks, "This dance will surpass all dances and will make the Vic-at-Home just another sweater hop."

Wandering minstrels will also be present to serenade the Engineers and their guests in the various corners.

Central Europe Claimed Parent To World Strife

Central Europe was described as "the key to European civilization" and as an area "fated to be the centre of world struggles" in a talk by Professor H. S. Thomson, of the University of Colorado, at a meeting of the Modern History Club Thursday night.

He supported his claims by descriptions of cultural development in Czechoslovakia and surrounding nations and by an outline of the "central role" played by central European countries in the "last four world wars"—the 30 Years' War, the Napoleonic wars, and the two Great Wars of this century. Professor Thomson's talk was in the form of a description of some personal experiences during his studies and later government work in central Europe.

The professor spoke of Czechoslovak scholars able to read and converse in eight to ten languages, whose students knew "at least" six tongues. These scholars, he said, have a heritage of centuries of western culture. "These people have always faced westward," Professor Thomson added. "Now they are facing eastward." The change, since the last war, of the direction of central European exports toward Russia, was one example made by the speaker of a "new re-orientation to the east" in central Europe.

Housing Talk

Reconstruction Minister R. H. Winters will address an open meeting of the University of Toronto Liberal Association tomorrow at 1 p.m. in West Hall U. C. His talk will be the "Liberal Housing Program".

Culture Week Being Planned For February

A conference of all university organizations is being called by the SAC Committee on Inter-Cultural Affairs, for Tuesday, January 18 at 7 p.m. in the U.C. Junior Common Room.

Announcing the conference, Art Bell, School of Social Work, explained that the purpose of the meeting is "to plan a week of events which will make students aware of the contribution to our life and thought made by religious and racial groups on the campus, and by implication, throughout Canada and the world."

"At long last," Mr. Bell commented, "students are taking an interest in the problems of the world."

The week of special activities is to run from February 20 to 27, and will coincide with National Brotherhood Week, being held throughout

Censors Close In, All-Varsity Revue Gets Rewrite Job

Censoring of undesirable jokes in the script of the All-Varsity Revue has necessitated the re-writing of an entire scene. After a meeting on Thursday, the board of review ordered six jokes deleted from the script "in the best interests of the student body". The board was set up to assure a high standard in the quality of the Revue.

Principally affected by the deletion will be a comedy skit by a team from the U.C. Follies, Erwin Pasternak and Harold Nashman. As originally written, the scene called for a dialogue between an explorer and his mates on an expedition. The scene was a tent by candlelight in which the leader told his men of experiences on previous expeditions. The lines in the scene were considered "too risque" and were deleted. The whole scene has been re-written.

Another skit that had to be revamped was a take-off on the chemistry club. The scene is a chemistry lab and the jokes objected to concerned a chemical formula.

One line was also deleted from a song, "The Vocalist Blues," sung by Ben Foreman.

Show Not Spoilt

Pianist and script-writer Bud Priestman said the censoring would not hurt the show. "The jokes that were censored have been replaced with others that are not as objectionable and nothing has been lost", he said. "Our idea from the first was to make this a clean show and there was some voluntary censoring done by the writers when the script was being written. We wanted to keep the whole Revue on a high plane and rather than offend anyone we left out certain jokes ourselves."

Priestman added that the jokes censored by the board were not really objectionable but "open to two interpretations".

No Radical Changes

Sunday night, general secretary of the S.A.C. and member of the board of review said no radical changes had been made in the script. "It's a show of a very high order," he explained. "The deletions were made only to keep the entire script up to the high standard of the rest of the show. But apart from a word, a phrase, or a sentence, there was nothing cut. The script and the talent in the Revue are the very best."

Atomic Research In Agriculture To Aid Farmers

"Atomic power is being used to assist the farmers of Saskatchewan in producing better wheat while protecting against soil destruction," said Dr. J. W. T. Spinks, Head of the Physical Chemistry department of the University of Saskatchewan to a meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute, Saturday evening.

Radio-active phosphorus is added to the fertilizer. The growing plant absorbs phosphorus from both the soil and the fertilizer. By means of Geiger counters the atoms of the phosphorus can be traced. It has been discovered that the plant takes 80% of the phosphorus from the fertilizer in the two weeks of primary growth. Then the percentage drops and the plant uses the phosphorus from the soil. The use of radioactive phosphorus will increase and supplement the phosphorus in the soil.

The electrons emitted by the radio-active phosphorus are used to take photographs of the wheat and to trace the amount of phosphorus in the wheat grains.

Radiophosphorus is also used to study phosphorus metabolism in laying hens. These experiments were continued until radio-active chickens were hatched. These chickens were actually ignored by their mothers.

Similar experiments were done with radiocobalt to investigate cobalt deficiency in sheep. Radiocobalt is also being used to investigate the habits of wireworms and is used in pest and insect control.

The lecture was interspersed with slides showing the effects in graphs of the experiments. So far only research has been done, but the farmers will be getting the benefits of the research in the near future.

SHMOO AUCTION

Palo Alto, Calif.—(Exchange)—Stanford University's Relief Drive recently auctioned off a number of Shmoos.

The Shmoos, drawn and autographed by Al Capp, took their place with golf balls autographed by Bing Crosby, paintings by Rockwell Kent, and a host of other donations in the auction to raise funds for international student relief.

Ottawa Trip, C.B.C. Panel On Program For I.R. Club

A full program of activities has been arranged by the International Relations Club for the winter term, reports the president, Ed Cosford, IV Trinity. The activities will include prominent speakers, a radio broadcast and a weekend trip to Ottawa.

The IRC library of approximately 400 volumes has now been catalogued for speedy use. Situated in the Economics Building Reading Room, the library is for the use of all club members and contains top books on international affairs.

On Jan. 28, the IRC will participate in a CBC Citizens Forum on the subject of international relations. This broadcast will take the form of a regular meeting of the club, and it is expected that a member of the club will be on the discussion panel.

Tentative arrangements have been made for addresses to the club by several prominent speakers. Among those whom it is hoped will speak to the club are A.R.M. Lower, professor of history at Queen's University and author of a recent article on what is wrong with Canadian university students; and Lester B. Pearson, Minister for External Affairs. Final

Glass Blower

Physics Department Has One

By HERB WOOD

Like the whistling swan, glass blowers in Canada are scarce. But the University of Toronto, Physics Department has managed to gain and hold one of these rarities for 28 years.

The other day we dropped in to see our first glass blower, Mr. Reuben H. Chappell, spelled R-E-U-B-E-N. "Don't you know your 12 Tribes of Israel?" Except for a blind that operates from the bottom to the top of the window, everything was above board with Mr. Chappell; but what he does with a piece of glass tubing and some heat left us all agog.

"The simplest things are often the hardest to make," he said. Then he proceeded to demonstrate the simple-looking operation of fusing two tubes under the heat from his "blow pipe." We watched closely—then it was our turn. Carefully we twirled the tubes. Instead of a neat seam, the edges buckled and sagged. "You didn't revolve each tube at the same speed and you must keep them horizontal. You see, your unpractised eye didn't notice all the little tricks that I was putting into it."

Mr. Chappell was born in Enfield, a suburb of London. Nearby is a church reported to hold the bones of King Harold. "I don't know whether my ancestors came over with the Normans, but if so, it was a long way back," he said.

At the tender age of thirteen, he started his apprenticeship and remembers the first gold sovereign he earned, silver being used for jewelery in those days. Along the way he picked up a Masters glass blowing certificate at Leiden University, Holland.

During the first World War, among other things, he made several thousand mysterious glass tubes. He discovered later that they were used to obtain poison gas samples from the Germans. Someone had to break off one end, wait until it was full, plug it with plasticine, then dispatch it to London.

In 1920, Mr. Chappell answered an advertisement and came to the Physics' Dept. University of Toronto, then headed by Professor J. C. McLennan. He didn't mind coming all the way over to Canada, as he knew he could easily return to England if dissatisfied. He has been responsible for the glass apparatus used in all the important experiments around the Department. One of these was the green line experiment.

In this experiment Professor McLennan demonstrated that the Aurora Borealis was caused by a mixture of frozen oxygen and argon being bombarded at low temperatures by electrical rays. And when viewed through a spectograph gives the auroral green line. The difficult part was getting the correct mixture of gases at the right pressure. Another project was the apparatus to collect radon gas—the radiations from radium.

In a small room is a veritable maze of glass apparatus leading from a lead insulated safe, perched ten feet in the air on a steel plat-

Miss Agnes McPhail, C.C.F. member of the Provincial legislature, will speak to the University College C.C.F. club today at 1:00 p.m. in U. C. room 11. Her subject will be "The Background of the C.C.F." Miss McPhail was the first woman to be elected to the Canadian House of Commons, and re-entered politics to be elected as C.C.F. member for East York in the Provincial House in August, 1943. She regained her seat in the general election held last June

Book Review

Man And The Atom

"Men and the Atom" by C. E. Vulliamy, (Michael Joseph, $2.50) deals with the implications of the atomic bomb. The author believes that evil is prevailing over goodness, insanity replacing sanity, that complete annihilation is ahead, and that for this the scientist is responsible. The modern scientist is indicted for the curse of "evil inventions" like the motor car, the airplane, the radio, the submarine, and lethal gases; he is also responsible for many hideous mechanical noises, rapid transportation, and other bad things.

The author states that Japan was virtually defeated before the first bomb ever fell on her, and that this act involved the total abandonment of all moral and humane standards. The author scorns the argument that the bombs saved lives by ending the war sooner.

He investigates the "Ordinary Person" and finds that the worst feature of our times is the low intelligence of the average man. The ineradicable stupidity of the ordinary person is a great tragedy, and is exemplified in the caliber of popular books, films, plays, sports, and radio programs. The evil man can be destroyed, but the stupid man must be left at large, and he forms the majority of our population. It is doubtful if humanity is worth preserving, but if so, the only hope lies in an international union for the benefit of humanity. Recommendations to the hopeful: keep hold of your politicians, be sensible, be moral.

This author is pessimistic to an extreme degree, and any reader is bound to disagree strongly with many of his conclusions. I detect an antagonism towards the United States, and an underlying egotistic attitude which gives some of his statements an air of blatant superiority. His ideas do nothing to solve the problem of war, and his tirade against the common man limits his book's popularity.

Poems of the War Years

Often anthologies of poetry seem to be non-cohesive patchworks, their method of selection ordered by arbitrary standards. There is, however, an important role performed by a certain type of anthology. By including more than merely the major figures, a volume which samples a representative group of poets can display the principle currents of thought and technique in a cross-section of any given period. POEMS OF THE WAR YEARS (Macmillan; $3.50), was selected and edited by Maurice Wollman with the intention of doing this for English poetry from, roughly, 1939 to 1946.

One hundred poets are represented in this volume, including, among the more established, Yeats, Edith Sitwell, Dylan Thomas, Sassoon, C. Day Lewis, De la Mare and Auden. Reading such a varied selection, one gradually becomes aware of certain problems, beneath the individual differences, of interest to practically all the poets represented. It would be expected that the war would have an effect on these central poetic problems, even those which, superficially, appear remote from contemporary events. This anthology seems to prove it.

The fact of living in a world at war acted as a fusing, maturing force on many of the younger poets. The work of Alun Lewis and Sidney Keyes shows this very distinctly. The maturing effect of the war on youth generally, is a commonplace; that it should have extended to the young and presumably more impressionable poets is not surprising. The interesting fact is, however, that it had an effect on practically all poets. Perhaps the best known example of the war's influence on a major poet, was the change in Edith Sitwell's work.

One of the chief characteristics of the poetry in this anthology is a tougher, more coherent and more objective attitude. This not only shows in the literal content but also in the selection and ordering of imagery and the rhythms, grammatical, structural and thematic. In other words, the war effected, in serious poetry, a final break with the tendency to sloppiness that grew out of one aspect of Romanticism. The general stream of poetry, under the immediate and violent impact of immediate and violent events, was directed along the path already taken by the major figures (the explorers as Keyes would call them), Eliot, Yeats, Rilke, Joyce. That Yeats showed little apparent interest in the shifting political scene is not a symptom of escapism. The point is that Yeats had already made his mature fusion when he took the step which separated his early and his late poetry.

In many ways this is the best war anthology yet to appear. The arrangement of the poems, roughly in large, subject groups, though a little confusing is not mechanically departmentalized. There are poems one feels should have ben included, for instance Alun Lewis' "Raiders' Dawn"; some poets are not included at all, such as Henry Red. On the whole, however, the choice is just and representative. Little more may be asked of an anthology.

form, to a thin gold tube. Its bore is smaller than a human hair. The appartus is termed a radium emanation plant; simply, a method of evacuating the equipment to allow the radium radiations to pass into the gold tube through controlled channels. The tube is snipped off in one-eight inch lengths, termed radon seeds. These are wrapped in gauze and tied with different colored strings, denoting particular strengths, placed in small pill-boxes sheathed in lead, then dispatched through the mail. The seeds are used in the treatment of cancer by insertion in the affected tissue. Important too is the fact that of a possible 365 leaks in the apparatus, there were only four.

Getting back to the simple things, we were told that one of the important factors with glass blowing is the sense of touch. It takes years to develop and is very sensitive. You can't suddenly switch from a job using four-inch diameter tubing to one of half-inch size. Strenuous exercise such as sawing wood or breaking cement would leave the hands insensitive for hours.

Learning to blow glass is a heartbreak. No doubt that is why there are only three or four glass blowers in Canada. "I cried with frustration and mipatience when a boy", Mr. Chappell said, "and if I hadn't been working with my brother, I'm sure I would have quit."

Mr. Chappell is an avid reader, having finished Montgomery's "Alamein to the Sangro River," "Normandy to Berlin" and currently is reading "Crusade in Europe," by you-know-whom.

About that blind that works in reverse . . . ? "Well, you see, I regulate the sunlight so that it always passes over the 'blow pipe'. If it fell underneath I couldn't see to do anything."

U. C. AMALGAMATION NOTES

LOOKING ON THE "CON" SIDE

On January 20th and 21st you will be asked to answer the following question: "Are you in favour of the principle of Amalgamation?" If your answer is "yes", you will be asked to state your opinion on constitutional details. But the first question is all-important and fundamental.

If this question means anything at all—and we seriously doubt if principle can be so gleefully divorced from practice—it means that you believe that men and women of U.C. have similar attitudes to political affairs. And furthermore that no distinction can be made between them.

If you vote "NO!!"—then you are convinced that the present separation of men and women is most likely to present their real opinions on college political questions. You believe that only separate meetings truly can reflect the opinions of the college as a whole.

But if you vote "yes", you must answer the following devastating objections: Let us consider the first epoch-shattering and highly-publicized Joint Open Meeting, early in November. The total attendance excluding the two executives was Men—6, Women—20. This in itself shows a startling discrepancy in attitude. But wait a moment. The six men present said three times as much as all the women put together—who didn't dare open their mouths in front of the men. If any more significant difference in attitude can be presented we would like to see it! Although the meeting lasted a mere two hours and a half (U.C. Lit. meetings so far this year have averaged slightly under five hours), the women present were constantly anxious to speed up the debate. The men, on the other hand, were convinced that the women's silence signified ignorance of the issues and wished to continue the discussion.

We firmly believe that the differences of attitude between the men and women are so fundamental and pronounced that the only realistic answer to the principle of amalgamation is "NO".

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Earle Moss

To what extent do the works on an artist's program reflect his own personality? In a program such as that presented by Earle Moss on Sunday afternoon in the Art Gallery—where its contents were not conditioned by popular demand — one could expect a considerable revelation of personality. If so, Mr. Moss' program and playing, it would not be unjust to conclude, reflected a youthful idealism. Never throughout the recital was there a sound of harsh realism or bitterness, never a sense of struggle or defiance, but always a romantic serenity and pleasant sensualism.

This idealism flowed from the rather unspectacular Toccato of Frescobaldi, through the lyricism of the Schubert Sonata, to the luxury-laden tones of Ravel's Ondine and Debussy's L'Isle joyeuse and the short modern work by George Hurst.

Mr. Moss' playing was always clear and of a singing quality quite suited to his approach and choice of program. Unfortunately the acoustics of the hall robbed the playing of its fire.

Robert Harden.

John Beckwith

In the Conservatory Concert Hall last Thursday evening, John Beckwith, assisted during one group by tenor Arthur Bartlett, presented a programme of unusual musical interest and concentration. The first section comprised all fifteen of the Bach Inventions (two-part) followed by all fifteen Sinfonias (three part inventions). To add in passing that the entire programme was performed from memory will give you the initial sense of just how impressive a feat of sheer memory and mechanism this was. This is not to say that the Bach group was undertaken in any spirit of "see what I can do"; rather the reverse.

The principal effect I was left with at the end was a sense of just the high degree of intense, musicianly respect for and absorption in these works and in their specific problems relative to piano performance here displayed.

Paradoxically enough, it was just this self-critical sense of musical responsibility which spoiled this recital as far as entire musical enjoyment is concerned. For reasons, I should guess, of lack of technical self-confidence, the quality of relaxation was missing and with it the quality of pleasure which will not reach the audience if it does not first exist in the performer. The tension was extremely high; the playing was anxious and sincere more than anything else.

Although in the performance of his own works (Five Lyrics of the Tang Dynasty, a song cycle with Arthur Bartlett, and Four Conceits for piano) he was a trifle easier, the tension of the Bach group hung over the whole recital. For this reason, although I am much interested in Mr. Beckwith's activities as a composer, I don't want to say much about them; I feel that their performance in this atmosphere was not to their advantage. The Conceits seem witty and epigrammatic to a quite engaging degree. The songs, while interesting, did not seem to have quite as much of the essential quality of self-existence, of "here is an autonomous work of art", as did the Conceits.

Douglas Valleau.

Canada and the United States. Among tentative plans to be discussed are such activities as a concert, dance, speaker, essay contest, radio program, and a religious forum.

Letters are being sent to all campus organizations asking them to send delegates. Further letters will be sent out this week, giving more specific details about the conference.

doorway. We exchanged five-dollar bills and struck up a conversation.

"What's that clanking sound," I aske.

"That's the girls coming back from roll call."

"Oh," I replied, "you meeting a gal?"

"Yes sir."

"Why don't you go in and get her?' I asked.

"I'm afraid they'll beat me, we were late last week."

I left him sobbing hopelessly, whistling the theme from Bach's fugue for oboe and jew's harp. I strode to the door and pushed the button. Slowly the door creaked open and a hand reached out. Being a Rotarian of long standing I seized and wrung it warmly. A short scuffle ensued and I picked myself painfully from the floor. I explained that I wanted to see Mabel, produced references from my cubmaster, and submitted to a quick blood test.

"Will the inmate be going to a dance, or can I leave the ball and chain on," asked the warden.

"We're just going to a show."

Ball Carrier

After signing a few papers and leaving a $500 deposit, we set out for the movie. I offered to carry the ball for Mabel. She smiled sweetly and said, "It's all right, I'm used to it. Anyway I got a long chain for good conduct."

"That uniform really looks nice on you," I said. "I like the way the stripes set off your night club tan."

The evening passed quickly as we entertained each other with gay and witty conversation.

"Looks like rain."

"Yep."

"Cold?" (hopefully).

"Nope."

What can a fella do? There we were parked on a dark street, soft music on the radio, Mabel was loaded with hormones and I was loaded. Suddenly Mabel stiffened. "What time is it?"

Coy Boyer

"Hedy come wiz me - - - -," I whispered huskily. I'd been smoking cigars for a week to get the right tone.

"I've got to get back."

"Hedy, let us throw caution, along with a few other things, to the winds."

"But if I'm late I'll have to sit at the head table."

"Hang on then keed," I muttered as I nursed the hack up to 45 and shifted into second, "that shouldn't happen to a dog."

"Flying sort of low, aren't you, bud," growled the cop.

I threw a pillow to Mabel, she arranged it quickly. "My wife is having a baby, officer," I said.

"Oh, that's different."

I didn't see anything different about but drove off anyway. We arrived at the door at 11:59½.

"Goodnite. I'll see you again," she cooed.

Passionately I kissed the janitor goodnite and wandered blindly home.

Student government interested the able organizer. Registered in the rush Political Science course, he was elected second year president of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society. He was so well liked that nobody would run against him when he said he would be a candidate for president of the Lit.

At Lit meetings Campbell is often at his best. He seems to say little, but when he speaks in his quiet honest manner he is listened to with complete attention by all. He has very little use for a gavel.

His clothes represent his simple tastes. ("I'm not very interested in clothes.") A plaid jacket is his daily uniform.

At Oxford he will study philosophy, political science, and economics. He will come back to Canada to work in the Bank of Canada and then, "would like to work in a farm co-operative."

Conductor Neal Got Early Start Orchestra Concerts Coming Soon

By LOIS MARTIN

"Some day," said the slim young man with the well-cut glen plaid suit and the medium-sized baton, "I would like to own a string of the most beautiful sleekest horses you ever saw." Behind his glasses, his eyes crinkled up in a grin. "Right now, I could just about afford a high-class donkey."

Harold Neal, energetic, bespectacled 32-year-old conductor of the University Symphony and Chorus shifted himself up to a seat on the edge of a table outside the theatre in the Women's Union where he had just held a Saturday afternoon rehearsal, tucked some papers into a brief case bursting with musical scores, and allowed himself to be interviewed.

The conductor loves to talk about horses, music, musicians, and his family. There is, for instance, the story about the day some twenty-five years ago when Harold's father met a friend on the street and got some advice on how to rear a family. (There were, in all, 11 Neal children.) The friend told the senior Neal there was no better way of keeping boys off the streets and out of mischief than seeing that they played musical instruments.

This month, Harold Neal will make his debut as conductor of one of the largest university musical groups in North America. His elder brother, Raymond, is conductor of the London Promenade Orchestra; another, Ron, is a member of the Toronto Symphony, and yet another, Arthur, plays in the 'cello section of the Varsity orchestra under his brother's baton. Two sisters are pianists and the whole family loves music.

"Father never dreamed any of us would take up music seriously," said Harold. "He was very patient with us, though. We somehow always managed to break his records and we made a lot of noise but he was always ready to listen."

By the time Harold was 17, he was giving violin lessons to other youngsters. In high school he took a commercial and pre-accounting course and later worked at accounting. He is one musician who, strangely enough, likes keeping books, doesn't mind working in business firms, has no desire to specialize in concert work. After graduation this year from Pass Arts at U.C., he hopes to take a DVA-financed M.A. in music at the Eastman School in Rochester, ultimately earn a living by teaching violin and conducting, and lecturing on harmony in some university's music faculty.

Harold believes in practical music courses which stress instrumental work along with theory. Now, with his studies at U.C. and the conservatory and an almost full-time job with the orchestra, he seldom has time to hear other people's concerts or to spend as much time as he would like to with his two-year-old and five-year-old sons. He looks forward eagerly to the time when he and his wife and the boys will enjoy security and, maybe, spend some time in the country.

Seven concerts spaced from January 28th to mid-March, a radio broadcast with the chorus and a guest appearance with brother Raymond's orchestra in February will absorb most of Harold's time until precariously near exam-time. The orchestra may carry its program of Dvorak's 5th Symphony and Mendelssohn's violin concerto

In the search for more direct ways and means of advertising, we think the ad men are missing an ideal opportunity in the common fire hydrant that dots the streets of our cities. One of the more important factors when deciding upon an advertising campaign is the choice of media. It's this choice, that determines, to a great extent whether or not the potent message will reach the maximum possible audience for whom it is intended. Obviously, fire hydrants are not suitable for a great number of products, but for the one that we have in mind hydrants can't be beat. So, bright and early tomorrow morning we're going to approach the nation's largest manufacturer of dog food and outline our idea. It's a natural.

Friends Of India Has 100 Members

Ever wonder if the Indian rope trick is just a farce or if it can really be accomplished? Have you ever thought about the fakir who spends his days lounging about on a spike-studded board? What are the thoughts of those strange Indian ascetics and mystics? Ever wanted to know more about the warlike Gurkhas and Sikhs? What are the teachings of Indian philosophy? Want to know more of the cultural life of this ancient land?

There exists on the University of Toronto campus an organization that can and does answer such questions about India. Conceived in 1945 of a desire to provide a welcoming committee for the Indian science delegation to Canada, the Friends of India Association was born shortly afterwards. The idea of forming a society of this kind was the outcome of an informal meeting held by the late Dr. E. F. Burton and a few Indian students. Mr. Jerry Hutel, a subject of India now residing in Canada, was one of the earliest and hardest workers in the association.

Final Boxla Tilt Today As UC Challenges Meds

Blues Humbled 12-5 By McIntosh Meteors

By JOHN MOYSE

Lindsay, Jan. 8—(Staff)—A pair of Toronto hockey teams staged a timekeepers' nightmare here Saturday night. After the clatter of adding machines had subsided it was revealed that the McIntosh Meteors had rung up a 12-5 decision over the Varsity Intermediates.

Unable to obtain accommodation in Toronto, the men from McIntosh Motors stage their home games at Lindsay Arena. They play in Senior B OHA company with two teams from Peterboro and Toronto Bells. In other exhibition tilts this season they have beaten the Intermediates 7-5 and 9-6 at Varsity Arena and whipped Stouffville, which beat the Blues 7-4 on Friday, to the tune of 5-1.

Playing without forward Rocky Howson and defenceman Red Waldron, the intermediates held their own territorially but lacked finesse around the Meteor net.

Although they only outshot the Blues 42-40, the Meteors were familiar with the small rink and made the most of their opportunities. Varsity netminder turned in a steady game despite the count against him.

Best for Varsity was rearguard Count Morrison whose solid body-checking hindered many a motorman. Winger John Fingland notched two goals while centre Wes Moore, down from the seniors, counted a goal and an assist, and made up in speed what he lacked in size. Griff Pearson who centred the first line displayed some neat stickhandling.

For the winners, Bob Parks led the scoring parade with four goals, Greg Carter collected two goals and two assists, and Baz Bell earned five assists. The Meteor defence, featuring two ex-Leafs, Coach Bill Thoms and massive Rhys Thompson, broke up many Varsity rushes.

The Lindsay games have been plagued all season with inept refereeing according to local sources, and this game was no exception. Rhys Thompson received two cheap first-period penalties while many offenders escaped scot free. Apparently the blue lines were dancing before the referee's eyes as they missed many offsides.

Next game for the Intermediates is on Monday, Jan. 17, when they take on Waterloo College in Waterloo.

Varsity—Goal, Foote; defence, Cooper, Morrison; centre, Pearson; wings, Ferguson, McKillop. Alternates: Allan, Dies, Moore, Turner, D. Campbell, Kane, McLaughlin, Fingland.

Hockey Blues Drop Exhibition Tilt 7-4

Stouffville, Jan. 9—Stouffville intermediate OHA entry beat the senior Varsity Blues 7-4 in an exhibition hockey game here Friday night before several hundred fans.

Playing on a surface that couldn't make up its mind whether to be ice or not, tempers frayed frequently through the contest and 12 penalties were handed out.

Rich Howson and Art Bell each scored twice for Varsity but their output wasn't enough to stem the local tide. Jack Rumney clicked three times for Stouffville. Bob Laurie added two more, and Don Campbell and Bill Bradbury fired the others.

The Blues resume intercollegiate competition against Queen's Friday night in Varsity arena. A win this weekend will give Varsity six points, and put them only two points behind the University of Montreal. Queen's has yet to break into the win column.

Robert Returns

Put out of action early this year by a badly broken jaw, rock-like defenceman Bob Larose will be back in action Friday, without his protective headgear, he hopes.

Jrs. Come From Behind To Sting UCC 6 to 4

The White and Blue beat the Blue and White Friday night in Varsity Arena as Varsity Bees stung Upper Canada College firsts 6-4 in a rugged exhibition tilt.

Down 1-0 after the first period, the Bees pulled into a 2-2 deadlock during the second session, and from then on were never headed.

UCC opened the scoring half way through the opening frame when Marty Hedges converted a Milt Cork pass with each team a man short.

Varsity evened the count in the next period when Pete Vernon beat Goalie Doug Orr from close range. Blake Sinclair slapped in Norm Fox's passout to give the Bees a 2-1 advantage, but the Collegians tied it up as Sonny O'Sullivan cashed another Cork pass.

In the third frame, Bill Walters followed up his own rebound to give Varsity a 3-2 lead. Shortly afterwards Mac Clement's long dribbler ducked under Orr's stick. But UCC answered with O'Sullivan's 30-foot goal. Big Bob Bazos battled through the Varsity defence and out-foxed netminder John Milne to equalize the score at 4-4.

The Bees forged ahead on Jack Raftis' close-in drive and clinched their well-deserved victory with Bill Walter's second goal.

Bullied by the heavier Prep school squad, the Bees looked ragged at first, but soon settled down, and at the end were swarming all over their antagonists. Their fine display of two-way hockey was capped by Bill Walter's two-goal performance and Jack Raftis' proficiency.

Standout for UCC was hard-hitting Milt Cork whose solid frame plugged many a hole on defence. He played most of the game, yet seemed tireless in his Bee-swatting activities.

Hockey

Meds took St. Hilda's II easily Friday by a score of 3-1. The play was not especially uneven but Meds' better team play gave them the edge throughout the game.

Irene Hain, fast-skating forward, scored Meds' first two goals in the opening period when she twice got away with the puck from centre ice and scored unassisted. She and Joan Fletcher were the driving force behind the Meds team which had a better working knowledge of passing plays and offside rules than their opponents.

The Saints' lone goal was tallied in the second period by Sally Sneath who sparked the Trinity play.

Meds third goal was scored in the second period by Kay Batanoff assisted by Mary Struthers.

By ED VOIGHT

The Dafoe Cup lacrosse playoffs finally get under way today at 1.00 p.m. in Hart House gym between Meds Firsts and U. C. Firsts.

Meds entered the finals by virtue of their lop-sided win over U. C. Fourths. In the other half of the semi-finals U. C. Firsts knocked off Sr. Skule, 6-3, in a hard-fought game last Friday. From the very start of the schedule it has been evident that Meds and U. C. were the pick of the crop. Both in Group 1 of the league, Meds knocked the Artsmen off twice by close scores, but U.C. has improved since, and are quite capable of throwing an upset into the smoothly-working Medsmen.

The Semi-Final

Getting back to Friday's semi-final, U. C. Firsts were much the better team. For the greater part of the contest, it was the superior team-play of U. C. vs the individualistic play of the Engineers.

U. C.'s checking kept Skule tied up completely, and btu for some erratic shooting, might easily have doubled the score. As it was, U. C. had 27 shots-on-goal to 14 by Skule.

Chambers Is Classy

Frank Chambers, U. C.'s bruising defenseman, was the individual star of the game. Chambers popped in three straight goals in the first half, each time snaring the ball deep in his own end of the floor and busting his way up-floor towards Kellman in the Skule nets.

Robb and Korz added singletons for U. C. shortly after as the pace of the game quickened considerably and play roughened up, especially along the side-walls of the gym. Someday, some player's going to get up and leave an arm or leg rolling around on the floor.

Pilgrim Fires First

Pilgrim notched Skule's first goal with the first shot Skule had in the third period. A few minutes later, Engineer Skordoff, in an attempt to clear the pill; after Kellman had blocked a hard shot, knocked it into his own goal while a startled Kellman, seeing the ball roll into the open net, just about did a half-gainor over the back of the net.

People should tell him about the danger involved in such a move. He should be more careful next time. The least Kellman could do is to wait till he's at the east end of the gym where he could dive into Hart House tank.

Olson Draws Two

Skule's hard-working defenseman, Olson, who took a terrific pounding from the winners, ran in the remaining two Skule scores, both on nice individual efforts. But it was just a dying gasp by the Skulemen as the game was practically over.

Disa—Data Concerning Sportsmen

By HANK WESTCOTT

"It's a bother," admits Bob LaRose commenting on the protective head gear he wears during hockey games to guard his broken jaw. He may dispense with it before the first intercollegiate game of 1949 in Varsity arena Friday night.

See where Bill Spence is currently top Varsity scorer with two goals and five assists? Netminder Paul Hutzulak has the best netminding average in the circuit with a goals-against average of 2.67.

Doctor Max Euwe, only living former chess champion of the world, pops into Hart House Wednesday night. Varsity chesspecialists are looking through their old pawn tickets no doubt.

Hank Henshall, intercollegiate boxer and quarterback of the UC football team is liable to turn up anywhere. Last week it was on the PHE interfaculty basketball team that lost 22-19 to Pre-meds in the season's opener. He scored four points too. Bill Danylchuk, backfielder on the senior Blues is also on the squad.

Glen Pettinger and Ed Brennan looked like they had been playing basketball together all their lives in senior-intermediate basketball game in Hart House Friday night. The seniors beat the seconds 48-25, and those two accounted for 26 senior points, many of them on hupper-dipper pass and fake plays.

Jack Life's Varsity intermediates went all the way to Lindsay to play another Toronto team Saturday night. It seems that a bunch of Toronto kids scrambled together a team—but couldn't find any rink to play in. So they switched their playing home to Lindsay—where the rink hangs out welcome signs in large neon lights.

Bob Masterson used his capacity as guest speaker at Bloor Collegiate's athletic assembly to good advantage. He suggested that some of the football talent might like to pursue their studies at Varsity.

Conn Sparrow phones to say there is some confusion about a ski story she wrote for Friday's Varsity. The fee for a weekend at Collingwood is $6.50 for a long weekend and $4.50 for a short one. There is a $2.00 deposit payable at the Athletic office in Hart House when signing up with soloist Teresa Mulloy to either Kingston or London during the early spring if the SAC music committee gives its approval. Also on the "possible" list is a trip for both orchestra and chorus to Hamilton to perform at McMaster as they did last year. As usual, an Ajax concert is definitely on the agenda.

Harold Neal regards this year, with the two preceding years, as the peak period so far as the orchestra is concerned. With smaller enroiments coming up in the future and, as a result, a possibly smaller SAC budget, Harold expects that this may be the last really big season for the outstandingly large student organization. It is hoped that last year's record attendances totalling well over 10,000 may be repeated this year. Harold feels too, that the actual musical development of the University Orchestra and Chorus may well continue, should there be smaller groups in future. "Size of an orchestra," he said, "is certainly not the only significant thing. What really matters is the quality of musicianship, and I feel that our quality will improve as we go on."

Scoring

Bill Spence Leads Blue Brigade

Top man in the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey scoring race is Andre Charest of the league-leading University of Montreal Carabins, whose six goals and five assists give him 11 points.

For second place a three-way tie exists between Knighton Day and "Peanut" Flynn of the Carabins and Varsity's Bill Spence each with seven points. Two Carabins, Georges Emblem and Gregoire Giguere, have six points to their credit. Rocky Howson of the Blues is deadlocked at five points with Henry of McGill and Perrault and Lazure of Montreal.

Charest has the most goals, six, followed by Day with five. Flynn's seven assists make him the leader in that department while Charest, Spence and Giguere have five each.

Besides being Varsity's top-scorer Spence leads the league in the points per game average as the Carabins have five games under their belts compared with three for the other teams.

In the netminders' averages Paul Hutzulak of the Blues has allowed but eight shots to escape him in his three games. This gives him an average of 2.67 goals per game, about a goal per game less than Montreal's Rainville and McGill's Gelineau.

The list of players scoring two or more points follows with the goalkeepers' averages.

over 100 persons, the majority non-Indians. Monthly meetings are informal affairs usually taking the form of discussion groups. Indian philosophy and ideals are thrashed out at these meetings. Theory of art, music, drama, and dancing is discussed. Indian songs are sung.

The advent of a large number of students from India, deputed by the government of India for higher studies in Canada, has given strength to the society. It has increased till now most nationalities in Toronto are represented in the association.

Soft spoken Narayanan Nayar, president of the association, explains the purpose of the group. "Our purpose is to bring together those people who are interested in India, to procure information regarding India and to place this information at the disposal of the members of the association. Further, we wish to foster an interest in India and promote international understanding and goodwill — primarily between the now independent Dominion of India and the Dominion of Canada." Mr. Nayar is a graduate engineer of the University of Toronto and a government of India student.

"Our meetings often feature documentary films on India and we try to show Canadian films on the same subjects too," Mr. Nayar said. "At last month's meeting we heard addresses by President Sidney Smith and Sardar Hardit Singh Malik, High Commissioner for India in Canada. These speakers are patrons of our association along with Mr. M. R. Ahuja, India government Trade commisioner in Canada."

Sever Connections Of Trinity Tutor; Find Him Impostor

A Trinity College tutor in divinity has been dismissed by college authorities, it was learned yesterday.

In an official statement issued late yesterday, Rev. C. R. Fielding, Dean of Divinity, confirmed rumors that R. P. Peters, engaged as a junior lecturer for the session, did not hold the Oxford M.A. he had represented himself as possessing.

Gives Statement

"Trinity College severed its connection with Mr. R. P. Peters on December 23, 1948," the statement reads. "Mr. Peters had been appointed in September as junior tutor in divinity for the session. The vacancy he was engaged to fill was the result of a sudden emergency caused by disappointment in obtaining the scholar originally desired for the post."

It was learned after the close of the fall term in which the new appointee had lectured that he did not have a degree from any university. Students who attended Peters' classes in first and third year Systematic Theology said he was "all right" as a lecturer. "Some of us liked him and some of us didn't," they commented. "He seemed to know his stuff like any other lecturer."

Assistant at Christ's Church

Rev. N. R. Burke, rector of Christ's Church, Deer Park, stated the Trinity tutor had assisted him in parish duties during the fall. "Mr. Peters was sent to me by the Bishop in October," said Mr Burke. "We parted at the end of November." It is reported Peters delivered several sermons at the church.

College authorities declined to issue any statement as to the present whereabouts of the former lecturer. They said they had no information as to his future plans.

Debaters Decide Stress On Sport Does No Harm

The motion "Resolved that the pre-occupation of St. Michael's College men in athletics is detrimental to their wider university interests" was defeated by an overwhelming majority in a debate held last night at St. Joseph's. The St. Joseph's Debating Congress upheld the motion and the St. Michael's College Senate Club formed the opposition.

Rosemary La Palme, first speaker for the government asked, "How many of the St. Michael's college men belong to the political and language clubs of the campus?"—Julie Richardson in the next affirmative speech answered the question with percentage statistics but Dave Quigley, first speaker for the opposition pointed out that "sports have taken neither time, energy nor money away from any other activity." His argument was that the athletes were as active in cultural persuits as their indoor brothers.

Tom Popp, second speaker for the opposition had "a strong notion as to what 'broader university activities' were in which the girls wanted to see the men more interested." He also stressed the point that the opposition held that "athletics are not more important than other activities" and he enumerated the many benefits to be derived from athletics mentioning the good feeling which grew from it. In her rebuttal Rosemary La Palme doubted this.

From the House, Chuck Tomkins, president of the Senate club, drew upon George Bernard Shaw as his authority for believing that university athletics made for greater peace and concord.

After Mary Sherlock had quoted figures to prove that contrary to the opinion of Dave Quigley, the St. Mike's men were in fact less willing to cut down on their athletic expenses, Fred Furlong answered Mary La Palme's statement that "hysteria caused by the Mulock Cup Game affected many more than the players" by pointing out that he had always been surrounded at the football games not by preoccupied men but by girls.

Varsity Mission Examines Faith For Upset Times

Rev. R. F. Hettlinger, Dean of Residence in Wycliffe College, in an address at Wymilwood on Sunday set forth the purpose of of the University Christian Mission when he stated, "the mission is going to blast away false foundations, on which we are fooling ourselves that we can rest and establish a Christian faith as the ruling factor of life."

The change in man's environment in the last few hundred years —both a scientific and technical mutation—was compared to the domestication of animals or discovery of fire, and was said to involve the "testing of all the ideals and assumptions developed in the previous period." He maintained that unless there was a willingness to re-examine the principles of Christian faith, Christian morality thus devoid of Christian truth, would crumble. Because here in Canada people are reasonably isolated from conflict and challenge they are liable to miss the deep significance of the issue.

He summed up the apathetic attitude of the community to Christianity as being like a "twilight sleep", pointing out that "many of us prefer to continue to live in this twilight, holding the best things of the modern world and retaining the comfort and safeguard of certain convenient Christian ideals".

Dr. Max Euwe of Amsterdam, Netherlands, former world's chess champion, will star in a simultaneous exhibition in East Common Room at Hart House, Wednesday, January 12 at 7:30.

Unions As War Memorials In Sixty U.S. Universities

More than sixty colleges and universities in the United States are now planning unions as war memorials, according to a recent report published in an American college union bulletin.

The preference for community center memorials is not unique with colleges. The community building and auditorium is the leading memorial choice of cities and villages throughout the United States, exceeding in number all other choices combined.

A recent survey of the Canadian Gallop Poll shows that nine out of ten Canadians prefer "the establishment of cultural centres, where citizens can gather for recreation and interest activities, as war memorials."

In Great Britain the War Memorials Advisory Council has recommended that British memorials might best take the form of village centers or social centers.

From Maine to California, American colleges are going ahead with plans for memorial student centers. Texas A. and M. got underway last September when President F. C. Bolton turned the first spade of earth at a ground breaking ceremony.

Washington State College in Pullman, Wash., is currently engaged in trying to persuade the state legislature to add $1,000,000 to the fund for a new college union.

North Dakota Agricultural College is planning a union estimated to cost $600,000. The University of Oklahoma is going ahead with plans to raise $2,000,000 to finance extensions to the present union building. And in northern New Hampshire, the University of New Hampshire is undertaking a comprehensive survey of student needs, looking forward to the building of a memorial union. At present New Hampshire is operating a building provided under war surplus as a student recreation center.

One Honest Man On UBC Campus

Vancouver, Jan. 10 — (CUP) — There is at least one honest advertiser on the University of British Columbia campus.

An advertisement posted on a notice board is overpowering in portraying the virtues of a motorcycle. The ad reads as follows:

"For Sale. One decrepit motorcycle in exceptionally poor condition. Anyone who is crazy enough to think this is a good buy is a fool and a moron."

Cold-Hearted Heat-Gauge Thief

What do vandals do with minimum thermometers? Sell them to the Physics Department?

Well at least the Georgraphy Department is at a loss to explain why anyone would carefully remove a slat from the Instrument Shelter (that's the white box perched on the rise at the East end of Trinity Field) to nab a minimum thermometer. It demanded a great deal of skill and perseverance but the loss has confused the diligent meteorologists in second year Honour Geography who are prepared to supply weather data every day provided they have that Minimum Thermometer.

SIMILAR PROFITS SEEN FOR 'COOP'

At a social evening given at St. Mike's by the co-operative tuckshop on Sunday, Art Monahan of the Board of Directors indicated it was highly probable that the dividends would be about 12% again.

Last year the "coop" had a profit of 12.8% on $10,000 business. Already nearly $5,000 worth of business has been handled and there has been a profit of $620.

CUP

Builds Unity Through News Exchange

By DOROTHY HERRING

The initials—(CUP)—that precede stories from other Canadian universities have puzzled more than one reader of The Varsity. Even when told that the letters stand for Canadian University Press, their enlightenment is not obvious.

20 Universities

The Canadian University Press is an organization that embraces 20 universities across Canada, from Vancouver to Halifax, and takes in 20 papers, from the dailies published by the University of Toronto, McGill, and the University of British Columbia, to the small weeklies put out by McMaster and Mount Allison University.

Exchange Papers

The idea behind CUP is the establishment of a feeling of unity among Canadian students and among their various colleges, and, on a more materialistic level, the exchange of important news from campus to campus. To accomplish this, there is a regular exchange of papers, which means that The Varsity receives every issue of every paper published by CUP member universities. From these, important stories, or light items of interest can be clipped for republication in The Varsity. In addition to the mail exchange, there is the wire service, for the telegraphing of "hot news" wherever or whenever it happens to break.

The significance of the wire service is illustrated by the fact that the University of British Columbia's Daily Ubyssey was the first west coast paper to publish the story of the disappearance of a Toronto medical student last fall.

The Canadian University Press came into being on New Year's Day, 1938, when the editors of 12 Canadian college papers met at Winnipeg to discuss ambitions which had interested them for some time—the possibilities of a nation-wide news service which would have the effect of consolidating student opinion and abolishing sectionalism.

For the first two years of its operation, the CUP was under the aegis of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, from which it received financial grants. It is now, however, a fledged, self-supporting institution.

Many of the possibilities envisioned by its founders have become reality as CUP has developed. An exchange of mats is in operation by which The Varsity receives the pictures of football and hockey players and cheerleaders that are published during the sports season.

At various times special features undertaken by one or another of the colleges have been circulated—roundups of editorial opinion, or a general collection of news from all the campuses.

Propose Radio Hookup

A proposed radio hookup for faster dispensation of news is still in the initiating stage. Several universities have active "ham" radio operators, and would like to see an amateur radio service set up.

To stimulate better college journalism, trophies have been donated for annual competition. The Bracken trophy, originally awarded for the best editorial content, was for some years given to the best all-round newspaper, but reverted this year to its original function, as two new trophies were set up for general excellence.

French Papers

In addition, a new award will be instituted next year for competition among the three French language newspapers. The French concept of journalism being different from that of the English, these French college papers have never been able to compete on the same ground with the rest of the university publications.

The CUP has promoted intercultural understanding as well as inter-provincial unity.

At the recent annual conference, held in Quebec City, the contact between French and English students, both at the conference and at attendant social affairs, produced an understanding and a tolerance that could not have been wise dissertations on getting along brought about by any number of with the other half.

Student Union

Although plans for the proposed memorial student union are rapidly nearing completion, there still seem to be a few students on the campus who object to the whole idea.

Their argument is based on the assumption that a student union is not a memorial in the real sense, and that, although a union building is a necessity at this university, it is having the label "memorial" tacked on it as a passing gesture.

Fundamentally, they object—and rightly so—to a useful edifice which does not memorialize or have a worthy commemorative goal.

To that extent the critics are right. No building, no monument is, in itself, a fitting memorial. Lincoln, in his Gettysburg address, said: " . . . We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. It is for US, the living . . . to be dedicated . . . to the unfinished work which they who fought . . . have advanced."

No building, object, or place, is a proper dedication. The dedication must be made in the minds and hearts of men . . . and it is a community task.

And unless a common feeling of social give and take exists within the community, it becomes impotent and is deprived of creative life.

The student community at this university, more than most, suffers from a sort of fragmentation. Each special interest or residence group functions by itself. Many students, not members of any group, have gone their own way alone. Sheer numbers and the transiency of the University population have conspired to keep students strangers to each other and to the faculty. Existing in a kind of artificial solitude, the student too often has become separated from responsibility and has been left untouched by the common purpose.

If the students of this University are to dedicate themselves to the building of a better world, they must, first of all, be a true community, one that is strong. And to do so they need a focus, a sheltering home, a center—in short, a student union.

Porter Butts, director of the student union at the University of Wisconsin, said recently: "If we fashion another instrument which will help people to work out together the common hopes and simple purposes of the men and women who so recently were fighting and dying . . . if we erect the kind of structure which serves to enrich the lives and strengthen the fellowship of those who come to our campuses from now on, we will not be wrong."

FALLEN FROM GRACE

In New York, the Bowery News announces the 1948 revision of the Bowery Social Register. Kicked out was Bozo, the hobo poet, who's become a pearl diver — that's a dishwasher. Admitted to the register were Boxcar Betty, cigar-smoking hula-hula dancer, coal miner and snake charmer, for donating five city lots in New Jersey for a hobo rest home; and Gus Schaeffer, king of beggars, on the road again at 64, and showing daredevil achievements by panhandling three Pittsburgh working stiffs — that's labourers — only ten feet from a bull — that's a cop.

Says CCF Policy Not Revolutionary; Founded In Canada

Miss Agnes McPhail, M.P.P. for East York, said yesterday that the C.C.F. is a purely Canadian organization, founded on an entirely Canadian basis and that it objects not to wealth, but to irresponsible use of wealth. Miss McPhail was speaking to the University College C.C.F. Club yesterday afternoon.

Origin Of Party

Speaking on "The Background of the C.C.F." Miss McPhail said that the industrialization of this country around 1921 led to the growth of trade unions, and the men sent to the House of Commons by these unions were designated simply as "labor". These small organizations were banded together at the conferences in Calgary in 1932 and Regina in 1933, where the name Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was adopted. Miss McPhail said that she would rather have the party called the Social Democratic Party of Canada, but some of the farmers balked at the implication of the word "social". The term "federation" accurately described the party in the beginning when it was a federation of small groups, but is not so meaningful now. Miss McPhail pointed out that though the name itself is ungainly, the letters C.C.F. stand out boldly in print.

Miss McPhail recognized the need for Conservatives and the stabilizing influence they exert on the economy.

Money Brings Evil

The amount of money that people have, she says is of small importance, but it is the power given to them by that money that bothers her. "Take this power from irresponsible groups and put it into responsible hands", said Miss McPhail. "What do people want with an awful lot of money, anyway?" she asked. "What do they do with it, after the first million?" She said that her party wants democratic control of the economy in the interests of the people. "The people have become skilled in the art of business," she said, pointing to the successful co-operatives, "and we could even dispense with Crown companies".

I Am No Revolutionary

Miss McPhail sees no reason to interfere with private business if it is not a monopoly and is satisfied with a reasonable profit. She emphasized the fact that she is no revolutionary. "I have been in the Commons too long," she said, "you can't get anything revolutionary done there!"

After the address, the C.C.F. Club voted on and carried the motion that the U. C. C.C.F. unit be open to any interested member of the college who is not a member of another political party.

Champion Euwe Will Match Wits In Chess Game

Dr. Machgielis Euwe, chess champion of the world from 1939 to 1945, and professor of mathematics in Amsterdam, Netherlands, will give a simultaneous chess exhibition in the east common room, Hart House, tomorrow night at 7:30.

Dr. Euwe finished third, against a strong field of chess masters, in a competition held in New York City last week. He is one of the greatest chess masters to visit Toronto since the visit of the great Russian chess master, Alekhine, in 1926.

He has written many books on chess, and writes in Dutch, French and English. Many of his books have become handbooks to chess players all over the world.

Set Up Unipress To Join Campuses All Over World

A new international news exchange service has been established on the university level to bridge campuses all over the world. The service will take the name of International Universities Press Agency or Unipress and will be available for publication in all student newspapers of every university the world over.

Unipress will serve the same purpose as the Canadian University Press Service but on an international scale. It originated at the 1948 ISS Summer Seminar, at Ploen, Germany, when an international group, realizing "the necessity for a fuller and freer exchange of news and information among the university students of the world" agreed to promote the establishment of the non-profit International University Press Agency.

Charter Drawn Up

A charter was drawn up as a constitution by a nine-nations student convention in Germany. A group of students from McGill and Montreal Universities were then asked to establish an American Continent office to work in close co-operation with the European centre located in Holland. The final charter was signed when a group of American and Canadian students, among whom 60 were journalism students, held a meeting at sea aboard the "T.S.S. Volendam."

Monthly Issue

The Unipress news sheet will be issued once a month with international screens from all the student newspapers which are correspondents to the organization. There will be two continental offices, one in Montreal and one in the Netherlands, which will provide both continents with information by trans-Atlantic exchange of news letters. The continental office's job is to select, publish and distribute the news sheet. The organization is non-political, non-religious and absolutely independent.

Famous Engineer To Lecture Here

Karl Taylor Compton, one of the world's greatest scientists will deliver the second Wallberg Lecture tonight at 8:30 in Convocation Hall. He will speak on the Scientist and the Engineer. The lecture is opened to the public and there is no admission charge.

Holds Many Degrees

Dr. Compton has made an incalculable contribution to the scientific and technological advances of our time. He is the author of one hundred scientific publications, member or head of over fifty committees, councils, commissions or boards. He has received 28 honorary degrees.

Dr. Compton is a member of a remarkable family. His father is Dean and Professor of Philosophy in the College of Wooster. One brother is President of the State College of Washington. Another is President of Washington University in St. Louis and Nobel Prize Laureate in Physics in 1927. A sister is the wife of the President of Forman Christian College of Lahore, India.

On Staff At Princeton

Dr. Compton has spent 15 years on the staff of Princeton and 18 years as President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. On his recent appointment to the Chairmanship of the Research and Development Board of the United States Military Establishment, he relinquished the post of President of the Institute but remains Chairman of the Corporation.

Dr. Compton has received many awards of distinction, including the United States Medal for Merit and the decoration of Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

INDONESIAN

An outline speech on Indonesia's struggle for independence and a film on one aspect of the Indonesian question will be presented on Wednesday, January 12 in Room 6, U. C., at an open meeting of the Students' Peace Council.

Dangerous Vacuum World Going Left Is Panel Decision

Unity in national affairs will be achieved in the future was the agreement of the speakers on the panel discussion of nationalism and world origin sponsored by the World Government Organization last night. The speakers agreed that history is leading to international unity, that the ideologies of individualized and centralized government are coming together, and that the world is going left.

Skeptical of World Unity

Dr. J. B. McGeachy, associate editor of The Globe and Mail, said he was skeptical of the achievement of international unity under the leadership of such organizations as the U.N. Asked if two opposing poles of opinion can exist when international organization is necessary for peace, Mr. McGeachy said there should be a balance of power politics with three or four different influential blocs.

Dr. Wrenshall, a physicist and member of the Banting Institute, said the fact that the U.N. was expected to cope with issues for which it was not designed, meant that there was a dangerous vacuum in world organization, and no political machinery to handle the problems. The answer would be a leadership by unification of the leading ideologies.

Sees Trend to Socialism

Dr. Shih, a Chinese professor of the Dept. of Oriental Studies, said "world political unity was historically inevitable, for while there were formerly 21 different civilizations, there are now, economically speaking, only two, both of which are tending toward socialism."

Public Misunderstand U.N.

The general opinion was expressed that the public misunderstood the purpose for which the U.N.O. was organized. Mr. McGeachy stated that it was designed to exercise discipline among the great powers, based on the assumption that the nations would come to unanimous agreements. Popular pressure forced it into conflict, and gave it an appearance of failure that it does not deserve.

The panel was questioned on several aspects of atomic energy and its uses in peace and war. It was agreed that it has a chance to develop for peaceful ends, but Dr. Wrenshall pointed out that the chief difficulties were that the work is at present subsidized by the army and navy, who screen the results that are published in order to keep secrets from leaking out that would be dangerous in wartime.

On the question of whether the threats of atomic war are minimized, Mr. McGeachy said that the threat holds when one nation monopolizes the secret, but that nations shrink from the use of dangerous weapons when reprisals are possible. Dr. Wrenshall felt that this was incorrect, but that the nation which took the lead in an

Hold Talent Hunt For New Regents Of UC Arts Ball

Details of this year's talent hunt for a King and Queen of the Arts Ball were outlined yesterday by Tom Sloan, Fourth Year President of the U. C. Lit.

Last year's talent hunt was the first ever held and its repetition this year indicates that it will become another U. of T. tradition, Sloan said.

The competition is to choose one man and one girl from the students of all the arts colleges, who show the best entertainment ability. Usually this meant musical ability, but one student last year almost won on the strength of a recitation.

At present three colleges—U. C., Trinity and St. Michael's—have planned preliminaries. Two or three contestants would be chosen at these preliminaries to go on to the semi-finals, slated for U. C.'s Red and White Night, on Wednesday, January 19. There the field would be narrowed down to four finalists, two men and two women. At the Arts Ball two of the four would be chosen as winners.

Sloan said that last year's Queen, Dianna Nesbit, will crown this year's winners. At the time of her victory she was a freshie at U. C.

The Arts Ball will be held on the 27th of this month.

Students Speak On Amalgamation Of WUA, UC Lit.

In 11 days, University College students vote on the issue of amalgamation of the W.U.A. and the U.C. Lit associations. Some of the standard opinions are being expressed today, but generally, the small number who know what the issue means, have definite and succinct replies.

The question of overlapping comes in, says Harry Rasky, social director of the U.C. Lit., when affairs such as the Arts Ball have to be dealt with by separate executives which then have to meet as a joint executive to go over plans together. Most of the activities, according to Joyce Smale, the W.U.A. publicity director, that are handled by the two societies are social and call for co-operative efforts.

A large number of students do not know, they say, enough about the issue to express an opinion. The replies that some might call stereotyped were not lacking. One first-year student backed up his "no amalgamation vote" with this epigram, "Women and men and business don't mix any more than do rum and stale beer."

Hal Rosenthal, publicity director of the U.C. Lit., said that there are no essential differences in the college affairs concerning men and women. Amalgamation would streamline the student government and shaping up is needed.

SEARCH FOR OIL

Mr. Former, Staff Geologist for Imperial Oil, will lecture on "The Search for Oil." Films will supplement the lecture in Wymilwood on Thursday at 8.00 p.m.

NEWMAN CLUB

There will be a Communion breakfast on Sunday after the ten o'clock Mass with the Honorable Mr. Kelley, Minister of Health, as guest speaker.

The UC Story

From Lunatics To Degree Courses

The fact that University College was once a lunatic asylum, and, to add insult to injury, was called the University Lunatic Asylum, will no doubt be a blow to those who point with pride to the historical traditions of their college.

In 1853, U. C. was established, replacing King's College, and it was in 1854 that the government requisitioned the old King's College buildings for the asylum. U. C. was moved to the former medical building, but accommodation was so poor that in 1855 F. W. Cumberland was appointed architect for a new building, on the present site of U.C. The style finally agreed upon would make any exponent of modern architecture shake his slide rule and pull his hair. It was to be a mixture of Norman, Early English, Byzantine and Italian palazzo. To economize, sections of the plans calling for students' seats were erased.

Favorite Tree Sacrificed

The plot was restaked since the original staking would necessarily call for cutting down the Governor-General's favorite elm tree. The corner stone of U. C. was laid on October 8, 1856 by John Langton, and the building was completed in the fall of 1859. At the first convocation in the new buildings, the next year, the number of students graduating was eighteen, a figure comparable to the numbers in the older American Universities.

In 1866 three undergraduates from U. C. lost their lives while serving with the U. of T. company of the Queen's Own Rifles in the Fenian Raids. A memorial window in honor of their sacrifice was placed in the East Hall of U. C.

James Loudon was the first graduate of U. C. to be appointed to the staff in 1867, and he was instrumental in introducing honor classes to U. C. Loudon also established in U. C. the first physical laboratory in Canada.

Shortly after, in 1879, the first undergraduate's paper on the campus, the Blue and White, was edited and published weekly by the men of U. C. and it was replaced by the weekly Varsity.

The Great Fire

In 1884, nine women, the first co-eds, entered the halls of U. C., which at that time was "the" University, containing offices, lecture rooms, and residences. Although not related to this event, six years later a fire almost completely gutted U. C. leaving only the western wing and the walls of the remainder intact. The historical U. C. bell was shattered during this fire.

From the ashes of the fire arose the "Royal College" which now stands as a memorial to those who fought for its constitution, and to the first undergraduates, who disregarding the sneers of the short-sighted residents of Upper Canada, to give the U. of T. its second oldest and most historical college. Many of Canada's great statesmen can look back happily to their undergraduate days at U. C.; the most prominent of whom is our former prime minister, the Right Honourable Mackenzie King.

Up Again!

The U.C. Amalgamation appears to be a crying issue today with no one knowing just what everyone is crying about. The issues as set forth by the joint executive have stressed the speeding up and streamlining of student government. As we see it there certainly is a need for better co-ordination but as to the amalgamation of the W.U.A. and the Men's Lit, that is an entirely different question.

Purely from the technical point of view there are certain activities which are definitely separate. This means that in the constitution which will have to be written, if such an amalgamation is ratified, there will have to be special provisions made for such functions as athletics. A constitution written under most circumstances is very difficult; but one which must be subdivided within itself will certainly cause confusion.

Psychology Helps Mission Religion Aids Stability

By SUSAN BURGESS

Staying at St. Hilda's College during the week of the University Christian Mission, beginning January 16th, will be Miss Dorothy Beattie, U. C. graduate in psychology. Miss Beattie's interest with the mission is in her double capacity as a trained psychologist and an active member of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, Toronto.

She is a tall dark woman in her late thirties. Her black hair, just beginning to gray, is drawn gently into a loose knot of curls behind the head. When she laughs, grey eyes twinkle in an oval face.

Miss Beattie specializes in helping people with problems. "No, not affairs of the heart," she explains to those who ask that question. "I haven't quite the Dorothy Dix flair."

During her stay at St. Hilda's Miss Beattie will lead informal discussion groups and be ready to give personal consultations to those who wish them. To solve the difficulty of choosing her meal companions among those who sit at St. Hilda's nine dining tables, Miss Beattie, with a wry smile, suggested, "You could run a raffle. Buy a ticket on Beattie: five cents for breakfast, ten for lunch, and fifteen for dinner. The funds could go to the University Christian Mission."

Another project is the counselling service she is preparing to set up at St. Mary Magdalene's Church, to be available to anyone who feels its need.

As her first job after her University of Toronto graduate work, Miss Beattie was Superintendent of the Girls' Cottage School in Sweetsburg, P. Q., where she worked with delinquent girls between the ages of 12 and 19. The school called for a psychologist to make its life an opportunity rather than a punishment. Since then Miss Beattie has worked as a consulting psychologist to the Big Sisters and with DVA on psychological research on pre-frontal lobotomies (a brain operation designed to cut out anxiety in acute psycho-neurotic states). "You bore in a couple of holes," she explained "poke in a meat-skewer, saw out the bone, cut out the jigger that causes anxiety."

Concerning her part in the University Christian Mission, Miss Beattie said, "As a psychologist I am keenly aware of the need for security for the full development of the human personality. Although a contingent security, such as a good home, may produce adequate personalities, only the absolute security postulated by religion will release those enormous potentialities which we know to lie dormant."

"Many clinicians have found," Miss Beattie added "that among those coming to them for assistance in emotional problems those with some sort of philosophy of life and particularly those with a definite religious orientation were restored to health more rapidly and more surely."

Must Consider Vote For Amalgamation

University Health Service Used By Women Undergrads

By PAULA ZUMSTEIN

All University women may take advantage of medical examinations and consultations at the Health Service, 43 St. George Street.

Originally organized by Dr. Edith Gordon in 1921 its purpose was to treat and examine women participating in athletics. At first housed in the Lillian Massey building it has subsequently moved to 81 St. George Street and 44 Hoskin Avenue, where it remained until last fall and now to its present and more permanent location.

Founder

Dr. Gordon stayed with the service almost until her death in 1939. At this time Dr. Jean Davey became the acting medical advisor and was joined by Dr. J. McGeahy in 1942. In the same year Dr. Gwen Mulocke became assistant director for women.

The present staff has four members, Dr. F. H. Stewart, Dr. H. H. McKinnon, Dr. Mary Atack and Miss Dorothy Milne, a graduate of the Toronto General Hospital in nursing.

Infirmary

The university informary, 79 St. George Street, serves the entire university with the exception of the Victoria College residents, St. Hilda's College and the School of Law. Miss Forgie, graduate of the Smith Falls Hospital, is on duty in the infirmary and student patients are attended by health service doctors.

Medical Treatment Only

No surgery is performed in the health service and students requiring surgery must choose which hospital they wish to go to. All minor ailments are looked after and five to fifteen students are treated daily. Mondays, during the skiing season are particularly busy with sprained knees and ankles, stiff muscles and bruises. As most city students have a family doctor the majority of women who drop into 43 St. George are from out of town. However, large numbers come in to consult the doctors about private problems varying from house-keeping to love affairs. Last year 2,400 students made appointments for consultations besides 2,200 who had health examinations. X-rays are required for students in first or final years and all those who have been in contact with T.B. are X-rayed each six months for two years.

Assistant Director

Dr. Frances Stewart, graduate of Arts 3T2 and Medicine 3T8, was appointed assistant director of the health service for women in January, 1946. Following graduation, Dr. Stewart interned in the Women's College Hospital for a year and then went to Philadelphia for one year returning to be resident intern in the Women's College Hospital.

In the spring of 1942 Dr. Stewart joined the air force and served in Newfoundland until November, 1945. At present, Dr. Stewart carries on a private practice in the Medical Arts Building as well as spending each afternoon in the health service.

Dr. McKinnon

"I came to Toronto illiterate from the sunny south and had to take a year of arts before I could get into Medicine," Dr. McKinnon said when interviewed yesterday. Graduating in Meds in 1923, Dr. McKinnon interned for a year in the Toronto General and then went to New York and the Bellevue Hospital just to ride through the streets of New York hanging on to a leather thong in the back of the Bellevue ambulance. "It was worth going through medicine," Dr. McKinnon said.

On her return to Canada Dr. McKinnon married Dr. Neil McKinnon, head of the department of Epidemiology and Biometrics and research member of the Connaught Medical Research Laboratories. For three years Dr. McKinnon served on the staff of the Infants Home and later on the board of The Haven. When her husband went overseas in 1939 Dr. McKinnon joined the Farm Division of the Connaught Laboratory until 1943 when she was appointed to the Health Service.

Chinese Missionary

Dr. Mary Atack, the third doctor on the staff, is also a Toronto graduate in medicine, 1930. Interning in the Royal Alexandre Hospital, Edmonton, Dr. Atack returned for a year to the Women's College Hospital. The next year Dr. Atack went to China with the United Church. For four years Dr. Atack practised in North China with Toronto graduate Dr. Bob McClure and then returned to practise in Edmonton. In 1945 Dr. Atack joined the staff of the Health Service on part-time basis.

Up Again!

There will also be the question of whether there should be a co-president or not, and whether the procedure of the new group should be by parliamentary or direct representative means.

All this and much more must be considered when the plebiscite comes before the U.C. students. Perhaps it would be well to remember the Toronto Civic Election in which a proposal brought forth year after year was down as usual. It is true that a direct comparison entirely is not justified as in the former case the preliminary setup is functioning in the Joint Open Meetings which have proved a success. This situation could be continued provided there is no decisive question to be ratified thus splitting the two groups.

Here is the fundamental point as far as the women are concerned, for as long as the present situation exists a compromise at least can be worked out in favour of the women, but if the amalgamation should go through there would be very little chance of the women forcing the issue even to a strong debate if it was against the interests of the men's group. There are nearly twice as many men as women but there are some activities just as vitally important and interesting to the women as the men in which no one judgment should prevail to the exclusion of the other. If a voting system could be arranged to combat this situation, the opposite side might then feel slighted.

Rather than bring forth the idea of amalgamation, it might be better to draw up a possible draft of a constitution which if pleasing to the students would automatically bring about a united U.C. student governing body.

MEMORY TRICKERY

Joey, a talking cockatoo who plays a scene in the J. Arthur Rank comedy "Helter Skelter," could not remember his dialogue this week. Joey insisted on repeating his lines from his last picture, "Christopher Columbus."

VIC'S CORNER

This isn't what you've been waiting for we realize but here it is anyway ... Vic's Corner for another term with all the news about life on the old Strand.

The big item this week is, of course, the fact that 600 tickets have gone on sale for the Vic-At-Home. Everyone at Vic has been hearing about the "Dance of Distinction" that will be staged this year on February 1 at the Palace Pier, but here is a bit more information to fill in the gaps.

The heavy vote on the corsage issue on Friday morning went two to one against corsages. Although the women were about equal in their opinions the men chorused "nix" by a three-to-one count. Ten other individuals who failed for some reason or other to specify their sexual origin were more specific about corsages. They all said NO.

Some of the reasoning and remarks proved quite interesting "Let's use old Christmas trees", "My wife considers it necessary", "No ... unless I get asked, Any nite HY. 3984, Kit," "I think the Social Committee stinks," and "phooey" provide one or two of the more illuminating examples.

Everything possible has been done to improve last year's At-Home. The best available band in Canada will be on hand. The price, which to many seems steep, is as low as the Committee can allow and still break even. The Pier will mean that the dance can be held on one evening at a time much more suitable than the dates set earlier for the Eaton's Auditorium.

Plans are being hatched for an intermission floor show. Those interested should watch the bulletin board for announcements. If you are willing to help, let the Social Committee know via the V.C.U. Office.

The night of the dance there will be buses running from Vic to the Pier and back to Vic after the dance It is necessary for anyone wishing to make use of this service to sign the subscription list in the V C U Office at once in order that a sufficient number of buses may be chartered. It is impossible to provide the service free of charge but the cost will definitely be very reasonable To those without cars this will be a welcome opportunity. The times at which the buses leave will be announced later.

The date for the Acta contest has been extended to January 16. A total of $75 in prizes is being offered for the best contributions in poetry, fiction and article sections. Anyone and everyone is welcome to send in contributions but the editors are particularly anxious to hear from first and second year. Did I hear someone say they could use a few extra bucks for the Vic At-Home?

Just in case you didn't know Ray Tingren who is enrolled in Arts at Vic is now playing hockey with the "Tuh-rahn-tuh Maple Leafs" ... and doing very well

Speaking of hockey we are naturally reminded that the men's hockey teams swing into action this week At present senior and junior Vic both lead their respective groups. The Scarlet and Goldilocks are at it too.

Last week they started off on the proper skate by tying a powerful P H E team If you are interested be at Varsity Arena this Wednesday at 1 p.m. We're not sure whom they play but the game should be interesting regardless ... strictly from an objective hockey point of view, of course.

Although the voice of the male held sway in the corsage vote on Friday, yet the women must have their say. And say it they will next week in the Corner, when we'll be hearing once again from Helen. Drop around.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

1949 Drama Weekend

Marginalia to the two nights:

The UDC policy slowly reaching realization but would like to put in an unheeded word for re-organization into one cohesive dramatic body with college lines forgotten. On present basis, to see is to compare, with the big fellows having it all their (its!) way. UDC wants to give the little fellows, (Wycliffe, et al), a chance; ungrateful, none of them contributed. New proposal: why not forget college spirit, as pointless in the theatre as a derby on an owl, form a single group with the big fellows sharing the wealth and the individual actors among the little fellows finding their chance to get on the stage? One present concomitant evil: unevenness in productions. Inevitable protest: weakening of college drama. Answer: there's always been college drama, there always will be. The UDC does this for the Dominion festival, why not carry it further? As for the shows:

Dark Lady

Conservatory Players, directed by John Howe. GBS's delightful bit of whimsy about Shakespeare pleading for a national theatre. Will (John White) easy, graceful and alive; Elizabeth (Pat Atkinson) had the commanding fire but occasionally lapsed in queenly poise. Enjoyed the pedestal around which Will revolved in best Bard-Memorial tradition.

John Doe

UC Players Guild, directed by Ted Followes. A commonplace theme enlivened by an extremely interesting treatment. Will name no names but cast uniformly excellent, direction sensitive and sure. One awkward note: mishandling of music killed crucial speech, gave stock Hollywood schmaltz.

Fumed Oak

Trinity College, directed by C. W. J. Eliot. Under-rehearsed and sloppily performed, with Bill Hutt, an actor of high standing, losing through Henry; Robin Taylor too nice a girl for horridly genteel Doris; Margaret Martin's Mrs. Rockett convincing but isolated; Jane Niblett's Elsie amusing but unguided.

The Stronger

Victoria College, directed by Dave Gardner. An actress' tour de force of uncertain merit, carried by Eleanor Swan. Admit frankly unable to find basis of evaluation. Play hovers between fantasy and realism but why so is anybody's guess. Seems to have been well played and rehearsed.

Overtones

St. Mike's, directed by Jane McNally. Tiresome battle between egos and ids of two not very interesting matrons. Beautifully staged and cleverly handled by Clarine Jackman et al, but would like to see the ladies with better material.

Hel'o Out There

UC again, directed by John Howe. After third viewing of the piece can still shed a tear over its pathos and intensity. Say it's melodramatic, sentimental and I'm your man but, heaven bless me, I still like it. Mr. Followes, Miss Bocknek, and Mr. House gave us little gems of creation; all thoroughly genuine. Fell to bits at the end—Saroyan in a hurry to clear the stage makes it impossible to have it otherwise—but cannon's roar of large calibre blanks, and extra clumsy handling of dead hero didn't help. Yet all in all a very satisfying production.

We don't like milk, white or chocolate—we do like Coca-Cola.

Recently, the Supreme Court reversed the ban protecting the dairy interests. To the best of our knowledge the dairy interests now have only two protectors: the Province of British Columbia and Hart House, Toronto. You cannot buy oleomargarine in British Columbia; you must buy milk or coffee in Hart House.

It is our opinion that the power of Hart House to restrict the sale of Coca-Cola at any time is ultra-vires. (They can't do it.)

LESS SOUP AND FISH

When the White House recently announced cancellation of the formal winter season because of White House repairs, there was a shudder among Washington rental tailors. Seven big receptions were cancelled. In a good year, at least 20,000 public tuxes, tails and cutaways go aravelling about Washington, often adorning well-known Congressmen, and each time the formal finery comes back to the rack it has earned anywhere from $6 to $8 for the night. The tux renters say the inauguration will have to save their profits this year.

The All Varsity Revue

"All-Varsity Revue" which opened in Hart House Theatre last night was at all times good entertainment and at the many high points, hilarious. I was most impressed by the lively, the good-spirited fun in this show. The jokes were broad and funny, the satires and skits not subtle but full of enthusiasm. Special mention should be made of the excellent dance routines and songs written especially for the show.

The opening scene showed a mythical C. Potts being taken through the Student Union in 1968. These were a bit uneven, but the following "Co-ed Tuck Shop" was much better and set the pace for the rest of the Revue.

A magnificent drunk starred the scene in The Chemistry Club, and he was trailed by two rather . . . well, rather . . . students of the club. Unfortunately, the rest of the skit was too long.

An in-front-of-the-curtain dialogue between two golfers reminded me of the better things of this type at the "Casino". Erwin Pasternak excelled as the "straight man."

The Library scene in pantomime was amusing, especially to those of us bothered by the "quiet" signs in the University library. The satire on a Metropolitan Opera diva by Bob Watson was side-splitting.

The intrepid men of the Explorers' Club were parodied excellently, but it again was too long. The song "Toronto, Toronto" was the high point of the show, I felt. It related the foibles of the city which loves itself.

Both of the scenes from the Spanish Club and the French Club showed the good dancing and chorus work characteristic of the show. Here particularly the costuming and scenery set off the numbers.

Ben Foreman mimicked the styles of well-known jazz singers and made his impersonations both humorous and real. His song, "Vocalist's Blues", was good even without his miming.

A very smooth magician by the name of Michael Roth and a real "chanteuse," Nipper Benson, both gave the most professional performances of the show.

For all the nice things that can be said, there were a number of shortcomings, however. The show was too long itself, and most of the individual scenes were also too long. Besides, some of the skits were collegiate in humor. These are my only reservations because the show was quite excellent. For those who can't get tickets to an evening performance, there will be a Saturday matinee.

Jack Ferguson.

Book Review

Laughter In The Next Room

It is difficult to do justice to Laughter in the Next Room (Macmillan, $4.25), the fourth volume of Sir Osbert Sitwell's autobiography which describes that period of his life which extended from the First Great War to the Second, for it contains so many scenes of high and low comedy in connection with Sir Osbert's father, so many long evocative descriptions of voyages and landscapes, so many minor fascinating characters, so much wit and biting satire whether directed against an unfortunate poet who confessed that he felt "uncomfortably rustic" in the presence of the Sitwells ("I must admit," says Sir Osbert, "that in this case I think he has good grounds for complaint") or this horrid age itself when none of the rulers are gentlemen and when the rule is "the popular reign of piracy." One thing can be grasped however, now that this very spacious Remembrance of Things Past has reached its end, and that is the fact that this is no ordinary romantic autobiography. The emphasis is never placed too strongly on the sorrows and joys of the hero's heart, but rather on the atmosphere of the times in which he lived and the figures surrounding him, especially his father, as they moved in relation to those times.

A great deal indeed of this fourth volume is devoted to the finishing of Sir Osbert's portrait of his father whose fantastic misapprehension of his offspring grew greater as they did. The very title of the book comes from something Sir George complained of when he entertained friends in one room while his sons entertained in another nearby: that there was always more laughter in the next room. When one finishes this book, one has an odd sense of being cheated; one feels that this is a better portrait of Sir George than of his son. This suspicion is confirmed when Sir Osbert admits that he will write two more volumes of autobiography to be published a century after his death when all their "indiscretions may have faded and become discreet."

Still, despite the large and perhaps justifiable amount of time spent on Father, one cannot really complain of too few scenes with the Son in them. We see Sir Osbert throwing his military uniform into the sea at Biarritz, entering the London literary world as a satirical poet, and, along with his brother and sister, always suffering misunderstanding and abuse of his work. Some very interesting portraits of literary figures who were his friends arise:— T. S. Eliot, Gertrude Stein, Aldous Huxley; of musical ones— particularly the young William Walton who was a protege of the Sitwells; of domestic figures— Mrs. Powell, his housekeeper, Mrs. Haynesworth, a caretaker, "certainly she possessed gifts, in addition a special capacity for attracting bats and letting them into one's bedroom at night (in which respect I have never known her equal)" and of his father's butler, Henry Moat.

All through this volume, despite its frequent high spirits, there rings the most terrible despair. As a child Osbert Sitwell was haunted by the beggar-cry of "Rags and Bones!", a seeming prophecy of doom that he sees as having come true in the two great wars of this age. To him the world is at present descending into a pit; it has already gone too far into the Land of Rags and Bones. Laughter in the Next Room ends with a desperate hope that some future, gentler age may receive this memorial to a golden time that died so monstrously beneath "a gigantic totem pole of smoke, surely fated, in the same fashion as the story of the Flood, to become a legend for savage men in the future." The despair is only somewhat tempered by Sir Osbert's belief that art is one of the few things that can survive the coming Age of Darkness.

James Reaney.

Bees To Buzz After Buzzers On Ice Tonight

The Varsity Junior B Hockey squad play host to the St. Mike's Buzzers in their second game of the new year tonight in the Varsity-Arena. The second game of the double header in the Arena will be between the Corner Boys and the Marlboro Juniors. All students showing admit to lecture cards will be admitted to the arena, gratis.

The Junior B circuit at the moment is the closest it has ever been in years. Three teams are tied for the top spot and are the Varsity Juniors, Marlboro Juniors, and the Corner Boys, each with eight points.

St. Mike's Lost Seven

The Varsity and Marlboro squads each have played six games, winning four of them. The other leader, the Corner Boys, played one extra game and have dropped three. The St. Michael's team have had a poor season all the way around. They played seven games and emerged victorious in one. That was when they defeated the Varsity Juniors in their last meting.

The Junior Bees won their first game after the holidays last Tuesday defeating the Corner Boys 4-3. They also played an exhibition game last Friday night with a bigger and heavier squad from UCC and came out on top of the 6-4 score. Playing the way they did in the last two games the Varsity Juniors should easily extend their winning streak tonight.

Howson Will Play

Rich Howson is expected to play with the Juniors tonight. He will, no doubt, use to advantage the knowledge he obtained while playing with the Varsity Senior Blues.

Jack Raftis, another hard fighting man, will be a valuable asset in tonight's game. His team-mate Bill Walter seems to be 'on' in his scoring lately and will be a good man to have around the nets.

Deadlock Breaker

Coach Bill Wade has a powerful little team this year and they have played some fine games.

The games tonight will break up the deadlock for top spot to some extent and what the outcome will be . . . well, be at the arena tonight and see for yourself.

SPORTSWOMAN

HOCKEY

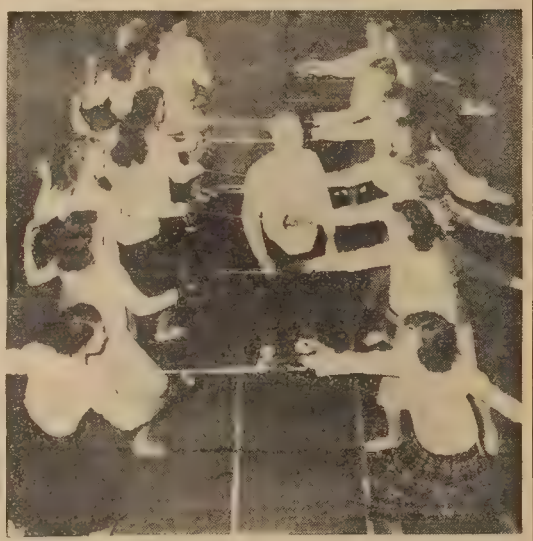
PHE II forged ahead in the last period to take St. Mike's 4-1.

The play was even for the first two periods except for Fizz Ed power play in the middle of the second period which hemmed in the Saints. However, a fighting St. Mike's defense kept PHE from breaking the 1-1 tie.

PHE's first goal, the only one in the opening period, was scored by June Plant on a pass from Dorelle Monahan. St. Mike's Rita Bauer, assisted by Nancy Goetz, put things on an even footing, however, with a scoring shot in the middle of the second. But in the third period the Fizz Edders went on a scoring splurge with goals by "Muggs" Fox, June Bell, and June Cannon.

VIC SPLASH PARTY

Last term, Vic's splash party had a good turnout. Some unsuspected talent was found, particularly in Shirley Gill who won the free style and showed well in the other speed events, and placed third for total points.



The three intercollegiate swimmers from Vic won many of the points. Peggy Quigan was first in individual points, winning the style, ornamental, and backstroke, placing third in the free style. Inna Chuhaldin was second with four seconds and Marion Mulloy was close behind, picking up points in speed events.

Vic hopes to have a good team this year for the interfaculty meet. Those unable to attend the splash party but would like to try for a place on the team should attend the first interfaculty practices.

Hoopla Night

Intermeds Meet YMHA— Tops Among City Seniors

At 7 o'clock Saturday night, the Varsity Intermediates Basketball Team will play its first game of the new year. The opposition will be the high-scoring YMHA Seniors who are at present well in the lead of the city's Senior League. Coach Barry Lowes feels that his squad will have to play heads-up ball to outscore the crafty YMHA boys.

The Intermediate lineup is unchanged until the final decisions are made on the Senior Blue lineup. Al Stevenson, outstanding forward so far this season, will be in there pitching for the Intermediates along with team-mate Doug Wigle.

The Intermediates have had a good deal of practice already this season for the opening game of their league which is scheduled for January 22 here in Toronto against McMaster University. This league includes McMaster, OAC, Western Intermediates, and the Intermediate Blues. A double round-robin schedule will give each team 6 games.

By far the most exciting of the exhibition games, was the one played against the University of Buffalo freshmen. The Intermediate Blues led throughout most of the game, and were four points in the lead with only three minutes of play remaining. Over-anxious guarding gave the Buffalo team seven foul shots, and they missed nary a one to end the game three points up on the disappointed Blues.

Practice sessions since the holidays, and a few scrimmages with the Senior Blues have gone a long way towards ironing the kinks out of the Intermediate squad. The game this weekend should indicate what kind of a showing this Varsity team will make in their league. Remember, game time is Saturday night at 7 o'clock in Hart House gym.

Trinity Wins Ice Tilt From Pre-Meds 4-2

In a hard-fought hockey game yesterday afternoon in the Arena Trinity A defeated Pre-Meds 4-2. This win breaks the tie for top position in Group Three. Before Pre-Meds and Trinity were tied for league leadership with two wins apiece and no losses.

No one scored more than once in the tilt. Waldrop, Pringle, Wells and Howard were the goal-getters for Trinity, while McDonald and Cousins scored for embryo Medicos. Waldrop's goal brings his total to four which puts him near the top of the Intramural scoring race. His teammate, Lenihan, has also scored four goals.

UC in Icy Cellar Tie St. Mike's Two to Two

St. Mike's A and Jr. UC battled to a 2-2 tie yesterday at 1:30 in the Arena. The UC team were fighting to hand over the cellar spot in League Two to the Saints but were only able to match their goals.

Kelly opened up the scoring at 7:55 in the first period by netting a goal for St. Mike's. UC came right back when Dixon tied the score three minutes later and the period ended in a tie.

At 4:35 in the second period, the double blues forged ahead again with a goal by McKillop. UC's Terry tied it up again with only a little over a minute to go in the period. Despite continued efforts by both teams, there were no goals scored during the rest of the game.

Goal-getter Kelly got a penalty for high sticking, and in the second period UC's Gawinski sat on the penalty bench for rough play.

McKay, Haliburton Spark Meds' Victory

By ED. VOIGHT

Jimmy McKay and "Axe" Haliburton brought Meds Firsts from behind to win a close 10-8 decision over U.C. Firsts in the first game of the Dafoe Cup lacrosse finals in Hart House gym yesterday. Second game of this best-of three series will be played tomorrow at 1.00 p.m. Another win for Meds will give them the Dafoe Cup for the second consecutive year.

Meds started off slowly, something rather unusual for them, but with McKay and Haliburton leading the way, put on a spirited second-half drive to subdue the stubborn Artsmen. McKay took a rough going-over from the solid UC checking, getting nicked twice in the face, as well as picking up a charley-horse, but kept coming back for more each time to pop in four goals. Haliburton worked hard to earn the four markers he rang up.

Penalties UC's Downfall

And at that, it was two penalties that brought about UC's downfall. The Red and White crew, led by Bernie and Robb, rang up three goals in the first four minutes of the game, and managed to keep a 6-5 lead at the half.

Ken Robb whipped in another shortly after the break, and UC, now two goals up, looked as if they could go on to upset the ragged-looking Medsmen.

But when referee Gilkinson thumbed off UC defenseman Sterling for slashing, Meds made good use of the odd-man advantage. McKay beat Burns in the UC nets, and just a few seconds after Sterling had returned, Haliburton tied the score at 7-7. A minute later, Haliburton scored on a long bounce shot and Meds had the lead for the first time in the game.

UC Tied it Up

UC came fighting back hard and Bill Korz tied it up again early in the fourth period. Haliburton then fed McKay a lovely pass, and the rugged little centre put Meds back in the lead once more.

A few minutes later, UC incurred their second decisive penalty when Raymond was given two minutes for slashing McKay in the face, and drawing blood. While Raymond was off, Haliburton put the game on ice when he beat Burns from close in, after the UC defense had been decoyed out of position by a smooth Meds passing play. From that point on Meds just ragged the ball.

Bernie and Robb High Scorers

Bernie and Robb each snared three goals for UC, Korz and Raymond racking up singletons to complete UC's scoring. Chambers played well defensively, but his shots, unlike those in the UC Skule semi-final, were miles wide.

Heatherington and Moher split the remaining two Meds goals. Moher racked up his score—Med's second of the game after Heathrington had snared the first—from an almost impossible angle on a corner shot. Mckay and Haliburton were the only further Meds scorers as they ran in eight more between them.

UC Outshot 40-26

UC outplayed Meds in the first half, but only outshot the Doctors by the narrow margin of 14-13. The second-half was an entirely different story as Meds passes began to click and their shots found the target, which gave them a 27-12 advantage in the shots-on-goal column.

Carabins Lead Hockey Race, Blues Second

The 1949 hockey season opens with Ace Bailey's Varsity Blues in second place in the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey League. The vastly improved University of Montreal Carabins lead the league while McGill and Quen's hold down third and fourth spots respectively.

The Blues have beaten McGill 3-1 and the Carabins 5-2 while dropping a 5-3 decision to the latter in their games to date. No longer the weak sister of the league, the powerful Carabins are favoured by some to capture the Queen's Cup, symbol of intercollegiate hockey supremacy, and end Varsity's two-year reign.

However don't treat the Blues too lightly this year. Their loss to the Carabins in Montreal took place the night after their game with the Redmen, and furthermore they have not yet played Queen's, while the Carabins have enjoyed two games with the low-flying tricolor squad.

The badminton tournaments are underway in the colleges and faculties in preparation for the intramural tournament, which is to be played January 24-28. Following it is the Inter-Collegiate tournament on February 11th and 12th, at Western.

St. Hilda's, St. Mike's, University College, Victoria, PHE, Physical Therapy, Occupational Therapy, and School of Nursing are all holding tournaments that have to be completed by January 21st. The top players from these will be the backbone of the Intramural tournament. However entries will not be restricted to winners of the college tournaments, but will be open for all shuttlecock hopefuls.

Last year, St. Hilda's won the intramural Tournament with 17 points, Vic came second, PHE third and UC fourth. The single's championship was won by Jane Mathews, St. Hilda's and the doubles by a team of sisters, Mary and Elizabeth Russell, both at Vic last year, but Elizabeth is in PHE, this year.

McGill University won the Inter-Collegiate championship last year with 9 points and Varsity was just one point behind. Representing Varsity for the single's tournament were Mary Mathews, St. Hilda's and Pat Montgomery, UC now in Fizz Ed. The double's tounament entries were Mary and Elzabeth Russell, Vic.

No Subsidies For Housing Says Winters

Further Dominion government housing subsidies will not be applied for some time, according to Hon. R. H. Winters, Minister of Housing and Reconstruction. Mr. Winters was the speaker at an open meeting of the U. of T. Liberal Association in U. C.'s West Hall yesterday.

"The fundamental problem is to provide additional accommodation," the minister stated. "We do not think subsidies would stimulate building now. We cannot take care of all those who want houses and can buy them, and at our present high economic level all new housing units can be sold."

Not Stressed

Rental housing, though "an outstanding requirement", has not so far been stressed, Mr. Winters explained, because of this high post-war level.

Housing in 1949 may, in the minister's opinion, climb to an all-time high. Approximate figures for 1948 building list 84,000 as the number of completed housing units. As of Jan. 1, 1949, there were 60,000 unfinished units, and the new year's objective can thus be reached even without starting very many more.

"Requirements for housing are being balanced by the government with commercial and industrial expansion. Since the former depends upon the development of the latter to some extent materials and labor as well as capital have to be partially diverted from housing projects."

Land Scarce

In reply to questions directed by Ted Mann, divinity student at Trinity, the speaker said the biggest bottleneck in the whole housing program is the scarcity of available service lands, particularly in urban areas. Mr. Winters denied that municipal, provincial and dominion government agencies were "passing the buck" on the question of service lands for housing.

Other questions from the floor brought statements from the speaker with reference to rental, as distinct from cost, subsidies. He pointed out that the purchase of new homes by those who can afford to buy under federal financial assistance plans makes a lower-priced type of accommodation available to those who need it.

List Difficulties

Difficulties in the way of increased housing were enumerated. Mr. Winters listed shortages of materials and labor, municipal services, difficulties with both labor and management in the building industries as contributing causes of any delays. He emphasized, however, that lack of money was not a difficulty at present and that Canada was making probably the greatest housing progress of all the countries in the world with the possible exception of Sweden.

Mr. Winters, who was first elected to the House of Commons in 1945, obtained his cabinet position onyl recently. He remarked that he regards housing as the most important work under his control. His other interests, as minister of Housing and Reconstruction, include supervision of Ottawa agencies such as the National Film Board.

Veterans Neglected By SAC Ex-Service Group Charges

The University of Toronto, alone of all the 18 Universities participating in the National Conference of Student Veterans, has not paid or committed itself to pay its share of the operating expenses of the Conference for this fiscal year, according to John Gwynne-Timothy, ex-service representative and delegate to the CSV Conference.

When this question of finance was raised at the Kingston Conference this year an assessment was made on the basis of size of different Universities. "Our assessment was therefore considerably less than it would have been on a per capita levy, since the U. of T. has approximately one third of all the student veterans in Canada" he said.

Hogtown

During the course of the discussion, Don French of the University of Saskatchewan, stood up and said, "We have haggled long enough. Our assessment is less than one half of this but we will give you $200." He was followed by the delegate from St. Francis Xavier (with about 50 veterans) who said, "we have just got $75 in our cash box, but it is yours". Ontario Veterinary College, with about five veteran students, pledged $35. Seventeen of the eighteen universities represented, committed funds in excess of their assessments for the financial support of NCSV. "The delegation from the 18th university sat in embarrassed silence, this was the University of Toronto, or in words of an anonymous member from the floor, 'Hogtown'," said Gwynne-Timothy.

Last year the conference was held in Toronto and the SAC spent $814 to finance it. The SAC was re-imbursed to the extent of only $500, (in the absence of an itemized expense account) but payment of the remaining $314 was waived by the SAC, according to Gwynne-Timothy.

$700 Assessment

Varsity's assessment on a per capita basis would amount to approximately $700, but after revision a figure of $288 was arrived at. "This sum, Varsity SAC at present, is not prepared to pay. The Student's Council, which budgets approximately $1,500 for NFCUS apparently does not recognize the same responsibility for NCSV which affects nearly one half of the students of the campus in a more direct and beneficial way than NFCUS," said Fred Umansky, chairman of the Toronto delegation.

Promise Thrills For Big Weekend At Saint Sauveur

Two hundred skiing enthusiasts from the University of Toronto are waxing skis, polishing boots, shaking mothballs out of ski-pants, and buying visored caps to prevent sun and snow glare from the hills of Saint Sauveur in preparation for the S.A.C.-sponsored excursion on the weekend beginning January 28.

The second annual ski-weekend's preparations are rapidly coming to a close with a full complement of 200 students expected to entrain. There are a few berths left for applicants. Most of the skiers, however, are going in the coaches as they feel they miss the fun of an overnight trip if they use berths.

Last year's excursion was so successful that many are making a repeat trip this year. Nestled in the heart of the Laurentians about fifty miles from Montreal, St. Sauveur is a skier's paradise which offers thrills and spills aplenty to all skiers—expert and learner alike.

This is the only ski weekend for 1949 that has been planned and sponsored by the S.A.C.

Compton Says Scientific Method Basis Of Culture

Convocation Hall was filled to capacity last night as Karl T. Compton, President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, delivered the Second Wallberg Memorial lecture. He spoke on the Scientist and the Enginer.

Dr. Compton stressed the timeliness of his topic, "we live in an age of science. I do not say an age of technology, for every age has been an age of technology. We recognize this when we describe past civilizations as the stone age, the bronze age, and the age of steam or steel, thus admitting that the age of civilization is determined by the tools at man's disposal, in other words by his technology."

Modern Concept

Engineering, Dr. Compton defined as the art of designing, producing and using materials as efficiently as possible. He cited technical inventions like the wheel, the loom, the lever, the forge, the pump, the arch and the printing press as examples of man's ingenious efforts to improve his condition and increase his effectiveness. Science, according to the head of M.I.T., unlike invention and technical skill, is a relatively modern concept. "It required hundreds of thousands of years for man to evolve the experimental, or scientific method."

The speaker traced the origin of science and engineering in mythology then passed into the world of reality to tell of the works of Archimedes, whom he rated as one of the outstanding scientists and engineers of the early historical era. Dr. Compton told of the work of Archimedes in his work on hydrostatics and the lever and how he used the scientific method of observation, experimentation and quantitative formulation of relationships.

"The scientific method is not really a spontaneous and instinctive intellectual process. It has been achieved by a long and arduous effort and experimentation with various philosophies and ideologies. It was invented, and it has developed and become a basic element of our culture, because it

Guest Speaker

Ernest MacMillan To Address Meds

Sir Ernest MacMillan, Dean of the Faculty of Music of the University of Toronto and conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, will speak to the Medical Arts and Letters Club this afternoon at 5:00 p.m. in the Banting Institute. His subject will be "Anatomy of Music".

A graduate of the University of Toronto, he received his B.A. in Modern History.

During World War I, he served in the Canadian army. He was taken prisoner and while interned in prison camp he wrote the music for his doctor's degree. He obtained his degree as a Doctor of Music from Oxford University in 1918.

Radio Workshop Will Open Today In SPS Building

A big step in the development of campus radio is scheduled to take place this afternon when student dignitaries will participate in the ceremonious opening of a radio workshop studio.

The workshop, housed in Room 32 of the old Engineering building, will be officially opened at 4 p.m. and it is hoped that President Sidney Smith will be present to make the first official recording on a new tape recorder. SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy and other SAC members will take part in the ceremonies.

The new tape recorder, made possible by an SAC grant, was built by members of the Electrical Club under the direction of Oscar Halina, IV SPS.

Peter Dobell, IV Trinity, Director of Programs, is the man chiefly responsible for the new studio. "It's a big step ahead for the radio committee," said Dobell. "It will facilitate the practical work for the courses offered under the radio workshop and will help in the selection of talent on the campus to ensure top-notch radio shows. We hope it will eventually mean the establishment of a radio studio on the campus and maybe Varsity's own program in the future."

Radio committee officials have extended invitation to all students to attend. "Since student money has been spent on it, it would be well worth their while to come and take a look at it", said one official.

Job In Pakistan Awaits Engineer U of T Graduate

Thirty students met at the clock in the Union Station on the eve of January 4 to see their friend Huda off for Pakistan. Huda met the occasion in the form of presenting each with a packet containing a candy and an Anna, a tiny Indian coin.

Mirza Shams-Ul Huda, a graduate in Engineering of Calcutta U., is one of the fifteen Moslem and forty Hindu students who have come to the U of T since 1944 on scholarships sponsored by the India Post War Development Scheme. These students with the exception of those awarded the caste scholarships for untouchables, are under obligation to work for their respective governments for a period of five years after their return. They are released from this bond only if the government cannot absorb them in work for which their training adapts them within three months after their return. Altogether 1,500 students have come to this continent for post-graduate training.

M. C. Das, who, like Huda, received his M.A.Sc. in Applied Science in Civil Engineering here, came under this special government scholarship founded by Dr. Ambadkar, the champion of the untouchables.

Beside making friends during their sojourn here since graduation, Huda and Das have utilized their time by gaining practical experience with the C.N.R., C.P.R. and

Vic Initiates New System To Give Athletic Colors

A motion to establish a new system for the distribution of men's athletic colors at Victoria College was introduced to the Victoria College Assembly at its meeting Monday in Alumnae Hall.

In outlining the reasons for the change, the president of the Men's Athletics, R. McKimm, stated that the old point system was much too cumbersome and detailed. The new arrangement will provide points for specific activities in the various sports and on championship teams. The awards earned will be presented formally at the athletic banquet.

Keith Davey, president of the V.C.U. announced that the Co-ed Common Room would be officially opened this coming Friday. The room, which will be under the jurisdiction of the College authorities and not the V.C.U., will be open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. during week days, Davey said.

A committee headed by Gary Carl will begin their weekly entertainment programs in the new Co-ed Room in the near future. The entertainment programs will take place during the noon hour on Fridays.

The ban on smoking in the room is to be discussed with Dr. Brown, Davey said.

Radio Grows

Radio, a student function of increasing importance, will be given a considerable boost this afternoon when radio committee officials will open the first radio workshop studio on the campus.

Although interest in radio has been increasing during the past few years, students have continually been hampered by the lack of any permanent structure or equipment. Before the setting-up of a radio committee by the SAC last year, radio activities at the University suffered because of the transient and sporadic nature of poor organization.

Since last year when continuity was assured by the formation of a permanent SAC radio committee, the growth of campus radio has been steady. The opening of a radio workshop studio today marks the first successful attempt to provide a permanent site for radio activities. Although the facilities are certainly not elaborate and much work still remains before a well-equipped studio is erected, it is a milestone in the development of campus radio.

This university is still lagging far behind comparable American institutions which are far more radio-conscious, but today's inaugural should help to pave the way for greater student participation in radio affairs.

Movie Review

Last Days Of Pompeii

"Gigantic Wonder Show!" scream the press-agents, and that's about it. From the catacombs of filmland the Victoria and Nortown have exhumed "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "She" and far be it from me to deny that it's thrilling to see the terror-mad mobs of the world's wickedest city boiling to death in the sea of doom, or the last days of the indestructible "She". However a cursory glance at the ads leads me to suspect that either the cutters have gypped us or the ad men are imagining things: missing—one flood of doom, one beauty auction, crowds of dancing slave girls.

The good thing about these old films is their brazen lack of sophistication; with unabashed showmanship they throw in everything including the kitchen sink.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" (which carefully points out that it is not the Lytton novel except for the discriptions of Pompeii) covers a good bit of territory, including the Crucifixion, following the career of an embittered plebeian and his rise to prominence as Marcus the Butcher, procurer of victims for the Arena. The story builds to a considerable pitch when he eventually discovers his son billed as the feature attraction in the day's massacre. The end of Pompeii is just about the most spectacular thing ever filmed, and what with Vesuvius and the plot blowing their tops simultaneously the climax is genuinely terrific. Basil Rathbone has an impressive bit in this as the unhappy procurator of Judea.

"She" is a film that could have been something but readers of Sir Rider Haggard's prodigious romance of reincarnation and immortality will find the movie little better than a ninety-minute serial.

However Max Steiner's weirdly sensational score, some colossal sets, and Helen Gahagan as "She" occasionally get away from the others long enough to get into the spirit of the thing.

Panns Forms Committee

The U. of T. campus was astounded by the announcement this morning that Joe Panns, eminent campus administrator, had formed a committee.

Questioned about the move, Panns said he had not yet decided just what the committee was for but felt he could dig up something for them to do in the very near future.

"Things must be organized in this fashion if anything is to be done," Panns said, in also announcing that this was only the beginning. "Soon I hope to have everyone on the campus on a committee of some sort."

Asked for a description of the tasks these committees would face and an outline of the organization set-up, Panns replied thus: "For any committee to function as a vibrant, living body, the chairman must be in a position to liaison with the higher-ups and know the full score so that he can more ably tee up the activities of his particular committee."

"To give you an example," Panns said, "suppose I was to organize a sing-song. Consider the jobs to be done. They include arranging for a hall. We would need a committee for that; or handing out song sheets; we would need a committee for that, or sweeping up afterwards; we'd need another committee for that. Then there are minor jobs like turning the page for the song leader, for which a three- or four-man committee would suffice.

"This committee idea," he continued, "is a thing we should exploit to the utmost. Each committee chairman would liaison with the general chairman through two other committees who would act as intermediaries to solve minor problems. For instance, suppose I want to organize a Smoker. I set up the committees in charge of the big jobs such as place to hold it, advertising, etc. Each member of these committees chairmans his own committee for each special job. For example, the members of the smokes committee head committees of their own handling cigarettes, cigars, matches, ashtrays, etc.

"Or take publicity. The members of the general publicity committee have committees of their own to handle page one of The Varsity, page two of The Varsity, posters in U.C. Rotunda, etc. Each chairman of course liaisons with the advertising committee to be kept in the picture. We don't want to get into a shlomazle."

Panns estimated it would take another two weeks before he could get the system described above working. "I haven't come close to running out of volunteers for committees," he said as he twisted the arm of a 5'2" freshman who happened to be standing nearby.

"And the beauty of the whole thing," Panns concluded, "is that I, as grand chairman of the whole works, can sit back on my back and let everyone else do the work."

Ajax Suffers Two Defeats In First Athletic Night Basketball

The first Ajax Athletic Night for 49 was highlighted by two basketball games. The first, between an Ajax inter-residence all star team and Oshawa Collegiate, resulted in a defeat for Ajax by a score of 37 to 36. Oshawa gained a lead of 9 points in the early part of the game, but with the entrance of four pretty cheerleaders from the Oshawa Collegiate, the Jaxmen played inspired basketball. The outcome hung in balance most of the game with no more than a two point difference in the scores; then in the last few seconds of play, Gredge of Oshawa moved in to sink the winning basket, to end the game with a score of 37-36.

The second and main event was the game between the Toronto Blues and the Ajax inter-faculty team, where the Blues won a hard fought game over Ajax by 72-51. The Jaxmen opened the game by scoring the first basket and throughout the play, their pressing attacks kept the Blues plenty worried and spectators on the edge of their chairs. The half-time core was 33-28 for the Blues.

At this time, Jim Follwell presented the Dean Young Pennant to Mike Nagata who received it on behalf of the commuter's team.

In the closing minutes of the second half, the Ajax team began to tire and the Blues sank about 12 points without a reply from Ajax.

Toronto: Pettinger (25), Stockman (8), Volpe (8), Tyndall (6), McManus (6), La Chance, Zeaton (6).

Ajax: Lawson (10), Willsie (10), Wilson (10), Corcoran (8), Atkinson (9), Braithwaite (3), McCagherty (1).

works—because we have found it to be the most effective process for enabling us to understand and take advantage of the forces and materials of nature. Conceivably, just as it was won by intelligent effort, it could also be lost by foolish failure to maintain the intellectual integrity and educational discipline on which it is based."

Anti-Progress Factors

The speaker pointed to contemporary events which might undermine the progress of science and the engineer. He cited anti-evolution trials in Kentucky, a national attempt in Germany to discredit all scientific progress made by Jews, and recent imposition by party line to judge the scientific work of Russian geneticists.

Tying in engineering and economics, Dr. Compton said, "An engineer does with one dollar what any fool can do with two." Concluding the address, the speaker discussed some of the problems and opportunities which face the engineer and the scientist. He stressed a creative attitude as being vital, and sounded the warning note that science and engineering must accept responsibilities and justify public faith.

UC, it's this way...

January 12th already! .. but it's our first opportunity to wish all you UC'ers a very Happy New Year. ... Happy or not, it's going to be a busy new year at least.

Were you rather skeptical that anything could be more fun than New Year's Eve? And were you sure that nothing could possibly be more exciting than a Montreal week-end? Bet you've changed your mind now that you know all those posters 'round the college were referring to the Arts Ball. For what could be more fun or more exciting than dancing to smooth music by Mart Kenney and his orchestra and The Stardusters, than listening to Oscar Peterson and his trio, than being entertained by the finalists in the Arts Talent Search, than witnessing the crowning of the King and Queen of Arts. ... Only the Arts Ball could give you all this. It's UC's biggest affair of the year so, fellas, date your woman early! Place: Royal York Hotel. Date—Thursday, Jan 27 Dress—Semi-formal and NO CORSAGES.

King and Queen of Arts. Wonder who they will be this year. The Arts Talent Search is an effort to find among the arts colleges on the campus, two people worthy of bearing these titles. Could be YOU. Each college is conducting its own preliminaries and semi-finals will be held at the Red and White Night next Wednesday, Jan 19, in the COTC Drill Hall. UC's preliminaries are being held today in the Women's Union from 2.30-4.30 so all you aspiring Carusos, Swarthouts and Menuhins and what have you—this is your last call.

Jan. 19 is not only the date of a gigantic Red and White Night — it's also the date of a Joint Open Meeting of the Lit and WUA the second of the session. Once again it's a last call this time for men and women of the college to get together and thrash out the pros and cons of AMALGAMATION. Voting on the question will begin the next day, Jan. 20, and continue through Jan. 21 .. The topic of debate at the UC Parliament on Tuesday, Jan 18 will also concern amalgamation. It will be another opportunity for you to learn what the question is all about. Be on hand at 4 p.m. in the J.C.R. ... Most of you have read the statement in Friday's Varsity by Presidents Ralph Campbell and Mary Innis, and the article arguing against amalgamation in Monday's Varsity. You'll see arguments favouring amalgamation in Friday's Varsity and more controversial articles next week. Read these carefully. Think about them and then cast your vote. On the ballot you will be asked the following questions. Decide before Jan. 20 how you will answer them.

1. Do you approve of amalgamation of the UC Lit and WUA in principle?
   If "yes" please answer the following:
2. a) Should all offices be open to men and women?
   b) Should some offices be open exclusively to men and some to women?
3. If some offices are assigned exclusively to men and some to women,
   a) Should men vote only for men and women only for women?
   b) Should men and women vote for all offices?
4. For each position
   a) Should there be co-presidents and co-directors (one man and one woman)?
   b) Should there be single offices only?
5. a) Should the men's athletic board and the women's athletic board be distinct from the amalgamated society?
   b) Should the men's athletic board and women's athletic board be responsible to the amalgamated society?
6. a) Should there be direct representation as in the present system?
   b) Should there be indirect representation through some sort of Parliament?

Oops! ... almost forgot to tell you .. that Joint Open Meeting is early in the evening of Jan. 19 and will be over in lots of time for you to hurry on up from the J.C.R to Red and White Night, which this time will be open to all the Arts Colleges. This is where and when the first tickets for the Arts Ball go on sale. So don't forget that A-T-L card and those few dollars for the ticket, mister.

Coming up this Friday at 4 p.m. is another of UC's successful T-Dances ... J.C.R. of course. ... Need we say more?

Each year UC men and women derive a great deal of enjoyment and benefit from participating in impromptu debates. The Robbette Debates for men begin on Jan 17 and the Portia Debates for women on Jan. 24. Rules of entry are the same for both ... just find a partner in your year and submit your name ... the men to the Lit office, and women on posters they'll find around the college. Entrants will be notified when and where they are to debate.

The UC women's badminton tournament began yesterday and is being played at St. Paul's Church courts on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 1.30-4 p.m. Players are asked to consult the draw-sheet in the Union and play according to schedule, as the tournament must be played off in time to pick a UC team for the interfaculty tournament.

See you here next week .. and until then ... be thinking about amalgamation.

Bees Stay On Top Drop Mikemen 5-4 In Fast Contest

By EDWARD SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Junior B hockey squad added another victory in the new year last night as they defeated the St. Michael's Buzzers 5-4 in the Varsity Arena. This leaves Varsity deadlocked for top spot with the winner of the game between the Corner Boys and Marlboro Juniors which was not known at the time of going to press. The loss is the seventh for the Buzzers and firmly embeds them in the league cellar.

The game opened at a fast clip and was kept that way throughout the game. The rough stuff was kept down to a minimum and very few good body-checks were dished out. Six minor penalties were given in the game, four of them going to the Blue and White squad.

Bees Open Scoring

Varsity opened the scoring at the four-minute mark with Jack Raftis scoring after Al Conboy passed out his own rebound.

Mikilson of the Buzzers took a pass from Ingolsby and scored on Leuty to tie the score at 9:45. Arrowsmith put Varsity ahead by a goal after he scored on a pass from Rich Howson.

Did They Use 7-Up?

Both teams came back fresh in the second stanza and played a very close checking game. The goal-tenders also had a busy fifteen minutes this period and were called upon to save the play many times. With four minutes left to play in this frame St. Mike's again tied the score when Sabourin passed to his teammate, Fitzhenry, who fired a screened shot at Leuty and scored. Four penalties were given out in this period.

The third period was thrown wide open with five goals being scored. Fox received a pass from defenceman Porky MacDougall and scored on the Irish netminder, McCellan. St. Mike's tied the game for the third time as the three-man effort of Mikilson, Poisvy, and Harrison paid off with a goal, Harrison doing the honors.

Varsity Stays Ahead

The seventh goal by Holmes put Varsity ahead and they stayed there for the rest of the game.

Line-ups:—
Varsity Juniors:—Goal, Leuty; defence, MacDougall, Clement; centre, Howson; wings, Arrowsmith, Vernon; alternates, Raftis, Holmes, Conboy, Walters, Sinclair, Fox, Prendergast, Hyde, Milne.
St. Mike's Buzzers — Goal, McCellan; defence, Poisvy, Hall; centre, Sabourin; wings, Roy, Stock; alternates, Harrison, Sanford, Ingolsby, Mikilson, Elliot, Fitzhenry.

Indoor Track Draws Fifty

The first indoor track meet of the 1948-49 season attracted 50 entries in two events—the half-mile and the 50 yard dash. Two of the more energetic of the runners, Hryshko, U.C., and Dashwood, Trin., placed in both the events.

The half-mile event was won by Freshman Paul Forestall, St. Mike's, who hit the finish line in 2.06.8. Two seconds later, John Hryshko, U.C., sped across the line. Also in the race were 22 other speed merchants.

W. G. Pitman, Trin., proved the best of the speedsters in the 50-yard dash when he raced in front of 28 aspirants to finish in 5.6 seconds. The second place in this event was taken by W. N. Davis, St. Mike's.

1-2-mile—1, Forestall, St. Mike's, 2.06.8; 2, Hryshko, U.C., 2.08.5; 3, Baird, R., Meds, 2.09; 4, Dashwood, Trin., 2.11.8; 5, McCurry, Dents, 2.13.2.

50-yard dash—1, Pitman, Trin., 5.6; 2, Davis, St. Mike's, 5.7; Dashwood, Trin., 5.8; 4, Hryshko, U.C., 5.9.

Trin. And PHE Cagers Lose To SPS Squads

Lafontaine scored 12 points to lead the SPS Thirds to a 24-22 victory over Trinity A yesterday in the Hart House big gym in a major league basketball game. Lemon of SPS followed up with six points, Trower and Bryce with two points each, and Stowe and Shuster with one each.

On the Trinity team, Gaunt and McVittie headed the offence with seven points each. The remaining eight points which lessened the defeat of Trinity were evenly divided between Rogers and Brewer.

In another game, Sr. SPS wrestled with PHE I to come up with a 25-23 victory. On the winning team, McCarthy took top honors, scoring six points, followed by Pogontcheff with five points and Fletcher with four. Latinivitch upped the score by three, Ehring, Mcbaw, and Smith by two points each, and Fitch by one.

Gordon and Strom for PHE put up a strong defence by scoring six points each. Gayman helped even the score with five points, Genise with four, and Kettle with two.

SAC PASSES REPORT ON UNION

SAC Radio Committee Unveils Workshop

Open New Studio With Dedication Of Tape Machine

"Toronto is well on its way to becoming one of the foremost student radio centres among the universities of Canada," said Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, SAC president, at the dedication ceremony of a new tape recorder in the Radio Workshop yesterday. The machine has been installed in the workshop's new studio in Room 32 of the Electrical Building.

"This is the first piece of student-owned radio equipment at the University," Peter Dobell, Director of Programs, pointed out. "It was built in five days by Oscar Halina, Hugh Gale, Hank Flynn, Bob Fletcher, and Don Fairley, all fourth year Electrical students, during their Christmas holidays."

The actual cost of the machine was $250 but Dobell estimated its commercial value at well over $500.

Campus Rehearsals

The purpose of the new recording unit is to enable casting and rehearsing of the radio broadcasts to be made right on the campus. Training will be provided for all who lack radio experience, especially musicians who are unable to broadcast on the air because of union regulations. It will also be possible to record sound effects for the productions.

Iron filings painted on the tape produce the sounds by magnetic impulses when the recording is played back. The tape runs for 30 minutes and can be re-used many times.

"Letters have been received from professors at Harvard and many other universities, requesting copies of scripts used on Varsity broadcasts. Several high radio officials have called our broadcasts the best student radio shows in Canada," Gwynne-Timothy pointed out. "This amount of progress made in less than one year is indicative of the work that can be accomplished by Varsity Radio."

Hope To Lead

Paul Fauteux, Radio Commissioner, expressed the hope that U of T would soon head all other universities in the radio field. Mr. Tracy, head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, has arranged for the use of the room by the Radio Committee Mon. and Wed. at 4, and Tues. at 5 p.m.

The speeches were played back

Guest Speaker

Talks At Paris Pearson's Theme

The International Relations Club will be addressed by Lester B. Pearson on the "Sidelights and Highlights of the Paris Conference, nad the Atlantic Pact," at 4:15 in the Women's Union, Friday.

'Mike' Pearson has served on the UN for Canada since 1945 and has also had experience as 1st Secretary of the Department of External Affairs and as Assistant Under Secretary and later as Under Secretary of State for External Affairs. Between 1944 and 1946 he was Ambassador to the U.S. On the Commission on Food and Agriculture in 1945 he helped draw up a long-term policy for agricultural recovery and at Princeton two years later he voiced his protest and disapproval of the veto.

Graduating from Vic in history and taking colours in lacrosse and hockey in 1919, he went into the RFC where his services were cut short, however, by a crash which led to his being invalided out.

He has specialized in Pan-American relations and far Eastern affairs and despite his many activities has found time to build up for himself a library of honorary letters after his name from Yale, Rochester, New York and Toronto.

SAC Approves of Proposals For Co-ed Union Building; Raps Criticism of Council

Motion For Grant To Veteran Group Held Over By SAC

The Students' Administrative Council last night tabled an Ex-Service Committee motion calling for the payment of U of T dues to the National Conference of Student Veterans. Council voted to defer discussion of payment of its 1948-49 dues until an NCSV financial statement is presented.

Based On 25c A Head

Ex-Service Committee chairman Bob Calvert explained the assessment of $288 was based on a per capita levy of 6 cents per veteran at this university and other large universities. Small universities were assessed 25 cents per veteran. He pointed out that the University's assessment was actually $438 but NCSV has lopped off $150 in recognition of last year's hospitality when Toronto played host to the conference.

A debt of $314 owing by NCSV to the University of Toronto was written off by Varsity last year after NCSV failed to pay the debt. Calvert explained the debt had been the result of non-payment of dues by the Universities of British Columbia and Western Ontario.

Raps Story In Paper

U.C. Representative Joe Potts sharply criticized statements of ex-service committee officials reported in yesterday's issue of The Varsity. The statements implied the SAC was neglecting student veterans. "The remarks made were extremely irresponsible" Potts charged.

He asserted SAC facilities had aided student veterans. "The Housing Service, the Employment Service, SAC loans, and other facilities have done much for ex-service students," he said. Potts pointed out that although the SAC last fall had refused a budget allowance for the ex-service committee, arrangements had been made whereby the ex-service committee could — at any

Student Vets To Be Paid Tomorrow

Pay day for veteran students on allowances from the Department of Veteran's Affairs will be held on Friday, January 14, an official of the D.V.A. said yesterday.

There has been no change in the pay points since the last distribution of cheques. Paymasters will be at their appointed places in the various colleges and faculties during the same hours as the last pay day, he said.

Debates' Contest Entries Welcome

The final date for applications for those wishing to take part in the Robinette Debates of this year will be Friday, Jan. 14, Jim Cairns, Literary director of the University College Literary Executive, said yesterday.

Cairns said a considerable number of entries had been received but more would be welcome. More teams from the first and second years were desired, he said.

Among the entries already received is one from Jack Hoolihan and Benk Shik, winners of last year's Robinette Debates. They are both confident that they can repeat the performance this year.

U. OF ILLINOIS

University of Illinois announces graduate fellowships providing seven hundred to one thousand dollars with exemption from fees and tuition. Applications must be in by February 15th. Theatre, Lounges And Radio Studio In Union Project Facilities ranging from a theatre auditorium to a cleaning closet will be included in the new student union building, according to an interim report approved by the SAC last night.

The report, prepared by SAC president Gordon Gwynne-Timothy and SAC Chairman, Dr. P. G. Ashmore, provides for a total building area of 66,000 square feet at an estimated cost of $.94,000 for the whole project. "The building will be a living memorial to the University's war dead," said President Gwynne-Timothy.

An attempt is being made to include in the new building space for all the various campus activities. It will house the various offices of the Student Administrative Council from the president's office to the general office. The Alumni Society will also have space for their various activities in the proposed building.

The Varsity, presently located in the basement of University College, will be allocated space for a News Room, an Editor's Office and an extra office. Torontonensis is also included in the project, with a proof-reading room and a layout office.

An essential part of the Union will be the projected theatre auditorium with a seating capacity of 750 people. A completely equipped Radio Studio with control room, announcing room, and library is also included under the Union project.

Plans for the food areas in the building are placed at a minimum requirement necessary to a university of 10,000 along with those facilities that already exist. The main area will be a 9000-sq. ft. cafeteria with a seating capacity of 400 people. The rest of the space will be taken by kitchen facilities, a small private dining-room, a coffee shop for 100 with self-service counter, a staff rest-room and a Dietitian's Office.

The projected building provides for an impressive entrance lobby with an information desk. Supervision of the whole Union will be conducted from this information desk which could also serve as ticket office. The report also recommends three lounge areas so partitioned that they could be readily converted into dance halls. The main lounge will be co-educational and the other will be for men and women exclusively. The homeless Carnegie Record Collection will be found a permanent place in the new Union building.

The committee recommends in the report that there be a large workshop included in the plans. This workshop could be used in the making of scenery for the various college shows.

The Committee also prepared reports on various facilities which have been rejected from the plans for the present. The report on these will serve as a basis for future expansion. If and when these plans are followed, the additions to the Union will take the form of a bank, a post office, a concert hall, a large ballroom, a billiard room, bowling alleys, a valet service, a beauty shop and various other activities.

Behind The News

"I Made Custard For His Lunch"

By HARRY RASKY

Philosopher, nursemaid, and executive: this is Dave Scollick—caretaker extraordinary.

To the ordinary student who makes the U.C. rotunda his habitat Dave may seem to be a heartless individual. Many is the co-ed who looks twice before taking a puff from a delicately-held cigarette. To them Dave represents a one man law-and-firefighting force. In short, he is the one who helps keep the rotunda clean for the dean.

Behind the walls of his private office Dave changes his iron expression, lowers his voice, lights a roll-your-own cigarette and speaks comfortably. With a broad Scotch accent, matched only by the width of his smile he is willing to speak of many things. His topics range from the story of his life to racial discrimination.

Born in Scotland a half-century ago ("I don't look that old") he was a coal miner by occupation. It was twenty years ago when he began his caretaking career at the University. Checkerboarding across the campus, his youth made him move from the old Botany building, to the Banting institute; the museum, to the University residences and finally to his present place of work—University College.

He can't recall anybody trying to bring a horse into the residences but he recalls one time when a number of undergraduates tried to bring a Baby Austin into the common room at Easthouse. ("They never did quite get it all the way in.")

One of his prize examples of efficiency was 'Operation Hollwood'. Shortly after the war it was decided to move the WRENS who were staying in Hollwood House out, and move some students in. "At two on Thursday there were 100 WRENS in the residence, and by six o'clock the next night the place was full of students. There were no WRENS left over."

A caretaker, as Dave will be glad to explain, has to be able to do most anything. Probably his most unusual task, in or out of the line of duty, was acting as a nurse for a sick student in residence. ("I made custards for his lunch".) The student had refused to go to a hospital and Dave was there with thermometer and hot-water bottle.

As interesting as the man himself are the items to be found scattered about the office and desk of the modern Janus. One of his many functions is the collecting of local lost and found articles. They are mostly books and buttons. The books range from Aristotle to the Areopagitica. ("If W. A. Beverly, II Pre-meds will call in, he will find a very expensive medical volume waiting for him). There are buttons of all descriptions and sizes, even a Truman button ("I found it after the election).

Odd gloves and left-hand galoshes are piled about the shelves. Signet rings, but no wedding rings, adorn his drawers. If the owner of a set of car keys will claim them he may be able to drive his car home. The engineers have left their share in the poor man's pot-pourri. A very large slide rule is now acting as Dave's paperweight.

A careless student once threw a match into a bucket of wax, but outside of that there have been no major fires that Dave has noticed. To keep the college clean, he has a staff of six men and five women. They work by day and night.

"You know" said Dave, stroking a letter-opener in a very philosophic manner, "You get to know how to speak to students. People are the same in all walks of life. In fact, in my job, I mix with all races, creeds and classes. I used to attend Jewish lodge meetings. No, I didn't learn to speak Jewish."

During the course of our interview, the dutiful Dave had requests to change a bulb, find a watch, look for a pen and "find the principal's office".

We left his office and lit a cigarette. A hard Scottish voice called after us, "No smoking in the rotunda."

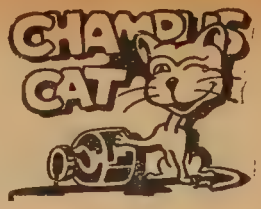
Time For A Change

One of the perennial sources of dispute between students and University officials is the ruling which denies University students the right to supervise their own affairs.

Almost every year student groups make some attempt to achieve some independence in their own affairs. For years The Varsity has printed letters and editorials urging that student organizations be entrusted with the responsibility for maintaining student discipline. But so far, nothing has been done.

Under the University Act, which authorized the establishment of the University and its component parts, responsibility for "the life and conduct" of the students is given to University authorities. And because students have been given no voice in the regulation of their own affairs, ill-feeling has often arisen.



Three years ago the University group responsible for student discipline, the Caput, forbade the use of sound trucks, the staging of beauty contests, and made compulsory the censorship of campus theatrical productions. The edict may have been a desirable one but students were never given any good reason for it.

More recently, just before the arrival of the Dean of Canterbury last fall, a Caput regulation was introduced banning the use of University buildings for guest speakers during lecture hours. Again, the ruling may have been a desirable one but, coming at a time when the dean's proposed visit was a controversial subject, it created a certain amount of bad feeling. Some students felt the Caput had resorted to subterfuge to avoid an embarrassing situation, and, since no student group was consulted before the decision was made, that impression has still lingered.

Two years ago the Students' Administrative Council requested that two student representatives be allowed to sit on the Caput. The request was turned down on the grounds that such an arrangement was impossible under existing regulations. The regulations were apparently so iron-clad that University officials felt the effort involved in changing them would be too great. Or else they considered a change unnecessary.

It should be fairly obvious to anyone that more willing co-operation could be forthcoming from the student body if it were allowed some voice in decisions affecting undergraduate activities.

Apparently University officials refuse to recognize the obvious.

Advice To Freshmen

(Ed. note—although it is a little late in the year for such a presentation, the editors feel that the facts set out below were bound to leak out sooner or later. Apologies are tendered senior students.)

The day when the blase fourth year man sneers at the bumbling freshman, steals his girl at dances and peers down his nose when asked for advice are coming to an end. By following a few simple directions, the freshman student can find himself accepted by the senior students just as if he had been going to university for several years.

Rules for freshmen are as follows:

1. Be debonaire—although a sneer is an asset, it should be masked as much as possible by a gay smile. Do not raise the voice and strive for an English accent (don't overdo this, however). If you can grow a moustache, do so.
2. Be debonaire especially around the ladies. That is where it counts.
3. If at all possible, try to blow smoke through your nose now and then. Also, make a point of leaning well back when exhaling.
4. Keep your pants pressed.
5. Beware of liquor. Buy only the best brands.
6. For pity's sake, comb your hair.
7. Do not overdo your studies. Nothing is more noticeable to the experienced university man or woman than a freshman lugging around a lot of books.
8. Tuck in your slide rule. It is not a symbol of superiority. Any fool can work one with a little practice.

Special problems of course will arise wherein special advice is appropriate. These include the following:

1. Come-single, go-home-double dance: When asked your course and year, make a clean breast of it, but act as if you have been around in spite of the fact that you are a freshman. There are several ways of doing this—speaking from the bottom of the throat, nodding as if in greeting to passing seniors who have their backs turned, or muttering such things as "nothing like the Waldorf Astoria Ballroom", etc.
2. Taking notes in class—if at all possible, avoid taking notes. There are two reasons for this. First, most lectures can be read up afterward in the course textbook, and secondly, your classmates will respect you as a brain.

If carefully adhered to, these rules will guarantee the first-year man a jovial and full year. Most freshmen, it is sad to say however, will probably only realize their full value when they are back in first year again next year.

Simcoe Hall Cheque Thief Is Sentenced

Theft of almost $500 in cheques from the university mails, brought Jack J. Barry, 17-year-old former mail clerk in the Simcoe Hall post office, a year's suspended sentence in Magistrate Bigelow's court yesterday.

Barry was engaged as a clerk in the post office about Nov. 1, last year, and on Nov. 15 pocketed three letters containing five cheques totalling almost $500. The cheques were in payment of salaries, travelling expenses, and petty cash.

Barry testified that he had opened the envelopes and then turned the cheques over to his friend, William Shaw. "Bill Shaw snatched the letters out of my hand," he said. "That was the last I saw of the letters or the cheques. I saw him (Shaw) about three nights later and nothing was mentioned of the previous transaction."

Refutes Claim

Shaw testified he had intended to borrow money from Barry on the night of Nov. 13, and claimed he had not taken the cheques which Barry told the court the other had snatched from his hand.

John C. Brimble, bank accountant, testified that four cheques had been cashed and the money had not been recovered.

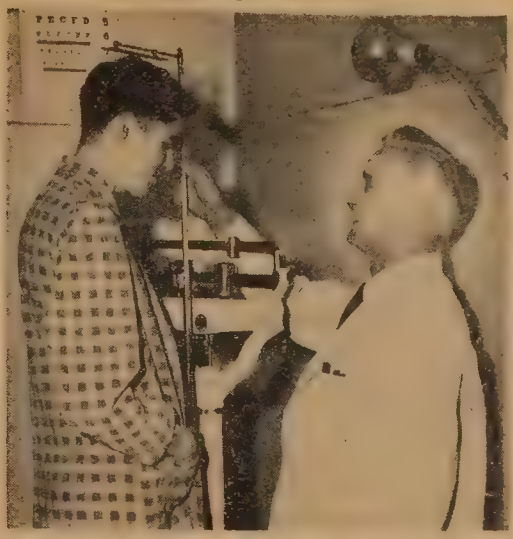
In passing sentence, Magistrate Bigelow said he was taking into account the previous excellent record of the accused and was inclined to be lenient. Barry was placed on six months' probation.

Musical Pieces By UT Students On CJBC Tonite

A number of musical compositions composed by students will be presented over CJBC when the Varsity Radio program goes on the air tonight at 9.00 p.m.

Arrangements for the performance of the compositions by members of the Senior School and the Conservatory were made by the SAC Radio Committee and the Conservatory Students Council.

The compositions, which will be played tonight, represent the best of a large number of contributions made especially for this program.



The program will consist of three Chinese songs by Terry Spencer, Suite for Piano by Lorne Betts, two movements from Sonata for violin by Andrew Twa, four Conceits for Piano by John Beckwith, two songs by Cleremont Pepin and Mime for violin and piano by Harry Somers.

Morry Kernerman, violinist, will play two movements from Sonata for solo violin and Mime, Jean Marie Scott, soprano, will sing the three Chinese songs. Gordon Kushner will play four Conceits for Piano and Suite for piano. Pierre Boutet will sing the two French songs.

Pipe Band Will Lead March For Guests at C.O.T.C. Ball

Khaki and brass will mingle with taffeta and lace on Jan. 14 when the C.O.T.C. entertains in Hart House at its annual ball, a colorful function of long tradition.

The ball, the second since the war, enables Officer Cadets and new candidates to congregate in a spirit of comradeship and to meet socially such dignitaries as the Chief of the General Staff Corps School Commanders—and of course to show their ladies a good time.

Highlight of the dance will be the Grand March through the halls of Hart House to be led by pipers of the University Pipe Band before dancing begins. Adding to the colorfulness of the affair will be two trumpeteers in full regimental dress to announce the dances. The ballroom will be the Great Hall where Horace Lapp and his orchestra will play for dancing.

Cabaret for Guests

For entertainment guests may visit a "Continental Cabaret" in the Debates Room. There they will find French waiters, a "postage stamp" dance floor and will be entertained hourly by a 20-minute floor show. Further entertainment will be provided by the University Pipe Band during intermission.

Lt.-Col. W. L. Sagar and Mrs. Sagar, Col., The Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody and Mrs. Cody, and Maj. L. S. Lauchland and Mrs. Lauchland will receive the guests.

Prior to the ball a reception will be held in the Queen's Own Rifles Officers' Mess for guests from Headquarters, Central Command, Army Headquarters in Ottawa, and members of the staff of the University.

Lt.-Col. W. L. Sagar, Commanding Officer of the C.O.T.C. of the University of Toronto, and Mrs. Sagar with Col., The Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody, Honorary Colonel of the Contingent, and Mrs. Cody, will receive at this reception.

President is Patron

Patrons and patronesses of the C.O.T.C. Ball include Col., The Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody, C.M.G., E.D., and Mrs. Cody, Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, P.C., C.H., and Mrs Massey, Dr. Sidney E. Smith, K.C., M.A., LLD., and Mrs. Smith, Lt.-Col. W. L. Sagar and Mrs. Sagar.

Arrangements for the ball are in charge of a committee headed by the Honorary Chairman Maj. L. S. Lauchland, and consisting of D. L. Gold, D. M. Allan, W. S. Porter, W. Diakow, W. Sametz and T. Haddon.

Support Indonesia At United Nations Says Peace Group

An open meeting of the Students' Peace Council yesterday unanimously passed a resolution condemning Dutch aggression in Indonesia.

The resolution read: "We resolve that we condemn the Dutch aggression against the Indonesian Republic and demand that the Canadian government stop the sale of arms to the Dutch and call upon Canada to support the Indonesian fight for independence in the U.N."

Sees Lack of Information

During the discussion before the resolution was passed, Bruce Brock, II Vic, said the students present did not have enough information on the Indonesian question despite the outline speech which had just been given by Roy Neehall, III Vic. Brock suggested that the meeting resolve to support the action of the Security Council in Indonesian affairs.

George Denbigh, IV UC, agreed with what Brock said but added "As members of the Peace Council we should condemn the Dutch method of using force to solve the problem."

"Everyone has enough information to agree that the Dutch are wrong," said Glen Ross, II Vic, "but we don't know enough about factions within Indonesia to support the republic."

Support From Natives

First Denbeigh and then Neehall pointed out that the resolution supported only the independence of Indonesia and not necessarily any political policy forwarded by the Republic. Neehall stressed that it was a question of the freedom of a country being taken away which was a violation of the Atlantic Charter.

Steve Endicott, IV Vic, spoke strongly in favor of the resolution mentioning Dutch Imperialism and exploitation of Indonesia as well as their use of force and their efforts to keep the United Nations from investigating.

The discussion of the resolution followed a talk given by Roy Neehall which outlined the history of the Indonesian Republic's struggle for self-government. He said those frightened by the "red bogey" would be interested to know that Russia had condemned both the Dutch and the Indonesian Republic for putting down a communist revolt.

Neehall described the low standard of living in Indonesia and said that the Indonesians naturally wanted to stop the profits from their own production being drained out of the country. "This made the Dutch mad," he continued. "This is the reason why Holland wants to

Forms Available For One Weekend In Gay Montreal

Students who wish to go along on the Varsity weekend in Montreal, Friday, Jan. 21 to Sunday, Jan. 23, must make application at the SAC office, Hart House. The necessary forms will be available from this morning until Saturday noon.

Interviews to determine selection of students for the trip will be held Monday, Jan. 17, and time of appointments will be announced in a notice in The Varsity. Those who will be interviewed are to be chosen from the applications received up to Saturday.

Trains leave Toronto Jan. 21 at 9:15 a.m. with one coach reserved for students from Varsity. Toronto visitors will be guests of the University of Montreal and will stay with French-speaking students in Montreal. The group will return Sunday, leaving Montreal at 4:15 p.m. and arriving in Toronto at approximately 10 30.

MODERN SIGNBOARD

Vancouver, Jan 12 —(CUP)—The University of British Columbia campus is to get a modernistic signboard. The design finally accepted was originated by two second year Architectural students. A gothic design had been advocated as conforming more to university buildings; however, other signs in the gothic motif had proved a poor advertising medium.

University Radio Schools Included In NFCUS Plans

The services and aids now being made available to Canadian university students were stressed at the meeting of the Toronto committee of NFCUS held yesterday at Trinity College. Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, newly-elected national president of NFCUS, discussed these services in a short report to the committee, emphasizing that responsibility for publicizing them rested with the members.

George Wilkes, chairman of the meeting, reported on the proceedings at the recent NFCUS conference. One resolution adopted there concerns reduced rates for student travel, both in Canada and across the Atlantic. NFCUS can now charter planes for trans-Atlantic flights at a rate of about $150 per person one way. Committees are also being set up for the purposes of lowering costs of text books, and of widening educational opportunities through scholarships and federal grants to universities.

Radio interests in universities throughout Canada will be fostered by a radio school, to be founded with federal aid in one, or at most two Canadian schools. Culture in this country will be further encouraged by exchanges with American universities of art, publications, music, and athletics.

The jobs assigned to the Toronto delegation were outlined by the chairman. These include the preparation of briefs, and the publicizing of programs of travel and student exchange.

BAC DEGREE OUT

Vancouver, Jan. 13—(CUP)—The University of British Columbia Senate has decided not to expel students who have failed in their Christmas examinations. Previously a "Bounced-at-Christmas" degree had been awarded to all those students graduating prematurely.

SAC At A Glance

At its first meeting of the new term last night the Students' Administrative Council:

—Heard Student Service Commissioner Jane Hazard report that the Board of Governors has been requested to forward the SAC fees brief to the provincial government, —Set up a committee to interview President Smith in reward to the fees brief, the committee to include SAC President Gwynne-Timothy, and UC reps. Joe Potts and Miss Jane Hazard, —Heard Inter-Cultural Affairs Chairman Susan Burgess announce plans for an inter-cultural week on the campus designed to coincide with National Brotherhood Week, Feb. 20-27, —Heard SAC President Gwynne-Timothy outline plans for a return visit by 40 Varsity students to the University of Montreal, Jan. 21-23. Twenty of the Varsity students will be from the cast of the All-Varsity Revue, —Heard a letter of appreciation from DVA for making facilities available for disabled veterans to see the All-Varsity Revue.

—Heard a financial report of the All-Varsity Revue indicating a net profit of $194.00,

—Deferred discussion of payment of NCSV dues until NCSV financial statement is presented, —Approved SAC President Gwynne-Timothy's report on the Student Union Building.

Book Review

The Wine Of Astonishment

Martha Gellhorn's new novel, "The Wine of Astonishment" (Reginald Saunders: $3.50), is written in a simple, straightforward manner. Unfortunately, the simple approach is also carried over into the analysis of character, and the novel reads more like a parody than a serious war novel. Something so complex as man at war deserves searching treatment, but only at the end of the story is a situation analysed in any depth. Levy, a jeep driver, goes berserk after a visit to the Dachau concentration camp, and intentionally drives his jeep into a group of German civilians. In hospital awaiting his trial for manslaughter, he refuses to co-operate; he feels he will be deserting his principles. Finally, tender reminiscences of a Luxembourg waitress whom he hopes to marry and a naive materialistic casuistry overcome his scruples, and the novel ends on an almost blissful note.

Gellhorn makes people appear exceedingly simple, perhaps under the impression that she is stripping them down to bare essentials. One result is that there is little differentiation in her characters. Human beings are really more complex than "The Wine of Astonishment" would have us believe, and under the stress of war they become even more complicated. One of the duties of the war novelist is to examine the impact of war on human beings; Martha Gellhorn's superficial treatment is hardly adequate.

The Cross Over Asia

Bishop Stephen Neill's "The Cross Over Asia" (The Canterbury Press 8s. 6d.) takes the form of a colourful travelogue into which is woven a descriptive analysis of the circumstances in which the newly independent young churches of Asia find themselves. It is at the same time an able commentary on political and economic situations in Eastern countries.

"Asia to-day is in the throes of the greatest revolution that has ever happened in the history of mankind." The upgrowth of the spirit of national freedom with its intense patriotisms has sounded the knell of Western infiltration and exploitation. "The East has found itself anew and will never again consent to a position of subservience." From now on she is spiritually independent: Yet she does not scorn knowledge; her students are eagerly absorbing the best the West has to offer in the way of scientific advance and mechanized industry. This is the bringing about great changes in the cultures; but it is Asiatics who are making the changes, not we—that makes all the difference!

This spirit of independence is found also in the churches, which have found through the storms of war a new strength and a deeper faith. Nearly every church is now using missionaries from the West rather than being led by them. However, these churches are very young and, realizing in every instance their need for all the Christian helpers that the West can turn out, they look eagerly for guidance and manpower from the West. The opportunities are staggering, but the laborers are pitifully few.

The chapter on China is entitled China In Travail. "It is impossible to be in China for even a single day without becoming aware of the political tension." There seemed to be a sharp cleavage in the Chinese opinion of the Communists. "Almost everyone under the age of thirty with whom I came in contact, was against the government, and therefore, things being as they are, inclined to favour the Communists." Bishop Neill laments the serious absence of any liberal and progressive third party which might save the day from the radical and reactionary elements now in control. Christians are respected in government territory, but because the theological colleges are so hard-pressed, the educational standard of native clergy is not equal to that of the leading laymen. This, the bishop observed, was the drawback in all countries he visited. Thus there are few brilliant leaders. In the recommendations which he makes in his last chapter the bishop places better training of native ministries at the head of the list.

Bishop Neill's home was in India for many years. He regards partition as "one of the worst disasters that has ever happened in the life of that great sub-continent." He finds there a great friendship for the old British masters. The Indian church is reaping a great benefit from being no longer identified with a foreign ideology. Yet there is anxiety among the Christians regarding the future. Following Gandhi's example, the government of the new India, while being tolerant of all religions, is inclined to oppose any attempt to lead others to change their religion. The younger politicians are also in favour of an entirely secular education, to the elimination of private denominational schools." Yet, with it all, many Indian Christians believe that this is the great day of opportunity for the Gospel in India . . . To-day in India, the Gospel has been set free from embarrassing and irrelevant associations. It can shine by its own light. As never before it can present itself as a challenge to the peoples of India, to which they have to answer Yes or No, on the ground of its spiritual adequacy to meet the needs of men and on no other grounds whatever. If the Gospel is true it will make its way; it will prove to its advantage not to appear to be dependent on anything outside itself." The good and trusted leadership of the newly united Church of South India augurs well for its success.

Bishop Neill made this trip by air, visiting all the important centres from Karachi, India, to Tokyo, Japan, and as far south as the exotic island of Bali. One finds in his book a panorama of the Christian Way as it is expressed through and related to these various cultures and national traditions.

The book is written in a dignified conversational style with occasional touches of sly humor. There is a refreshing frankness about it, which, together with a sympathetic understanding revealed in the author's comments about the people whom he presents, and the many true illustrative anecdotes which he tells, warms one's heart as one meets in its pages a truly genuine personality. —Don Peel

New Year Prospectus — 1949

The following is reprinted from the "Daily Californian" student publication of the University of California.

The Saturday night hangovers are gone by now and we can look around and pinch ourselves and be sure it's really a new year. We understand they're going to call it 1949.

Traditionally, we spent the first few weeks of January telling each other that this one is going to be different. But judged from the way it's starting out, 1949 is going to be just about the same as 1948.

The cold war seems to be coming right along. The "red menace" is spreading like wildfire. Here in the United States a goodly number of citizens are saying that a Russian-American war is inevitable. Most of the rest are crossing their fingers and saying they hope a war won't come.

We (all us Americans, that is) know for certain that the United States would never start a war. Ask any man on the street, or the butcher or the baker or the atom bomb maker. This country start a war? Ridiculous! Americans don't want war.

But how certain are we?

We can in theory ask the same question of the average Russian and we get the same answer. Nobody likes to fight. (This of course is assuming that Russians are average human beings, but not even the House Un-American Activities committee has denied that yet.)

There aren't very many people in this world who want to fight a holy war against either communism or capitalism. Most of them would rather get along some other way. So who is going to start this inevitable war? If it isn't going to be peoples, it must be governments, and according to our way of thinking it can't be the American government (it being democratic) so it must be the Russian (it being communist).

It is generally accepted that even the Soviet government won't start a war unless it feels there is no other way out. So what are we faced with? What does this American opponent look like to them?

Let's divorce ourselves from this America for a moment and hold it up and shake off the dust. What does it look like from the outside? In spite of what the public thinks, which way is it really going?

First off we see the old tell-tale signs of imperialism and fascism. We know, deep down inside that we don't believe in such things but in our name the government is financing a government and an army in Greece that no one thinks is democratic. There's something of the same situation in Turkey.

In China the United States is supplying $125,000,000 in aid, most of it munitions, for another government no one thinks is democratic. Much of commerce in such things as industrial machinery has been cut off with the communist nations (economic containment?). And we've started to build a bright New Regular Army.

Even the Marshall Plan comes in for an occasional crack on the knuckles. Outside of a few claims of economic imperialism that may, for all we know, be justified, there are such affairs as the recent resale of aluminum and lead that make it look like just another capitalistic clambake. And last year, Franco Spain was almost cut in for a share of the loot. There are quite a few other unpleasant signs.

Altogether, it's not a very happy prospect. It doesn't quite add up to the liberty, equality and fraternity we mouth around occasionally. And ultimately we're going to have to decide whether this is the kind of America we want.

Just how happy this new year will be is going to depend a lot on what decision we reach. And if a change is in order, we're going to have to get this change underway quickly . . . now, while we still have the chance.

Company Manager Forecasts Change In Forestry Jobs

Mr. Gordon Godwin, Woodlands manager of the Ontario Paper Company, spoke to the Foresters Club and the Canadian Society of Forest Engineers this evening, on employment in industrial forestry.

He told the members that he felt that the employment situation had changed considerably in the past six months and that now there would not be the wide choice of jobs that there was before. He suggested that students keep in touch with studies after graduation. Mr. Godwin felt that the graduate would have to accept a lower position in the company he hoped to work for, as a closer watch is being kept on expenses with the drop in lumber and pulp markets. He felt, however, that the long term view for the profession was encouraging.

Radio Review

Many a student will be surprised to find out that art is not restricted to painting and sculpture, but extends also to the cinema, music and radio.

In the film field, England and France lead the way, but in radio, Britain and Canada are at present the chief innovators.

In Britain, there is the Third Program.

In Canada, we have the CBC Wednesday Night program, which unfortunately lasts only for four hours a week.

For some reason which is not obvious to the majority of Canadians, the CBC has decided that there is after all plenty of good material written in Canada which needs presentation.

Chief among this material is drama, which started with the Stage series on Sundays, and has been further developed in the Wednesday Night programs.

The makeup of each night's presentation includes a dramatic show, one or two concerts by various chamber music groups, and a recital by a Canadian musician.

The general effect is usually pleasant. But, the dramatic hour is quite often not just a piece of sugar-coating; it often demands serious thought from the listener.

Whatever its drawbacks and failings, the Wednesday Night Program is one not to be missed.

CHRISTIAN MISSION

The special preacher at the Church of the Redeemer this Sunday at the morning service is the Ven. E. S. Reed, M.A., Archdeacon of Gaspe, Diocese of Quebec, and one of the Associate-Missioners of the University Christian Mission. Archdeacon Reed is a graduate of McGill University and, in theology, of St. John's College, Winnipeg. He has served in a number of parishes in the Province of Quebec and, for a number of years, in the important industrial parish of Verdun. As Archdeacon of the Gaspe, he serves this historic section of Canada, characterised by one of the richest traditions in our national life. Archdeacon Reed has made an important contribution to the work both of Diocesan and General Synods. His message and personality will be valued by all who meet him.

"University students are complacent and not interested in world affairs," he claimed. "We should support the resolutions passed at the World Federation of Democratic Youth conference last August." These resolutions protest strongly Dutch aggression.

Before Neehall spoke a film entitled "Indonesia Calling" was shown. This movie, taken in 1945, showed how dock workers and sailors in Australia and other countries refused to load or man ships taking arms and Dutch troops to fight the Indonesian Republic.

The resolutions passed by the Toronto Peace Conference were handed out at the meeting. "These resolutions will form the basis for discussion at the next meeting of the Peace Council," said Bill Gagnon, chairman of the meeting and provisional vice-president of the Council.

Second'y School Concert

The Secondary School Concert in Massey Hall Tuesday night was interesting musically and educationally. For a number of years now, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra has given a series of concerts for students in the secondary schools of Toronto, and this seems to me one of the best methods of musical education. To hear symphonic music in a concert hall is as important to the high school student as the young musician. Most schools in Canada are able to teach musical appreciation only by records. This is a second-best way. Toronto, with its symphony orchestra, offers students the greatest music at reasonable prices.

The "Brandenberg Concerto No. 3 for String Orchestra" opened the program. One of the finest of the large works by Bach it was played with the correct restraint, but at times the violins were sloppy and their tone muddy.

"The Young Persons' Guide to the Orchestra: Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Purcell" was just what its title implied. The various sections of the orchestra, strings, woodwinds, brass, and percussion, took solo parts followed by individual solos by members of these sections. This composition allows identification of the instruments and still maintains a musical unity.

The guest artist Lois Marshall, soprano, sang two arias: "Marten Aller Arten" from Mozart's opera "Die Entfuhring", and "Leise, Leise" from "Der Freischuetz" by von Weber. Her voice is very beautiful, with a particularly pure tone in the high registers. In both songs she had excellent intonation but once or twice lost control on her high notes. The most unusual quality about Lois Marshall's voice is a richness which at first jars then fascinates the listener.

Haydn's Symphony No. 99 was given a brisk performance by the orchestra. While it was unconventional when written, since then it has become academic. Some of the most delightful music ever written are the Waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier". As played Tuesday night they were superb for their gaiety and if I may use the word, charm.

Chess, Humor Compatible Doctor Euwe Proves To 61

By HANK WESTCOTT

The cheerleaders should have turned out to urge Varsity on to greater heights last night in Hart House, when 61 Varsity chess players fared poorly at the hands of Doctor Max Euwe, only living former chess champion of the world.

Euwe is currently on a tour which will take him through the United States and Canada as well as into South America.

Born, educated, and still living in Holland, he was champion of the world from 1935 to 1937, but chess is only a sideline for him—albeit a profitable one. His real job, he says, is teaching mathematics in a Lycee (high school) back home.

No Maths He Uses!

But in spite of his mathematical affiliations, he denies that he uses mathematics in chess. "Some elements are common to both," he says, "but the most important thing in playing chess is to think logically." He was thinking both logically and swiftly as he swept around the 61 cards in Hart House. Rarely did he spend more than a few seconds at any card. His opponents were nevertheless bewildered.

'Nonsense', He Says

"It's nonsense," says Doctor Euwe of the claim of the present world champion, Mikhail Botvinnik, that "the art of chess is declining in the west."

"The Russians are very good," says the Doctor, in his slightly Dutch accent, "and they should be because of their fortunate position of being sponsored by the government. But nevertheless, I don't think the game is declining here."

And Doctor Euwe is in a good position to talk. In eleven games with Botvinnik, he has won two, lost two, and tied seven.

Speaks 6 Languages

Although he speaks English, French, Dutch, German, Spanish and Russian, he used only English to say how he started to play chess with his parents when he was only five years old. Five years later he started to take part in small tournaments, and by the time he got to university he was making a study of the game.

Although his tours have taken him most of the way around the world, the 61 players he tested simultaneously last night is the largest single group. In Europe, most matches only provide him with a mere 30 or so.

Looks Like Athlete

You would never guess that Doctor Euwe is a chess master. He is built more along the lines of a rugged football player. Standing more than six feet tall, he looks more like a football lineman. But despite his size, his occupation, and his avocation, Doctor Euwe still has a tremendous sense of humour. When chess committeeman Murray Dobier mentioned that the tournament was for Hart House members only and asked all others to give up their seats, Doctor Euwe promptly asked to be excused.

At press time last night, the battle of 61 versus one was still being waged. A few had conceded to the master, and he was still playing "quickly and strongly," according to Murray Dobier.

Trinity, SPS Win In Hockey

Trinity C, scoring three goals in both periods, coasted to a 6-2 win over Emmanuel to retain the lead in group eight of the intramural hockey leagues yesterday in Varsity arena.

Harper scored three times to lead SPS fourths to a 5-2 margin over Med thirds in another game yesterday.

Humphrey Gilbert and Dunc Imrie scored twice each for Trinity while Brooks and Hunter each Imrie scored twice each for Trinity, clicked once. Thornloe and Vanstone scored for the losing Emmanuel club.

Diebel and Hart added a goal each to Harper's output in the SPS win. Armstrong and Jones each clicked once for Meds.

UC Defeats Meds 14-11 To Tie Lacrosse Finals

Need 2 Overtime Periods To Decide Game

By ED VOIGHT

Meds Firsts and U.C. Firsts put on a marathon struggle in the second game of the Dafoe Cup lacrosse finals in Hart House gym yesterday before the Red and White U.C.'ers came out on top 14-11 to equalize the series at one win apiece. For the first time in the history of Dafoe Cup playdowns, it took two overtime periods to decide the winner.

And in that second overtime period, U.C. won walking away. They had been hitting Meds' forwards so hard and so consistently that at the finish, they had the Doctors hanging on the ropes, just waiting for the final whistle.

Score 6-6

The score at the end of regulation time was tied 6-6, at the end of the first overtime period, 8-8. Meds were leading 11-10 at the break in the second overtime period, but then Lloyd Bernie took over for U.C. as he popped in three consecutive goals within two minutes.

For sheer thrills and excitement, the game had everything. U.C. jumped into a 4-2 lead by the end of the first period; there was no scoring in the second period; Meds tied the score at 4-4 by the end of the third; then the 6-6 game-over score.

Bernie led all scorers with six counters, and Chambers ran in four. Byrne, for a first-year goalie, blocked excellently, thrusting aside many a well-aimed Medical shot.

Haliburton Stars

"Axe" Haliburton was the best Medsman on the floor. The hard-driving Meds' forward took either the worst pounding in his life, or else he deserves a Hollywood "Oscar" for his acting. In the last part of the game especially, Haliburton looked as if he was on his last legs as the U.C. boys really gave him a going-over. Haliburton was lying on the floor more times than the caretakers mop, but he still led the Meds' scorers with five goals. Another game like yesterday's, and Haliburton will have to see his doctor.

Jimmy McKay too, took quite a pounding from the Red and White crew; from the start of the second half on, looked as if he could hardly move, but nevertheless popped in three goals for Meds, two in the overtime. U.C. centre Raymond reopened a cut over McKay's eye when he took a wild swing at the Meds' player's head, promptly getting himself a minute penalty. Raymond must think he's playing with a lasso, or something.

Ken Robb Is Pesky

Winter snagged two goals for U.C. as did Raymond. Little Ken Robb, although he went scoreless, was the peskiest player on the floor, time and time again hurrying the Medsmen in their plays. Sterling and Korz came up with solid performances, looking after Haliburton especially.

Heatherington, Beaton and Moher each bagged a singleton for Meds. moher's goal was really nice to watch as he steamed down the floor to beat Byrne on a side shot from the corner.

The third and final game of the series goes tomorrow at 1:00 p.m.

'The Digger'

WILF DIGBY
pictured herewith will show in person when the Blues tackle Queen's in Varsity Arena Friday night.

VIC FOURTHS WIN

Drewitt hooped eight points to lead Vic fourths to a tight 21-20 win over Architecture A in a major league basketball game in Hart House yesterday. Howard scored seven points for the winners and Walter chcked for four and Kilgour two.

Overs made nine points for Architecture, Freedman seven.

Winless Gaels Seek Victory Friday Night

By HAL HOLDEN

There'll be another all-Varsity show in Varsity Arena Friday night, if current plans pull through unscathed, and for this one there are still plenty of tickets left—and for free too.

Feature attraction is the hockey Blues return to Intercollegiate action in a game against winless Queen's from Kingston. But the Tricolor have a penchant for knocking off the Blues at crucial times in the schedule and from here in, every game belongs in that department.

Band There Too

The Varsity band will be in attendance to inject some college cheer into the proceedings and there will be a dance after the game, though final details are still hanging fire.

Although the Blues are in second place, they are four points back of the U. of Montreal Carabins and need every possible victory if they hope to catch the dashing Frenchmen.

Tomorrow's fixture is only the fourth Intercollegiate clash of the season for Ace Bailey's crew, but the defending champs have staggered through a well-padded exhibition card with less than phenomenal success. Yet, as anyone of the Blues will tell you, it's what they do when the chips are down that counts and in league competition the Blues show a won and lost record of two and one which doesn't class them as pushovers.

First Meeting of Year

The Queen's game will be the first meeting of the year for the two clubs. Varsity will present some changes in the lineup as Rocky Howson and Wes Moore have been dropped down to the Intermediates. Gerry Larmer will also be missing from the lineup. Bob LaRose, sturdy rearguard from Sudbury, and a holdover from last year's squad, will see action in his first league contest of the year. LaRose received a serious jaw injury when clipped by a flying puck in practice before the season opened. Recently he has been wearing a protective helmet but doesn't take kindly to it and will leave it off is he can get the doctor's OK.

New faces include Bud Hayes and Bill Paterson. Hayes, a defenceman now, played his last hockey on the same forward line as Gaye Stewart and Bud Poile up Port Arthur way.

ATHLETIC NIGHT

Bob Masterson will lead his senior basketball team against Buffalo State as the feature attraction of Athletic Night in Hart House Saturday. The intermediates tackle YMHA in the preliminary. Action in the pool and the upper gym rounds out the evening's fun.

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The lacrosse finals between the defending champs, Meds and the challengers, UC, stretched to one more gruelling battle which will take place tomorrow afternoon in the Hart House upper gym.

The place was so crowded that the spectators were practically hanging from the rafters. Even a few females broke the "no women allowed" barrier and cheered and yelled for their choice.

The challengers kept the game on edge for sixteen minutes over the regular four eight minute periods. During the overtime the tension was so high that at face-offs and time outs, a pin dropped on the floor would have been heard.

But at times the excitement was so great that even Mac MacCutcheon climbed up the screen around the gym to get a better view of the game.

The saying "over my dead body" was taken literally by both teams. Neither team would say die, and some of the players, when they came off the floor, they came off on all fours.

The last four minutes, in which the UC squad popped in four fast goals to win. The Meds players could barely move, but they wouldn't give and fought till the last whistle. The Red and White squad came on the floor in the final period with their second wind and really whipped around the Skull and Cross Bones men.

For a ringside seat of the final game Friday, it would be a good idea to get there about twelve noon. The Dafoe Cup holders for the season will definitely be decided and if no one falls over the rail during the excitement, the game should be as good as ever.

Wally Waves

WALLY ZEATON
pictured above will lead the Varsity senior hoopsters against Buffalo State as the feature attraction of Saturday night's Athletic Night. The Blues are still seeking their first win of the season against American teams—and Saturday night on their home floor could be IT. The intermediates meet YMHA in the preliminary game, and there is activity in the pool and the upper gym to round out the evening.

JUNIORS PLAY

The Varsity Junior basketball quintet take on Schisslers in an exhibition game in Hart House at 7:30 tonight.

Ferne Watson Gets 2 Goals In PHE Win

PHE I came through with a 2-1 win over St. Hilda's I yesterday in the Varsity arena. Ferne Watson scored both goals for her Fizz Ed team mates, while Dossie Ballantyne of St. Hilda's scored the first goal of the game with an assist from Ros Lloyd, in the first period.

In the first and third periods, both teams played slowly with PHE outplaying their opponents. However in the second period St. Hilda's improved greatly and their team-play was good. The Saint's new goalie Margaret Martin played an excellent game despite the fact that she was hit in the head with the puck in the third period. Also playing a good game were Pauline Smith of the Saints, and Ferne Watson, Ann Sharpe and Irma Bullock, PHE.

Speaking Of Sport

On Saturday evening, Victoria and Emmanuel Colleges are hosts for the first athletic night this year.

Featured in the main gym at 7.00 p.m. is a contest between the Varsity Seconds and Y.M.H.A. seniors. Then at 8.30 p.m., Varsity Seniors will take on Buffalo State College in the second major hoop feature of the evening. The Blues won their first victory against the Ajax Interfaculty team by a score of 72-51, and that win will give them more confidence in their duel with Buffalo State on Saturday.

The minor league features in the lower gym are Vic IV vs. Emmanuel B and Vic VII vs. U.C. VIII.

An exhibition swimming meet is slated between Varsity and Buffalo State. If it can be arranged, a water polo game will follow.

The ski enthusiasts will be interested to know too that movies have been arranged.

"Hiya Athie!"

"Oh, hello Jim."

"Hey, what have you been up to? You look all banged up?"

"It's nothing, I guess. I was playing hockey today."

"Boy, you gals must play a rough game!"

"I guess we do. Most of the kids can't even stop and they carry you into boards along with them."

"But Athie, I thought boarding was taboo in girls' games. You don't wear any pads, do you? Don't the refs hand out penalties for boarding?"

"They aren't very strict about it. I guess it's because the players don't board you on purpose."

"But they still throw you into the boards whether it's on purpose or not. The hot stove league on Saturday night got pretty heated about the question of boarding and injuries in the NHL and especially in amateur leagues. The refs could take a few hints from that. One day soon one of you girls is going to get badly hurt."

"You better tell our refs that. Actually it isn't all their fault although some of the kids might smarten up if they handed out a few more penalties. The main trouble is that most of the girls can barely skate, and get out of control and offbalance as soon as they go faster than three miles an hour . . . I should talk, I'm as bad as the rest of them."

"Well then, it's up to your coaches to teach you how to skate."

"Tell me something, Jim. Did you volunteer to coach us girls this year?"

"Ah-h no, but . . ."

"How do you expect us to turn out good teams if the men won't turn out to coach us "

"Athie, I'll coach you kids next year."

"Do that."

"By the way, when's your next game?"

"Tomorrow at 12.30."

"See you there, Athie!"

"Okay. 'bye Jim."

Canadian Oil Saves Scarce U.S. Currency

A prediction that Canada will very soon be self-sufficient in oil was made yesterday by Mr. F. L. Fournier, staff geologist of Imperial Oil Company, during a film-illustrated lecture to the Geography Club at Wymilwood.

The film, on which Mr. Fournier commented, was entitled "Search for Oil", and dealt with methods used by Canadian oil companies when making surveys in search of oil fields.

The geologist did not predict a situation in which oil from Canadian wells would be shipped to every Canadian consumer of petroleum products. Rather, surplus oil from Alberta fields would be exported to nearby American states. Eastern Canada would still import petroleum from the United States, but the balance of trade in oil would remain favorable to Canada.

Explains Expansion

Mr. Fournier explained how recent expansion in Canadian oil production, resulting from such efforts as those shown in the film made possible the recent relieving of Canada's "austerity program." He said that imports of United States oil have been reduced because of increased Canadian production, and this has resulted in a daily saving of "approximately $100,000 in much-needed American currency."

Illustrating the extent of the search for oil in Canada, Mr. Fournier stated that a total of $135,000,000 has been spent on oil surveys. Activity had increased so greatly since the proving of the Leduc field, that Alberta was now the site of the third most extensive survey in North America.

Origin of Oil

The film which the geologist showed dealt with a survey at Strolberg, in the foothills of the Rockies. It illustrated the origin of oil hundreds of millions of years ago, in the form of microscopic organisms, transformed through the ages under layers of rock and soil. The "pockets", far down in the rock, where oil has gathered, were shown, and it was explained that

Radio Committee Holds T.-outs This Morning For A Musical Comedy

The Radio Committee is preparing a musical comedy program to be put on the air on February 17.

Anyone wishing to participate in this program will be given an opportunity to do so in the try-outs starting this morning from 11 to 1:30 p.m. in the downstairs common room of the Women's Union on St. George.

The singing choruses will be under the direction of Ward McAdam. Both male and female voices are needed. The whole musicale score lyrics and script will be written by Susie Davidson, Pat Watson and Michael Hornansky.

Testing, Testing...

Mel Breen tests out the new tape recorder which has been installed in the radio workshop, while Hugh Gale, one of the five fourth year electrical students, who made and installed the unit, looks on. The ingenuity and engineering of the five students saved about $250 for the radio committee.

Radio Committee Needs Two Assistant Directors

The S.A.C. Radio Committee is seeking two applicants as assistants to the Director of Programmes and Director of the Workshop. These persons will be assistants to Buzz Thomas, Director of the Workshop, and Peter Dobell, Director of Programmes.

The applicants should be able to get along with people, willing to work and to learn, and have administrative ability. Their duties will be to take off the hands of the Directors that part of the work that overburdens the heads of every activity on the campus. The work does not require a technical knowledge of radio.

"We want people who are persevering in their work," said Paul Fauteux, Radio Commissioner. The successful applicants will help in the administration of the Radio Workshop. They might, if they prove worthy, advance to directorships. "We hope, if the applicants are from freshman or sophomore years, that we can preserve the continuity so desired from year to year in such an organization," Fauteux said.

To Hold Lectures

The Workshop, under the guidance of Buzz Thomas, Director of the Workshop, is holding lectures on acting, producing and script writing. Thomas' assistant would help in these classes. The other assistant will help Peter Dobell, Program Director, in the actual administration work and the programs.

"The unveiling of the new tape recorder in the electrical building will possibly increase interest on the campus in radio," said Fauteux. With the new recorder we can test people's radio voices and prevent "mike-fright". When the new Memorial Union is erected with space assigned for the Workshop, the officials of the Workshop are confident that the interest on the campus will increase.

Debate At Laval To Be In French

Pat Coles, IV Vic, Debates Commissioner of The Students' Administrative Council outlined the debating program for the winter term yesterday. Varsity teams will go to Laval, Queen's and the Royal Military College.

The Laval Debate will be in French, while the team from the Quebec City University that comes to Varsity will debate in English. Try-outs for the French debate will be held in room 18, Victoria College, Jan. 19 at 1.20 p. m. Two professors will judge the contestants' French-speaking and debating ability. The topic for the trials will be, "La reclame Moderne est une partie integrale de la culture de l' Amerique du Nord." (Modern advertising is an integral part of North American culture.)

The trials for the debates at Queen's and R.M.C. will be held from Jan. 17-19 in Room 9 Trinity College at 1.20 p. m. The topic for these trials will be, "The political opinions of professors and ministers are their own concern."

The Inter-culture committee of the S.A.C. is sponsoring a number of debates and panel discussions for the week of Feb. 20-27. They will coincide with National Brotherhood week throughout the United States.

Campus Club Heads Complain Fees High Need Gov't Subsidy

A committee has been named by the Student's Administrative Council to interview President Sidney Smith about the SAC's fees brief. Members of the committee, appointed this week, are Jane Hazard, Joe Potts and Gordon Gwynne-Timothy. The brief is being given to the University Board of Governors with the request that it be forwarded to the provincial government.

Fees Brief Revived

The revival of the Council's fees brief drew comment from the leaders of the various campus political clubs.

Progressive Conservative president, George Hogan, agreed in an interview that "university fees like all other costs today are undoubtedly too high." Hogan pointed out that "the main difficulty in a government subsidy for education is how far it should go." He pointed out that if it were not for the subsidy presently paid by the Ontario government towards every student's fees they would be one hundred dollars higher.

Hogan stated, "My own view is that increased bursaries and scholarships would be the best government action in this regard, so that no qualified student need be prevented from attending university for financial reasons."

Three In Accord

All four political club presidents on the campus were in accord on the need for some government action. The leaders of the C.C.F., Liberal and L.P.P. clubs stated definite proposals for legislation.

The position of the Liberal Association was outlined in the resolutions on fees formulated last November, pointed out David Stanley. He is the president of the University of Toronto Liberal Club.

"We recommend that tuition fees in Canadian universities be abolished with the aid of government grants." The Liberals made the additional proposal that special assistance should be provided students of sufficient ability without the funds to attend university; they should be assisted by provincial or federal grants.

C.C.F. View

"It is ridiculous that entrance to Ontario universities should be rationed by price rather than intelligence and capability", Harvey Hay, C.C.F. Club president, commented.

He envisaged a scheme for civilian students to parallel D.V.A. "The possibility of granting aid to students through either provincial or federal subsidy might be considered using academic worth as the criterion for allotment."

Steve Endicott voiced the L.P.P. Club's attitude: "The L.P.P. wants increased government grants to cut out fees entirely and D.V.A.-like grants for all needy students." He noted that the increase in fees and curtailment of enrollment in many faculties illustrates "a discrepancy between the words and deeds of those in control of our education. All students believing in equality of opportunity should express themselves and support the S.A.C. Fees Brief."

Attention fell on fees when a general increase came in the fall of 1947, paralleled by rising costs of living. Ten Varsity clubs organized a student fees rally which demonstrated at the Parliament buildings last year. No direct action resulted from this student protest. However, the SAC took up the controversy and prepared a fees brief which made the following recommendations, and comments.

The Brief

There is no equality of education in Ontario according to statistics taken from the Guillet Report on Canadian education which showed that more students of exceptional ability are annually precluded from university in Ontario alone, than actually attend all Canadian universities.

There is no trend towards equality of opportunity. Excluding D.V.A. enrollment, only 126 more students were registered at the University of Toronto in 1945 than in 1932.

SAC Committee Holds Conference In JCR Tuesday

A conference to promote better understanding among different ethnic, cultural and religious groups, sponsored by the SAC Committee on Intercultural Affairs, will be held in the UC Junior Common Room Tuesday, Jan. 18.

Conference chairman Jan Meisel, Grad. Studies, will introduce the chief speaker Professor G. Tatham, faculty member of the Committee.

Tentative plans have been drawn up for a concentrated program to correspond with the National Brotherhood Week (Feb. 20 to 27). The program may include debates and films on racial questions, lectures by prominent speakers, and folk dances staged by different language groups. The committee members hope to form an inter-denominational forum and hold a "Cook's tour", in order to bring about inter-faculty understanding.

The committee has released the following statement by the Primate of the Church of England, Reverend G. F. Kingston: "Men of all nations and races are members of God's family. Each race has something to contribute to the riches of the world both material and spiritual."

Rabbi A. L. Feinberg, in a statement on behalf of the National Brotherhood Week, said, "Earthly salvation for the human species can be achieved by a moral coalition of Christianity and Judaism for the preservation of spiritual values, the unity of man for the defense of religion, and the partnership of religions for the defence of man."

You Can Go Fee Is Low Ride In Snow For $10

Nancy LeSueur, organizer of the Carabin week-end in Montreal, said yesterday that cost of the trip will not exceed $10 per student.

The plans include a reception to be held the night of Friday, Jan. 21, with vins et fromage and a seance de cinema at which documentary films will be shown. An official welcome Saturday will be followed by a sleigh-ride and an evening party.

Checker

Check Your Wife Or Coat

By HARRY RASKY

Professors may evaluate students by the size of their marks, but Mr. Keedwell ("everybody calls me Bill") measures them according to the texture of their coats or size of their heads—to match their hats.

Although many students speak to him daily and practically every male at the university passes his office at least once a day, few will remember what he looks like. Bill is the man who checks the coats in Hart House.

Although coats are his most usual items of business, he checks "everything from suits to nuts". Probably the most unusual article left with the check-shop was a large great Dane dog.

"We tied him to one of the racks, but didn't have to give the man a check. He was the only dog we had around. Thank goodness he behaved himself."

He recalls once when a man left his pants. ("Oh no, he was wearing another pair".) No student has ever asked to check a wife.

The local musicians take advantage of the Hart House checkery. Trombones and violins are regular visitors to the shelves. ("I've even checked a base drum.") Luckily the entrance is not large enough to accommodate a piano.

Several thousand coats of all shapes and sizes pass through his hands in one day. Rush hours in the checking business are between 11 and 2 and 5-7.

"On the whole," said Bill, "students have good quality coats, and are well dressed." The women-prefer-men-with-a-hat advertisers will be happy to hear that, according to Bill, this is a big winter for hats.

Bill prides himself in his accurate handling of coats. In the winter term there were no coats lost and no student found himself wearing a hat that came down over his eyes.

Undergraduates think nothing of leaving their suitcases for the week-end. Radios, hockey sticks, and gold clubs can be seen hanging from one of the 425 Hart House hooks depending on the season of year.

Tipping is not allowed for checking. Bill can recall about two dimes in the last year that were left while he wasn't looking. Occasionally a cigarette or cigar is given to him.

Bill has been behind the checking counter for six years now. He took over from a Mr. Jones who who on the job when Hart House opened, and is now retired. Wearing rimless glasses with a grey work jacket and hair to match, he is 56 years old. He would come under the broad classification of an old soldier. He worked at Manning Pool in the sergeant's mess before coming to the university.

Slide rules are placed under the counter and lunches are left on a shelf above. Many is the student who leaves an article and forgets to come back. Some are a little surprised when he hands them their books. Students in some cases are more absent-minded than their professors.

When we left him surrounded by the many coats we heard one student ask, "My wife and I are looking for an apartment. Could you check us in here?"

"Sorry sir," Bill replied kindly, "we close at 11."

Needs Clarification

All is not sweetness and light between the Students' Administrative Council and its ex-service committee.

The recent misunderstanding between the two groups arising out of payment of fees to the National Conference of Student Veterans points up a resentment that exists among some members of the ex-service committee who feel they should not be held entirely responsible to the SAC in all their decisions.

The ex-service committee occupies a unique position in relation to the SAC. Originally formed in recognition of the needs of veteran students, it was set up under the aegis of the SAC whose constitution provides for the formation of "special committees" to fill particular needs. Since it was a special committee of the SAC it was responsible to the parent group.

But, unlike some other SAC committees, its members are composed of elected representatives from different colleges and faculties. This is the basis for their criticism. Since they are already elected representatives, some ex-service committee members see no reason why their decisions need be approved by the SAC which is also an elected body representing the same students.

On the other hand, since the SAC assumes responsibility for (and is composed of) veteran and non-veteran students, it feels it must exercise its authority over the committee.

There seems to be some need for constitutional clarification. As it stands, there is no sharp definition of the responsibility of each group, where one ends and the other begins.

Progress

The proposed visit of 40 undergraduates from this university to the University of Montreal next week-end is another link in the student chain of intercultural development.

It is easy enough to render lip service to the cause of national unity and understanding in this bilingual country without making any effort to implement it. Making a tangible contribution is more difficult and—too often—more infrequent.

The recent visit of the Carabins from the University of Montreal is an excellent example of how the gap between the two major cultural groups in this country can be bridged. More was done to promote goodwill between the two groups during that one visit than could be accomplished by repeated public pleas for understanding.

There is no reason why a plan similar to the one now being used between this university and the U of M could not be adopted more vigorously on a national scale.

Although we must continue to work for broader cultural exchanges of students on an international level, we must not neglect to foster a better understanding among members of our own house

U.T.A.A.'s Hand Book

What made Morley Callaghan's Varsity Story so pleasant was a casual air of almost benign vagueness. It made you forget there ever was such a thing as work at this dear old college of ours.

Unfortunately, the University of Toronto ATHLETIC HAND BOOK (1948-49), has none of these qualities.

Here is concrete evidence of the ever-popular "direct" style of writing. One can truthfully say that the author, whoever he is, has "successfully soived the formidable problem of accommodating satire, both political and domestic, beauty and the dark beast of serious reflection 'frustration' under one roof." He has solved it in the only way possible. They are left out entirely.

Instead, he has constructed, sometimes with his right hand, sometimes with his left, and often with both (the direct style being most noticeable here) an epic that has hit just the right note of solidarity. One can almost see the Tory Blue Blood oozing out.

Indeed, he has even been so thoughtful as to place on page eight a large heading entitled—WARNING!

This enables us to steal stealthily around the first 34 pages, making our job much easier.

Historical Novel

Anyway, UTAA'S ATHLETIC HAND BOOK (1948-49) may be briefly summed up as an "historical novel." It's magnificent scope sweeps from J. D. Webster (Ob. 1930) clean up to J. P. Loosemore in 1947. And there are six blank pages at the back for additions and autographs.

Briefly, the story is one of tragic recapitulation. Little Luigi, torn by W. Rimmer, Supervisor of Locker Room on one hand, and B. G. Lowes, Instructor in Physical Education on the other, is beset with evil desires.

He must know the truth, nd so he sets out on his pilgrimage. Throughout his voyage, Little Luigi is continually buffeted by hardships. After winning his fight with section five, article II, of the UTAA Constitution (Managers of university teams may call upon any player from any college or faculty to turn out with the University team;) he is almost overwhelmed by "Regulations Governing University Athletic Clubs."

Pervading Theme

Pervading the whole narrative like an undertow is that ever-present theme, "Velut Arbor Aevo," (Look out for the trees). From this, and from a doughty band of Skulemen on page 62, he gains strength and good spirits.

In the end, Little Luigi dies a tragic and futile death. Poor, poor Luigi!

He is mourned by the entire cast, which begins on page 113 and lasts until page 123. It is truly a magnificent funeral.

For Luigi, like many others, never really had a chance. He supercedes all barriers, only to meet his final and ultimate valhalla on pages 107 to 110—the lists of Intercollegiate Records. It is too much.

That, then, is the plot of the UTAA's ATHLETIC HAND BOOK (1948-49). And a very poor one it is too.

Terrific Cast

The cast, however, is magnificent. It includes such unforgettable characters at T. J. Mullan, cashier; T. A. Reed, E.D., Mus. Bac.; and G. Doull, president of the Track and Harrier Club.

Who shall ever forget their tragedy and their glory? Who indeed!

Little may be said in conclusion. One has only to regard the transcendental glory and mendacious existentiality of this opus to see how little may be said.

What is worse, it has been going on for years and shows no signs of stopping.

Next week, we plan to review the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, DIRECTORY (Toronto). We understand that the plot is very weak, but the cast incomparable.

U. C. AMALGAMATION NOTES

LOOKING ON THE "PRO" SIDE—

SEX has reared its ugly head in University College. The item in this space in Monday's Varsity has announced the discovery of differences between men and women. We won't question this, but we still think there is a case for the amalgamation of the WUA and the Lit.

After all we would only be following in the footsteps of the SAC. In 1931 the Joint Executive Students' Administrative Council found that it had "absorbed all the powers of the separate (men's and women's) councils", and set up the present directly responsible body.

We would not suggest that the present Lit and WUA have become "absorbed" by the Joint-Lit but it is becoming increasingly obvious that most college activities are already being, or should be handled on a co-operative basis. The social life of the college is the vital concern of all its members, therefore, the body administering such joint activities as the UC Follies should not be a remote "Joint-Lit", responsible to neither open meeting. The members of the College have a right to keep a closer watch on such potentially expensive events as the Arts Ball and possible Spring Formals. As the number of joint activities increases, the need for an amalgamated executive to control them increases. These activities, the Arts Ball, the UC Follies, Red and White Nights, Tea Dances and Year Parties are far from being the only common interests. Literary activities, such as the UC Parliament and the Undergrad can be bracketed with them. Administration of the JCR is an obvious candidate for the attention of an amalgamated executive.

Admittedly some phases of student government are the exclusive concerns of one group, principally men's and women's athletics. However, separate athletic directorates and fees could, in our opinion, be fitted into an amalgamated set-up without any difficulty.

It has been stated that amalgamation would bring to an end the lengthy tradition of the UC Lit. However, there is no reason why the new organization could not be called the University College Literary and Athletic Society. We do not think the walls of the JCR will crumble with the inscription of a few feminine names.

To sum up—the joint activities and interests of the College have obviously become dominant, therefore, amalgamation should be undertaken to centre authority in one body in the interests of efficiency and logic.

Vote YES for amalgamation on January 20 and 21.

HART HOUSE BULLETIN BOARD

FRIDAY RECITAL

A programme of exceptional interest will be presented in the Music Room at 5:00 p.m. to-day when Professor Leo Smith, aided by Marjorie Stevens-Brown and Rosalind Palmer, will play his original compositions and arrangements for viols. Four singers, Myrtle Bruce-Brown, Robin Paterson, Anna McDonald, and Harold Salach, will accompany the players. The viols to be used are from the Hart House collection.

SING SONG

There will be a sing song in the east common room at 1:30 p.m. to-day.

GLEE CLUB

Since the Glee Club have now started on new music for their various concerts this term they are once more welcoming new members to the club in all parts. Any member of the Hart House interested in part singing may join at the rehearsal on Monday or Tuesday of next week at 5:00 p.m. in the Music Room.

UNDERGRADUATE ART EXHIBITION

The exhibition of paintings by undergraduate members of the House will be hung in the art gallery on Monday, 24th January. All entries, properly framed, should be handed in at the Warden's office not later than Friday, 21st January.

'Fear Worst', Police, Posse Losing Hope

Searchers have almost given up hope of finding alive 68 year old John MacPherson, father of Prof. John MacPherson, Jr., a lecturer in Oriental Languages at Victoria College.

Mr. MacPherson left his son's Whitevale home with a large St. Bernard dog to go for a walk Sunday afternoon. A few hours later the dog returned without Mr. MacPherson and immediately a search was launched. Police and a posse of about 50 men are still scouring the Whitevale area for the missing man.

Fears Worst

Professor MacPherson said that at first he believed his father had gone for a longer walk than usual since it was a nice day. "Later", he said, "I thought he had been picked up by a motorist but now that he hasn t showed up I fear for the worst."

Early reports indicate that he seemed to have lost his way for about 8.30 p.m. Sunday he queried residents as to the whereabouts of his son's home which he knew to be behind a white church. There are three white churches in the immediate vicinity and these seem to have confused him.

After knocking at a door to enquire the way to his son's home he refused a ride saying that he would get home all right. Then he left. Mr. MacPherson did not know the district very well since he had come to live in Whitevale only about six weeks ago after leaving another son's home in Ottawa.

Seen Wandering

Another report tells that he was seen wandering in the ditch along the Markham town line about 2 a.m., Monday morning. Police are now following the lead that he was seen in Whitevale, Tuesday night.

It is feared that he may have wandered until he became exhausted and then lay down in the snow.

At 7 p.m. last night provincial police had found no further trace of the man.

Students Strike Against Expulsion By British Troops

Pinneberg, Germany—(Unipress)—Latvian, Lithuanian and Estonian refugee students at the Baltic University in this German village 15 miles northwest of Hamburg went on strike against an order by British military authoritis to disband the study centre within 72 hours and move to the D.P. camp at Eutin, a village southeast of Kiel.

The students protested strongly against the expulsion in the middle of the semester and declared that the British occupation authorities gave no reason for the order which would mean the end of an opportunity for 800 Baltic students to continue their studies.

The D.P. students indicated they would refuse to follow the military order until an answer to a petition to the British government had been received.

earn enough to cover all their fees in part-time or summer jobs.

The present bursary system is inadequate. Present bursary grants cover only a fraction of the students needing them.

To correct these conditions—the fees research group urged that: the increased operational costs of the University be fully met by increased government grants; there be an immediate lowering of fees to the 1946 level; fees be lowered progressively by government absorption of the University deficit, aiming ultimately at free and equal opportunity for all qualified university students; the provision of more bursaries similar to the Dominion-Provincial type now provided.

New Year's Baby – Unipress Is International In Scope

(C.U.P.—McGill)

With student editors in Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Norway, Sweden and Holland as special correspondents, "Unipress," an international feature and news exchange serpice, came into being early in the New Year.

The idea for the exchange of stories on living conditions, student organizations and trends in thought came as a result of the International Student Service seminar in Germany last summer when it was found that many editors of student newspapers were among the delegates from 16 nations.

European students were particularly keen to exchange articles. A meeting was therefore called in the 300-year-old castle in Ploen, near Kiel in the British zone of Germany, to lay the plans for the exchange of ideas. Student representatives of 16 nations favored the formation of "Unipress."

Jean-Yves Grenon of the University of Montreal and Clyde Kennedy of McGill were given the responsibility of trying to organize a North American bureau of "Unipress." A European bureau was set up in Amsterdam and has been operating for several weeks. Boelie Poolman of Leiden University heads the bureau in Holland.

Articles are forwarded to the Dutch bureau by correspondents in various European countries and the Dutch students translate them into English. The articles then are sent to Montreal for distribution to Canadian and American student papers. While the problem of translating materials has been a tremendous one the Dutch students have done an expert job. Most Dutch university students speak at least four languages.

The Managing Board of the Bureau in Montreal has declared that many problems have yet to be solved, such as the difference in viewpoints in various countries on how to prepare material for publication, but is satisfied that definite contacts have been established and encouraging progress has been made in the exchange of articles.

Articles gathered from Canadian and American student newspapers and from special writers are being sent to the Amsterdam bureau for translation and distribution to European papers.

The 20 member papers of Canadian University Press voted at the recent conference in Quebec to give "Unipress" a year's trial and to assist the organization in every way possible.

The Canadian Committee of International Student Service has given the American bureau financial assistance to get the service started. If it is found that "Unipress" can provide a valuable exchange of ideas and provide useful contacts with European students, the Managing Board will seek the support of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

The Managing Board of "Unipress" pointed out that when NFCUS rejected affiliation with the International Union of Students at the NFCUS conference in Montreal at the end of December, the representatives of the student councils of universities across Canada declared themselves in favor of promoting contacts ith European students.

NFCUS Program On Air To Publicize Work

A program or series of programs sponsored by the CBC, and broadcast from Toronto, will go on the air soon to publicize the work of NFCUS and give a report on the recent conference.

Peter Dobell, IV Trinity, Director of Radio Programs, is negotiating with the CBC, and the broadcast is scheduled for a national hook-up to appear as soon as possible. It will explain to students across Canada the significance of the December conference, and publicize the advantages that can be gained by NFCUS for Canadian University students.

Cricket at U of T Is Association Plan

The question of cricket at Varsity was discussed at a meeting of the Ontario Cricket Association Wednesday.

U. of T. graduate, Craufurd Martin, president of the Ontario Association, presided at last night's meeting. Many other former U. of T. men were present including Bill Bell, Chairman of the Canadian Cricket Association; and Henry Hussey, secretary of the Ontario Association.

There is a possibility of organizing a team in which both students and members of the faculty can participate. Cricketers, past and present, who would be interested in playing some cricket next Summer, are asked to send their names to C. R. Matheson, 132 St. George St. MI 8457.

Last-placed Gaels Meet Varsity Blues In Tonight's Tilt

By HAL HOLDEN

Varsity Blues get back into the swirl of Intercollegiate action tonight when they play hotsts to last-placed Queen's at the Arena. There will be a dance in the Drill Hall immediately after the game in celebration of the Blues' first league victory of 1949.

Gaels in Cellar

The tricolor have yet to win a game this season and are sunk in the league cellar. But the Gaels always pop up with one of their better games against Varsity and tonight's affair should prove no exception.

If this means anything, Queen's lost to the powerful University of Michigan sextet by a 6-5 count last Saturday in Ann Arbor. In their two-game series with Wolverines the Blues were set back on their rompers 12-1 and 6-4. But Varsity is in second place in the college loop with two wins and a loss while the lads from Kingston have yet to enter the win column. Maybe the Tricolor is on its way up the ladder.

Gaels' Main Threat

Fast-skating Don Murray, dependable centre was the big noise for Queen's in the Michigan game and he is one man the Blues will have to tie up if they are going to notch another win.

New Blue blood will be seen in Bud Hayes on defence and Bill Paterson a newcomer among the snipers. Bob LaRose has recovered from a jaw injury sustained in a preseason workout and will be patrolling the blue line for the first time this year.

It Really Pays To Attend All Lectures

A member of The Varsity staff who is not in the habit of attending formal lectures has a legitimate complaint.

Just before Christmas a friendly well-wisher told this staffer that there was an examination coming up in one of his courses. Much against his better judgment he got up in the morning—and wrote the exam.

When the professor posted the list of results the staffer's name was among those above the line. Now he is complaining that he has learned since that the test he tried was in a course that he will not take until next year—if he passes. His deathless quote: "I wondered why it was so tough."

"Spicy Tabloid" Says Ubyssey After Varsity Win

Commenting on the award of the Bracken Trophy at the recent CUP Conference, the Daily Ubyssey, student publication of the University of British Columbia had this to say:

The Daily Ubyssey makes a polite curtsy today in accepting the bouquets of four of Canada's leading newspaper editors. The four judges in a Canadian University Press Competition, gave second place award for editorial leadership to, you've guessed it, The Daily Ubyssey.

The Varsity, seasoned daily of the University of Toronto, a spicy little tabloid that has vigorously sharpened its claws on the backs of Ontario's Conservative regime and the Tory Toronto Globe and Mail, walked off with the Bracken Trophy for editorials, offered, oddly enough, by the former leader of the Progressive Conservatives.

The frank pillars of type found in The Daily Ubyssey were second only to The Varsity's outspoken offerings, the judges decided after plowing through the 20 college papers that make up the Canadian University Press.

Their award seems to give a bit of weight to our words and for just a moment we pause to let the altar light shine upon us. And so, with our muzzles reloaded for 40 more issues we remind you—you'll be hearing from us.

First, a bow towards St. James Street and a word of congratulations to The McGill Daily, the staid journal that borrows its crepe from The Gazette of that city. Judges of the Canadian University Press gave it the Southam Trophy as the best college daily in Canada for general coverage, an award that it has captured several times before.

No Contributions Cause of Gripes Says Acta Editor

The small number of contributions to Acta Victoriana was the explanation given by editor Doug Fisher for the fact that this magazine was considered by many Victoria College students to be too literary and unrepresentative of student opinion.

"The Acta has tended to emphasize articles because few creative works have been contributed", Fisher stated. "It is also difficult to include topical works in a monthly magazine."

A poem which appeared in the January issue, "Abstract Conceptions" by Peter Grant, motivated a great deal of student criticism on moral and religious grounds, he said.

"Acta Victoriana was certainly not an English Language and Literature clique", Fisher emphasized. Contributions come from students in many courses, he stated.

Fisher felt that students were placing emphasis on many different activities, consequently they do not have the leisure time to write for magazines such as the Acta.

Sell All Vic At-Home Tickets In Two Hours, Saddens Many

Tickets for the Victoria College At-Home, to be held on February 1, are as scarce as ducats for a Western football game, and nobody is happy about the situation.

The executive of the Victoria College Union is wondering what to do about the 50 people who have signed a list indicating that they want tickets, and the many more who would like them but considered it useless to sign.

The 600 tickets that were put on sale Monday went like the proverbial hot-cakes, much to the executive's surprise. They attributed the fast sale to the advanced date of the affair which they considered better than January 11 and 12, when the dance was originally scheduled to run.

The V.C.U. executive is currently puzzling over a satisfactory solution to the problem.

Movie Review

Snake Pit

"The Snake Pit" is almost a great picture. But not quite. In it Hollywood has almost come of age. It seems to realize at most points that a movie can be a medium in its own right. It has used the camera eye with great imagination. One scene which illustrates the picture's title is carried out with an awe-inspiring brilliance.

Olivia deHavilland, who carries the bulk of the picture on her shoulders, also carries the large part of the honours. Her part is portrayed with wonderful understanding. There can be little doubt that she deserves the Academy Award for the year's best female performance.

Mary Jane Ward's excellent book was the subject for the Hollywood epic. And strangely enough, the picture people have altered her story very little. They have added a supposed explanation for the madness of Miss Cunningham (Olivia deHavilland). They have resorted to a stock Hollywood explanation which puts the blame on Olivia's childhood. This explanation has been used over and over again (e.g. Spellbound).

With the aid of the camera we get a view of the inside workings of a mind and a house of madminds. The pictures seen in the institution are for the most part realistic. If the characters seen there did not ocasionally smell of Hollywood's stereotyped characterizations we could learn much from the actions of the insane. Although the audience tends to laugh at them—often through need of emotional relaxation—they may only be laughing at exaggerated replicas of their own actions.

Anatole Litvak is to be complimented in his fearless choice of topic and his excellent direction of the almost perfect picture.

I complain at the scene in the dance at the asylum where someone sings "Going Home." Up until this point the cinema city gives us a perfect picture. Then it seems to recall that this is a Hollywood production. Immediately it throws in this phony dramatic scene. "Honest, Mr. Litvack, why did you do it?"

Aside from these small faults, "The Snake Pit" is a picture not to be missed.

Book Exchange To Open, Run By Student Council At W. Virginia Varsity

A new book exchange to be run "by the students and for the students" was set up yesterday by the Student Council.

Joel Hannah '49 was appointed by the student body president, William Lockhart law 2, to make the necessary arrangements for the exchange, which will be located in the Mountainlair.

The student exhange will begin operation approximately Jan. 24 and be open for two weeks. It will function on a non-profit basis, charging only slight fee to cover the cost of an attendant.

Complete details on the proper procedure of selling and exchanging books will be published in a later issue of the Athenaeum, Hannah announced yesterday.

University officials have given their approval for the establishment of a student book exchange.

The council, with a committee headed by Hannah, began studying similar projets earlier in the year. The plan is designed to eliminate losses students now suffer in selling books at the regular book stores.

Under the proposed setup, students will be able to set their own price on used books they wish to sell. They will be notified when their book is sold through the student exchange.

Bishop Neill Speaks Sunday At Opening of UCM Program

The first University of Toronto Christian Mission will open its five day program Sunday, Jan. 16 at 7.30 p. m., with a service in Convocation Hall. The service will be conducted by Bishop Stephen Neill, assistant to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The subject of Bishop Neill's address on Sunday will be "Has God anything to say". This topic will be one of five under a general heading "God Speaks in 1949". The other four subjects will be delivered in Convocation Hall at the following hours and days; Monday, 5.05 p. m., the topic, "Who is this Jesus Christ?"; Tuesday, 5.05 p. m., the topic, "What is wrong with all of us?"; Wednesday, 5.05 p. m., subject, "Make up your mind"; and Thursday, 5.05 p. m., subject, "Living as a Christian".

During the week Bishop Neill will conduct a question period in West Hall, UC at 1.30 p. m. To insure that questions will be considered, students are requested to write them out and submit them to the SCM office, Hart House before the meeting.

Rev. Lex Miller of Union Theological Seminary in New York will be in charge of the Mission at Ajax.

Ajax Missioner

REV. LEX MILLER

Rev. Miller is the author of "Christianity and My Job".

Other activities of the five-day Mission will consist of a series of noon hour lectures to be held in Hart House Debates Room, University College Room 8, Victoria College Chapel, The Mining Building, The Mechanical Building and the Medical Theatre Clinics.

The hours for the lectures in Hart House, University College and Victoria College Chapel will be between 1.30 and 2.00 p. m. For the Mining Building and the Mechanical Building, they will be 12.30-1.00 p. m. The lectures in the Medical Theatre Clinics are between 1.10 and 2.00 p. m.

A Play On Words

A Play On Words (J. M. Dent & Son, $3.50) contains a collection of twelve plays written for presentation by the CBC. It is, I believe, the first attempt to bring together the work of any of our best radio dramatists, and while a few of the plays are no longer topical, the book contains some of the best radio scripts broadcast in the past few years over Canadian stations. Mr. Sinclair is an amazing personality as well as a competent playwright. His work combines dry wit with a serious dramatic purpose and he exploits original radio techniques to the full. He realizes moreover that a good script is not enough to make a good play; it must be supplemented by all the props which are available to the radio writer—sound effects, careful use of music bridges, and above all variety in the actual techniques. One can tell from Mr. Sinclair's stage directions that he envisions the whole production.

"Oedipus the King," the most memorable adaptation presented over Stage 48 demonstrates the author's ability to convey the tenseness and rising crescendo of tragedy. The use of a chorus links the work into a coherent whole flowing smoothly to the ultimate climax. The rhythm and poetry of the Sophocles tragedy are conveyed through the medium of lucid blank verse.

A number of the plays recall the war years, stripping away the illusion of peace so readily accepted after VJ Day. Of these, "Day of Victory", notable for its subtlety and prophetic irony, is most impressive. Mr. Sinclair achieves here the level which Norman Corwin attempted in "On a Note of Triumph". He packs the same emotional wallop as Corwin but his work lacks the histrionic quality which makes much of the latter's work unreadable now that the war is over. The documentaries, notably "The Case Against Cancer", and the humorous plays, especially "All About Emily" and "We All Hate Toronto" demonstrate Mr. Sinclair's aptitude for other types of drama.

It is clear that Mr. Sinclair was concerned to include in this collection that portion of his work which has behind it a serious dramatic purpose. His emphasis on the current need for constructive thought and action in plays like "You Can't Stop Now" and "Day of Victory" is most refreshing. Few plays have been presented on the CBC which attack prejudice and muddled political thinking so effectively. I have one criticism of this collection however; some of the lyrical plays in the Golden Bough series might have been substituted for a few mediocre selections which have been included. Takesn as a whole A Play on Words is a most interesting and valuable experiment.

UBC Jammed Hall Is Fire Hazard

Vancouver, Jan. 14 — (CUP) — Overflow meetings in the University of British Columbia auditorium may be broken up by firemen unless students take steps to control crowds, the university fire chief warned recently.

In a letter to the students' council the fire chief told councillors it was the responsibility of students to stop "standing room only" jams in the hall.

The recent meeting at which England's "Red Dean", Rev. Hewlett Johnson, addressed close to 3,000 students showed "the most flagrant disregard for safety regulations I have ever seen", the chief said.

It was impossible, he said, for firemen to push their way through the packed auditorium to stop smoking in the audience.

The Varsity Blues basketball team get their first chance since the Christmas holidays to break into the win column against American colleges when they take on Buffalo State Teachers College in the main attraction of the first of the '48-'49 Athletic Nights in Hart House Saturday night.

The Blues have played seven games against U.S. quintets so far this season and have yet to leave the floor on the long end of the score.

However, there is a good deal of hope for a Toronto win on Saturday p. m. Why? Well, the Blues met Buffalo State last Dec. 2 in Buffalo, and lost by the narrow margin of 44-36. Even an engineer can figure out that that score gives Buffalo a winning margin of only eight points.

And when one takes into consideration the fact that the Blues were down 18-2 at the end of the first quarter in that game, there is more hope still for a local triumph.

The only trouble is that word from the Blues' wigwam is anything but good.

High-scoring forward Glen Pettinger, who popped in 25 points last Tuesday night out in Ajax when the Blues played an exhibition game with the Ajax "A" Interfaculty squad, was suddenly laid up with the "flu" yesterday, and according to coach Masterson, is a very doubtful starter tomorrow night.

Furthermore, Ed Brennan, also laid up with the "flu" (the boys are all blaming it on Jack Gray—he had it last week; but there is no truth to the rumor that Masterson is considering demoting Gray to the U.C. 94th's for spreading the germ)—getting back to Brennan, Masterson is as yet uncertain whether the flashy little St. Mike's forward will play or not.

Tony Adams suffered a sprained ankle during the week, and like Brennan will not likely see much action. Wally Zeaton is suffering from bruised ribs which he incurred in the Ajax game.

GIBSON GETS 15

Keith Gibson scored 15 points to pace UC Fourths to a 43-11 win over Forestry B in a major basketball game yesterday. Ken Davis added 10 for the winners.

Simpson with six, Ed Lindgren with five, Art Lewis with three, Weinberg with two, and Sukmanowski and Al Lewis with one each were the other UC marksmen.

Sid Sheldon scored six for Forestry, Scott added four, and Herridge hooped a free shot for the other.

Our Readers Write

ALARMING SITUATION

The Editor, The Varsity:

In your issue of January 7th, you published a letter from Mr. R. Harden, IV Modern Languages and Literatures, in which he laments the so-called "alarming situation" arising in the Modern Languages and Literatures course. Mr. Harden states that "the primary purpose for which the Modern Languages and Literatures course was devised—the production of high school teachers" is now obsolete due to the fact that the teaching profession can no longer absorb the number of students graduating in this course. Other reasonable possibilities are out. The position of a translator in the business world is never accompanied by "a prodigious salary or the possibilities of promotion". Civil service positions are closed to him because a knowledge of history or economics, political science or law is required. Mr. Harden now goes on to search for "a means of remedying the unilateral object of this course". He suggests that the course be broadened by the introduction of a series of lectures in history, a course in English, (tsk! tsk! Mr. Harden. Aren't you aware that English is one of the options offered to you in your course? See Arts Calendar, page 87.) And finally, a concise course in political science and economics. Mr. Harden has now made it possible for graduates of the Modern Languages and Literatures course to enter the civil service.

It is quite apparent that the writer of this letter has not a clear conception of the purpose of the Arts course in the university. He seems to think that all university courses are conceived with a commercial end in view and that the usual field for graduates of this course becoming overcrowded, the course itself should be altered so as to provide another outlet, namely, the civil service. We do not overlook the fact that graduates of this course must earn a living, but we object to Mr. Harden's mistaken idea of the purpose of the course. We agree with Cardinal Newman when he says, "If then a practical end must be assigned to a university course, I say it is that of training good members of society. Its art is the art of social life, and its end is fitness for the world."

Surely knowledge is not just a synonym for dollars and cents as Mr. Harden would imply. The Modern Languages and Literatures course has not as its objective the production of high school teachers but the study of the literatures and civilization of the modern world. If this study has no value in itself, then why teach modern languages in our high schools?—Only to assure a steady flow of modern language teachers? Let's get off the treadmill, Mr. Harden. If this be so, surely someone would have put an end to the little game by now.

As for Mr. Harden's solution to the problem of how to provide more outlets for the Modern Languages graduates, why stop the broadening at civil service requirements? Perhaps we could round out the new course with a few hours per week of forest entomology and parasitology, practical nursing, accounting and food chemistry. But now that Modern Languages and Literatures has breadth, we wonder just how much depth it has. Any broadening of this already heavy course could not be accomplished without sacrifice.

We regret to hear that Modern Languages and Literatures does not come up to Mr. Harden's expectations, but we do hope that the four years he has been exposed to it have not been entirely in vain.

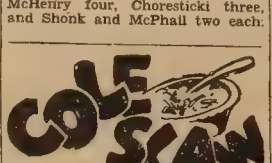
TODAY IS LAST DAY FOR

ROBINETTE DEBATE ENTRIES

ENTER IN LIT OFFICE

In Case You Have Been Wondering —

On Thursday and Friday, Jan. 20 and 21, the men and women of University College, including all students of PHE, will vote on the question of amalgamation of the Lit and the W.U.A.



The question arises: "After the plebiscite, what?"

Men and women will be given ballots of a different color so that separate results for each will be ascertained. If a majority of either men or women or both vote "No" on the first plebiscite question, "Do you approve of amalgamation in principle?" then the whole subject will be dropped and the results of the subsequent five questions on the ballot will be disregarded.

If, however, the first question receives a favorable vote from both men and women, the opinions expressed in the subsequent questions will act as a guide, though not necessarily strictly adhered to, in framing a constitution under which the Lit and W U A would be merged. This constitution would then have to be approved by two successive meetings of each society, with the possibility of amendments from each and the necessity for further reference and compromise.

Once, however, such a constitution was approved in this way, neither men nor women could withdraw except by further constitutional amendments passing two successive meetings of the amalgamated society.

Well, dear readers, the postage stamp state of Israel has, after many years of deliberate preparation, become aggresive. The peace of the world now trembles in the balance, and Britain marshals her armed might to protect us from this ominous threat. This is probably seditious, but we don't think that Britain, or the rest of the world has very much to fear from Israel's converted tug-boats. Albeit, we're very sorry to see the state of Israel being so aggressive. We wish they could see the wisdom of submitting to unrestricted arming of the Arab countries by Britain. As far as we can see, that's the only way of pacifying our aroused guardian and guaranteeing the peace of the world. After all, it's only right that the proven, stalwart Arab friends of democracy be armed to fulfill their traditional role.

Intermeds. In Waterloo On Monday

The intermediate hockey team are off to Waterloo Monday afternoon in search of their first win. In view of the fact that O.A.C. beat the Waterloos 9-0, Coach Jack Life is confident of victory.

Our boys have been playing exhibition games with senior teams up at Lindsay and here, and are now rounding into shape.

The addition of Don "Rocky" Howson from the big Blues will no doubt bolster their offensive drive. Centres Griff Pearson and Joe Kane are in good shape and flanked by such players as Bill Patterson and Clare Morrison should be able to rack up a fair score. Red Waldron and Cooper are the defense stalwarts and make an imposing front wall in front of goalie Foote.

2 Teams Win 5-1 In Mural Hockey

SPS Seniors trounced Vic Seniors and Trinity B's extended their undefeated string at the expense of St. Mike's B's yesterday in the inter faculty hockey loop. The score of both games was, coincidentally, 5-1.

McDonald scored twice and Veenus, Sedgely and McKay added a counter apiece for the Skuleboys against one for Robertson in the Vic column.

Jardine of St. Mike's B's was the lone scorer for his team as he hit paydirt once. The Trinity barrage was led by Hilborn who pushed the puck across twice, while Whitehead, Hall and Stewart garnered a point each.

Canadian Oil

the task of oil survey teams is to find likely-looking pockets, and drill to test them for oil content.

Some of the oil-finding methods demonstrated in the film were: aerial photography, geological surveys, and the explosion of dynamite charges, the effect of which is recorded on a seismograph and used to plot rock structure.

Mr. Fournier said that the cost of the survey shown in the film was $1,000,000. No oil was found. Other searches had been even more expensive. "Operation Muskeg", on the Muskeg River, Alberta, had required the construction of a 70-mile road into the drilling site. It also had produced no oil.

Forced To Trot Like Fox Diary Reveals

Tely Has Grigori Tokaev, Globe Has K. MacTaggart But We Have Diary

By HARRY RASKY

DEAR DIARY

Oh dearest diary, the Toronto weather confused me and I thought it was spring. But what is more important is that Hugo was confused and that young man's fancy lightly turned to thought of me.

In one of his weaker moments he invited me to attend a big night of Athletics in Hart House on Saturday next. Hugo says that this is the first such night to be held this year and promises to be as exciting as a walk across Queen's park.

I guess I'm going to be a hostess because Hugo goes to Victoria College and they are going to be hosts with the aid of the Emmanuel men.

An Athletic Night is like a three-ring circus with everything except the rings. There are more things happening at one time than you have time to watch. Hugo says he'll pick me up (Hugo loves to pick girl's up) early because the action starts in the big Jim at seven. The Varsity seconds will take on the Y.M.H.A. seniors, and much will come off.

If we hold our seats we can watch the Buffalo State College match passes (Hugo knows all about passes; he is in Pass Arts) with the Varsity Blues. The Blues aren't blue and black anymore, because they won their first victory.

If we get tired of watching the boys bounce the ball and themselves around the floor we can go into the pool room and watch the Buffaloes in the water. There is nothing more enjoyable than watching Buffaloes in the water. They will be having an exhibition swim meet with the Varsity mermen. A water polo performance may follow.

In the little Jim there will be more basketball games going on and off. Vic IV will versus Emmanuel B and Vic VII will versus UC VIII. It sounds confusing but I know THE VARSITY knows what they are talking about. I always read it with my Corn Flakes in the morning. I like corn flakes.

Movies will also be shown on Skiing.

They are also going to have all sorts of dancing. We will be trotting like foxes in the big Jim and square dancing upstairs.

Golly, this is a perfect night of entertainment and it cost almost nothing, Hugo says. Tickets are on sale at the various colleges if there are any left.

I'm getting in training now. You know Hugo.

Sophie.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

It may seem downright sacrilegious for an Artsman to speak of Ajax in anything but unprintable terms, but when the Jaxmen insist on winning many of the major intramural events, there comes a time when pride must be stuck in the hip pocket.

Much of the credit for the Ajax (how does one use Ajax in the possessive anyway?) successes in the athletic field can be attributed to James Folwell, and his right-hand man, Patrick Sheehan. And it's Mr. Sheehan on whom we'll dwell for a while today.

Pat hails from Brooklyn, N.Y.—need I say more—and despite seven years spent beyond the environs of Bumland, still carries a trace of la Brooklynese.

He came to Canada early in the war, and spent five years in the R.C.A.F. as a P.E.I. For two years he coached and played with the R.C.A.F. basketball team overseas, and was the only Canadian serviceman to be picked to play on the R.A.F. representative 15 rugger team.

Pat's first love is basketball, and his ability has been ably demonstrated by the fact that his Ajax interfaculty team has won the intramural title for the past two seasons and appears well on the way to making it three in a row.

Pat says he isn't just trying to promote good international relations when he says that he believes Canadian athletes are just as good, and in some ways, better than Americans. "They don't get the backing the American athletes do," says Pat, "but they still produce. With better backing and greater public support Canada could readily produce athletes on a par with the United States."

"I was impressed by the way sport is conducted in the Old Country," he added. "Over there, when you walk into a dressing room after a game, it's hard to tell which team lost. Over here and in the States you can almost figure out the final score from a look into the dressing rooms." A point well-taken, Patrick, my boy—you must have taken a peek into the Western dressing room after that final football game.

Spectators Howl As Gals Play Hockey(?)

By HELEN PROVERBS

Spectators had a hilarious time witnessing a mad scramble between St. Hilda's II and Vic II in hockey yesterday. The girls wore skates, but played pretty well on their knees and seats.

Pat Ketchum of the Saints went in on her feet to score the only goal of the game.

The teams were evenly matched in that there was no team play, all 10 players went after the puck en masse, and all slapped at it hoping to connect even though the sticks were five inches off the ice—amusin' but confusin'.

Even the refs got mixed up. One gave a Vic girl a penalty while the other gave it to St. Hilda's, so they both went to the penalty box for bumping into each other and falling on their faces. One girl appeared in a new-look skirt looking like the hockey enthusiasts in the picture in Little Vic's dressing room.

The girls had lots of fun and the spectators had lots of howls.

Who's On Top?

M.L. Gardens Attracts 'B's Tomorrow

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Junior Hockey Squad move to the big time again tomorrow afternoon when they tangle with the Corner Boys in Maple Leaf Gardens. The Varsity team is deadlocked with the Marlboro Juniors for top spot in the Junior B circuit, while the Corner Boys trail behind by two points.

The game will decide whether the Junior Bees move ahead of their opponents or again result in a three way tie for top rung of the circuit. The Varsity remain unbeaten in their two games of the series since the new year while the Corner Boys have yet to break in the new year's win column.

In the last meeting between the two teams the Blue and White squad came out on top of the 4-3 score after battling all the way. Tempers ran high and there are still a few scores to settle.

Varsity's game with the Buzzers last Tuesday was quite clean, and the players played the puck rather than the man. The Corner Boys play both and tomorrow, the man, the puck, and the Juniors will have a battle on their hands.

Coach Bill Wade will have to use his strongest men for the game and he does have a few that can dish it out.

Porky MacDougall and his defencemate Mac Clement have proven very effective in this department. Porky has also shone offensively. In the last game he set up two scoring plays after carrying the puck into the opposing team's zone.

Jack Raftis, Al Conboy work together very well and these two are quite handy to have around an opposing net. The Howson, Arrowsmith, Vernon line, is one of the fastest lines of the team, and usually play a good back-checking game.

Bill Walters, Blake Sinclair, Norm Fox, Holmes, Prendergast, and Hyde, give Coach Bill Wade plenty of depth in reserves. Leuty, the net minder for the Blue and White Bees has been playing steady hockey in all the games and has saved the day many times.

This will be the third game of the second half of the schedule and the Blue Bees have seven more tilts before the play-offs. They have a good record to date and they should finish the season fairly well.

Junior Hoopsters Lace Lakeshores; Win Fourth 68-35

By JOHN KENNEDY

Barry Lowe's Varsity Junior basketeers won their fourth straight game at Hart House last night when they trimmed the Lakeshore Vics 68-35. The game was fast and for the most part well-played with Varsity's better coaching enabling them to be steadier than their more easily flustered rivals.

The first quarter was mostly scramble ball resulting from the very close checking of both teams. Gerry Freeman especially was pestering the Vics and broke up many plays before they got fairly started. Frankie Denton drew first blood for Varsity but the Vics held the juniors to a 12-9 score in the first period.

Better In Second

The teams started playing better ball in the second canto and Dave Burnstein stood out with stellar back-board work at both ends as well as throwing in six points. Jim Bonsall also looked good with his newly-developed push shot. The Lakeshore outfit was meanwhile sinking the many foul shots offered them by the juniors, by virtue of which they were able to end the half trailing 33-21.

Varsity, when they chose to use their much-practised pattern play, dazzled the Vics with foot work. This type of play seems to make the players into a smooth well co-ordinated team. Lakeshores were severely handicapped in the third quarter when they muffed several shots due to inaccurate shooting.

The Juniors got many easy baskets by using a screen on most of their shots, notably on efforts by Denton and Glover. Hamilton was terrific with his general all-round defensive play and especially his rebound work. Bird of Vics tried valiantly to keep his team in the running but it was just a case of being over-powered. He was best for them hooping 17 points to lead all scorers.

Varsity opened up fast in the last quarter, throwing in two quick baskets that seemed to shock the Lakeshores into a lethargy from which they never recovered. Big Al Dancy was the large noise in this period, playing very opportune ball that enabled him to sink six points. He also scored four out of five fouls. The whole team showed well in this particular phase sinking 12 for 17 free throws.

VARSITY — Bonsall 6, Braithwaite 2, Brown 2, Dancy 14, Carruthers 8, Freeman 5, Denton 7, Burnstein 10, Hamilton 1, Carr 6, Glover 6.

UN Cannot Protect Nor Offer Security, Pact May—Pearson

"We are only fooling ourselves if we believe the United Nations in its present form can protect or offer security to any country," External Affairs Minister Lester B. "Mike" Pearson stated Friday at a meeting of the International Relations Club.

Speaking to the I.R.C. on the Paris Conference and the Atlantic Pact, Mr. Pearson said: "Over Europe there is hanging the pall of one haunting emotion—the dread spectre of a future war."

Reasons For Fear

Analyzing this atmosphere of insecurity, he said the three most important reasons for it were fear of Communism, the weakness of the European countries, and the failure of the United Nations to live up to the purpose for which it was founded.

"The menace of Communism is two-fold—Communism from without and Communism from within," Pearson said. "Never before has there been a menace of this kind a great destroying influence harnessed to an imperialistic power. The fifth columns of Herr Hitler were Boy Scouts compared to the fifth columns of the Eastern powers."

European countries are still in a weakened condition after the war and are unable to stand up to aggressor nations, he said.

U.N. Can't Protect

"And the weak nations of Europe cannot rely on the U.N. for protection," Pearson added. "The U.N. is quite capable of doing its job. But inside the U.N. the great powers are unable to work together. In my opinion the main reason for this difficulty is the U.S.S.R. But, whoever is to blame the result is the same."

"It is almost impossible to get on with the Russians in the U.N. They interpret every subject in terms of power politics. Of course, the democratic powers sometimes look on problems in the light of power politics too, but there is always somebody to trip us up."

"There was not one debate at the meetings at which I was present that the Russians made any effort to co-operate," Pearson stated.

Scrapping Not Answer

The answer to what is to be done in the face of such "fuss and frustration" is not the scrapping of the U.N., the minister said. "Such a course would be folly. The United Nations does serve one purpose. It provides a platform on which the collective conscience of man can express itself. We can't reform the U.N. by altering its charter."

Pearson said the solution lies in the formation of groups of like-minded states inside the U.N. similar to the North Atlantic Union. "The North Atlantic Union is the foundation on which our foreign policy in future years must be based," he added. "Such a system of unions would not be an end, but merely a means to an end."

"By such a system we will have collective action by peace-loving states which will give pause to

The bible With The Blue Cover

She wanted to get the Health Service phone number so she stopped a young man in the corridor with, "May I borrow your bible, please?"

Looking somewhat astonished, the young man hesitated. Then with a smile, he whipped out a small black book out of his jacket pocket and handed it to her.

Trying to retain the air of the poised senior she was, the young woman hastily explained she had meant the Student's Handbook—the bible with the small "b"—and returned The Holy Bible to its obliging owner.

"We Are Mature" Is Claim Ask for Control by Students

A desire for a greater degree of student supervision over undergraduate affairs seems to be indicated from the results of an informal survey of students conducted over the week-end.

All but one of the students interviewed maintained that students should have a greater degree of control over student affairs. The interviews showed that students feel that when they reach university age they are mature enough to handle matters which directly concern them.

The sole dissenting opinion came from R. C. Urquhart, III University College. "Students have enough responsibility now," Urquhart asserted. "If they were given any more they couldn't handle it." Asked just what degree of responsibility students do have now, Urquhart replied that he wasn't sure.

Pro And Anti

The Students' Administrative Council came in for both condemnation and praise. Dick Rosenburg, III, University College, charged that the SAC does not represent the students. "I feel that we have student government in theory only," declared Rosenburg. "The SAC is supposed to represent the students but too often it acts as a clique, responsible only to itself. I have attended several SAC meetings and I am always disgusted by the ceaseless bickering."

One freshman expressed surprise at the state of affairs at the University. Concerning the regulation passed by the Caput just before the Dean of Canterbury visited the University last fall which banned the use of University buildings for guest speakers during lecture hours, Vern Turner, I, U. C. said: "I always though universities were places where we could hear men like him. I'm sure that if we had true student government there would have been no difficulty over hearing him."

Pat Cole, IV, U. C., felt that it wasn't "just a coincidence" that the new ruling concerning the use of University buildings by guest speakers came just before the visit of the Dean of Canterbury.

Students On Caput

Students interviewed were strong in their condemnation of the Caput's policy of not allowing any student representatives on that body. Jim Nichols, II, U. C. thought students should be allowed on the Caput so that the Caput "could get ideas of what the student thinks." Joe Sullivan, III Meds, felt that student discipline should be administered "through a student body." Sullivan felt that the present Caput is "traditionalist", and that is why they have not allowed students a voice in discipline. Pat Gough, III Vic, "strongly" disapproved of the Caput's action to date in not allowing any student representation on student matters.

Gough felt that the Caput, by restricting the power of students over their own affairs, was "putting a restriction on the whole aim of the university." Gough asserted that we come to university not only for an academic education, but also "to learn how to live and get along in society."

Run Own Affairs

Mike Fedor, III University College, stated that students should be allowed to run their own affairs. "Who can say better than the students how those affairs should be regulated," Fedor asked. "Naturally, there should be representatives from the University on any student group charged with student discipline. The strong point however should be student opinion."

Victoria President Ill, Physician Orders Rest

President W. T. Brown of Victoria University has been ordered to bed for complete rest by his physician and will be unable to fulfill his duties at the college for several weeks.

Tired by overwork, the president was forced to leave a lecture Wednesday afternoon. Although his condition was not much improved over the weekend, his doctor says that Dr. Brown's health will be restored by rest.

SAC Announces Mel Breen Winner Script Contest

The winners in the script writers contest conducted by the Radio Committee of the SAC were announced yesterday by Peter Dobell, radio director.

First prize of $75, donated by the CBC, was won by Mel Breen, Graduate Studies, for his half-hour psychological drama script. The winning entry was entitled, "My Brother's Keeper." In making the award the judges, Miss Alice Frick, CBC script editor, Mr. G. Kristjanson, assistant script editor of CBC and Robert Gill, director Hart House theatre had this to say of the winning submission, "the author has very cleverly used the time to make character differentiation, to build suspense, and to show the varied moods and human reactions of the four people who are under the strain of the experience they are sharing."

The script submitted by Bill O'Connor, III Trinity, was of such calibre as to merit honorable mention. O'Connor's submission to the contest was entitled, "Tomorrow Will Sing." The judges commended Mr. O'Connor for his competent handling of dialogue and characterization.

The first prize winner will be produced for CBC audiences on Feb. 3, on the program "The Varsity Story", a regular feature every Thursday from 9 to 9:30 p.m. over CJBC.

D.P.

From Teaching To Sweeping

By HERB WOOD

He is small, with fine hands, closely-cropped, iron-gray hair, and has a sensitive face. He takes pride in his work of sweeping the floors and feels at home in the classrooms and among the students of the University. He is a D.P. . . .

His name doesn't matter; in fact, it could be a death warrant to innocent people—people behind the "Iron Curtain", in Hungary. Being in this country only ten months, his English is strongly seasoned with European sauce, but still not unpalatable.

Back home he was a graduate civil engineer. Because Hungary is such a "poor country", specialists are not encouraged and there is not much chance for practical work. Looking over his creased Engineering Certificate, we saw that his qualifications included mathematics, mechanics, geodesy, general contraction, bridge building, road and railway building and hydraulics. He graduated in '27-'28 and began tutoring to pay for further study to enable him to fulfill his main ambition—to be a full-fledged professor. Wrinkling his forehead with concentration he said:

"In Hungary ees only vone technical university and much people vell be engineer . . . in my class 350 peoples—about . . . but fall out in first year 150 because the study ees deeficult . . . the poor are go in other faculty—phi-li-sophi, law (veery many peoples learn law in Hungary) . . . now the reech peoples geeve money for private teacher . . . thees private teacher, teach thees subjects: math-the-matique, me-can-nique . . ."

The Hungarian Universities have a unique way of grading papers. The grades run from six to two. As we remember: 'seex—means first class man, five—gude man, four—meedle man, three—enough, twoo—you must go."

Over there they use psychology with the students. Those who go to pieces during a written exam, have the choice of trying it orally afterward, to try for a better result. While we're on the topic of oddities—we blinked when he told us the Hungarian version of a "sheepskin" is a "dogskin". Evidently, over there, every dog has his day.

Another thing, to be a professor one must be a "veery gude man" because there is only one technological university. Further, such young professors as we see here on the campus are unknown. If a man of 40 becomes a professor in Hungary, that's a sensation.

During the war he repaired bomb-damaged houses and was no "soldier or politician." After the war, he went to Austria and worked at a variety of jobs. One day, while working on road construction, he was called into the office to solve a problem in road building. It involved finding the sine of something or other by calculus and his reward was a soft office job. Then

NFCUS At Other Campuses

(The National Federation of Canadian University Students has often been accused of weakness and apathy. Some indication of NFCUS' strength on other campuses is given in the following editorial, reprinted from the Western Gazette.)

Is the National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS) as weak on other campuses as it is at Western?

Judging from student newspapers from coast to coast, there is, without exception, great apathy towards the federation. Toronto leads in promoting NFCUS activities by informing students through The Varsity of the advantages and value of the organization.

In many places it appears that one or two people in the university determine NFCUS policy. This is not student representation; it means that a group of about 100 students sets a national policy for 58,000 potential citizens.

The Maritime universities, while they will continue to affiliate, have decided that "reviewing the events of the past year in NFCUS, not one practical down-to-earth accomplishment could be found". St. Francis Xavier University at Antigonish, N.S., has disaffiliated. Manitoba's student council had trouble convincing itself that it was worth while to send delegates to this year's conference.

These reactions are unjustified because NFCUS has been and is advantageous. It could do greater things if it got support and interest.

Let's get back to this NFCUS-IUS affiliation problem.

Grant Livingstone has warned that recommendations to affiliate with the International Unio of Students would have to be qualified by a much stronger NFCUS, widely and actively supported by Canadian students. Maritime universities have decided that before NFCUS jumps to international status it should achieve a "consolidation of . . . (its own) . . . national organization."

NFCUS has thus far made no concerted attempt to get student opinion on its policies. Of the three Canadian delegates to the IUS, Grant Livingstone alone has given a report which was circulated to campus committees.

Some student papers gave the report no attention at all. The only student action resulting from publicity of any type were debates held at Toronto. There has been no student action at Western.

NFCUS is the organ which is national and could be international through which students can actually DO something—set policies, construct and carry out programs. It could be as valuable to students as parliament is to the citizens of our country.

Why the apathy? Why can't we get behind an organization which represents us?

Western's NFCUS delegates who voluntarily accepted the job and its responsibilities, have made an effort to carry out those responsibilities. But the apathy shown on all side has decreased their ardor and discouraged them.

Get A Seat With Pingboom's Street Car Kit

Do you yearn to ride in comfort in one of Toronto's streetcars? Do your feet ache from standing in crowded cars hours on end? You can ride comfortably on street cars for the rest of your life if you take one simple step—Purchase a Pingboom Streetcar kit.

The kit is designed to do three things—get a seat for healthy young people, prevent elbows in the face when seated and lastly abolish the indignant glare of standing matrons who remind you of mother.

The contents of the kit are divided into two sections, one to fool others into thinking that you need a seat and the other to give you room to breathe once you are seated.

Disguises available include:

Night-shift worker: Crayon for etching lines of weariness on face, eye-shadow, lunchpail with sandwich. When standing with this disguise it is quite easy to get a seat in the following manner. Fall heavily into the lap of the person sitting nearest you feigning sleep. Generally a seat is offered after two or three attempts.

Elderly person: Talcum powder for hair, grey wig, collapsible cane, fine crayon for etching lines of age and Ascott tie. Wheeze a bit.

Pregnant woman: Suitable for

Redecorated Hall New Coed Room For Vic Students

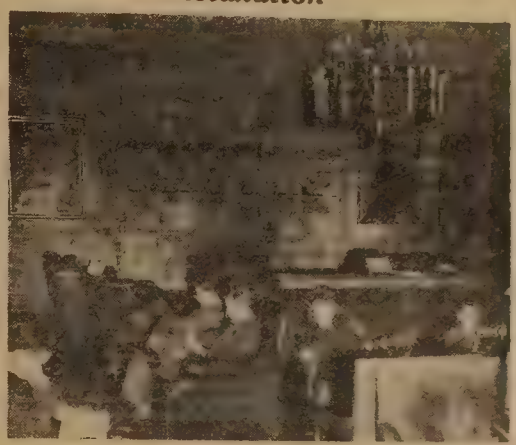
Opening of the new Victoria College coed common room will take place today, announces V.C.U. president Keith Davey.

Extensive decorating with new drapes, furniture and tile flooring in the Alumni Hall has readied the new common room for use starting this week. "The total cost of the redecorating was several thousand dollars but it has been money well spent," Davey stated.

The new room will be open weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Saturdays from 10 to 12 a.m. No card playing or lunch eating will be allowed in the room but the V.C.U. and the college authorities have agreed to permit smoking.

"Starting this week, regular weekly Friday noon hour programs will take place in the room," Davey said. "This week Bob Masterson will show films of the Mulock Cup and the Varsity-Western games. Musical programs, singsongs, skits, and so on are planned for following weeks."

Davey said the V.C.U. was hoping to purchase a radio-record player in the near future.



"The new common room as it stands now is the best of its kind on the campus," Davey added, "and we hope to make it perfect with the helpful suggestions and criticisms of the students."

Relaxation

One of the few quiet places around the campus is the Hart House reading room. No mundane considerations such as studying or cramming up for exams is allowed to sully the pure atmosphere of this sanctum. School books must be left outside and no volumes may be taken from the room. The Library evenings are also held in this room.

Hart House Cabinet Houses Valuable Viol Collection

Back in the days when Shakespeare was laying the foundations of a great reputation, other artists were turning out equally brilliant masterpieces in other lines of endeavor.

The craftsmen who fashioned the instruments of the times were particularly gifted. Each piece was a work of perfection, minute attention being paid to the slightest detail.

The stringed instruments of the time were the viols, the predecessors of the modern-day violins. They were flat-backed instruments with three to six strings. Played with a primitive bow, their tone quality was much the same as the violin although more reedy and less clear.

Hart House has a collection of six of these medieval instruments. Bought in 1925 or 1926 by the Massey Foundation, they are on permanent loan to Hart House.

The six viols range in size from the viol de gamba, the cello's ancestor, to the smallest one of the lot, about the size of the ordinary violin. The body of the viol is usually thicker than the body of the violin and the neck is broader. Each of the Hart House collection has an exquisitely carved head adorning the end of the neck.

The exact history of the Hart House viols seems to be a mystery but that they are authentic has been verified by several experts. They were inspected in 1929 by Dr. Edmund H. Fellowes of St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, who is a great authority on Tudor music.

Whenever the viols are played, getting proper music for them is somewhat of a problem. There is very little of the original music written for the instruments left. Leo Smith of the Royal Conservatory staff has had to write his own music for the concerts he gives on the viols.

The instruments are kept on the third floor of Hart House in a large 17th century chest. Carved on the front of the chest is the legend 'Margaret Platts, 1673". The history of the chest is also a mystery.

Radiology Professor Dies Research Effects Blamed

A notable career in the field of cancer diagnosis and treatment ended last Thursday with the death of Gordon E. Richards, Professor of Radiology at the University of Toronto and Director of the Radiology Department at the Toronto General Hospital. His death is attributed to the effects of radium and X-ray radiations encountered in his cancer research.

The death of Dr. Richards deprived the university and the medical practice of the foremost radiologist in the country. He was the first radiologist in the Toronto General Hospital and instituted in 1924 the first course in radiology in the University of Toronto.

Dr. Richards was stricken more than a year ago with a blood disease found in persons exposed to radio-active rays. The changes in his blood were found to be the same as those found in the Japanese who were exposed to the radio-active waves after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August 1945.

Dr. Richards was born at Lyn, Ontario, received his education at local schools, and graduated from the University of Toronto in 1908 as a gold medalist. Following service in the Canadian Army in the War of 1914-18 he was appointed radiologist at the Toronto General Hospital in 1917. During the Second World War he was radiologist-instructor in the Canadian army.

Two years ago Queen's University conferred the degree of LL.D. He was an honorary member of the Royal Society of Medicine, a fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons and a Fellow of the American College of Radiology.

As head of the Radiology Department of the University of Toronto, Dr. Richards gave radiology lectures to final year students in the medical faculty and graduate students. Dr. P. G. Ashmore, ex-President of the Student's Administrative Council, said, "His lectures were excellent, especially in the post-grad course. Dr. Richards was very well liked and respected by all the staff of the Toronto General Hospital."

Dr. J. D. Munn, Director of the Radiology Department of the Sick Children's Hospital, said, "The medical profession of North America and particularly the radiologists have lost one of their ablest men."

Queen's Downed; Henry's Hat Trick Paces Varsity Win

BY HAL HOLDEN

Bob Henry spanked in three goals to lead the Varsity hockey Blues to a 4-3 triumph over Queen's at Varsity Arena Friday night. By the win, the Blues kept pace with the league-leading University of Montreal Carabins who defeated McGill 4-2 Friday, and solidified their hold on second place in the Senior Intercollegiate standings.

The loss leaves the Tricolor still looking for its first victory of the season and entrenches the lads from Kingston deeper than ever in the cellar.

No Easy Win

The win was not an easy one for the Blues since Queen's at no time looked like last-placers. The Blues needed Henry's three-star performance to eke out a victory.

With less than five minutes left to play in the game and the score deadlocked at three-all, Cec Turcott snapped up the puck in the Varsity zone, roared in on the Queen's defenders, split the defense and slipped over a perfect pass to Henry who rammed it home for his hat-trick marker. Queen's pressed from then until the end of the game but the Blues held them off the scoresheet to gain the victory.

The first two period were ragged although there were flashes of form displayed by both side. There were also displays of temper, especially in the second period when 13 penalties were meted out. Ernie Frey of the Blues and Ron Johnstone of the Tricolor who tangled briefly were the principal offenders. Each received a major and a minor while Frey was tagged with another minor.

Henry-Turcott-Spence Star

The Henry-Turcott- Spence forward combination was by far the best line on the ice for the Blues and this trio accounted for three of the team four goals. Turcott was at his best as a playmaker while Henry was in the right spot at the right time and Bill Spence came up with a hard-hitting, hard-checking game at left wing.

Newcomer Bud Hayes celebrated his first game in Blue spangles by firing the only goal of the second period a hard drive from the blueline which broke a one-all tie.

Bolton Bolts

Queen's were weakened by the decision of star forward Hugh Bolton to sign a contract and leave school to play with Toronto Marlboros of the O.H.A. "A" league. Bolton will likely finish out the season with the juniors and step up next year to the Marlboro seniors or perhaps the parent club Maple Leafs.

Bob Henry potted the first goal of the game after nine minutes of play in the first period. Turcott set up the play on a breakaway, passing out from the corner to Henry who was camped on goalie Norm Urie's doorstep. Queen's bounced back a few minutes later as Tricolor captain Don Murray climaxed a very neat exhibition of stickhandling to poke the puck past Hutzulak after outguessing the Blue defense. That

Emphasize Need For Adjustment To College Life

Freedom, leadership, and other problems connected with the mass organization at a university were among aspects of student life discussed by Mr. J. Seeley and Professor A. B. Stokes at a discussion group on mental hygiene Thursday night.

The discussion group, on the topic "Worry, Neurosis and You" was held at the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital, and was one of a series for students, sponsored by the University Health Service.

Mr Seeley explained the necessity of understanding what a university is, and why it is so, as basic to a proper adjustment to university life. This, he said, determines whether or not a student will be happy at college.

With four case histories as illustration, Professor Stokes showed the dependence of good mental health on recognizing the onset of worry. "We must not think we are peculiar because we have worries," he said in reply to a question from the audience. "We all react to the same stimulation to a greater or lesser degree." For example, he pointed out that it is natural to get a slight palpitation of the heart when addressing an audience; it is a matter of experience how soon that symptom of nervousness will be resolved.

Five Gain Final Round Of Vic Stick Elections

The five candidates in the qualifying election for the Victoria Senior Stick last Friday gained sufficient votes to run in the final election next Friday. The rules state that to run in the final election, a candidate must receive at least 30 percent as many votes as the leading candidate.

Victoria student officials feel that this complicated system is rather antiquated, and hope to replace it by a single election next year. The candidates are George Speers, Don Coles, Norm Jewison, Tom Beckett, John Thompson.

S.A.C. President

Kenneth, Gordon, Rupert Gwynne—Timothy

By HARRY RASKY

From the moment he springs out of bed at 8.25 each morning like a very nervous grasshopper, 'till the time he bounces back in the evening (after prayers) there is no rest in the academic day of Gordon Gwynne-Timothy.

If all the names of the positions that the likeable lithe leader holds were put end to end they would stretch across the length of this page. They could be equalled only by his five first names. He was christened 'Kenneth Gordon Rupert' and registered 'Nigel Derek'. ("This was the first confusion in my life.")

He is Head of Arts at Trinity, President of the Students' Administrative Council, national president of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, and engaged.

Following him through a typical day, would be enough to keep a staff of Scotland Yard men confused. Trying to catch up with him is like trying to grab hold of a jet-propelled frog. Each evening he draws up a time-table of appointments and occasional lectures for the following day.

Last Thursday was as average as a day can be in the life of Varsity's 'first student'. He is at the breakfast table at 8.30 "or he doesn't get fed". By nine he was at a meeting with Nancy LeSveur about the proposed Montreal weekend. Half-hour later he was dictating N.F.C.U.S. letters to Joan Bowers. At ten he worked in the S.A.C. office.

He studied for an hour at 11 and lunched with Barb Churchill, his pretty third year Occupational Therapy student fiancee at noon. At one he was at a meeting ("I've forgotten what it was for"). The day's only lecture was at two; it was in Political Science. From three until 3.30 he was in a meeting with Warren Goldring, confirming some plans.

From precisely 3.30 'till 4.15 he slept. ("Two people called me. I answered their questions and went back to sleep").

In the next hour he was at a meeting of the Trinity Board of Stewards. At 5.15 he "showered and went to Barb's for dinner". He read the "Telly" and did the cross-word puzzle ("I got it too") while waiting for her to change. He attended Skule at Home as S.A.C. president and jumped into bed at two.

Many have asked what make Gordon run. Nobody really seems to know, including Gordon. Probably the reason he is able to keep going is his remarkable power to switch his thoughts from one subject to another like a radio dial. When he walks out of a meeting he leaves all worry of it in the room behind him. He never finds himself talking about radio at a Memorial Union meeting. ("I never have trouble sleeping and I don't have ulcers").

The second son of a schoolmaster at Trinity College Schools,. ("I went to U.T.S.") he was born 28 years ago in Halifax. He attended Crescent Public School in Toronto. In high school he was active in extra-curricula activities. He was editor of the school magazine ("I used to write"), president of the Latin Club. ("We didn't speak Latin

Lorne Watson

To captivate an audience with one's opening number is a considerable feat, but to consistently maintain a musical performance of the highest calibre is an act of pianistic genius. Lorne Watson, in his concert Saturday night, did both.

It was clear from the beginning that here was a pianist with both subtle imagination and precise control. The clarity of his musical conceptions was evident not only in his unerring care for details, but in his simple but mature revelation of the formal structure of the familiar pieces which he played. His opening work, Bach's "English Suite in G Minor", had that simplicity of expression which is found only among truly great artists—a simplicity which he continued to reveal for the audience in Beethoven's "Appassionata Sonata" and Chopin's "Balade in G Minor".

Mr. Watson possesses an artistic imagination which is at home in expressing a great variety of moods—the careful charm of a Bach Gavotte, the dynamic joie de vivre of a Bach gigue, the exalted heroism of Beethoven's Appassionata, the saccharine sentimentality of Kreisler's "Liebeslied," the robust humor of Prokofief's famous march, or the intellectually patterned sensuality of Debussy's "L'Isle Joyeuse". Only in his rendition of Chopin's "Nocturne in F sharp Major" did his intellect thwart his imagination; he was too consciously meticulous and classically rigorous, especially in the ornamentations. But his obviously intimate appreciation of those parts in the Ballade, which are similar to the Nocturne, removed any doubts as to his understanding of romantic lyricism.

In short, Lorne Watson is a musical artist of the highest calibre. What more can be said?

To Tell The Truth

(New Play Society, Museum Theatre, through Saturday)

A World premiere is not unlike ordering an unknown dish from the menu in an exotic restaurant. The waiter arrives with the silver platter and lifts the cover. Perhaps it is a new adventurous concoction and you enjoy it, although the taste is a bit strange and bewildering. You smile if the exotic name hides no more than sirloin steak but you have a right to be unhappy if you discover ten pieces of dry toast.

Mr. Callaghan's "TTTT" is neither bewildering nor bracingly familiar. It inhabits the shadowy region below starkness, whimsy, allegory and half-hearted poetic flight. Dramatically it sits between the stools of incidentless spot-lighting and melodrama.

Take Shultz' diner, see! Take George (Don Harron) young dreamer, flautist, teller of tall tales with the message of hope, see! Take Taylor (Lloyd Bochner), gambler who tumbles elegantly from nasty self-assurance to bewilderment and Dini (Diane Foster) who serves as rope in the tug-of-war between the two gentlemen. Toss in a blind materialist in black (D. Davis) a prizefighter in search of a personality (A. Scopp) and assorted hoboes. Wrap and mail to Saroyan who possesses a sense for the dynamics of the stage and the courage of corn and you will receive quite a respectable play by return mail.

In connection with "Varsity Story" Mr. Callaghan was quoted as having commented on the critics' failure to note its satirical slant. If satire be the method in the case of "TTTT" a measure of success is undeniable, for rarely has the apparent message on behalf of the pursuit of ideals and the validity of man's dreams been more effectively demolished by being placed in front of the horse of dramatic interest and the creation of characters who breed indifference instead of sympathy. But I do not think that Canadian theatre is ready for such sophistication.

It is not pleasant to feel the need for such harsh language towards a respected writer and so conscientious an organization as the N.P.S. I would dismiss "TTTT" more lightheartedly, if I did not sense behind its modest exterior a pretentious cocksureness and a dangerous pseudo-finality in its symbolism.

I suggest that readers go and see for themselves for several reasons. If "angry discussion in the lobby" which is anticipated in a programme note is not likely to arise, the Muse is at least entitled to hear a few genuine sobs. Furthermore, I feel very strongly about standing by the theatre in its hour of need (of a good play, that is), as a public that refuses to buy anything but established clasics exiles itself into a museum. Lastly, I would like lots of people to help me with the following question. Concerning the acting, I had jotted down this note: 'Of the 24 participants I can gladly report that they clung to every shred of humanity and made the best of the few moments of ease granted them by the playwright, but the play being the thing, they did not haxe a chance.' Now, here is what worries me: could a team of actors of superhuman ability have made the evening less unforgettable and more forgivable?

After a total of 16 months in the Airforce and the Fleet Air Arm he entered the Philosophy course at Trinity. Although he is everything but the stereotyped Trinity personality, his likeable—if sometime confused—manner was to make him president of his year, every year. He was also assistant editor of the Trinity Review, for which, among other things he receives free tea once a month. ("I like tea with three lumps of sugar and cream").

It was in his third year that 'Bouncing Gord G-T', as he is called in a yearsong, went into high gear. Besides being year president, and head of the Conversazione Committee he became S.A.C. rep, a job that was to include the positions of Radio Commissioner and Public Relations Commissioner.

Third year was the "most important year of my life—I got engaged". When last year's S.A.C. president Phil Ashmore heard that Gwynne-Timothy had a girl friend, he was reported to have said, "No, he couldn't have time for girls too." In fact, he has seen his lady friend every day this term except three. ("I talk to her on the telephone if I can't see her.")

The ambition of the ambitious man is to get married and "raise a lot of very slow-moving children." He would like to go into business and then do some writing and some serious philosophising. ("I think it's fascinating working with people.")

Gwynne-Timothy halted the interview, looked at his watch, said something about speaking to the Medical Society, and the Intersomething club, and then galloped away quickly into the distance.

Dear Nat:—

Three weeks' ago I was measured for one of your new drape suits with the long jackets. I wore it yesterday for the first time and want to thank you for saving me the trouble of buying a new top-coat this Spring. Thanks for making such high waisted pants, too. I had arm holes put in them and it makes a nice one pant suit. Your one suit has provided me with a complete wardrobe. Thanks.

Your truly,
J. Esquire

was all the scoring until the second period when Hayes sank his tie-breaker. Henry, incidentally, got an assist on the play to figure in all four Varsity goals.

In the last frame Henry tallied his second goal on a pass from Spence as he blasted a drive past Urie from close in. Ken Potts put Queen's back in the game with a waist-high shot to the short side that slipped in between Hutzulak and the goal post. That goal seemed to give new life to the Tricolor attack as Hutzulak and the Varsity defenders had a hard time of it to hold off the Gaels. Both clubs played their best hockey of the night at this stage of the game as the customers were treated to the infrequent sight of end to end rushes and three-way passing plays.

At the 13:42 mark of the period, with Varsity's Gord Ecclestone sitting out a penalty for cross-checking, Ken Potts bagged the equalizer for Queen's on a pass from Ron Kemp. A few seconds after it was only Hutzulak who kept the Gaels from going ahead as he made a great stop on a Tricolor drive.

Queen's—Goal, Urie; defense, Flannigan, Johnstone; centre, Murray; wings, Hews, Mercier; alternates, B. Hamilton, Wagar, Sadler, Potts, Kemp, Batachio, Roberton, Strehlitski.
Varsity—Goal, Hutzulak; defense, Digby, LaRose; centre, Turcott; wings, Henry, Spence; alternates, Ecclestone, Frey, Boyd, Ferguson, Bell, Howson, Fox, Hayes, Prince.
Referees—E. Morris, Toronto; P. Allen, Barrie.

First Period
1—Toronto, Henry (Turcott, Spence) 9:45
2—Queen's, Murray (Hews) 13:02
Penalties—Johnson, Boyd, B. Hamilton, Digby (2), Robertson.

Second Period
3—U of T, Hayes (Henry) 16 30
Penalties — Laroso, Ecclestone (2), Frey (two minors and a major), Johnstone (minor and major), B. Hamilton (3), Kemp.

Third Period
4—Varsity, Henry (Spence) 1 40

John McEwan Wins Twice But We Lose

Buffalo State went home with all the honors Saturday night. In swimming they beat Varsity 50.5-24.5 and bettered the Senior intercollegiate record in the two events while they were at it.

Al McCarthy of Buffalo broke the record in the 100 yard and won the 50 yard free style. The Buffalo team team also bettered the intercollegiate record in the 300 yard medley.

John McEwan, of Varsity, broke out with two firsts—in the 440 yard race and in the 220.

Results:—
300-yd. medley—1, Buffalo; 2, Toronto Time—3 14 2 (Record)
220—1, McEwan (T); 2, Brown (B); 3, Webber (B). Time—2:35:8
50—1, McCarthy (B); 2, Yacos (B); Ciang (T). Time—25 2
Diving—Tulley (T); 2, Lalli (B); 3, Thom (T); Hoffman (B) tied.
100—1, McCarthy (B); 2, Schmitt (B); 3, Lowndes. Time 56 sec. (Record).

30,000 BLOOD DONORS urgently needed NOW!

NO GREATER GIFT can one human being give another than life itself. Today, thanks to modern advances in medical science, Blood is Life.

Every year thousands of lives are lost in Canada. Many of them could have been saved had immediate blood transfusion facilities been available.

Realizing the great benefits to mankind, the Canadian Red Cross has embarked on a national program to provide a Blood Transfusion Service for our people.

Under this plan, any hospital patient requiring a blood transfusion will receive it entirely free of charge. Not one penny will be charged, even by the hospital for administering the transfusion.

This great new service will mean life to someone whose life hangs in the balance. You can make sure that the balance swings the right way.

The success of the Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service—a service designed for the benefit of every citizen—depends upon every citizen recognizing his or her personal responsibility to come forward as a voluntary blood donor while in good health. Only in this way can there be any assurance of an adequate supply available when sickness or accident strikes.

After you register, you will be asked to donate your blood only twice a year. It is only a slight inconvenience yet your blood may be the means of saving a life.

Book Review

To Seize A Dream

Virginia Hersch's latest novel, TO SEIZE A DREAM (Ambassador Books, $3.50) is the dramatic tale of the romantic artist, Eugene Delacroix. The author, fortunately, seems to have surpassed the usual fictionalized biographies, with which we have become all too familiar. But then she is not new at this type of novel, since her first, BIRD OF GOD, was the fictionalized life of El Greco. In the brief foreword, Mrs. Hersch says:

The life of Eugene Delacroix is too important to distort. .... Often I have Delacroix say things I cannot possibly know he said, but I do know he wrote them.

Can we trust a lawyer and Doctor of Jurisprudence to adhere to facts? As the wife of Lee Hersch, the American artist, she must be familiar with all aspects of painting; and as a resident of Paris, we may trust her knowledge of the French.

TO SEIZE A DREAM is not a great novel. It is warm and alive, full of human interest and of all that appeals to the romantic in most of us. The hero is no more infallible than the rest of us. Too obviously the illegitimate son of the Marquis de Talleyrand, Delacroix began life with a burden he was to bear most of his life—the hatred of his ambitious, domineering sister.

His was a stormy life, filled with discouragement, despair and failure, but dominated by unquenchable hope and ambition. From his earliest instruction at the Beaux Arts Academy, under Guerin, Delacroix found himself, temperamentally at least, opposed to the artistic ideas of the day. David had demonstrated the importance of line and ideal beauty. Delacroix longed for color, and David's style, in the young artist's hands, left much to be desired in both line and beauty.

From this point, the author traces Delacroix's struggle, his condemnation, his rare successes, the occasional praise from his closest friends and a few people of importance—Gericault, Baron Gros, Stendahl—but not from the Academy which ruled the world of painting. Nevertheless, the novel does not revert to the level of a history of art. Delacroix's life had all the elements of a lurid best-seller. Mrs. Hersch does not ignore this, but it is to her credit that she does not emphasize this aspect out of proportion to the rest of his life.

We find Delacroix partaking of the early 19th Century French struggles—those of 1814 and of 1830. More prominently, we follow him through his frequent and changing loves and friendships, through serious illness and slow, incomplete recovery. Yet Mrs. Hersch has still shown the subjection of the sensual nature to the driving urge to paint, the urge which dominated all other aspects of his life. She finally has Delacroix explain:

I have known a good many passions and painting is the only one that leaves no aftertaste of bitterness.

A novel about an artist should, of necessity, have a limited appeal, but it is a tale of life that must attract all of us. Nevertheless, to the student of Fine Art, it has special importance. Those of us who know the futility of trying to capture the excitement of a great painting from a poor reproduction will thank Mrs. Hersch for the vivid descriptions, which no art historian would dare use.

B. John Kraglund.

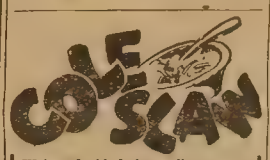
the war veteran returned and in this case was given his old job back.

He next learned the garment trade—because he had to eat. "—but please, I am engineer." Not that his family skeleton is a clothes moth, but the basic post-war life had no room for higher learning. He learned this job sufficiently well within six months to be accepted by a Canadian Commission seeking workers. Recently he received an offer from his old boss, now in Paris, to come and work. The garment business in Canada is poor, so he received permission to leave and joined the University cleaning staff.



He likes it here and jokingly said, "I work in high office because I have the second floor. If I have the linguage, I will be able to work at engineering . . . my job no so hard and my boss, first time now have English boss, really is first-class man."

We've decided to write a war novel, too, and we're going to call it, The Old Ostriches. The book will be about the war between wars, sometimes referred to as peace, the cold war or the war of nerves, depending upon which paper you read. The bulk of our novel, it won't really be a novel, you know, will consist of everyday newspaper clippings. And in case it gets monotonous we'll throw in a few of Life's unbiased pictures to spice things up. The beauty of our book is that it will be ready for distribution the day the shooting war starts so that each and every gallant soldier will have his very own copy of The Old Ostriches. In this way everyone will know just who and what he's fighting for. There's nothing like knowing what you're about, we always say..

Indonesian Aggression

A questioner asked the minister what action would have been taken against Dutch aggression in Indonesia had Holland been a member of the North Atlantic Union. "That problem is now before the Security Council and I am not going to express an opinion on it," Pearson answered. "However, I may say that if the Dutch action in Indonesia is unprovoked bare-faced aggression, it would have been harder for them to take this action had they been members of the North Atlantic Union."

In answer to another question Pearson said, "There is nothing I know of to indicate the unity of the Politburo is being weakened as suggested by President Truman."

Pearson also discounted Communist charges that Marshall Plan aid would place European countries receiving the aid under the influence of American imperialism. "There is no danger of European countries being tied to U.S. imperialism. The proud nations of Europe would not permit such a situation," he said.

Mr. Pearson was promoted to the Ministry of External Affairs when Hon. Louis St. Laurent took over the prime minister's office. Commenting on his step into politics from his diplomatic position as ambassador to Washington, he called it the "high dive from the ivory tower of diplomacy into the cesspool of politics."

U. C. AMALGAMATION NOTES

LOOKING ON THE "CON" SIDE:

Last week we considered the first question on your Amalgamation Ballot for Jan. 20 and 21. "Do you accept Amalgamation in principle?" We suggested that fundamental differences of attitude between the sexes compel a NO vote. This week we shall deal with the subsequent questions. "Will all offices be open to both men and women?" "Will there be any distinction in voting between men and women?" "Will there be co-ordinate offices?" And so forth. These all deal with practical problems which must be faced by the amalgamating societies. We are convinced that a just examination of these difficulties will reveal that amalgamation must be rejected.

We pointed out the shortcomings of an Amalgamated Open Meeting last week. Let us look at the executive now. Suppose our new constitution makes all offices open to either men or women. Perhaps in the elections men will support men, and vice-versa. Perhaps, with the support of men, no women will make the executive. But in any case, one thing is positive: the men and the women elected enough on assuming one of their own number, won't have a clue about the other kind of candidate, as regards their executive abilities.

Will they, you say, have some posts for men and some for women? We'll grant you that in all probability the Treasurer should be a man and the Secretary a woman, but candidates for Treasurer are handpicked in any case. If you have half the executive men, half women, that is unfair representation because of the majority of men in U.C.

Okay you say, let's compromise, we'll have double offices. Well the representation is still unfair. The executive is large, unwieldy and inefficient. And furthermore, surely the proponents of Amalgamation would not make such a distinction between the sexes that such duplication would seem at all necessary.

If you do not feel, as we are sure you won't, that any of the practical schemes proposed are fair or feasible, if you are as convinced as the rest of us that these concrete practical difficulties cannot be overcome by any means, then it is your duty to vote NO! on the first question: "Do you accept Amalgamation in principle?" Only in this way can you truly reveal your opinion on the ballot.

Don't be fooled by theory divorced from practice, or wobbly appeals to efficiency and logic. For sound administration and healthy government vote NO!

SR. BLUES DOWNED IN THRILLER

YMHA Romps To 66-31 Win Over Seconds

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Deadly shooting accuracy and a real fighting spirit were the keys to success for the classy Y.M.H.A. Seniors when they tangled with the Intermediate Blues on Saturday night. Sparked by the marksmanship of Harry Mayzel and Sharp Litvak, the Y M H A. squad romped to a 66-31 victory over the baffled intermediates.

Play in the first quarter was evenly divided, but the Blues did not show the finish around the basket that meant so many points for the YMHA team. As play rolled into the second quarter, the game speeded up, and the visitors all but ran away from the Varsity squad until the last few minutes of the quarter.

The Intermediates started off the second half on the wrong end of a 35-18 score. Close checking throughout the third quarter led to low scoring for a time, but things really opened up in the last stanza. Sharpy Litvak embarked on a one-man scoring spree which netted him 10 points and Happy Mayzel was top scorer in the game with 16. Even a determined effort on the part of the Blues could do nothing to break the YMHA defense. The final whistle blew with the YMHA still intent on increasing their lead.

Ted Luck played good ball for Varsity during the whole game. He was effective on both offense and defense. Big John MacKenzie also did some good work for the Blues in the scoring department.

Lineups

Varsity—Barney Maher (2), Al Stevenson (1), Slim Tisdale, Mike Furlong (3), Ted Luck (6), John MacKenzie (8), Doug Wigle (6), Andy Andrews (1), Al Cole (2), Art Anderson, Bill Gough (2).

Y.M.H.A.—Hank Goldstein (3), Sharpy Litvak (13), Harry Mayzel (16), Tooty Freeman (5), Gimpy Stellberg (3), Max Grossman (8), Marty Lindzon (5), Mel Groper, Sam Madonick (4), Himmel (9).

Blue And One Who Blew

Harry Mayzel (that's him holding the ball) may have felt a little strange at the Athletic night in Hart House, but he certainly didn't show it. Last time he played on the Big Gym floor, he was wearing the Varsity colors for the senior Blue squad. Saturday night he paced YMHA to a 66-31 win over the intermediate Varsity hoopmen. Cec Turcott on the left picked up two assists in the Queen's-Varsity hockey discussion Friday night, and was one of the few who didn't get a penalty in the hectic hassle.

Buffalo Quintet Ekes Out Win As Final Shot Fails

The Buffalo State Teachers' College quintet exploded for 20 points in the second quarter of Saturday's basketball exhibition contest with the Varsity Blues, and needed every one of them as they went on to edge Toronto 44-43 in the feature attraction of the first Athletic Night of 1949 in Hart House.

A large crowd looked on with glee as the Blues opened up at a terrific clip. Before the game was five minutes old, the Blues were up 13-6, and had a 16-8 lead at the quarter as they looked well on the way to their first taste of victory against American colleges this year.

But then came that fateful second quarter and a vast improvement in the Buffalos. Led by big George Doyle, the visitors' bucket-man against the 2-1-2 zone defence the Blues set up, Buffalo captured the lead for the first time in the game after six minutes of play in the second period, and went on to hold a 28-24 lead at the half.

Not Really Good

From then on, the lead changed hands more often than Tommy Manville's diamond rings, as first Buffalo and then the Blues went a point or two ahead. Strictly speaking, it was not really good basketball—both teams muffed numerous opportunities on two or three-man breaks with only one defender back, and the ball-handling was rather loose at times—but with that old college try quite evident, the game was a thriller all the way.

And at that, the Blues missed out on two good chances they had to at least tie the game in the last 15 seconds of play.

With Buffalo desperately trying to keep possession of the ball, overanxious checking got Varsity's Johnny McManus a free throw. But McManus' shot rimmed the hoop and rolled out as the crowd bled outwardly. Just five seconds later, Varsity was given the ball on a throw-in from underneath the Buffalo basket. But this time, Earl Stellrecht, the visitors' captain, deflected Doug Tyndall's throw-in, and the Blues lost possession of the ball.

McManus Jokes

McManus joked later that he should have got half a point for his effort, it was that close to dropping through the strings.

Diminutive Ed Brennan—he's the smallest player on the Blues' roster—led Toronto scorers with 14 points, and was the best player on the floor for the locals. He sank the nicest hoop of the game, when with only two seconds left in the first half, he calmly threw in a long shot from mid-court. Brennan got a large hand from the crowd when he went off for a breather in the fourth quarter.

Johnny McManus, moved back from his familiar forward spot to a guard position in the zone defence, came up with an aggressive performance. On more than one occasion, McManus delighted the crowd with his dipsy-doodle ball-handling.

Tyndall Impresses

Big Doug Tyndall played well, his rebound work under the Varsity hoop being particularly good. Jack Gray with eight points and Wally Zeaton with six, were other high Toronto scorers. Much of the fire went out of the Blues' offence when Glen Pettinger was forced out of the game with five fouls midway through the second quarter.

For the visitors, Doyle with 16 points, was best. He got at least half of them from rebound tipins.

Summary:

Buffalo — Doyle, 16; Lang, 8; Freeland, 4; Stellrecht, 1; Pearson, 5; Stenhouse, 6; Westcott, 4; Eddins. Total, 44.

Toronto — Tyndall, 5; Volpe; Gray, 8; LaChance, 2; Pettinger, 4; McManus, 4; Zeaton, 6; Adams; Brennan, 14. Total, 43.

Blue Icemen In A Battle Of Waterloo

That band of happy warriors, the Varsity Intermediate hockey team, are leaving the arena at 3 p.m. today for Waterloo and an exhibition ice engagement with Waterloo College. Manager Fred Sgambatti, the team's mouth-piece, positively exudes confidence because he feels that the boys are all in top shape and free from injuries.

Jovial Jack Life has the team's fighting spirit honed to a keen edge after a couple of losses to Lindsay Senior "C" clubs and a victory today would put the players in a winning mood for a return engagement next week and the league opener with Western on Friday, Jan. 28.

Junior B's Defeat Corner Boys Take League Lead With 8-2 Win

by BOB DNIEPER

The Varsity Junior B squad showed their superiority over the Corner House Grill boys Saturday afternoon by smothering them under an eight goal barage to win 8-2. The game was marked by an unusually strong scoring performance by Varsity's Artie Holmes, who did the hat-trick one better and scored four goals. The win shoves Varsity into first place in the Junior B standings.

Rugged Game

The Corner Boys by no means took the loss lying down; they played fast, rugged hockey, but the Blues were too much for them. The players were playing the man, not the puck, resulting in heavy body-checking and a lot of rough, fast action. The referee held things in check by handing out sixteen penalties and putting men off the ice anytime he though they needed cooling down.

First Period

Play was even for most of the first period, both teams being held scoreless until Norm Fox outskated the Corner Boys defence and popped in an unassisted goal at 18.45. A minute later just before the bell sounded Phil Arrowsmith set Vernon up for a marker to make it 2-0 at the end of the first.

Second Stanza

In the second period Varsity really put the screws to the Corner Boys right from the bell and monopolized the play for the whole twenty minutes. Holmes scored three of his four goals and Fox added a singleton. Varsity should have scored several more times, but luck was against them.

Twice the puck hit the top bar of the Corner Boys' net, and it bounced off the side bars another three or four times. Varsity was helped by several penalties handed out to the CB's who held out for a few minutes, but were overwhelmed. Both teams were getting hot under the collar by now, and the intermission cooled them off a bit, but not enough to stem their tempers in the third period.

Final Period

From the start the Corner Boys put on heavy pressure, but the excellent goal tending of Leuty stopped them. They were smarting under a six goal deficit and were hungry for goals. At 4.35 their pressure paid off. Varsity then fought back and added two goals to make it 8-1 with only seconds remaining. The Corner Boys were short handed and there seemed no chance of changing the score; but the CB's kept fighting and scored one on Leuty with eighteen seconds left in the game.

Hard-Fought Game

"We outfought and outskated them," commented coach Bill Wade of the Blues, "but we also got the breaks. Next time they might get the luck and it will be us that's on the short end. They have a good club", Artie Holmes, Al Conboy, and Porky McDougall played good games as did Phil Arrowsmith and Norm Fox for the victors. Bruce Preston did well for the CB's although he played with a broken thumb. Commented coach Elmer Lee—"Poor goaling beat us."

Lacrosse Final

Meds I Win Dafoe Cup

By ED VOIGHT

For the second consecutive year, Meds Firsts walked off with the Interfaculty lacrosse championship and the Dafoe Cup when they knocked off U.C. Firsts 13-9 in the third and final game of the final playoff series before the largest crowd of the season in Hart House gym Friday afternoon.

Meds were full value for their win. From the goal out, the Medicos were just a little bit better than the Artsmen. For the first time in the series, their passes were clicking with some kind of regularity. With "Axe" Haliburton, Jimmy McKay and goalie Ken Firman leading the way, Meds built up a 6-5 lead at the half, which they increased to 9-6 at three-quarter time. Just as he snared his fifth goal, Haliburton was creamed into the side-wall of the gym, had to be helped off the floor and made no further appearance in the game.

Heatherington set up McKay for the last score of the third period, and within a stretch of four minutes of play in the fourth period, he whipped in three quickies, besides taking time out to decoy the U.C. defense out of position and then set up McKay again for a clear shot on Byrne in the U.C. nets.

In that last quarter, Heatherington played his best lacrosse of the series.

McKay Is Solid

Jimmy McKay, too, came up with a solid defensive game, looked much fresher in this game than in either of the others, and also scored three goals. Ted Beaton worked hard for Meds, snared the two remaining goals and hit the post two or three times when he had Byrne beaten completely.

Ken Firman, in the last half especially, was nothing short of sensational as he robbed Berney twice and Raymond once when the U.C. players were in on him all alone.

Berney showed the way for U.C. with three markers, followed by Chambers and Winters two each, and Robb and Raymond one apiece.

Berney was the pick of the losers along with Bill Korz, he rocked the Meds' forwards on their ears and was dangerous whenever he snagged the pill. He took a stiff check from McKay in the stomach that left him winded late in the second period, but came back as dangerous as ever after the intermission.

Jim Winters got U.C. off on the right foot by sinking the first two goals of the game, played an aggressive game throughout. Chambers tried hard, scored one of the nicest goals of the game on a floor-length rush late in the first period.

VARSITY FENCERS LOSE

Lawrence Tech fencing team defeated the Varsity swordsmen Saturday afternoon at Hart House in both the foil and epee class. The Blues came back to capture the sabre honors 5-4. Scores in the foil were 6-3 for Lawrence and in the epee 5-4. Total score for the afternoon gave the Detroiters 15 and Varsity 12.

Summer Jobs For Students Now Available

The SAC employment committee is registering applications for summer jobs this week. Men may apply in the reading room on the first floor of Hart House, women in Room 62, UC basement.

Jobs Like Last Year

Job openings are expected to be very much like those of last year, the SAC officials said. For men there will be summer hotel jobs, for bell-hops, waiters, boatmen, etc., gardening, mining, lake boat and route men jobs. Appointments for interviews are being made for engineering students with the Hydro Commission and Bell Telephone, and there are orderly jobs for pre-med students. Women's job openings will include summer hotel work, clerical work, and jobs as travelling companions and governesses.

Applicants must register on National Employment Service cards and the SAC information card. No jobs will actually be assigned until later. As vacancies turn up, applicants will be notified.

Last year 3,000 men and 1,100 women were registered and over half of them were placed.

Enlarge Bureau

The SAC employment bureau has been enlarged in order to handle the large number of applications which are expected to come in over the week. It is hoped that the applicants may be handled without too much inconvenience or waiting.

Students who have summer employment available need not make application to the bureau.

Saints To Stage Original Operetta In Mid-February

"Saint's Alive," the first operetta both written and produced by students of the University of Toronto, will be presented next month in Hart House Theatre by Trinity College. It will be in two acts, and is slated for Saturday, February 12th. There will be two performances, at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

The production was written by Ron Bryden, III Trinity, with musical score by Keith MacMillan, IV Trinity.

Here are the highlights of the plot: into super lady-like St. Hilda's comes Chloe McFiggin (Donna Haley, II Trinity) "a rough and tough tomato from a rough and tough terrain." She sets Trinity on its ear by winning the affections of Daphnes Montmorency, the editor of the Trinity Review (Don Belway, IV Trinity). He is idolized by all the girls, and the new girl's success makes them wonder about the failings of their own techniques.

The plot is resolved when Chloe gets Daphnes and the rough girl from the north fits into a more humanized Trinity.

How Many Wives?

How Many Wives Should a Man Have? That is the question which comes up in the latest Hart House Theatre production.

Joyce Kamins, who presents a problem as an extra wife, with Donald Glen, Gordon Gibson and Gordon Askwith in "The Doctor's Dilemma", are shown in a rehearsal scene. "The Doctor's Dilemma" is the third Hart House Theatre production of this season and will open Saturday for a week's run. Under the direction of Robert Gill, the play has an all student cast.

Bishop Neill Opens Conference

By ABE CADESKY

A capacity audience participated in the service that marked the opening of the five-day conference of the University Christian Mission, on Sunday night, in Convocation Hall. President Smith welcomed the visiting speaker, Bishop Neill.

The subject of the bishop's address was "Has God Anything to Say". He began with a quotation of Browning, "God has not said anything!" In the recent war, six million Jews were exterminated, and God has not said a word. The atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, and God has not said a word.

Appeal To Face Facts

"The world was saved about nineteen hundred and twenty years ago," he said. "If we start with the hypothesis that God is, we mustn't say what God must be like." The bishop appealed to everyone to face the facts. "God has taken earth and brought life to it. This life exists between the balance of hostile forces. If the Astraloid Hermes had come much closer to earth, thus moving the earth in relation to the sun, life would have become unbearable because of lower or higher temperature".

The bishop told his audience that he is quite convinced that other worlds operate on a plan of God but that this is probably the only world that has free agents. As such we can make the world what we want. If we had a perfectly planned world, life would be much easier for us.

All Knowledge Present

He said that all knowledge was there but God has made it difficult for us to discover. When we make a discovery, everything becomes more simple.

"Religion, like science, is not perfectly ordered". Comparing farther, he said that in religion (and science), we can see one line of progress and understanding.

"We see that religious principles can be found in the Jewish race—in the old testament ideas that are behind the new testament". In this respect, he said that in the old testament, there is a clear line of religious progress, of men wrestling with the idea of God. The prophet Amos noted and recorded the wonderful way that God was evidently dealing with his nation. In the prophets, as in some later greater men, you find this kind of insight into reality.

Insights of Prophets

The insights of the prophets, he said, were mainly two—God is one, and God is intensely concerned with right and wrong. "We think it is obvious that God is one, but this is because we have been brought up with this idea". In the time of the prophets, it was a radical departure.

God is intensely concerned with right and wrong. People at the time of Amos, as the bishop explained, thought that they could pray religiously and disregard right and wrong. Amos said that just ordinary right and wrong is what matters to God, not prayer alone.

Notes Toynbee

As an illustration of God's concern with righteousness, the bishop noted Toynbee's Study of History where he points out how civilizations have had their greatness and then been repressed by God because of their unrighteousness. But every prophecy ends on a note of hope "God has tipped the scales on the side of righteousness. Righteousness will outlast evil and the last word is life, not death".

Before his closing remarks, Bishop Neill called for a few moments of complete quiet to think over his address and to note whether each person consents or dissents to his message, for further consideration and discussion in the next few days.

Keep Open Mind

In closing, he asked his audience to keep three things in mind, that this is a matter that demands serious attention; that, as students, the audience is under obligation to keep an open mind; and that if anything is to be accomplished, we must all be willing to obey and make any necessary changes within ourselves.

Canadian Money To Europe, Asia, Will Be Debated

The Labor Progressive Party will propose a bill on Canadian foreign policy, suggesting world political and economic co-operation, at the next session of the Mock Parliament, this Thursday at 8 p.m., in Trinity College Library, the LPP Club announced yesterday.

At the December session of the student debating body a Progressive Conservative-supported foreign policy motion was defeated 81 to 76.

Steve Endicott, president of the LPP party, outlined the resolution which will be supported by his party:

Whereas, Canada's agricultural and industrial economy is facing a crisis;

Whereas, Canada's export trade to Europe is lower in 1948 by $200,000,000 than in 1947;

Whereas, these difficulties are the result of lack of co-operation between the United Nations:

Be it Resolved:

(1) That Canada advocate a world-wide economic and political co-operation through the UN.

(2) That Canada make available $5,000,000,000 over the next five years to countries of Europe and Asia for rehabilitation and trade.

(3) That Canada develop an independent economic plan of development, including a national steel industry.

As a comment from the official opposition about the resolution, Harvey Hay, president of the CCF Club, said: "Apparently, the only way the LPP can find to rescue the Canadian economy from the coming crisis is to extend credits to Europe. I would suggest that next time they might try socialism."

Funds Drive To Commence In February

The annual ISS campaign will get under way on Feb. 7. The campaign will include personal canvassing, various tea-dances, shows and entertainment sponsored by the various colleges and faculties.

Says ISS Autonomous

The date for the campaign was set last night at a dinner at which Professor Marcus Long, vice-president of ISS, was the principal speaker. Said Dr. Long, "To many students the term ISS is misleading. It suggests that the International Student Service is an organization whose policy is determined by one administrative council which decides all actions of ISS. This, however, is not true. The ISS is an autonomous branch of students. The council is a contact between national ISS groups."

Dr. Long stressed the importance of education. "ISS is trying to develop the cultural aspect of both foreign and Canadian students. This development can only be achieved through international contacts," said Dr. Long.

Plan Seminar

During the next year ISS will attempt to further its continuity all over Canada. It will give relief in a material way to students in Europe and Asia. It will conduct a summer seminar in Europe in 1949. It will provide scholarships for D. P. students. The money raised by its campaign will not be used for the conducting of a summer seminar.

The money raised by the campaign will be used for two purposes:

1) Raising money for relief purposes.

2) Providing scholarships for D.P. students.

The money for relief purposes will be used to buy shoes, supply books, build hostels, and provide food for needy students in Europe and Asia. The scholarships will bring one D.P. student to Canada for every 2,000 Canadian students or at least one to every Canadian campus. ISS will pay the transportation and will accept the responsibility for each student coming over. When the student arrives on the campus the university will take over the responsibility.

Hudson's Bay Co. Offers Business Scholarships

The Hudson's Bay Company announced recently it offers two scholarships to provide advanced training in the fields of distributin and trading, personnel administration and labour relations, and to strengthen the links between the business communities in Canada and the United Kingdom.

Each scholarship will be to the value of $1,800 (£450), plus cost of transportation between Canada and the United Kingdom.

Candidates must be Canadian citizens between the ages of 24 and 30, preferably holding an undergraduate degree.

Expectant Mothers' Diets Will Be Research Subject

The University of Toronto, backed by a U.S. grant, is embarking on a research program to discover what's wrong with the diet of Canada's expectant mothers, Dr. Sidney Smith, U. of T. president, said today.

The university is receiving $4,000 from the Robert Gould Research Foundation of Cincinnati to launch the project. It is the first Canadian grant from this organization which has financed various nutrition investigations in the United States.

Administering the grant will be Dr. E. W. McHenry, professor of public health nutrition, who will work closely with Dr. H. B. Van Wyck, head of the department of obstetrics and gynaecology. "The two departments will co-operate in discovering troubles of childbirth which can be traced to diet deficiency and what should be done to avoid them," Dr. Smith said.

IS SPRING HERE?

Are we having a late fall or are we due for an early spring? One student on the campus is in a bit of a dilemma.

The absence of snow and the balmy weather of the past few weeks makes a good case for the late fall argument. On the other hand what he saw Friday might lead him to believe that spring will be a little early this year.

At any rate—whatever the cause and effect—he saw a robin, large as life, in Queen's Park last Friday morning.

Progressive Conservatives Vote Changes In Executive

The University Progressive Conservative Club elected Tom Symons, II Trinity, as 1st vice-president of the club at a meeting held last Thursday. Jack Hoolihan, III UC, resigned from that office recently due to pressure of other work.

There were two other changes in the executive of the club announced at the meeting. Jack Hoolihan was appointed debates director following the resignation of Gowan Guest, III Victoria, from that office to take over a new committee on political education.

A resolution calling for a Commonwealth conference of young Conservatives, for the purpose of comparing matters of policy and organization, was passed at the meeting. This resolution is to be forwarded to the national conference of the Progressive Conservative student federation, which will meet at Montreal next month.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP

London, Jan. 17—(CUP) — The Famous Players Canadian Corporation has established a $500 scholarship at the University of Western Ontario to be awarded annually to a journalism student.

This is the largest undergraduate scholarship ever offered at Western.

The first award will be made this year to the student with the best record in third year journalism.

University Christian Mission

(Today's column is turned over to a guest editorial submitted on behalf of the University Christian Mission currently being held on the campus.)

Most of you have probably received a lot of literature put out by the University Christian Mission people. Expecting exhortations to the good life, you probably dropped most of it in the wastepaper basket and kept the blotters.

But examination of the UCM program leads to quite a different impression. The experiment is of vast dimensions. Discussion ranges from "Who Is This Jesus?" and "Has God Anything To Say?" to "Christianity and Race" and "Christianity and the Modern State." This is not a mission in the sense that it aims to do a super-selling job; nor is it merely a retreat at which Christians mutually reinforce their faith with comfortable words.

On the contrary, the Mission is essentially an inquiry. Its tone is one of questioning; its purpose individual discovery of more realistic principles of thought and action. It is of significance to the University as a whole as the largest organized attempt the campus has ever seen to face squarely the central problem of university students, of education, and, for that matter, of modern society in general; the problem of replacing the hollow futility of knowledge severed from values with integrated wisdom, of creating order out of the disintegration and confusion of modern education and life.

Since neither values nor beliefs can be handed out in the lecture-room or auctioned publicly, but are achieved only on the personal level of creative decision, decision is the keynote of the conference. It asks us to stop drifting; it points to the facts of life and asks for an answer. It will fail only if it receives as response an indifferent shrug of the shoulders. It will succeed if it leaves a clearer apprehension of the ethical chaos in which we live and of the necessity of reintegration.

The aim of the Mission is not so much to convert non-Christians as to induce Christians, non-Christians, and fence-sitters alike to face the facts of disintegration and decadence, to re-examine their beliefs—social and political as well as religious—in the light of this spiritual vacuum, and to consider the claim of Christianity as an adequate response to their intellectual environment.

Emphasizing values and unity rather than facts and specialization, wisdom rather than knowledge, the Mission is an educational experiment of the first importance.

Aids To Everyday Living

PART I
HOW TO FIND THE LUSTY SECTIONS IN NOVELS

(This is the first in a series of articles designed to ease the strain of living in the modern world. Their aim is to save the university student valuable time which in turn can be devoted to his studies with beneficial results.)

Many novels printed nowadays, and we are speaking chiefly of the pocket variety, are nine-tenths trash. The only really interesting parts to the casual reader are the cover and the odd lusty section.

It is a generally accepted fact that these lusty sections "sell" the novel. The more there are, the better the novel sells. Unfortunately, most writers, wishing to avoid the label of filth-slingers or semi-disgusting, include only two or three such worthwhile sections in each novel they create.

This gives rise to the problem of wasted time among readers interested only in these sections. It is hoped that the following suggestions will result in a great saving of time for those readers, from all appearances in the majority, who do not give a rap for such minor details as plot, characterization or diction, but are looking only for a bit of lascivious reading.

1. Scan for naughty words—After a bit of experience, you will find that this comes to you quite easily and that you can scan a whole page in a few seconds and gather a general picture of its content. Be on the lookout too for words that are not particularly naughty in themselves but which form valuable "clue" words. Watch for words like "ruby lips" or "eyes intense with passion," etc.

2. Watch the chapter titles—Here is the centre of a common ruse

Amalgamation To Be Debated In U.C. Today

With the vote on the U.C. Lit. and W.U.A. amalgamation being taken this Thursday and Friday, the U.C. Parliament will debate the amalgamation question at a special session Tuesday in the Junior Common Room from 4 p.m.

The resolution to be debated is: "That this House supports the amalgamation of the Lit. and the W.U.A." Supporting the resolution will be Tom Eberlee and Shirley Skeanes, while the opposition will be Alec Dixon and Barbara Smith.

Arguments For Both Sides

University College student officials declare that this debate will give arguments on both sides of amalgamation to aid intelligent voting on Thursday and Friday. All interested students are invited to attend.

"The proposed amalgamation is the negation of women's independent position as undergraduates in the college," stated opposition speaker Alec Dixon. In support of the motion, Shirley Skeanes of the affirmative team said, "I fail to see how anyone with a grain of common sense could be opposed to amalgamation."

McGill Carnival Plans Ski Meet; Athletics Night

Montreal, Jan. 17—(CUP)—McGill's far-famed annual Winter Carnival is slated to run this year from Wednesday, Feb. 16, to Saturday, Feb. 19. Vast plans are under way to make the event bigger and better than ever.

The affair will commence Wednesday evening with a torchlight parade, fireworks skating, tobogganing, sleigh-riding and dancing, and continue the following night with an Athletics Night in the gym, the highlight to be a basketball game.

Friday and Saturday have been declared holidays, and skiing, both at St. Sauveur and in the city itself, will occupy the attention of students.

On Friday, ski teams from the United States and Canada, including University of Toronto, will compete in downhill and slalom events.

Friday and Saturday evenings will be highlighted by a hockey game, the crowning of the Carnival Queen by the city's mayor, and the Grand Carnival Ball.

It is expected that the usual competition for the best snow statue will take place if there is enough snow in the vicinity.

Last year's winning statue was an effort involving a lion on its hind legs holding a pewter beer mug, suitably embossed with a McGill crest.

ROBINETTE DEBATES

The Robinette Debates to be held this week are: Wed., Jan. 19th, Blenkarn vs., McPhail, I year; Thurs., Greenwood vs. Cohen, II year; Fri., Bull vs. Novitsky, II year.

All debates will be held in room II, UC, at 1 p.m. The schedule is posted outside the door of the Lit. office in the JCR.

Still Champions

Semi-Finals for Monarchs Will Be Feature of Dance

The arts colleges of the University of Toronto are striving to widen the gap between the intellectuals and the scientists on the campus. They are establishing a monarchy.

A king and queen of arts will be chosen at the Arts Ball, January 27.

The "Royal Pair" will be chosen in the finals of a campus-wide search that is designed to uncover promising talent among the undergraduates of the arts colleges. Those who demonstrate abilities will probably be tabbed by numerous talent scouts for participation in future college shows.

Elimination contests have been completed by nearly all the colleges and the semi-finals will take place Wednesday, January 19 in the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall. The highlights of the social evening of dancing will be the contest which will decide who will be candidates for the queen and king of arts. Three impartial judges supported by the throng, which will turn out to cheer their college representatives, will make the final decision.

All colleges were invited by the hosts, University College, to enter three contestants in the semi-final. But Victoria was forced to decline the invitation because of the amount of work involved in preparing their Vic-at-home. "We have hopes," said Hal Rosenthal, publicity director of the U.C. Lit., "that in future, the different colleges will take turn in playing host for the semi-finals of the talent search for the queen and king of arts. It could easily be done at one of their social activities of the year such as the Vic-at-Home and besides it provides very good entertainment."

The full proceeds from the All Arts Night on Wednesday will be turned over to ISS. A charge of ten cents will be made at the door.

The Arts Ball staged at the Royal York on January 27 will be a semi-formal affair with no corsage. Tickets will go on sale Wednesday.

Widely-Travelled Prelate To Address IRC Meeting

A talk entitled "Christianity in the International Scene" will be presented to the International Relations Club by Bishop Stephen Neill, Chief Missionary of the University Christian Mission, in South Hall, Emmanuel College, 3:15 on Thursday, Bill Hall, of the IRC, announced yesterday.

Bishop Neill, as well as being assistant to the Archbishop of Canterbury, is secretary of the World Council of Churches. In connection with this position, he has recently travelled throughout the Far East and Europe. He has already made two addresses for the University Christian Mission, and plans some more.

At the same meeting Dr. Robert McClure, chief surgeon of the hospital at Hangkow, and Dr. Walmsley, a church missionary to that country, and head of the Dept. of Asiatic Studies, will present different views of the present Chinese crisis. Both men returned only recently from the Far East.

Hall said that Dr. McClure and Dr. Walmsley have attracted considerable interest because of their opinions regarding the Communists and Nationalists in China.

Dr. McClure, Hall added, visited Communist-held areas close to the fighting front.

New Student Paper Named "Reporter" Hits Campus Today

A new newspaper will hit the campus this morning called The Reporter. It will be published every two weeks with a circulation of 5,000 and distributed throughout the campus and at Ajax. The Reporter is the result of an idea hatched by two second year political science students, Virginia Nairn and Jack Tinker.

Individualist Viewpoint

As a bi-monthly The Reporter will print news as such, but will combine this with the style of the weekly news magazines. In an interview with The Varsity, Jack Tinker, co-editor of The Reporter, said that the paper would represent the "free enterprise" or "individualist" point of view but opinion will be confined to the editorial page.

Relate University to World

Publication of The Reporter will complete the types of journals offered on the campus. The editors intend to use this paper to bring timely information to the campus in an endeavour to emphasize the diversity of activity and community of purpose in university life, and its relation to the rest of the world.

WFDY Lays Plan For Cooperation In World Parley

At a meeting held in Toronto, January 11, the World Federation of Democratic Youth called upon young Canadians to participate actively in the second World Youth Congress and the Festival of Youth and Students.

The Congress, sponsored by the World Federation of Democratic Youth, will be preceded by a festival of youth and students, organized in cooperation with the International Union of Students.

February 21 has been set aside by the committee as a day of solidarity with the youth of colonial and dependant countries.

As part of its preparations for the World Youth Congress and the festival, the committee resolved to celebrate World Youth Week, March 20-27. Its program includes an exchange of inter - organizational youth activity and mass cultural events.

World Youth Week, as well as the day of solidarity with the youth of colonial and dependant countries, will be celebrated throughout the country.

It is expected that the Beaver Brigade 1949 will be composed of approximately 100 young Canadians, 20 of whom will attend the Youth Congress as official representatives of Canadian youth organizations. Students and particularly labor youth will be represented.

Attractive Decor To Mark At-Home In Brennan Hall

The annual St. Michael's At-Home will take place on Friday, January 21, in Brennan Hall. Art Hallman's orchestra will provide the music, and intermission entertainment will feature two of the college's outstanding student pianists, said dance chairman, Bob Kay.

The decoration theme in the upstairs ballroom will be set by a profusion of fresh flowers, banked against pastel drapes covering the walls. The pillars, banked with palms will provide additional color and the whole scene will be reflected in a revolving kaleidoscope suspended from the centre of the ceiling.

The refreshments, the chairman explained, will be served at midnight in the common room, and will take the form of a buffet supper. Strictly formal by tradition, the dance should equal in impressiveness At-Homes of other years, said Kay.

Gibson To Speak To Pol. Sci. Club

Mr. J. Douglas Gibson, supervisor of the Statistical Dept., Bank of Nova Scotia, will address the Political Science Club, Wednesday January 19th at 8 p.m., in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's. The subject of Mr. Gibson's address will be Canada's trading position and foreign exchange problem."

Mr. Gibson is a graduate of University of Toronto in Political Science and Economics. From 1942 to 1947 he served with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Ottawa. His knowledge of Canada's economic problems is wide, and includes the editing of a volume entitled "Canada's Economy in a Changing World," sponsored by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN

Vancouver, Jan. 17—(CUP)—The snow that Toronto ski enthusiasts have been searching for in vain is cosily reposing in Vancouver. Travelling conditions on the University of British Columbia campus are reported to be "the worst . . . for many years."

It all started on December 18; two days later the depth on the campus was one foot. And it's been cold ever since, with snow and freezing rain snarling traffic.

Advisor To SAC Committee

Intercultural Affairs Conference Tonight

A man who tours continents on a motorcycle is Reverend Richard Jones, head of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews. Five foot eight and stocky, he hails from Carleton, New Jersey.

Taught in Athens

Mr. Jones is well suited for his work. He has travelled throughout Europe, China, and Japan, meeting and living with all kinds of people. Two summers ago he preached at Point Barrow, the northernmost point in Alaska. Before completing his studies to become a Methodist minister, at the Boston Theological Seminary, he taught Latin, English and Greek at Athens College, in Athens, Greece, sent out by the Near East Foundation from New York.

During this last war, for two summers Mr. Jones worked as a pipefitter in the Federal Shipyard at Kearney, N.J., where he also had two churches. Being in a labor community he wanted to work with the men. He also joined the American Merchant Marine as an ordinary seaman. For seven months he saw much excitement aboard ships carrying troops in the Mediterranean area just about the time France fell.

Starts Council

"All his life," Mrs. Jones explained, "my husband has had his heart set on bringing people of different creeds and nationalities together. When he was called to set up a National Council of Christians and Jews in Canada last year he was thrilled to accept," she added.

Almost every day Mr. Jones addresses some gathering: recently he exchanged with Rabbi Feinberg to speak in Holy Blossom Temple. Much of his time is spent travelling across Canada. He has worked with the National Council of Christians and Jews in the United States ever since it was started in 1928.

Combats Religious Hatred

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and other outstanding American statesmen first organized the National Council of Christians and Jews as a counteraction to the religious prejudice which had been stirred up during Al Smith's presidential campaign. Since then, there have been set up in 17 countries, including England and post-war Germany, similar organizations which form the International Council of Christians and Jews with its head in Geneva.

Each council is made up of representatives from the three faiths, Catholics, Protestants and Jews. The big project at the moment is National Brotherhood Week to be held throughout Canada and the United States between Feb. 20 and 27. Mr. Jones is advising the SAC Committee on Inter-Cultural Affairs on its handling of Tuesday's conference for the planning of campus activities to coincide with Brotherhood Week.

"In that we are so closely related to each other on the campus," said Mr. Jones, "the practice of brotherhood is even more important than in many other fields of life. I feel certain that a most worthwhile program is being planned by the SAC Committee on Inter-Cultural Affairs."

Homemakers Come To Fore In Lecture

Brenda York Discusses Work In Food At Victoria College Guidance Talks

Last night Victoria women had something interesting to add to the small talk which accompanies after-dinner coffee. The second in a series of vocational guidance discussions was led by Brenda York, a Victoria house-ec grad of 1945. Perhaps Victoria people will know her better as Kay Watson or Mrs. Hodgins. Mrs. Hodgins took her M.A. at Toronto in food chemistry and then was employed with the Advertising Department of Canada Packers.

She spoke about a recent contest which has been undertaken to aid in compiling a cook-book based on products of the company. Recipes were sent in by homemakers and a few of the best picked and considered by a panel of judges. Each month a hundred dollar cheque is sent for the winning recipe.

Mrs. Hodgins feels that advertising is an interesting and worthwhile career for house ec. grads. She also suggested journalism with a special part to be played in women's magazines, and indicated Marie Holmes of Chatelaine as a woman who has been successful in this field.

This year in the company's booth at the Canadian National Exhibition senior students will be needed to demonstrate. Last fall the two Victoria grads who with Mrs. Hodgins make up the Brenda York Bureau, had a busy time in a similar exhibit. Jane Shoemaker glazed and garnished twenty-four hams and Gwen Johns made muffins four times a day for twenty-four days.

Arts, Craft and Magi-Chem Part of Homemaker Show

By JANET HARBRON

Have you been to the Homemakers Show yet? Whether you are planning to be a blushing bride in June, are interested in arts and crafts, or would like to know what talented people are doing around and about Toronto, you will find it extremely interesting and informative.

For example Miss Redsell of the Village Art Studio works in an exhibit sculpting models for original lamps. After the models are completed they are cast in plaster of paris molds and produce original and effective designs. Miss Redsell works from a sketch of the completed lamp which she may change as the work progresses. Her most recent work being done at the exhibit is the model of a young girl in a softly flowing gown with distinctly Grecian lines. One of the completed lamps which was on display had the appearance of a Shakespearean mask, antique in blue and silver tones. Others with bright lacquer finish reminded one of ancient Chinese art and because of their gay coloring would be extremely effective in a modern living-room.

Miss Redsell also does sketches, molds for bronze plates, and plastic work. She is a charming person, an interesting conversationalist, and it would be well worth going to see her to learn more about her craft.

At the Magi - Chemistry show many intriguing experiments are conducted by a vivacious brunette, Miss Kay Bennet, who is a graduate of the University of Toronto. Miss Bennet gives fashion notes about new and exciting nylon fabrics as used in non-shrinkable tricot jersey slips, nylon sweaters, men's socks and evening gowns. The experiments are full of surprises and this part of the display is in itself an incentive to attend.

The Magi-Chemistry show will soon be taken to Winnipeg and eventually across Canada to the west coast. This will provide a busy career for one Varsity grad.

Another craft displayed at the show was the art of glass-blowing. If you have ever seen these delicate glass ornaments then you will enjoy knowing how they are made. The demonstrator heats, melts and twists glass into fragile little tree branches with birds perched on them, and dainty flower patterns.

There are, of course, more practical things for near-future homemakers on the campus. An English company has developed an electricless vacuum cleaner. The weaving of chenille rugs and a cooking display are eye-catching and informative.

Another exhibit demonstrates the manufacture of Canadian pottery, and the manner in which it is painted with gay and attractive designs. Added to this is a beautiful house of modern ideas, in which a lounge done in flame and neutral tones, should end all future desires in the realm of color schemes.

Christian Mission Week Has Meaning For Students

By SUSAN BURGESS

An attempt to solve international difficulties on the religious level is something Miss Muriel Jacobson, Columbia University PhD aspirant, firmly believes in . An M.A. in economics from McMaster, she is here in Toronto this week to help with the University Christian Mission.

Miss Jacobson is keenly interested in political economy and international affairs; she is well-informed on both. In an interview yesterday, she stressed the hope of the missioners that students would give the Mission a chance to present its case for the Christian faith. "The search for a solution other than war for international problems is clearly a religious problem," she said. "The realization of this basic fact was chiefly responsible for my own first thoughts about church work."

Miss Jacobson received her MA in 1935. Then, after spending two years in the Department of Labour of the Federal Government, she joined the League of Nations Society in Canada. This organization was formed to promote education in the member countries and to tabulate public opinion on controversial issues arising in international relations.

Miss Jacobson was in Czechoslovakia during the Munich crisis of 1938. "A few of the Czechoslovakian people at that time felt that they had been sold down the river to maintain peace for the world with Hitler," she said. "Others felt that the League of Nations should have mobilized its forces and opposed those claims of Hitler realizing that if the expansion continued war was inevitable. The Czechoslovakians were ready to resist Hitler if they had been supported by the League."

"I decided that there was little wrong with the League that could not be corrected," said Miss Jacobson. "There was great will for peace amongst people who felt the need to find another solution than war for international problems. That was clearly a religious problem and I began to think of working in the church".

The Varsity has always been notorious for marrying off at least two of its members a year. This year is no exception with Marian Fraser, (that's the gal who handles all the money in the SAC office), starting the year by marrying Robert Niven Black in High Park Avenue United Church on Jan. 22. THE VARSITY Staff wishes the couple all the best for the future.

It seems that the only people who are happy about the January thaw are the weather statisticians who say that this is just about the balmiest piece of winter on record. No matter what the probs have predicted for the last few weeks, the thermomenter has kept on soaring, and rain (instead of snow) has continued falling like our hair, or haven't you noticed the predominance of stringy locks. Skiers and skaters are just out of luck. Better you should take up water polo. Or trade in those skis on a good surf board. Oh well, a little bird told us that the weatherman has prophesied a "cold wave", but we don't believe him for a minute. We're going to have a "heat permanent"—and anyway, that particular little bird was the first

Examination Applications

Faculty of Arts

An application to write at the final examinations must be made by each student as soon as possible and not later than February 1st. Forms are available at the offices of the University and College registrars.

The Council of the Faculty, because of the abnormally large graduating class, has instructed the Secretary to commence the annual examinations for this session on April 10.

VIC'S CORNER

There is something about the sight and sound of water running down the gutters that will always be associated in our minds with that grisly thought that winter is over and exam-time is approaching. In case the current spring-like weather has brought the same feeling to anyone else, let us remind them that, weather or not, there is still of university life before sacrificing some time to enjoy the lighter side it to the demands of the study schedule.

February 1st will bring the "sound of revelry by night" with the annual At-Home at the Palace Pier. For those who were unable to get tickets may we offer this bit of explanation, courtesy of the social committee: because of the fact that not all tickets for the Vic Informal were sold, the committee thought the same would be true for the At-Home if it were held two nights, as originally planned, and right aftr Christmas. Response to ticket sales was greater than anticipated. We might include here a warning to beware of suspicious-looking characters who appear suddenly from behind notice boards and offer you tickets on the black market. Don't be fooled! Be sure you know the real thing from a counterfeit.

Apropos of the At-Home, Ted Snyder, director of the floor show, wants a few talented Vic people to take part in dance routines. For those interested there will be try-outs today at Vic.

The sportlight is on hockey these days, and Vic's men's teams, both senior and junior, promise to give their supporters plenty to cheer about this season. The senior team has a game scheduled for Tuesday at Ajax, but as that rink is probably reduced to mud at the present (no reflections on Ajax) the next encounter will be with senior Skule next Friday at 1:30 in Varsity Arena. The girls' hockey teams have not been quite so successful as the men's so far, but they make up in color what they might lack in finesse. That word "color" might bring back memories of the black-and-blue spots that many of the gals sustain in their first encounter with the game. The second team has lost one game, and the first played PHE to a 1-1 tie, but the season is young yet and anything can happen. Besides hockey, Vic girls are playing volleyball and basketball, and boast some representatives on the inter-collegiate swimming team.

Passing from the active to the meditative pastimes, we extend to everyone on behalf of the Liberal Arts Club an invitation to attend an open meeting Tuesday, Jan. 18, at Wymilwood. Prof. H. R. MacCallum will speak on the "Four Quartets" of the English poet, T. S. Eliot. If you are like us, and admire Eliot's poetry even though you can't understand what he means by it, here is a golden opportunity to find out.

Continuing in a literary vein, here is a request from the editors of Acta for more entries in the contest, whose deadline has been extended to Feb. 1. There is a 25-dollar prize offered in each of the three sections—poetry, fiction and articles. The editors feel sure that a lot of writing talent around Vic is lying undeveloped, and they are anxious to get as many entries as possible so that Acta may be really representative of the student body.

Call it the "useless course", call it the "diamond ring course", call it what you will we girls in pass arts must admit that many of us are clueless as to what lie beyond that rosy May day of commencement. Those who do not have a career or any definable ambition already picked out may get some help from the Vocational Information Series being held at Annesley Hall. The series consists of a number of talks by women from various fields in the business world, and meetings take place during the coffee hours from 7-8 p.m. All girls at Vic are welcome.

There is some consolation in the fact that if "all good things must come to an end," the other kind of things must, too, including this column. We hope many of you will enjoy at least some of the events mentioned about, and bid you au revoir until two weeks from today.

That tired old bone, Canadian versus American radio talent, has been worried again by Toronto's newest radio columnist, Bob Kesten, rhymes with pesti'n'. We've learned, once again, that it only takes a perceptive man, like our columnist, to immediately discover Canada's pre-eminence in the field. We'd rather place our faith in the poor, dim Canadian radio fan to pick out any home-grown talent that may be languishing in neglect. The trouble lies, not in the Canadian listening audience, but in the cliquish mediocrity that is throttling Canadian radio and forcing younger, brighter talent across the border for deserved recognition. Canadian radio is dead from the microphone down and columnist Kesten could do more to revive it than ram those tired old war-horses down our ears, year after monotonous year. The only trouble with this column is that Kesten gets some free publicity.

Misconception

The Editor;
The Varsity

I wish to clear up a misconception in Friday's Varsity about a long string of dissected prose which appeared in Acta Victoriana, and which "caused objection of religious and moral grounds". Abstract Conception No. 1 is guaranteed to contain no allegories, no hidden meanings. It deals, simply and literally, with the struggle of a practical mind and an impossible fact. Quite frankly, I had expected it to raise a big stink among those to whom religion means only passive belief in ideas which do not interfere with daily life, and to whom morality means ignorance. I am happy to report that these are surprisingly few.

U. C. AMALGAMATION NOTES

LOOKING ON THE "PRO" SIDE:

TEN PERCENT isn't very many.

But if either the W.U.C. or Lit. Executive gets that many of its members out to an open meeting these days they are very well satisfied. Obviously, college organizations must be streamlined in order to promote interest.

However your vote FOR imalgamation on Jan. 20 and 21 will not be merely a vote for something new, but also a vote to eliminate the waste of time, effort and your money involved in having two separate organizations. For example, under the present set-up there are two secretaries, two treasurers, two budgets, three executives and two sets of elections. To suggest that this duplication is justified by allegations that men will not vote for women on the basis of ability and vice-versa is to insult the members of the college. The poll in Monday's Varsity showed that typical students, most of them from U.C., felt they had, as a group, mature attitudes to student government. We feel that this conclusion is substantially correct and hope you will not be fooled by this argument.

In a more positive vein we would like to point out that while the joint Lit is spending something like one-half of your W.U.A. and Lit fees, it cannot have anything more than technical responsibility to you. At present it is responsible to the separate open meetings of the Lit, and W.U.A., and therefore complete agreement between the two separate bodies should be necessary before any action can be taken. However, it appears at times as if real responsibility rested with the ill-attended open meetings of the Lit. Your vote for amalgamation will end this complicated and somewhat unworkable system.

Finally, we would like to re-emphasize the point we made last week that only an amalgamated society can properly run College activities, most of which are joint. Just in case anyone really thinks that this is a wobbly theory divorced from practice, we would like to point to a few figures from the W.U.A. and Lit budgets. This year 54% of W.U.A. expenditure will be allocated to specifically joint activities as against 22% for athletics. The remaining 24% classed as "general" is mainly for activities which could be easily handled by an amalgamated society or is merely for running the organization. Admittedly, the Lit allots only 40% of its expenditure to joint activities, and 32% to athletics, but again most of the 8% classed as Literary and 20% "general" either falls easily into a joint category, for example J.C.R. expenses or else is purely organizational—the money spent on open Lit meetings. It is still obvious that an amalgamated executive would be both logical and efficient in handling activities which have already become amalgamated or will soon do so.

Therefore, to eliminate duplication of effort, to give fair representation to all elements in the College and to keep the wheels of joint activity turning smoothly, YOU should vote YES for amalgamation on Jan. 20 and 21.

It isn't too late yet to get yourselves into something NEW in the way of extra-curricular activities. If you need something to take your mind off that essay uneasiness or test tempermentality, something good and extra-curricular will fill the bill. Why not try something you have never done before—who says you can't write and even if you can't there's always The Varsity—try out for a part in that play reading and even if you don't get it, they always need a prompter or a props-man. Do you think you know enough people in your course? The answer to that one is the club your course sponsors. Whether it be the M & P Society or the Pass Arts Club (Student Relation Division), that's the place to meet people with the same "interests" as you.

Have you noticed the newest of new looks about the campus? The other day we saw a gorgeous blonde in the library. Her cap-cut hair was straight from vogue. Her blouse had one of those smart Chinese necklines, and her nipped-in-at-the waist suit emphasised her "hour-glass" figure. Her skirt had that fashionable "bustly" black interest, and as Paris dictates, measured twelve inches from the floor. Her pencil-seam nylons were dark and sheer. Our blonde moved gracefully away from the desk—and we were happy to note that she had completed her costume with foot-gear in the height of fashion and elegance—skuffed, down at-the-heel, slightly gray with age, saddle-shoes.

Miss Jacobson worked for four years on the Religious Education Council of Canada. "Until we have the acceptance of the claims of the Christian Faith by the great mass of the people, we are unlikely to be able to solve the problems of war and human distress," she said.

In 1944 Miss Jacobson was invited to work in the Student Movement of the Y.W.C.A. in the United States. In that position she has been sent to International Conferences all over Europe. In December and January of 1946-47 she spent two months in Russia. "At that time," she said, "there was a real desire on the part of Soviet Youth Organizations to maintain the friendly relationships formed during the war years and it was hoped that Russian youth workers would visit this continent. The situation changed so rapidly when the 'cold war' set in that we were not able to keep up these contacts," Miss Jacobson continued.

This organization hopes to be able to provide scholarships and maintenance for "Displaced Person" students. "Under the terms of the R.D.P. legislation students cannot come to this country unless they have a job or provision is made for their maintenance. It is hoped that the universities will provide the tuition and it will be up to the students to assist in finding them a home in fraternity houses and supplying them with money and clothing. There are at present ten thousand D.P. students waiting to come to this continent and their credits must be matched with the university entrance requirements here," said Miss Jacobson.

Her important message to the students at the beginning of the University Christian Mission is this:

"Thinking students should give themselves a chance to think about the Christian Faith in these days and at the end of the Mission it will be entirely open to each student to make up his or her mind about the validity of what has been presented."

Carleton College Claims First Girl Football Team

Ottawa, Jan. 17 —(CUP)—The first university to back up its claims to having an all-girl football team is Carleton College.

A recent issue of The Carleton carried a large picture of half the team in action.

All the girls wear smart uniforms which look as though they were tailored to fit.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

John Beckwith — Ray Dudley

A thoroughly happy recital of piano duets was presented on Saturday night in the Conservatory Concert Hall. Two of the four hands belong to Ray Dudley and the remainder to John Beckwith. The playing was precise, transparent and very bright indeed.

The two Mozart Sonatas which opened the programme were played for all their grace and all their diamond-like, indestructible delicacy. This high Mozartian quality was especially brought out in the F. major Sonata by the attention given to phasing and accenting.

The attention of the audience relaxed and heightened by the preceding group was now brought to bear on John Beckwith's Music For Dancing. This suite has been composed for a forthcoming ballet to be presented by Boris Volkoff on March seventh in a programme of the Forest Hill Village Concert Series. This is a performance which no one with the least interest in music or ballet should on any account miss.

The suite has seven parts titled as follows: Prelude, First Pantomime, Valse, Second Pantomime, Polka, Dance for Two, Round Dance. With its alternation of suggested dramatic and choric episodes and its theatrical zest, it gives plenty of scope and encouragement to the choreographer. I should like to know whether the music was written to a suggested scenario or not; at any rate it promises to be a very festive thing.

The music has a great deal of character and autonomy to itself. It is written with a very conscious command of the piano duet medium using all the percussive effects, wide range, and intensely concerted interplay peculiar to this ensemble. It is impossible to visualize the ballet except on a small stage with a small chorus, in very bright colours, highly stylized, very gay; it suggests a compact circus composed entirely of star performers and containing no stuffing or merely spectacular mass effects. The character of the music seems to be a theatrical mixture of laughter and irony. In the Dance for two, which presumably is the love scene of the piece, the quality seems to be a hard-surfaced sentimentality which, while quite a sincere, continuously mocks itself.

In addition to the Mozart and Beckwith, the programme included minor decorations by Schmitt and Faure.

Hart House Concert

On Sunday night the Canadian Soprano Frances James sang in a recital at Hart House in the two hundred and thirteenth of that redoubtable series. The veracity of my impressions of the singer's voice and artistry was hampered by my not having heard several items previously. Even in so comparatively simple a form as the art song or lied a first hearing is far from adequate for purposes of critical assessment.

Of the five Hugo Wolf lieder I thought "In dem Schatten meiner Locken" — a winning, humourful song — and the explosive "Er ist's" were the best. Debussy's settings of Verlaine's "Ariettes oubliees", six of which comprised the second group suffered from that diffuseness and blurring characteristic of most of Debussy's writing for voice. The initial piquant novelty of these qualities is lost quite early and devolves by repetition into something rather tedious. However, music of this type is obviously congenial to the singer, and she rendered a properly Teyte-ish treatment to all six.

The final group consisted of five settings to various poems by the German-American Paul Hindemith. The sudden stops and starts and the archly contrived endings of these songs did not appeal to me: "Echo" and "The Whistlin' Thief" were perhaps the best, being about as reasonable a facsimile of real vivacity as this usually lugubrious composer manages to produce. Of the song entitled "On Hearing 'The Last Rose of Summer' ", I can only say that if poor old Flotow's effort evokes a pareil impression, then we are indeed fortunate in hearing "Martha" so rarely these days.

Earle Moss assisted ably at the piano.

Trinity, Vic Dominate Intramural Puck Race

Last week's intramural hockey contests saw all the top teams except idle senior Vic consolidate their positions.

In group one, senior SPS tied senior Vic for the top rung with 3-2 and 5-2 decisions over Ajax and senior UC. However, Vic has a game in hand as they have not yet met the third-place Ajax squad.

Junior Vic defeated senior Meds 3-1 to extend their lead in the second group to three points. In the other game played in this group, St. Mike's A and junior UC drew 2-2.

In group three, the powerful Trinity A team dropped Pre-Meds into second spot with a 4-2 victory, while yesterday, SPS seconds shutout UC thirds 4-0 for their first win of the season.

Besides senior school the only other double winner of the week was unbeaten Forestry B in group seven, who registered a 4-2 decision over Architecture and a 3-2 win over Pharmacy. Standings below:

employed by novelists. If the title appears harmless, be extra-careful in your investigation of the chapter. For example, one entitled "Mrs. Jones throws a tea party" may prove very interesting, while one headed "A Walk in the Woods" would tell of a fruitless search for some species of wild bird and be utterly boring.

3. Note especially the final few lines of each chapter—It is only natural that the best is kept till the end, and one can save immense amounts of time by skipping the first seven-eighths of each chapter in favor of the last bit.

This advice must of course be taken with a grain of salt. The occasional more straightforward writer will head his chapters with a description of what actually happens in them. Some, more clever than the others, manage to avoid the use of naughty words. And finally, erratic writers often inject lusty sections in unexpected places just to fool the short-cutting peruser.

In conclusion, let me utter a warning against the tempting cover. More weak, un-lusty novels have been sold by the use of this trickery than most people are aware of. The cover in fully half the pocket-book novels we have read was no indication of their content and, in our opinion, government action should be taken against the charlatans who make use of such knavery.

VARSITY SPORTS

Speaking Of Sport

By HANK WESTCOTT

Some people insist that it was the spirit of the Varsity football team that was the deciding factor in winning the intercollegiate championship. That's something that no one can prove, but that the spirit is there is obvious. Friday night they had another of what they hope to make regular get-togethers, and they are even talking of having annual parties when they graduate.

You can almost see it now. Tommy Waldon in the year 1978 peering through his bifocals at the white-bearded Doctor Fraser Mustard as they talk about the play that set up the first touchdown against Western. Over in the corner, John Shore punctuates his remarks to John Chore-sticki with a cane-that he is forced to carry. John isn't in such good shape any more.

You would hardly know him, but that's Ted Toogood sitting in the easy chair. He's been teaching high school so long he adds a long "harrumph" after each remark. He's explaining to Nick Volpe and Ed Huycke why his high school football team lost their last game. "They dropped so many kicks, I felt like going out their myself, harrumph," he comments.

Over the door there's a large banner that reads, "Varsity football team, intercollegiate champions, 1948-49." And through the door walks Archie Jones. He's getting in late because he was fixing up a few trails on the ski resort he runs on the side.

And you can't blame the squad for their enthusiasm. For three months, they practically lived together. Every night they banged each other around like they were the worst of enemies. In 1978 they want their exercise limited to the elbow.

They have a lot of remembrances too. Some have won their bronze "T". Others have one or two first "T's". But what they would like is something befitting a championship team—something like the 29 jackets St. Mike's gave their Mulock Cup team of 1948, something a little special. And the Athletic Directorate has it under consideration—we understand they will discuss it tonight. We hope they give it their unanimous aproval, for there is no more deserving group on the campus. No team has done more for the goodwill of Varsity, for Varsity spirit, or for the plain rules of good sportsmanship.

Can't you see that reunion in 1978? Coach Bob Masterson and Captain Ian Clarke bring in the jackets that the team of 1948 left in the hall and shout "put these on fellas, and let's go eat those western sandwiches."

on the sideline

By JOAN EDDIS

"Is there going to be an intercollegiate hockey team?"

Everyone has been asking this to try and verify the rumor that has been iced around. Miss Parkes poured cold water on the "intercollegiate" angle but said that there would be an "all-varsity" hockey team.

What's the difference? The actual reason for not having an official intercollegiate team is that none of the universities involved can afford the expense every year. There used to be an intercollegiate loop between Toronto, Queen's and McGill but during the depression years of the thirties first McGill and then Queen's dropped out, leaving Toronto holding the short end of the stick.

To run a team on an "intercollegiate" scale involves all the expenses of doing it up in blue and white. The setup now is that sometimes one university, this year Queen's, invite us to send a team.

From the "sideline" this is by far the best way of doing it.

Intercollegiate sport (basketball is a glaring example) is becoming too tense, too specialized and too much a case of "We must win." The old idea of "Sport for sport's sake" is being lost along with any enjoyment in the game. All that we get is hard-feeling between the teams and their respective universities.

Just how much bad feeling can be brought about by sport was made evident this fall by all the mud slinging that went on between McGill and Western during the football season.

Let's keep hockey and volleyball, at least, on an invitation basis.

Let these sports be kept in the category of fun and in an atmosphere typified by the Carabin week-end here.

Let's not go onto the courts or rinks just to blast the other team.

Let's be good sports.

Intermediate Ice Blues Trounce Waterloo 9-0

BY JOHN KENNEDY

Waterloo, Jan. 17 —(Staff)—The University of Toronto intermediate hockey machine drove to a 9-0 victory over the Waterloo OAHA entry last night in a decisive contest staged at the local rink. The Varsityites had too much power in all departments for the scoreless Waterloo squad who, nevertheless, made a game of it all the way.

Tom McKillop was the top goal getter in the fray which saw several outbursts of temper as it neared its conclusion. McKillop drove in two Varsity goals while teammate "Pat" Patterson netted a single and came up with three assists.

Scoring twice in the first stanza, once in the middle and popping in six markers in the final frame the intermediate Blues displayed a deadly passing attack and sharp shooting skill. Rich Howson was particularly impressive on his breakaway in the last period when he went in alone on goalie Seltzer and picked off his own rebound to score.

Howson took the assist on McKillop's first tally which found the top right corner of the nets from ten feet out. Wes (Rabbit) Moore shot a pass to Fingland who notched the second goal. Moore took a pass from Pat McLaughlin at the red line and split the Waterloo defence at 10:23 of the second period to make the score three nothing in Varsity's favour.

Morrison and Dies carried the puck into Waterloo ice at 3:12 of the third period and a pass to Patterson on the crease set up the fourth blue goal. One minute later McKillop struck again this time with assists to Pearson and Morrison. Turner and Campbell were responsible for the next two Varsity counters with Patterson picking up assists on both plays along with Campbell and Waldron in that order.

Varsity defenseman Red Waldron and Janke of the Waterloo rearguard engaged in a short set-to which was halted almost immediately and both participants received major penalties for their efforts. Waldron retired with a cut over the right eye.

At 11:03 Bob Cooper sank one on a pass from Turner with Patterson also receiving an assist on the play. Howson's solo rush at 17:10 completed the scoring.

Jack Foote was impressive in the Varsity nets although he didn't have very much traffic to contend with. The shots that were directed at him were handled with despatch and efficiency. Rearguard Clare Morrison also played a bang up game. Morrison's diminutive stature belies his deadly checking ability as he proved by steadily rocking all comers.

First-Place Juniors Try To Increase Lead

BY ED. SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Junior B hockey squad meet the second place Marlboro Juniors in the first game of a double header in the Varsity Arena tonight at 7.30. These two teams are meeting for the first time in the 1949 year. The second game of the evening will be between the St. Michael's Buzzers and the Corner Boys.

The Varsity Juniors moved ahead of the Marboro team by two points last Saturday afternoon when they defeated the hockey squad sponsored by the Corner House Grill and now the Bees hold top place in the Junior B circuit. A Varsity win tonight will keep them in top place by four points. A loss will still leave them in top place, tied with the Marlboro team.

The Varsity Juniors will be attempting to extend their winning streak to four games tonight and Coach Bill Wade hopes his team will continue to play as well as they did last Saturday when they defeated the Corner Boys 8-2.

Artie Holmes played one of his finest games of the season, netting four goals in the last game. Teammates Jack Raftis and Al Conboy played fine hockey and no doubt will continue to play as well tonight.

Porky McDougal and his defencemate Mac Clements are two tough defence men who aid goalie, John Leuty in keeping the puck out of the pay-off district. Norm Fox plays a good checking game as well as Phil Arrowsmith and teammate Vernon. Walters, Hyde, Simms round off the Junior Bees into a good Junior Hockey Club and no doubt will continue to be even better as the season progresses.

The game can be seen tonight at the Varsity Arena without cost to all Varsity students on the presentation of their admit their lecture cards at the door. Their play is as good as any team in the city and we can't go wrong for free.

Stanborough Tops In Foil

The Senior intramural fencing competitions were held yesterday in the fencing room of Hart House and Jack Stanborough came to the top of the list of Varsity foilmen. Gerry Belanger was runner-up to Stanborough and John Roberts captured third spot.

Epee class will receive attention on Wednesday and the sabre duels will finish off the competition on next Monday afternoon. Fencing is a sport that is little appreciated relatively speaking, at Varsity, but is, nevertheless, a real thriller to watch.

Meds skated all over Vic II yesterday, dealing out a swamping 6-0 defeat to the Red and Gold.

The deciding factor in the game was the pronounced difference in calibre between the defense lines of the two teams, Vic seemed to have no defense at all whereas the Meds defense kept the puck inside the Vic blue line and foiled almost all the Vic attacking attempts.

On-the-spot Mary Struthers scored three of the Meds goals, one on a pass from Irene Hain who netted two of the other counters. The remaining point was racked up by wing Bea Eastwood.

One of the stars of the game was hard-working Vic goalie Erlene Bryden. The job of staving off Meds repeated attacks fell to the pads of this spunky goalie who foiled more than one Meds breakaway. The other spark of life on the Vic team was Pat Ferguson who did her best but the efforts of this one player were not enough to stem the smooth-passing Meds team.

On the interfaculty hockey scene yesterday the SPS seconds put the blank on the UC thirds in a hard checking fracas at the local arena. Tallies by Hislop and Schultz put the engineers out in front at the end of the first period. The winners added two more in the middle frame on efforts by Brace and Red Lemay, to complete their total.

SPS II: Goal, Whelan; defence, Jones, Radford; centre, Richards; wings, Pamplin, Scott; alternates, Schultz, Hislop, Gerry, Brace, Lemay.

UC III: Goal, Winters; defence, Walls, Mooin; centre, Halliday; wings, Dick, Tyndall; alternates, Robb, Nevins, Summerville, Bernstein.

Trinity Bees nosed out the UC fourths in another of yesterday's slam bang ice duels by a narrow 3-2 margin. The Bees piled up all their total in the starting frame while the red and white hockeyists collected singles in the first and second stanzas of the contest leaving the last frame a tight scoreless battle.

Beattie sparked the Trinity aggregation with a goal and an assist to his credit, Harley and McLeod supplied the other counters for the winners. Halbert and McMurrich netted singles for the UC squad.

Trinity B: Goal, Dawson; defence, McLeod, Whitehead; centre, Bowden; wings, Hall, Perry; alternates, Stewart, Harley, Fleming, Beattie.

UC IV: Goal, Kohan; defence, Halbert, Jamelson; centre, Kennedy; wings, McMurrich, Yater; alternates, Medland, Francis, McEwan.

Major basketball featured two close contests to start the week off in proper style. St. Mike's A basketeers beat out Sr. SPS by a 27-24 verdict in the big gym. The double blue picked up an early margin and held on to it all the way through the tilt. However their lead was never large enough to be called comfortable with the engineers on their heels at all times.

Ray Ryan was the high man for the Collegians with ten points to his credit. He supplemented this performance with some fine rebound work.

Grattan (Lugs) McKeown hooped in six for the Mikemen and his height also told around the backboard. Fletcher topped the skulemen with eight points followed by Wigle with six and McClenahan with four.

Casey Latinovitch of last year's Ajax hoop squad showed lots of ball handling ability and added two points to the SPS sum. Point getters for the blue and gold group included Fitch with two and Erling and McCarthy with singletons. Contributing to the St. Mike's cause were Quinn who got four, Dewey and Wiley with two each and Murphy, McMullen and Figle with one apiece.

St. Mike's: Centre, McKeown 6; forwards, Wiley 2, Ryan 10; guards, Figel 1, Dewey 2; alternates, Quinn 4, Murphy 1, Giblin, McMullen 1. Total—27.

Sr. SPS: Centre, Wigle 6; forwards, Fletcher 8, Latinovitch 2; guards, Pogontcheff, McClenahan 4; alternates, McGaw, McCarthy 1, Erling 1, Fitch 2, Blackwood, Buchanan. Total—24.

In the other hoop tilt of the day the A squad from Architecture edged out UC fourths by a close 29-28 margin. Pacing the A's was Tiebe with nine points while Shapiro, Simpson and Gibson netted four apiece for UC.

Freedman with eight, Overs with five and Foster, Dashkin and Griffin with two raised the winners' total which Jones completed with his single. Ed. Lindgren got three for the red and white while Sukmanowski, Davis and Rothstein all sank single free shots.

Arch A: Centre, Foster 2; forwards, Overs 5, Freedman 8; guards, Tiebe 9, Dashkin 2; alternates, Stone, Jones 1, Griffin 2. Total—29.

UC Debaters Favor Uniting Lit. And WUA

A motion supporting amalgamation between the University College Literary and Athletic Society and the UC Women's Undergraduate Association was upheld by a vote of 25 to 17 in a University College Parliament debate yesterday afternoon.

Women's Rights

Members of the Parliament fought the issue mainly on the grounds of women's rights. Jim Peters, leader of the opposition, maintaining that "women have not got the aggressiveness of men" warned that if amalgamation were adopted the women of University College would stop being "pretty big fish in a feminine ocean" and would become "small fish in a bisexual ocean."

Duplication

Tom Eberlee and Shirley Skeanes, speaking for the motion, presented some of the practical advantages to be gained from amalgamation. They pointed out the present duplication of effort in men's and women's activities and the difficulties presented by the present "unwieldy joint executive." Miss Skeanes maintained that the only fields in which there would be a need for feminine control were "women's athletics, the Portia debates and the annual Whitney Hall party for freshies."

Male Influence

Alec Dixon and Barbara Smith's main argument against the motion was that amalgamation would submerge the women under a wave of male influence. They maintained that the present system of joint co-operation was adequate.

Nab Ex-UBC Student Convicted For Theft

Vancouver, Jan. 17, — (CUP)— The University of British Columbia's enterprising criminal who launched a one-man crime wave now has three months to contemplate the folly of amassing more briefcases, wallets, odds and ends of clothing, wristwatches and electric razors than any man could possibly use in three life-times.

Samuel Watson, ex-UBC student, was convicted of theft and sentenced to three months imprisonment.

Students have been plagued for months by thefts in places where large numbers of students congregate. Police expressed hope that the arrest and conviction of Watson will call a halt to the wave.

Readers Regard Reporter Reactions Reveal Remedies

The appearance of a new newspaper on the campus yesterday met with mixed reactions from the students, many of whom compared it with The Varsity. Mary Ritchie IV Poly Sci & Ec, said, "like all new publications it was very good, but time will tell."

"Frankly, I don't think it has anything in it, merely a tabloid type of paper, and as for The Varsity, I only read it for announcements," said Norm Friedgut, II P&C, but Bill Black IV P&G, said "That's some paper, did you read the joke on the second page? They must have a lively crew of guys putting the paper out. The Campus Cat in The Varsity is sometimes worth reading too, today it vied for honours with the Reporter".

Varsity Tolerable

Murry Citron III UC said, "In putting out their first issue they have time to turn out a paper that's made up of what The Varsity would run as mostly features. I don't think that they (The Reporter) have done as well as they could have. This year The Varsity is tolerable compared to last year".

"The Reporter seems to have more in it than The Varsity," said Miss G. G. Choras, III Psych, "The Varsity should devote more time to student opinion".

M. M. Fitzpatrick IV P&G commented, "when you likes 'em you lets 'em, when you loves 'em you helps 'em, and as for The Varsity, I don't read it enough to express an opinion."

Norma Epstein Contest Announces Top Awards

The winners of the drama, short story and poetry awards of the Norma Epstein Foundation Literary Competition were announced last week.

The winner of the $150 prize for the full length or three act play was W. Grant Huffman, IV English Language and Literature. Huffman was the winner last year of the Robin Godfrey award for one act plays. The winning play in the Epstein award is entitled Sacrifice.

The $100 award for the short story was given to Albert Tucker, II Modern History, for his story "The Horse and the Kitten." Tucker is also an ex-service student.

The second prize in the short story contest $75 was awarded to Arthur C. Thompson, III Sociology, for his story Highgrade.

Passive Prejudice Campus Problem Reports G. Tatham

Plans for campus activities to harmonize with the nation-wide Brotherhood Week, Feb. 20-27, were formulated at a conference last night sponsored by the SAC's Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee.

Apathy

Students representing most of the faculties and organizations in the University heard Professor G. Tatham, faculty advisor from the Georgraphy Department, estimate inter-racial and inter-cultural attitudes prevalent on the campus and sketch the general purposes of the SAC-sponsored Week.

"The Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee is having a difficult time," said Professor Tatham. "It has to deal with mere currents of opinion, apathy, deep-rooted but passive prejudice on the campus. Perhaps if prejudice took the form of overt acts, such as the incident several years ago which involved a graduate student of the University who was refused entrance to a bridge tournament in Toronto and which resulted in the formation of this committee, the problem would be an easier one.

State of Mind

"As it is," he continued, "the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee must attack a state of mind, and a dangerous one; and it must attack it constructively."

The professor commented that members of the committee had been devoting their time steadily throughout the year to the cause of promoting understanding among the various cultural groups. He stressed, nevertheless, the necessity of a special Week, set aside for the purpose.

Awaken Unthinking

The advantages of a SAC-sponsored program in sympathy with National Brotherhood Week were three-fold, he said. "The program may awaken the unthinking among

"Authorityitus" Against Gazette Editor Resigns

Halifax, Jan. 18—(CUP)—Antagonism between the Students' Council of Dalhousie University, Halifax, and the policy adopted by editors of The Dalhousie Gazette, the student newspaper of that university, has resulted in the resignation of Jack Lusher, co-editor of the paper.

For the second time this year The Gazette was brought to trial before the Students' Council on Jan. 14. At this meeting the council levelled charges of irresponsibility and destructiveness in their criticism at the editors of The Gazette.

Lusher, a student at Dalhousie for the past three years, was, until his resignation, a member of the editorial staff of The Gazette. In his freshman year he became the Feature Editor and was the founder of the Sam Peep's column. The next year he was News Editor and this year was made co-Editor-in-Chief.

Lusher said the first year he was on the staff he was forced to resign because of a heavy attack of authorityitus, brought on after he was exposed to the harsh reality of politics at the college on the hill. Friends attribute his resignation at this time to a relapse of the same malady.

Toronto Criminal Lawyer Slams Capital Punishment

Capital punishment is "an institution that should be abolished" said Mr. Arthur Maloney, prominent trial lawyer, last night to an open meeting of St. Michael's College Oratorical Society.

Mr. Maloney discussed the pros and cons of the employment of capital punishment for various crimes from two main aspects: materialistic and moral. However, he touched but briefly on its use with regard to crimes other than murder.

Some, said Mr. Maloney, attempt to justify it on the grounds that it "operates as a deterrent to others." Because in the great majority of cases murder is not premeditated, this is not a valid argument, he said. In moments of passion the murderer is not likely to consider the result of his crime — capital punishment or otherwise. He severely criticized those who endorse capital punishment on the grounds that it saves the state the cost of supporting the criminal in a prison.

Not Justified

The moral side of the question, Mr. Maloney emphasized to a great extent. He opposed the opinion common to many theologians that the state has the right of capital punishment since it derives its authority from God. He stated that to say that even the state has this power is to read into God's commandment not to kill an exception that we have no right to insert. "Morally, capital punishment cannot be justified."

Mr. Maloney formerly attended St. Michael's Colege (1937-40). From 1940 to 1943 he studied at Osgoode Hall. Mr. Maloney was one of the founders of the SMC Senate Club as it exists under its present constitution. Often he has acted as a defence council in manslaughter and murder cases.

MacMillan And Bryden

Wot? No Crumpets? Saints Alive!!

By BILL GAGNON

Trinity College boasts a musical comedy writing team second only to Gilbert and Sullivan—and if you ask MacMillan and Bryden, the song-writers themselves, maybe even Gilbert and Sullivan should take a back seat.

Keith MacMillan, IV Biology, self-appointed senior member and press-agent of the team, is by occupation the "Son of Sir Ernest MacMillan", if the files of the Bank of Montreal are to be trusted. Individualist Keith covers his resentment of this fact with a careless laugh.

Born Near Mother

He was born at the Toronto General Hospital, "because I wanted to be near my mother" in 1920, received his education at Central Tech and Upper Canada College before coming to Trinity. He was a photographer in the R.C.A.F. and spent time in England and North Africa.

Ron Bryden, III Eng. Lang. & Lit., posses a brand of humor that is less flagrant but no less penetrating. As his contributions to the "Trinity Review" indicate, he has the knack of characterizing the personalities he creates with a few deft verbal touches. He was born in Trinidad, also presumably near his mother, in 1927 and received his education there before entering Trinity. He spent a year on the Foreign Desk of a Trinidad newspaper; says apologetically, "I was too young for the war."

Cure For Blues

In 1947 both boys wanted to do a college show. Bryden wanted to write the scrip, MacMillan the music. Trinity's effervescent Gwynne-Timothy knew of their aspirations, naturally, and said, "Why don't you boys get together?" He introduced them and the result was "What! No Crumpets?", a satirically hilarious musical comedy purporting to depict life at Trinity.

"What! No Crumpets?" featured song-styles of such variety as a Gregorian Chant, a 13th Century round, Boogie-Woogie and Blues numbers. "Wingling Waltz" produced the word wingling, and all-inclusive word meaning the mingling of men and women; "Trinity Blues" suggested that the only cure for the blues is the KCR; "A Boy Can't Do Without A Girl" implied —well, if you don't know, you're dead.

World Effort

The production, which was first presented at a Trinity Conversat, then at Hart House and in condensed form on Entertainment 1A, was written all over two continents. Yes, that's right—all over two continents. Bryden wrote lyrics in Toronto, while travelling, and at home in Trinidad. MacMillan wrote music while touring U.S. and South America in a jeep.

Lyricist Bryden and musician MacMillan do not follow any hard and fast rules as to who writes words and who writes music. There is considerable overlapping of duties. The usual pattern of development of a show is something like this:

Refuse To Talk

Bryden writes the first act, incorporating the plot, characterization and song lyrics. MacMillan looks it over with the intention of setting it to music. He blocks out the simple melody, timing and general musical outline in his mind. He finds that, in his opinion, Bryden's script doesn't have the correct balance, that it doesn't form an "artistic whole". He tells Bryden this. Bryden says, "What would you suggest?" MacMillan makes his suggestions and Bryden says, "Listen, if you can't write music to fit the idea I'm trying to express in the script, just say so. Don't go trying to change the whole thing." So they refuse to talk to each other for a couple of days.

Agree To Disagree

Then they start over again with a new first act. This goes on until the time set for rehearsal is so near that they are forced to agree. The reasons for disagreements are that their likes and dislikes, circles of friends and activities, and senses of humor are different.

MacMillan, when asked about his plans for the future, said, "I'm going to marry the young lady behind you, there. Her name is Pat Dustan." He wants to do post-graduate work in Biology, then some research on, among other things, the biological effects of radiation.

Bryden's answer was, "Once MacMillan gets out I'd like to do some serious writing, and maybe get into radio." He would like to write scripts for radio drama shows.

College Inspired

At present they are in mutual disagreement about what should go into their current endeavor, "Saints Alive?", or, "La Triviata", a musical comedy which treats the subject as if musical comedy has inspired college (one like St. Hilda's, for example), rather than as if college life has inspired the musical comedy.

Congratulations!

As it has on so many previous occasions, The Varsity today extends a welcome to another new student newspaper, The Reporter, which appeared on the campus yesterday.

It was only recently that we looked over our left shoulder to watch the demise of Campus, self-styled journal of student opinion. Today we turn the other cheek to greet a newcomer, one whose worthy objective will be "to demolish campus 'Ivory Towers' ".

Knowing full well the difficulties encountered in producing a student newspaper on a skimpy budget and a dearth of ready-made editorial talent, we are impressed with the first issue of The Reporter.

It will be interesting to watch the development of the newd journal in its avowed determination to carry "unbiased" news in its news columns. It is a policy that demands eternal vigilance.

Without subscribing to any of the views which they have expressed, we congratulate the editors and staff for the positive expression of their convictions.

Newcomers to Take Leads In G. B. Shaw Presentation

Rehearsing every night since the week before Christmas, the cast of G. B. Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma" is almost ready to ring up Saturday night's curtain over the Hart House stage.

The leads of this play have never held lead roles in a Hart House production. The first big part for Trinity's Don Glen is that of the doctor. Alla Filppula, UC freshie, has the feminine lead and Pre-medical student Robert Sheppard, is Louis, the artist who falls in love with Alla, the doctor's wife.

"This is Shaw at his wittiest," Hart House Theatre director Robert Gill says. "This time he shoots his barbed arrows at the doctor's medical profession, its ethics and professional standards. The plot concerns Sir Colenso Ridgeon who discovered a cure for tuberculosis. His hospital can accommodate only one more patient and he is faced with a choice of two men. Should he save Louis Dubedat, a worthless blackguard and scoundrel whose artistic talent reveals true genius, or Dr. Blenkinsop, an honorable, honest physician, who is of no use to his profession.

"Which man is worth more to the world? The dilemma is complicated with the artist falling in love with the doctor's wife, Jennifer. In his witty way, Shaw pokes fun at the ethics of this doctor and surrounds him with a group of other doctors, each of whom has his own personal attitude toward the situation—medically and ethically."

The curtain goes up at the new time of 8.15 rather than 8.30, starting Saturday night through to Jan. 29.

Landslide For Canucks In Debate At Glasgow

Montreal, Jan. 18 —(CUP)— The McGill Debating Society team of Isadore Rosenfeld, Ted Hegessen and Sydney Phillips defeated the University of Glasgow last Friday night in the first debate of their tour in the British Isles. The Canadian team took a negative stand on the subject: "Resolved that the east-west balance of power is the only solution to the problem of world peace."

The argument waged for five hours before a vote was taken. The McGill team won 68-16. The event was the first transatlantic competition since several years before the war.

The University of Montreal Carabins continued their winning ways to remain firmly in the top spot of the intercollegiate hockey pile. Their latest conquest was the Redmen of McGill whom they downed 5-2. Varsity's triumph over the hapless cellar-dwelling Gaels puts them in second place four points below the leaders. The McGill squad trails Varsity by a like margin. The Carabins have played two more games than Varsity and both have had one loss.

BOLTON TURNS SHAMATEUR

Hugh Bolton, starry Queen's forward, has signed a contract with Toronto Marlboros of the O.H.A. junior "A" loop, coach Gene Chouinard announced Friday night. Bolton will finish out this season with the junior Dukes and will move up to the senior Marlboros next year. From there he may "turn professional" with the Maple Leafs. Bolton said his hockey playing would not prevent him from completing his education although it would be retarded.

Blue Bees On Top Beat Marlies 5-4

By ED. SOKOLOWSKI

The only Varsity hockey team that is currently leading their league is the Junior Bees, who grabbed a stronger hold of top place last night when they defeated the Marlboro Juniors by a score of 5-4 at the Varsity Arena. This gives the Varsity team their fourth straight victory of the second half of the season.

A small crowd saw the game in which the Marlboro Juniors fought furiously to at least tie the game in the dying minutes. The Juniors held a slight edge throughout the tilt but were pressed hard to hold that edge.

Ron Hurst of the Marlboro Juniors started the scoring after receiving a pass from Lionel Barber. Mac Clement tied the score when his hard shot bounced off Goalie Hunt's stick into the net.

The Bees took the lead early in the second stanza when Defenceman Mac Clement again tallied for the Juniors. Clement golfed a hard shot from just inside the blue line after receiving a pass from Jack Raftis. Two minutes later, Ron Hurst tied the score on a pass from Blair Livingstone. Porky MacDougal set up the tie-breaker when he passed the puck to Walters who beat Goalie Vic Hunt. Al Conboy added another marker for the Blue and White with the help of Holmes and Raftis. Jack Wheldrake closed the gap by one goal from a scramble in front of the net with Gord Banafice and John Adams helping out.

Wheldrake tied the score in the early minutes of the final frame when a linemate set him up with a beautiful pass. Six minutes later Norm Fox scored the winning goal after receiving a pass from Phil Arrowsmith and shooting a grounder that went through the defence and the netminder, Vic Hunt.

Line-ups:
Varsity: Goal, Leuty; defence, MacDougal, Clement; centre, Fox; wings, Sinclair, Walters; alternates, Holmes, Conboy, Raftis, Vernon. Arrowsmith, Simms, Prendergast, Hyde, Milne

Examination Applications
Faculty of Arts

An application to write at the final examinations must be made by each student as soon as possible and not later than February 1st. Forms are available at the offices of the University and College registrars.

The Council of the Faculty, because of the abnormally large graduating class, has instructed the Secretary to commence the annual examinations for this session on April 19.

U.C. it's this way...

It never rains but it pours. ... Some weeks there is so little happening around the college and such a famine of news, that we are forced to include little items of gossip (shame!) to fill up the column. (See back Wednesday's issues of The Varsity).

However this week there is material galore — as one would easily surmise upon seeing the tremendous advertising of U.C. events in The Varsity, as well as the plastered appearance of the U.C. rotunda.

Naturally the most important social affair for you fellows and girls of the Red and White is the Arts Ball of January 27th. This is the one dance at U.C. where everybody goes. Your whole social position depends upon your presence at the Arts Ball. Indeed, if one's absence is noted, (which it usually is—considering there are only 800 couples attending), the authorities are informed when registration time rolls around next year, and you are coldly requested to transfer your studies, your allegiance, and your carcass, to the halls of Victoria. It has been argued by several campus radicals that such a punishment is too harsh—and is merely a reflection of a sordid bourgeois morality. There is talk of easing the penalty however—instead of going to Vic—one will be allowed to transfer to either O.A.C. or Trinity.

Before leaving the subject of the Arts Ball, we want to say that we sincerely believe that we have one of the most gifted musical men in Canada in the person of Oscar Peterson. He'll be here, from Montreal, with his trio to play for your enjoyment. It's no secret that Oscar and his boys are being heavily endowed by the Lit. and W.U.A.—but the fine music he'll be playing for the pleasure of our people at the dance will be proof that the money is well spent.

Contrary to earlier advertisements, tickets will go on sale at ten o'clock this morning in the U.C. rotunda. If they are not sold out to U.C.—P.H.E. by Monday morning—then sales will be open to all other faculties, grads, etc.

Oh yes! Semi-formal means that the girls wear formal dress, the men ordinary business suits. No corsages please!

Another social event to be attended is the All-Arts Affair being held tonight at 9:00 p.m. at the Drill Hall. As you probabl yalready know, the semi-finals will be held in the big Arts talent search. U.C. will be represented by Barb Redfern, Margo McKinnon, and Irv. Morfin.

This dance is being sponsored by U.C.—and takes the place of the Red and White Night originally scheduled for to-night. Let's all get out to-night to the Drill Hall to offset the cheering sections that will certainly be there from Vic, Trinity, and St. Mike's. It costs only a tenth of a dollar — which is a rather reasonable rate to pay for music, entertainment, and refreshments. It is a "come single—go home as best you can" affair. We'll see you there.

Don't be lazy or forgetful! Make sure you vote tomorrow or Friday on this issue of amalgamation. So much has been written about the subject in the past two weeks that there is little more to do except to urge you to get out and cast your ballot — either for or against. This plebiscite should settle things once and for all, and it's important to get the vast majority of the college to exercise their franchise in this controversial issue.

If you still feel rather uncertain, drop into the Joint Open Meeting this afternoon and listen to the arguments pro and con — over the various forms amalgamation should, would, or could take. That's in the Junior Common Room — at 4.15.

In all the flurry of excitement over the Arts Ball, the amalgamation plebescite et al, we don't want to lose sight of an act of generosity on the part of an old friend of U.C. students. For several years Prof. McAndrew, the registrar of the college, and father confessor of the students, has been giving prizes to the U C golfers finishing highest in intra-mural golf. Now Prof. McAndrew has donated a permanent trophy to be presented to the best U.C. golfer each year. Our collective hats off to Prof. McAndrew — who is always acclaimed, and rightly so, as the friend of the undergraduates of the college he serves so well.

Take care of your selves, and we'll see you back here next Wednesday.

Interfaculty Sports

By BILL ROSS

The interfaculty open track meet events for this week were run off last night at the Hart House track with Bill Kelly of St. Mike's and John Hryshko of UC copping the first honors in the 50 yard dash and 600 yard event respectively.

Kelly who posted a neat 5.4 seconds for the distance was followed by Gary Garossino who made the tape in 5.8. A three-way tie for the show spot took place between McMacken of Vic, Pitman of Trinity and W. Davis of St. Mike's. Garossino, by the way, is also a St. Mike's entry.

Hryshko's time for the 600 yards was one minute, 16.9 seconds. Runner-up was George McMullen from St. Mike's who was clocked at a minute and 18.5 seconds. Fellow collegian Paul Forrestall took third spot and John Dashwood of Trinity finished fourth.

Senior Meds hockey squad, paced by Tony Cecutti, handed Junior UC a 4-1 setback at Varsity Arena yesterday. Thompson and Halliday furnished a goal per to supplement the winner's total. Ray McCutcheon was the lone red and white marksman.

Cecutti, an all round athlete, potted two counters for the practicioners. His second was a picture goal as he picked up a rebound in front of the UC nets and slammed it past Jimmy Cormack. Halliday also looked good on his goal which he picked up on a nice breakaway.

Forestry A's of the major basketball loop administered a 22-13 lacing to the Vic thirds yesterday at Hart House. The brand of play did not look too spectacular for major ball but what the two aggregations lacked in skill they made up in willingness.

Shaw was the big cannon for the woodchoppers with six points beside his name. Hamilton with four, Scott, Collict and McKeon with three apiece were the chief green and white scorers.

On the Vic side of the sheet McKenzie and Stevens led the pack with three points. Murray and Lowery got two and Ralph, Pond and Harris were successful on free shots.

In the noontime major tilt PHE outhustled the SPS III quintet to pile up a decisive 41-18 margin at game time. (An ambiguous expression for the end of the game). Bill Danylchuk, of Varsity football renown, proved his worth on the gym floor as he teamed with Nevins to lead the PHE squad with eight points apiece.

Right guard Stowe of the blue and gold basketeers was at the fore for the engineers with six points. Foster followed with four and Lemon and Trower hooped three each. Schuster and Lafontaine handed in singles.

York Belters Shade Blues In Hoop Tilt

York Belting juniors came up with the last minute scoring punch necessary to shade the Varsity junior hoop quintet by a narrow 51-50 margin last night at Hart House. The lead fluctuated between the Blues and the red belters throughout the game and neither squad could claim a comfortable margin at any time.

Lane of the visitors started the scramble which turned into a mad climax to the game when he tipped in a rebound to put his team one point up with only a minute to go. Wilson of the belters made the difference three with a nice one hander from the circle. Bromsal came through for Varsity with a neat close in shot and made the score 51-50 in the closing seconds.

Burnstein was particularly impressive in the Varsity cause. He hooped in 12 points to lead the blue scorers and showed lots of hop when it came to rebounds. Brown was the runner-up Toronto scorer with nine, followed by Bromsal with eight. Dancy contributed six markers to the Varsity total while Hamilton added four and Carr three.

Braithwaite looked good for the losers with his heady ball handling and with Carruthers, Glother, and Denton for company, hit the scoring column with two apiece.

Karabin paced the well drilled belters with the game-high total of eighteen points to his credit. Wilkes and Kutner sank ten apiece with Lane and Osborne netting four. Two pointers included Gottlieb and Blanchard and Sherman ended the scoring with a singleton.

We saw 'Red River' last night, that opulent saga of the West. Cliff-jawed John Wayne and slate-eyes Montgomery Clift sure gave those cattle terrific support. And Joanne Dru was shore the prettiest gal that ever got an arrow through the shoulder. But none of them had a chance against those ten thousand cattle pounding down the old Chisholm Trail. There was something about that herd that came closer to our heart than a quick trigger-finger or a flickering eyelash could ever get. We refer, of course, to all that beef on the hoof. Leaving the theatre, mentally dividing all those cattle into individual steaks, we got to thinking that in these times, Hollywood might better have sent ten thousand humans stampeding along with two cattle riding herd. At least, they might have given the cattle top billing.

'REPORTER' FACES LAW ACTION

Shinu and Shanta

Shinu and Shanta Roa, Indian students at the University of Toronto, who will be returning soon to their homeland to work in public health service. Shinu hopes to join a medical research institute, and there is a possibility of his being placed on a university staff. Shanta is doing research on penicillin.

* * * * * *

Shinu and Wife Make Study Of Immunization Technique

By "CONNIE" O'CONNELL

"It reminded me of the Independence Movement at home," exclaimed Shanta Rao, expressing her enjoyment of the football snake dance in which she participated last fall. In India, due to Gandhi's abhorrence of violence, the only aggressive form of protest by students is the dislocation of traffic, she explained.

Shanta is the wife of Shinu Rao who came to the Toronto School of Graduate Studies in Sept., 1946, on a Govt. of India Scholarship awarded by the Education Dept. Shinu completed the requirements for his Ph.D. in December, in research on the chemistry of toxins, sera and vaccines. His thesis dealt with investigations in scarlet fever and diphtheria toxins and anti-toxins. Oxford and Wisconsin were the other universities in which Shinu could have taken the training. The fact that the Connaught Laboratories produce immunization and anti-penicillin products influenced him in his choice of Toronto as his place of study. Toronto is known in India for its manufacture of insulin, Shinu states.

Studies For M.A.

Shanta, being anxious to keep abreast of the new ideas which would influence her husband in Canada, came here as a student a year later. Shanta has just completed study for her M.A. in the actions of crystalline enzyme on toxins and anti-toxins. She was awarded a research grant for the National Research Council and Connaught Laboratories for the work.

The couple's three - year - old daughter, Shomala, and Shanta's mother are very fond of one another, a fact which made it possible for Shanta to leave. "Shomala"—is well cared for by mother. It is only we who miss her," Shanta said.

Shinu met Shanta at the Institute of Science in her home town of Bangalore. She was then a student just out of high school studying for her Bachelor of Science while Shinu who had previously received his M.Sc. in Chemistry from the University of Benares, had joined the Biology Chemistry Dept. of the India Institute of Science in Bangalore as a research assistant; Shanta's girl-friend was Shinu's cousin and it was she who introduced them.

Like Sports

Shanta and Shinu express their enjoyment of Canada's sports and social activities. Many of our sports are popular at universities in India, volleyball, cricket, tennis and swimming, but Shanta is most enthusiastic about our rugby games. "I really get in the spirit," she says. They attribute great value to the International Student Organization "as a basis for fostering understanding between different racial groups." In its frank, intimate atmosphere, they have made numerous interested and sympathetic friends. Besides, says Shanta, "I wouldn't have known a Norwegian from a Canadian if I hadn't met both in the club." Shinu approved the informal programme at the I.S.O.'s spring camp.

Prefer Own Costumes

Shanta says that Indian women prefer wearing their own costumes in Canada because of the advantage of them and because of personal preference. "We can easily fold and pack about fifty different costumes in one suitcase and we don't have to worry much about pressing them. In addition they aren't subject to style changes. I had my picture taken in a Canadian dress and I almost froze." In accounting for her long braids Shanta says "Indian girls want long hair like western ones; all wish their tresses were blond and curly."

Mr. and Mrs. Rao will return to India within a few weeks. Shinu hopes to join a medical research institute which prepares sera and vaccines against tropical diseases such as cholera and plague, public health measures in the prevention of diseases by immunization. There is a possibility of his being placed on a university staff.

Work of Psychologists In Federal Departments Outlined by N.R.C. Head

Speaking to the Psychology Club yesterday, Dr. N. W. Morton, director of the National Research Council, gave a comprehensive picture of the place of psychology in the area of Federal interest.

The importance of psychology to the government was greatly increased during the late war, Dr. Morton said, due to the necessity of trained persons in the work of personnel selection in the armed services.

In addition to the appraisal, classification and selection of personnel, the Federal administration is interested in the development and application of methods of training for defence.

In the divisions of development and research, the area of interest in psychology embraces the prevention of war, which is the purpose also of the recently founded World Mental Health Federation, explained Dr. Morton, and also psychological warfare.

In an effort to enlarge activities in the departments of development and research, the National Research Committee hopes to institute a system of bursaries and grants-in-aid, added Dr. Morton.

Trained psychologists are also necessary in the Civil Service Commission, in connection with the selection and training of personnel, in the Unemployment Insurance Commission, and in the Department of Veterans' Affairs.

New Campus Sheet Involved In Threatened Libel Suit By Seamen's Representative

BY STAN FILLMORE

A charge of libel will be laid against the publishers of the student newspaper, The Reporter, which made its first appearance on the campus last Tuesday, it was learned yesterday.

The imposing charges arose out of a signed column on the editorial page of The Reporter which erroneously stated C.S.U. official M. E. Nuttall was serving a term in a federal penitentiary as a result of activity in last summer's shipping tie-up on the Cornwall Canal.

The charge of libel will be laid by the Executive Secretary of the National Seamen's Defense Committee, Milton E. Nuttall. The Defense Committee headed by Nuttall was formed by The Canadian Seamen's Union to publicize alleged injustices to seamen in inland shipping.

False, Says Nuttall

The article containing the offensive statements was entitled, "Touche". It appeared on the editorial page and was signed by V. L. Nairn, II Poli Sci. co-editor of The Reporter. "The whole story is filled with falsehoods and half-truths," Mr. Nuttall said yesterday. "For instance, the article said the incident took place at Lock 18 of the Cornwall canal. Actually it was at Lock 20. That is just a small incident, but if the publisher can't get even the small details right, how much truth can you place in the broader aspects of the story?"

"I have been in touch with my lawyer, Mr. George Bagwell, and he advised me that there is definitely grounds for a libel suit in the article," Nuttall added. (Mr. Bagwell is Canadian Seamen Union legal representative in this district.)

Bagwell said yesterday that he was leaving for Montreal and had not been "definitely informed" if the client wanted to press charges. "But," he added, "I will definitely take action if Mr. Nuttall asks me."

May Also Charge Contempt

"I have not read the article yet but it has been read to me over the phone by Nuttall. There is certainly grounds for libel and I believe that the court may also make a charge of contempt. The contempt charge can arise out of the fact that the paper was commenting on a case still before the courts."

Nuttall said he had been in conversation with Rev. I. G. Perkins, chairman of the National Seamen's Defense Committee, and he agreed with the desirability of taking action. "We will begin the action when Mr. Bagwell gets back from Montreal," Nuttall said.

The offending paragraph from The Reporter stated, "Nuttall and four of his C.S.U. colleagues were subsequently charged with kidnapping, intimidation, illegal boarding, and other offences. Today, Nuttall and two others are in the federal penitentiary."

"Pure nonsense!" Nuttall commented. "If I was sentenced to the Federal Penitentiary I could hardly be standing here before you, could I?" He produced credentials to prove his identity.

"Mr. Bagwell has told me he will apply for a contempt order when my case comes up next Tuesday in Cornwell." Nuttall said. "The order will be placed before Judge Brennan who is trying my case. We will suggest the article places the publishers in contempt of court."

Not Interested In Damages

"I am not interested in getting damages for these libellous statements. I am interested only in spik-

Speak In French Saunders' Advice To ISS Visitors

In an address to the ISS yesterday in Wymilwood, Dr. R. M. Saunders of the History Department said that "To French Canada, Toronto, more than any other city in Canada, is a symbol of English Canada. What Toronto says and does has a direct bearing on what French Canada thinks about English Canada". While travelling in Quebec, Dr. Saunders heard many references to "That terrible man in Toronto". After he found out that the reference was to Dr. T. T. Shields, he said that it took him a long time to convince the French-Canadians that Dr. Shields was not such an important person in Toronto as they seemed to think.

Lack of Contact

"This situation has grown", Dr. Saunders said, "out of lack of contact between the two language groups. It can be eradicated only by personal contact on a reasonable, intelligent level.

"The French-Canadian is courteous and polite above everything else. He has a keener desire for approval than most", said Dr. Saunders. "He has a sense of inferiority in technical knowledge and engineering.

"French-Canadians do not want to give up their own traditions in favor of those of the rest of Canada. The richer families tend to become Anglicized but, by and large, the French-Canadian does not want to become an English-Canadian. His real and acute desire to remain French is the most vital feeling in the French-Canadian mind. The French-Canadians have cultivated a study of their own history in order to find out what their traditions are and how to preserve them."

Distinctive Handicrafts

Dr. Saunders suggested that the reason why French Canada has produced a larger body of Literature than English Canada is its anxious desire to remain French. "French Canada has distinctive handicrafts and architecture, although the architecture is in the French tradition.

"French - Canadians appreciate tremendously any interest shown in them or their culture. They are always on the alert for criticism from English Canada, especially from Toronto. They expect to be belittled by English Canada and keenly appreciate the reverse." "The easiest way to show this appreciation is by using the French language", said Dr. Saunders, "even if you can't speak it very well. It has been an 'open Sesame' to me many a time. If you start the conversation in French, even very bad French, they, as a rule, will switch to English", Dr. Saunders stated, "although this is not so true of University students as it is of the ordinary people. It is a gesture of friendship and equality", he said.

The French-Canadians have a great desire to be modern. They are not relics from the past, and

Prog Con Leader 'Gorgeous George' To Coed of West

Vancouver, Jan. 19—(CUP)—Arriving at the west coast on a cross-country tour, national Progressive Conservative party leader George Drew and his wife today met and talked with students and staff of the University of British Columbia.

In spite of the fact that the colonel himself cut quite a figure it was Mrs. Drew who was whistled at. But according to the co-eds, George was not far behind in the charm department.

A poll of feminine opinion on the campus reveals that Mr. Drew left a profound impression on the co-eds. The impression was evidently not always favorable, however.

Co-ed reaction to the charms of "gorgeous George" varied from Shirley Lynch's "I agree, he's the most handsome man! . . . out of this world", to Rachel Brown's "too old . . . and what chance would I have with his wife?"

Kay Brown, an unbiased member of the Conservative Club executive, said that in her opinion George was "very distinguished."

As Mr. and Mrs. Drew left for a downtown meeting an observer of undetermined political hue was heard to remark, "I'm not so sure that I'd vote for George but Fiorenza — what a Prime Minister she would make!"

$4,000 In Scholarships Donated To University By Robert Simpson Co.

Mr. C. L. Burton, president of the Robert Simpson Co., has donated approximately $4,000 in company stock to the University of Toronto, to be used for scholarship purposes Announcing receipt of the gift, Dr. Sidney Smith said that the income will be used for annual scholarships in Modern Languages and Honour Science at University College.

Medical School Near Says UBC President; Will Start In March

Vancouver, January 19—(CUP)—First definite step toward creation of a permanent medical faculty at the University of British Columbia may be taken in March, President N. A. M. Mackenzie told pre-medical students here.

Meanwhile, organization of the faculty will be undertaken "just as soon and as fast as possible" said Dr. Mackenzie, although this would mean using huts and crowded hospital facilities.

Let's Have Some Action

It is becoming increasingly evident that the responsibility for student discipline, currently vested in the Caput, needs to be broadened.

Over a period of years during which Caput rulings have been handed down without any explanations to the student body, undergraduates have grown to resent what they consider arbitrary decisions by an external body.

The principle involved is one that could be of great benefit to students and university authorities alike. If students were but consulted in matters affecting their extra-curricular activities, they could make valuable contributions in solving problems of student discipline.

We are not suggesting that the faculty be divested of its authority. The broader experience and more mature outlook of university authorities cannot be ignored. The benefits of faculty guidance could be invaluable and they should retain some degree of authority in student affairs. But students should be given some representation in matters that are of primary importance to them.

As matters stand, many students resent being treated as if they were irresponsible children, lacking any voice in matters that concern them.

The All-Varsity Revue which last week finished its first successful attempt on the campus is one example. Two years ago, when plans for an All-Varsity Revue were laid, the scheme had to be abandoned because permission could not be obtained to use Convocation Hall for the performances. A Caput regulation forbade the use of the hall on the grounds that it would disrupt lecture schedules. An SAC request for reconsideration by the Caput was rejected and no further reason was given for the refusal. The decision of the Caput may have been justified, but, because no further explanation was offered, students were indignant, and plans for the All-Varsity Revue had to be discarded.

It was only a few weeks later, in February, 1947, that four briefs, submitted to the SAC by different campus organizations, called for the inclusion of students on the Caput, and for some form of student court to control student discipline, with the Caput acting as a final appeal court. These suggestions, embodied in an SAC request to the Caput, were rejected.

There is no reason—beyond that which exists on the statue books—why a student organization should not be entrusted with some, at least, of the responsibility for preserving student discipline. And there is no reason why a student organization should not be consulted in decisions that concern it.

Many universities, in Canada and the United States, have taken giant strides in the development of student responsibility and self-discipline. It remains for the University of Toronto to drag along behind, hobbled by the constrictions of an archaic statute.

Psychologists To Oust Animals And Study Men

Professor Inkblot, head of the Psychology Department announced last night that at last psychology was going to apply to man all the principles they had learned by studying animals. He said that men were almost as intelligent as some of the less intelligent animals.

For years now psychologists have been spending their time in studying the movements of mice, and even rats on a more advanced level.

Pavlov is famous for his trained dog act. He made dogs drule by ringing bells. Sceptics have claimed that dogs druled because they didn't know any better.

Ketchup Not Surprised

Professor Ketchup, third year psychology professor said that he was not at all surprised by Inkblot's announcement. He claimed that it would be an inconvenience moving out the chicken crates and introducing powder rooms.

Professor Burnedliver said that he thought Inkblot had made a mistake. Animals are much easier to work with. "Animals," he said, "are much sounder than humans."

Professor Fires agreed with Burnedliver. He said that it would be impractical working with human beings. Animals never have wars, and fight only when hungry.

The Champus Cat had an opinion also. He said that he was tired of being psychoanalyzed, and wanted to be left alone. The cat said that life hasn't been the same since psychologists have tried to explain his actions.

"I've been living a dog's life since the psychology people got hold of me," said the Cat. "Ever since they raised the price of milk, I've been eating margarine. I just don't feel natural anymore."

It is expected that child psychology will begin to study children. Many white rats will be evicted as a result of the decision. Now that the psychology department has changed their specimens, it is expected there will be no more neurotic animals.

When the Cat heard that men were to be the new specimens he was quoted as saying, "IT AIN'T HUMAN".

hate to be thought of as a 'romantic people'. They are modern people living in a modern world.

Majority Mildly Nationalistic

The majority of French-Canadians are mildly nationalistic, and the University of Montreal is the centre of nationalism in French-Canada. "This nationalism", Dr. Saunders emphasized, "does not depend on the Church. Where the Church is against nationalism, the French-Canadian is against the Church". "There is a certain amount of anti-clericalism, especially in the University of Montreal", he said, "but the average French-Canadian is strongly attached to the church and deeply religious. This anti-clericalism is not levelled directly at the Church, but rather against too much domination by churchmen".

The greatest single cause of unrest in French Canada today is the struggle between the English-speaking Irish Catholics and the French-speaking French-Canadians. The quarrel, Dr. Saunders stated, is mainly one of 'degree of Frenchness'.

Let It Snow

Training for this year's races is much more difficult than ever before. However, slalom can be run around patches of mud. Here are Conn Sparrow, Sue McFaul, Pat Ellard and Patsy McFaul, members of last year's Intercollegiate Team, standing on what proves to be an Ontario luxury this winter.

Ken Bradford Returns To Alma Mater To Aid Graduates Seeking Employment

How many times, as a high school or university student, have you sat across the table from a "counsellor" or personnel manager wondering what they were seeing as they looked at and talked with you? What were they deciding? Were you suitable for the work you desired?

When, as a graduating student, you walk into the office of Kenneth Bradford, head of the University Placement Service, and lean across the desk to meet his handshake and exchange an affable smile of greeting, you will feel no such anxious or curious moments as those pictured above.

Engineer's Approach

Ken Bradford is an engineer. It is with the mind and eye of the engineer who looks at things so practically rather than with the psycho-analytical brain of the psychologist or job counsellor, that the 1932 varsity grad plays his part in the acquiring of your future job.

"Tell me what you want to do," he asks. With an employer's application for such a position, he compares the job's prerequisites and your stated qualifications (experience, courses, etc.) If his engineer's brain tells him that the balance is good, you are sent to interview the employer—and good-luck!

Co-ordinating Agency

Mr. Bradford, who is proud of the calibre of students who come to him for job placement, was asked last spring by President Smith to act as head of the latest innovation in services by the University of Toronto. From Canada Wire and Cable, where he had held his engineer's position since discharge from the Canadian Army, he came to instal himself and his brand new office immediately at 67 St. George St. This was to be an agency that would co-ordinate and complement the work of all those who customarily help students find jobs—faculty and department heads, National Employment, Technical Service Council and personnel managers.

A university committee of 17 advises him on policy matters and he keeps in touch with deans, department heads, the SAC Employment Service and the University Advisory Bureau (to which the "I don't know what I want to do" go).

As a co-ordinating and complementary agency, the University Placement Service is able to give you the widest possible range and opportunity for the position you are seeking from the moment the fur collar drops about your shoulders and you leave the traditionally irresponsible sanctity of university student days behind you.

U.B.C. Student Leaders Ask Provincial Premier Fulfill Election Promises

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 19—(CUP)—Student leaders at the University of British Columbia will press for early completion of the war memorial gymnasium and women's residences when British Columbia Premier Byron Johnson visits the campus.

Student Councillors will meet the Premier and ask him to contribute $200,000 from provincial funds for the long-awaited gym. The Premier will be the first of two important political personalities to visit the campus of UBC in the next few days.

In addition to the war memorial gymnasium project, Mr. Johnson will be pressed to provide women's residences for the campus, a project originally provided for in a provincial five-million dollar grant, but never carried out.

NFCUS President Talks To Queen's On National Body

Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, president of the Students' Administrative Council and National President of the National Federation of Canadian University Students will travel to Queen's University today to address a meeting of Queen's students on NFCUS.

Queen's, who did not send delegates to the recent NFCUS Conference, has been considering withdrawal from NFCUS, mainly on financial grounds. At the moment there is no permanent organization for NFCUS on the Queen's campus. Gwynne-Timothy intends to talk to Queen's students on the positive benefits of the national student union, and to meet NFCUS representatives there.

The hard worked national president returned late last night from London, where he talked with NFCUS officials at the University of Western Ontario. Following his address at Queen's he will go on to Montreal to participate in the ISS sponsored Toronto trip to the University of Montreal. Forty Toronto students, including members of the All-Varsity Revue, will spend the weekend visiting the University of Montreal. The Toronto students are returning the visit made to this campus last fall by "les Carabins".

Blast Furnace Practice Is R.C.I. Topic Saturday

"One Hundred Years of Iron and Steel", a lecture on the mining of ore and the various processes it is subjected to during the course of its manufacture into steel will be given in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening, Jan. 22. The lecture, under the auspices of the Royal Canadian Institute, will be given by Dr. O. W. Ellis, Director of the Department of Engineering and Metallurgy, Ontario Research Foundation.

Dr. Ellis is a graduate of the University of Burmingham and a former member of the staff of the University of Toronto. He has been Director of the Department of Engineering and Metallurgy at the Ontario Research Foundation since 1929.

Dr. Ellis will discuss the workings of the blast furnace in detail and will show a series of slides illustrating the present and future developments in blast furnace practices.

STUDENTS' PEACE COUNCIL

An open meeting of the Students' Peace Council will be held next Wednesday, January 26, at 4:00 p.m. to discuss the resolutions passed at the Toronto Peace Conference. Membership will be available at this meeting.

Bank Economist Tells Poli Sci Club Of Canadian Scene

"Canada is in a period of readjustment but there is hope and a possibility of it building a broader economic base," J. D. Gibson, Economist to the Bank of Nova Scotia, told a meeting of the Political Science Club last night.

Many Problems

There are still many problems, he said, but pointed out that progress had been made in many lines putting Canada in a good position in a disturbed world. Modernization of capital equipment had helped. The fact that Canada produces the kind of goods — food, minerals and wood — which a sane world needs and that it is near to the largest market in the world, are distinct advantages in Canada's readjustment," he said.

The Leduce oil field, which seems to have a vast amount of oil, and the promising iron possibilities in Quebec would help in establishing a broader economy for Canada, he said.

Mr. Gibson's topic was "Canada's Trading Position and Foreign Exchange Problems," and he drew the picture of Canada's readjustment, as a conclusion to his talk.

Canada's trade has been at an extraordinarily high level since the war, he said. The demand for exports has been due to the war, the type of goods demanded, a surplus of physical goods, especially necessities, and the large credits granted. The enormous demand for imports has been due to deferred buying for the household and farm, to the previous depression which had cut down the demand for capital goods, and to great activity because of the war, he said.

"Canada's trade was featured not only by high levels of import and export but also by an exchange problem, especially for U.S. dollars," Mr. Gibson said. This dollar problem was caused by the inability of other countries to buy and pay, and Canada's own high level of imports.

"While exports exceeded imports, we could extend credit safely. This was the situation in 1946. Then our imports increased sharply in late 1946 and 1947," Mr. Gibson said. In the latter year exports and imports just balanced, he said, and added that much of the exports were sold on credit, while imports were for cash.

Reasons for improvement in the dollar situation were given by Mr. Gibson as restrictions on purchases from the U.S. to the amount of $150,000,000, the great increase in exports to the U.S. of about 45 per cent over 1947, and drastic cuts on selling on credit.

Although Canada's exchange position has improved, her trading position has not been much bettered, he said. Canada is losing many markets especially for man-

"Cold Test Of Truth" Used by Students—Drew

Winnipeg, Jan. 20—(CUP)—During his tour of the West, Colonel George Drew took time out last week to address the students of the University of Manitoba. His theme was, "Canada must preserve the freedom of the individual against possible encroachment of the state."

In his opening remarks Mr. Drew stated that University students had a special function in a democracy because they are "peculiarly trained to apply the cold test of truth."

Wedgwood China To Be Displayed At Royal Museum

The Royal Ontario Museum will open a special exhibition called "Wedgwood, a Living Tradition" February 1.

The exhibit, sponsored by the T. Eaton Co., and the Robert Simpson Co., contains over three hundred pieces and shows the history of Wedgwood from the middle of the 18th Century to the present.

The family tradition of the Wedgwoods can be traced back to 1647 when Gilbert Wedgwood opened a pottery works at Burslem, Eng. The dominating name in the family's continuous history is that of Josiah Wedgwood (1730-1795) to whose work the exhibit is largely devoted.

In 1763 Wedgwood received royal patronage becoming "potter to the Queen." The same year saw the opening of the world-famous works at Etruria.

The exhibition contains examples of all the wares produced at Etruria, including one of the famous models of the Portland Vase, black basalt, and Rosso Antico wares.

Many of the ornaments are closely modelled after Greek and Roman examples. They have the typically 'solid' impression of the best English design, and demonstrate that simplicity and suitability to their purpose, which is now called 'functionalism'.

A large section of the exhibition is devoted to the wares of the 19th and 20th centuries. These new forms have maintained the Josiah Wedgwood tradition.

Women Debaters at UC Try for Portia Trophy In Contest Next Week

The Portia Debates, a series of impromptu debates for UC women, begin Monday, Jan. 24.

The debates will be held daily in Room 5, UC, at 1.30. Presentation and delivery will be stressed rather than material. The subject for the debate will be announced a few moments before debating begins.

Each team is made up of two members from the same year. Freshies will debate against freshies, seniors against seniors. First year will meet third, and second year will meet fourth in the semi-final. The winners will compete for the Portia Trophy. The final champs will meet the winners of the Robinette debates.

The Portia Debates started in the year 1945-46 as a parallel to the Robinette debates.

"The anonymous donor of the Portia trophy believed there should be a competition of women as well as men in a co-educational college," revealed Miss Ferguson, UC Dean of Women. The trophy is a statue of Portia carved in teak-wood by Mr. Donald Stewart, Canadian woodsculptor. There are a series of plaques on the base on which the winners' names will be inscribed. The champions themselves will get a framed black and white etching of the statue with their names inscribed.

Posters for signing for the debates will be placed in the rotunda and schedules will be posted with the program to enable everyone to listen to their potential rivals. Last day for signing is Jan. 25.

FORESTRY NITE

The annual at Home of the Faculty of Forestry will be held at Hart House Friday, Jan. 28. Semi-formal, no corsages.

COLE SCAN

Television, that new instrument of mass torture, is here. And we hate to think what high-pressure advertising will do before it runs its course. The campaign has started with singing commercials gone visual. Dancing cigarettes (baffling precision down to the last butt), intertwining pretzels and front-parlour magicians vie for the viewer's interest. And now that audiences can see 'John's Other Wife', they're turning away in droves. They can't stand the agony any longer, either. We won't even be able to dream any more as we listen—straining vocal cords, nightingales grown fat, Inspector Hearthstone of the Death Squad—we'll have to see it all!

SAC Treasurer At BC University Finds Hidden $100

Vancouver, Jan. 19—(CUP)—The treasurer of the students' council at the University of British Columbia was puzzled recently when he discovered a hundred dollars tucked away in an obscure corner of a ledger.

Eventually he found out that it had been set aside several years ago for the purpose of displaying historical films.

The council wasted no time in rushing through a resolution which resulted in the disappearance of the hundred dollars into the murky depths of the general fund.

IVAN SABOURIN HERE ON MONDAY

"It is an endeavour to make university students more familiar with the policies and platforms of the PC party", said George Hogan, president of the club, in disclosing that the coming week, January 24th to 29th, will be Progressive Conservative Week at the University of Toronto. "We feel", added Hogan, "that students should realize that leftist movements are not the only active ones on this campus, and we have set aside this week for the purpose of increasing the political knowledge of the average student."

The week will get under way with an address on Monday by Ivan Sabourin, PC leader in Quebec, on the subject of "Quebec and Conservatism". On Wednesday, an open discussion will be held, where the principles of the party will be discussed. On Thursday, a forum will be held where the executive of the club will answer queries.

Book Review

Recent Fiction

A rare jewel in the welter of recent fiction is Anne Crone's Bridie Steen (Reginald Saunders: $3.50). The scene of this sensitive and intelligent novel is laid in the border country between Protestant North and Catholic South Ireland. Like the great novelists of English literature, Miss Crone has a feeling for locale. But not only is the background ably portrayed; it is also peopled with characters who will live long in the memory. There is Jerem Ford, a staunch old Protestant of military bearing; Rose Anne, Bridie's ascetic Catholic aunt; Mrs. Steen, the passionately self-willed grandmother; and Bridie herself, a fawn-like creature whose short existence was briefly lit by the love of her distant cousin Musgrave. The controversial religious theme moves beneath the story like the dangerous undercurrent of a river, breaking to the surface now and then, until it finally engulfs Bridie. Bridie Steen is a novel to be read and to be treasured.

Eric Henry, the hero of Scott Graham Willaimson's A Convoy Through the Dream (Macmillans: $4.00) throws up his job in wartime Washington and attempts to come to grips with 'the real enemy' while on service with the merchant marine. Evidently the author forgot the beginning of his book, for no clear definition of this enemy results. Instead, we get a series of vignettes of the people whom Henry encounters in his adventures, but none of these people bears the stamp of reality. Novels need not have admirable heroes, but when an inferior individual like Henry is implied by the author to be a better than average person, then the author's standard of values can be called into question. Bolstered by an unconvincing mystical experience, Henry dies when the gasoline cargo of his ship is set afire by enemy aircraft. The last two pages, describing his wife's loneliness, are the most repugnant piece of tear-jerking that has appeared in recent war fiction.

James Barke's The Song in the Green Thorn Tree (Collins: $3.00) is the second volume in a fictionized biography of Robert Burns, covering approximately two years in the life of the Scottish poet. The biography is a labor of love, and Barke's admiration of the poet causes him to look at Burns' career through rose-colored glasses. Barke's line seems to be that if you like the poetry, then you must excuse Burns' private life. Consequently, in this volume the critics of Burns' personal conduct are pictured as self-righteous religious prigs who do not understand the workings of genius. Granted that the eighteenth century Scottish Presbyterian Church was uncompromisingly harsh and likewise bigoted, nevertheless it is evident even from this book that Burns crossed the line of decent conduct so frquently that no possible excuse can be found for him, in spite of Barke's attempts. The real hero of the story seems to be the poet's brother Gilbert, on whose shoulders fell all the responsibilities Burns himself shirked.

'Mademoiselle' Sponsors $1,000 Fiction Contest

New York's magazine for smart young women, "Mademoiselle," is conducting its annual College Fiction Contest. The contest with $1,000 in prizes, is opened to any undergraduate in the university. The closing date is April 15, 1949.

Nancy Garoutte, College Board Editor of Mademoiselle, said: "Since our magazine is one for young women between the ages of 18 and 30, we are anxious not only to reflect their point of view, but to publish fiction by authors of real merit in that group, fiction which will continue to attract the attention of publishers. We hope that in 1949 your college may be represented among the winners."

All women undergraduates are eligible for the contest. Stories which have appeared in undergraduate college publications are also acceptable only if they have not been published elsewhere. Stories must be typewritten, from 3,000 to 5,000 words in length, double-spaced, on one side of the paper only and accompanied by contestant's clearly marked name, home address, college address, and college year. The magazine assumes no responsibility for manuscripts and will return only those accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelopes. The magazine editors will be the judges.

Two prizes of $500 will be awarded for the best two short stories. All rights of publication are reserved for the August, 1949, issue of Mademoiselle. The magazine also reserves the right to other acceptable stories at their regular rates.

Entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, April 15, 1949, and submitted to College Fiction Contest, Mademoiselle, 122 East 42 Street, New York 17, New York.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Abba Bayefski

Mr. Abba Bayefski, who is now on display at the Hart House Art Gallery, is one of the most powerful painters ever to exhibit there. Mr. Bayefski's representations of a drained humanity are horrible. His characters are stoop-shouldered, no spark lights up in their eyes. In one of the pictures the sun shines, but it shines too harshly, too yellowly, and its caress is replaced by a sting. In another picture, a mother is shown feeding her child, but here is no happiness, no glorification of the new life, only mechanical movements that were born with fear and can exist with it.

Mr. Bayefski's paintings draw a great deal of their emotional intensity from their association with the events of the last ten years. There is something very wrong with the world which can produce such paintings as these. One may not like Mr. Bayefski's works, but whether one likes or dislikes him, it is impossible to deny that he has made a great contribution to the painting and understanding of our age. His pictures present a humiliating image of the world today, but it is never the less a true one. Every person who talks glibly of war with Russia should be taken and put to see these paintings.

Mr. Bayefski gains his effect by not adorning his case. His characters make no grandiose gesture of despair. Defeat for him has no saving grandeur, but is presented as utter degradation. There is really no emotion expressed in his pictures because his subjects are not alive. They are the walking dead.

The painter's use of line and wash is most effective, as it provides the most suitable of media for his soulless drawings. Everything that he touches seems to lose its sense of purpose and begins to decay before the eyes of the viewer. The blame for this cannot be laid at the feet of Mr. Bayefski, for he and his paintings are only the products of our time.

OUR READERS WRITE

The Editor, The Varsity:

The School of Practical Science in its 1948 Calendar lists a course called Modern World History consisting of two one hour periods per week during the second term, for all third year courses. The second term time-table verifies this and glancing through examination papers of the last two years one finds such thought provoking and topical questions as:

"Compare the importance of internal and external causes in bringing the Nazis to power in Germany.

"Outline the progress of aggression by the Axis powers between 1931 and 1939 and explain why neither the League nor the democracies offered an effective opposition.

"Why was the German democratic republic overthrown in favor of a Nazi dictatorship?

"What circumstances led to the formation of the Rome-Berlin axis? Why did its activity lead to a general war in 1939?"

Surely questions most of us (even engineers) would be glad to be able to answer.

Yesterday we attended our first lecture. Apparently someone has given the matter a lot of serious thought and consideration. The course had been changed (many of us had already purchased the prescribed text). In view of the fact that most of us are quite familiar with it and therefore "must labor under the usual misconceptions on the subject" (quote) we are to be exposed to another course in Canadian and American History.

In these times, when for most of us the political origins, ideologies and trends of today are interpreted by way of colored front page news and any attempt to clarify the confusion that exists is to be welcomed, it certainly indicates a marked lack of imagination to substitute a course in Canadian History for one dealing with contemporary Europe.

With the short time available, it seems that with the removal of misconceptions in mind, a much more useful purpose would have been served had the former course been retained.

I'm afraid I must go now, I have to read up on the fur trade.

A PIECE OF INSOLENCE

The Editor, The Varsity:

I feel that the arrogant piece of insolence which appeared in The Varsity of Jan. 14, in this column over the signatures of one Carl Heimrich and Alex Anderson, cannot be allowed to pass without comment.

It is glaringly obvious that this letter was not written to defend the Modern Languages and Literatures course, but rather as a cheap attempt at publicity with the added design of ridiculing Mr. Robert Harden and the stand he took re this course in a letter published on Friday, Jan. 7. It is a masterpiece of unsubtle sarcasms, displaying an immaturity which borders on the ridiculous and the foolish.

It is lamentably clear that the Messers. Anderson and Heimrich have managed to dream themselves into some sort of an idealistic "seventh heaven" during their sojourn at University. What a fearful jolt they are going to experience one of these days, soon, when their beautiful ivory tower is smashed to smithereens about their ears and they come hurtling down to earth with their brand new B.A. securely fastened over their heart to face the business of living ! ! ! (Which incidentally will include the necessity of having to live with, and of tolerating such categories of the human species as bricklayers, referred to with such distinct disdain and supercilliousness in their letter, who earn $1.90 per hour ! !)

Very sincerely yours,
William V. Glebe,
IV Mod. Lang. and Lit.

The Editor,
The Varsity:

Was "The Varsity" short of copy on Sunday night? If so, you have my sympathy.

If, however, the article "We Are Mature" is the beginning of another "Varsity" inspired campaign for something or other, a long Bronx cheer.

The SAC does not represent the students? Whose fault is that? The SAC is composed of student leaders from various faculties. The students do the choosing. Let them be more careful in their choice. "At present censorship of campus theatrical productions is compulsory under an edict of the Caput." A Pre-Meds student goes on to say that "Daffydill, which has one of the worst names on the campus, would be a much better show, if students were given discretionary powers."

I cannot trace out the line of his thought. Without the censorship, would the show be more resque? Since when would this make it a better show? Or, does the Pre-Meds student mean that at present the script-writers make the show as rough as possible before censorship, trying to get away with as much as possible. A childish attitude. What prevents producers from turning out better shows within the limits of the censorship?

As to banning the use of University buildings to lectures such as the Dean of Canterbury, there you do have a point. That was a poor show.

ARCHITECTURE PROTEST

The Editor, The Varsity:

The time has come for loud protest! As students of architecture, the mother of the Arts, we can no longer remain quiet while the calm "rape of the campus" is going on about us.

It is sadly ironic that such a university as ours, dedicated to the principles of progress, and human development should contradict itself right on its own campus, and engage in such practices that would befit the 18th Century—not the present.

We do not decry the architecture of the past, for we know their greatness lies in their honesty and expression of the age in which they evolved.

But what have we going on now? When new facilities for teaching and housing the students are required, a structure is erected, performing these functions reasonably well, utilizing all the technological devices of our day, but deceitfully clothed in the heavy and cluttered shell of an 18th Century pseudo-Georgian palace, namely the proposed U. C. residence; and the existing Wallberg Memorial Building —both striking affronts to the intelligent youth of this university. We need only glance at the remarkable architectural progress made in Europe and U. S. A. where university buildings erected today are visibly contemporary in spirit and form.

A ray of hope is seen in the delightful Press Bookshop which indicates a step in the right direction, but how the proposal could be accepted at the same time, and by the same board of governors, is beyond comprehension.

Let us hope that a progressive spirit will be the essence of any future buildings on this campus.

Ian Rutherford, ufactured goods and credit may have to be extended to hold wavering markets.

Regarding European recovery as a means of re-balancing world trade, Mr. Gibson said that there has been a tremendous loss of physical capital which has impaired its ability to produce. Europe, through necessity, sold its overseas securities and now must make its physical exports meet all its imports.

"One of Canada's main problems is the prospect for greater sales to the U.S. In Canada's favour is her proximity to the U.S. However, the U.S. boom is probably slowing up and in future, goods will be harder to sell there. There are already indications of this downward trend," he said.

HOCKEY

Only through the excellent play of their goalie, Mary MacPherson, did PHE II team manage to take the UC Firsts by a score of 2-0 yesterday. The Frizz Ed net tender had almost three times as many shots on her as did her opponent at the other end of the ice, so deserves an extra star for the shut-out.

The whole game was very slow and sloppy, with the exception of the first half of the second period, which speeded up somewhat after the respective coaches had "words with the teams." Dorelle Monahan and June Bell drove home the goals for the winners, while Nancy Cannon and Margaret Fox also played a good game. Helen Ferguson and Dorothy Morrison shone for UC.

Chorus

One Hundred A nd Fifty

By WIN LOWNEY

If you have ever walked past the Women's Union about eight o'clock on a Monday night, chances are you have stopped (at least for a few seconds) to listen. What you hear is the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus rehearsing. Once, and frequently two or three times a week, approximately 150 students put aside books, debates and "Mac's", and trot over to the Women's Union or Convocation Hall to practise.

Judging by what We heard Wednesday night, the time is well spent. This is the second year of the chorus' existence. Harold Neal wields the guiding baton for both the orchestra and chorus. Last year, the chorus travelled to Ajax and McMaster for their 'outside' concerts. This year they expect to do repeat performances. The first Toronto concert will be a week from Friday, on Jan. 28 in Convocation Hall (plug).

The major work of the chorus is Faure's Requiem Mass. The solo parts will be taken by two Conservatory students. Jean Patterson is the soprano soloist. Jean is a second year student, a scholarship winner, and she comes from Calgary. She sang Gretl in the Conservatory's recent production of Hansel and Gretl, and she has appeared twice on the Singing Stars of Tomorrow program. John Blair, the baritone soloist is from Regina. He is in his third year and studies with Dr. Vinci. He has sung at festivals and is church soloist here in Toronto. Besides the Mass the chorus will do a group of choral selections.

We went behind the scenes to see who helps keep the chorus in tune. We found a personnel staff directed by Eleanor Dunn and Jean Rutherford, both Third St. Mike's, checking attendance, phoning the occasional 'stay-awayer' and catching up on cribbage in rather infrequent spare moments.

Frances Perkins, Third Vic and Mary Shenck and Theresa Meraw, First St. Mike's, are other members of the staff. Much credit for smooth-functioning should go to D'Alton Jolly, III S.P.S., who is general manager of both chorus and orchestra. General manager is a two-lettered word for a job that takes in everything from keeping an eye on staff and members, to arranging posters for concerts and chairs at rehearsals.

Never Knox?

Watt of Knox Top Scorer In Intramural Puck Race

Jay Watt of Knox scored four goals as Knox overpowered Wycliffe 8-2 in a group eight contest last week to take over the lead in the intramural hockey race.

Watt's six goals give him a one-goal edge over teammate Max Putnam whose three counters in the same game deadlocked him with Clarke of Forestry for second place.

Leishman of Trinity A and Turnbull of Forestry A, last week's top men, went scoreless. Their four goal totals were equalled by Wardrop of Trinity A and Harper of SPS fourths.

Vic Down Ajax In Ragged Game By 34-28 Score

The Ajax Interfaculty Basketball team lost their second straight league game to Jr. Vic last night at Ajax by a 34-28 score.

In a game that showed nothing but ragged play on the part of the Jaxmen a scrappy Vic team had little trouble in downing the Ajax quintet.

At the end of the first half Vic were leading Ajax by a score of 16-14, and at no time were seriously threatened by a disheartened Ajax team. Bob Ludwig was high scorer for Vic with 12 points followed by Bob Rumble with 7 and Jim Torrana with 6. Bill Klesitz carried the load for Ajax by racking up 12 points with Corcoran adding 6 points to the total.

The Vicmen had little trouble getting used to the strange floor, and before the game got well under way, were running rings around their opponents.

The line-up for Vic:
Bob Ludwig (12), Bruce Rodgers (5), Ted Fenning, Jim Torrana (6), Bob Rumble (7), Norm Dobbie (1), John Deverieux, Bill Gore (1), George Elson.

For Ajax:
Harry Wilson (2), L. Braithwaite, Corcoran (6), Bill Klesitz (12), Bill McCagherty (1), Atkinson (4), Allen, Will Clark (3), Alec Lawson.

McGill Icers Here Friday For Scalps

By HAL HOLDEN

With five girl cheerleaders leading the war dance, a hunting party of McGill Redmen will be Indian-filing into Varsity Arena Friday in quest of revenge and Varsity Blues' collective scalps. It will be the second skirmish of the season between McGill and Varsity, and the Blues are out to make it two straight over the team that is usually their toughest rival for college honors.

This year the Redmen were favoured by pre-season forecasters to win the league title but at present McGill are stuck rather solidly in third place behind U. of Montreal Carabins and Ace Bailey's Blues.

In the earlier meeting of the two teams Varsity upset the Redmen 3-1 in Montreal. Last week Montreal Carabins defeated the Redmen while Varsity was winning here against hapless Queen's. McGill will have to win Friday's game or else fall even farther back of the leaders.

But with Jack Gelineau guarding the twine for the visitors, Blue sharpshooters will have no easy task hitting the scoring column. Goalie Gelineau has been a mainstay of the team in its games this season, continuing his brilliant play of last year. Doug Heron is another of the Redmen whose play has been a highlight of their games to date. Heron, who may be remembered as a 225 pound plunging back on the McGill football squad, is a defenseman playing his fourth season with the "Big Red Machine".

After the game here tomorrow, McGill jump right back into action Saturday against Queen's in Kingston. Coach Dave Campbell is hoping for a double victory which would lift his club right back of the first two placers.

The Blues' Turcott-Henry-Spence forward line will have to be slowed down by the Redmen if they want to go into Kingston with a victory under their belts. This Blue trio accounted for three of the four goals against Queen's last week and was flying faster than at any time this year. If these boys skate in Queenly fashion against McGill, the Blues and Ace Bailey should have an enjoyable week-end.

Foil Champ Foils Epee Duellers Too

In the epee class of the Intramural fencing tournament held in the fencing room at Hart House yesterday, Jack Stanborough was the winner to add the epee to the foils championship he won on Monday. Mark Kellow was second and Pete Stevens placed third.

Redskins' HAH Line

These three kings of the McGill hockey team are poised for action, and action they will get, promises Ace Bailey, when they take on the Blues in Varsity Arena tomorrow night. On the left is JIMMY ATKINSON who is a third year man on the team. Centre is PHIL HENRY, one of the top scorers for the McGhoulls this term, who used to play for the Port Arthur Bearcats. Right is DAVE HACKETT, an American from Boston, who is some shakes as a football player.

Carabin Leads Scorers Blues' Spence Next With 9

By JOHN MOYSE

High-scoring Andre Charest counted two goals in leading the Montreal Carabins to a 5-2 triumph over McGill to regain top honors in the Senior Intercollegiate scoring race. The former Quebec Ace has eight goals and five assists for a total of 13 points.

Bill Spence, Varsity's leading light, kept pace with the flying Frenchman with two assists against Queen's. He has scored twice and assisted seven times for nine points and second place. Tied with him is "Peanut" Flynn, the Carabin version of Jimmy Thompson, who has set up nine goals, but scored nary a one.

One point behind are Avery Day and Georges Emblem of the Carabins. Bob Henry of the Blues is deadlocked at seven points with another Carabin, Gregoire Giguere.

Charest's eight-goal total gives him the nod as leader in that department, while teammate Day is second with five. Flynn is best playmaker in the loop with nine.

The biggest jump in the scoring race last week was made by Varsity's Bob Henry, who pulled the hat trick and added an assist for good measure against Queen's. This splurge more than doubled his point collection. Charest has been the only other hat trick performer to date.

In the goaltending department, Paul Hutzulak of the Blues still leads the field, but Carabin Jean Guy Rainville lessened the gap between them.

Here's the scoring:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Charest, Montreal	8	5	13
Spence, Varsity	2	7	9
Flynn, Montreal	0	9	9
Day, Montreal	5	3	8
Emblem, Montreal	4	4	8

Movies, Skits For Ski Fans Next Thursday

Frustrated skiers will have an opportunity to satisfy their passion for the sport at the "Varsity Ski Nite" next Thursday in Harbord Collegiate when three new, top-flight ski films are to be screened for the first time in Toronto.

The films include "Rythm on Snow", directed and photographed in color by Luggi Foeger, foremost ski-photographer in North America and at present chief instructor at Yosemite National Park, California.

"Ski Pro's Holiday" and "Ascent of Mt. Bulyea" are the other movies on the program. In addition to the ski-movies, which run over an hour and a quarter, the show will also include skits during reel changes.

Alex Campbell, program director for Margesson's Laurentian ski-excursions and a candidate for the Varsity Intercollegiate ski team, said the films are really worth seeing. "They are without a doubt the best skiing movies now being shown in North America," Campbell said. "The show ran for three weeks in New York at twice the admission price that will be charged here."

Location for the films was the Canadian Rockies and an all-star cast includes Canada's hurtling Wurtele sisters, Toni Matt, world famous skier now in the U.S., Harvey Clifford, ace of the 1948 Canadian Olympic team, and many American Olympic stars.

Time and place is 8.00 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 27, at Harbord Collegiate auditorium. Tickets are 50 cents and go on sale today at the Athletic Office and SAC Office, Hart House and the Women's SAC Office in the UC basement. Proceeds of the show will go towards further development of Varsity skiing.

FLASH!

Skiing conditions are reported as good on the trails, where there is lots of snow. Lists of competitors for both the men's and women's interfaculty ski meets in February must be handed in as soon as possible to the Athletic Office in Hart House.

Athletic Night

After Hoopla See Wresting And Dancing

Next Saturday, the 22nd of January, will see Trinity and Wycliffe Colleges playing hosts at Athletic Night in Hart House. This is the one evening of the year when the rest of the university body has an opportunity of seeing students from the two Anglican colleges with their gowns off. What a thrill?

The evening's entertainment begins at 7 p.m. in the main gym with our Varsity second basketballers opposing the McMaster quintet. Come on down early and see the future blues in action.

Assumption College and Varsity seniors highlight the evening's entertainment in a game which according to all indications will be equal in excitement to last year's tilt between these two teams.

Two features are scheduled in the splashers department. Contestants in the Junior Interfaculty swim meet will swing into action at 7 p.m. Incidentally, there is still time for those who are interested to enter the meet. See The Varsity for particulars. When the pool has been cleared of bodies, the Trinity water wingers splash into action with the Foresters for their first water polo game of the season.

OAC are sending boxing, wrestling and fencing teams to compete with Varsity contestants in the manly arts. These events begin as close to 7 as possible.

An Athletic Night is not complete without participation by the spectators in one form or other. Thus square dancing is planned for the Upper Gym, beginning after the completion of the sports events. For those who prefer athletic participation in more passive form, dancing in the Lower Gym to the music played by the most popular bands of America is planned.

There will be games for the family in one of the lounges, while soft, suggestive music will facilitate a warm and friendly atmosphere in the other. What more do you want in one evening? You're right—a date. You really don't have to be the Athletic type, so come along and drag "une femme." Tickets are available through your own faculties.

By BILLY ROSS

Bob Masterson, celebrated Varsity football mentor, will share the sportlight with the venerable Mullock Mug when the latter switches residences tomorrow afternoon in Alumni Hall over at Victoria College. The Vic gridders who have held the interfaculty crown for the past two years will make the presentation to this year's top squad, St. Mike's.

The presentation will be accompanied by the movies of the final game of the season. These films, taken by Art Chetwynd of the Athletic office, are really worth seeing and Mr. Chetwynd himself will make a short commentary on the films.

Other prominent guests include Bamber Allen, Bill Patterson who coached this year's Vic aggregation and Lorne McIntyre, star St. Mike's half whose plunges culminated in the last score of the final game. McIntyre will accept the trophy for St. Michael's in the absence of Captain Dick Brown.

Coach Masterson will speak on the interfaculty football system at Toronto as compared with schools south of the border. It is expected also that he will deal with promotions from interfaculty ball to senior or intermediate blue competition.

The movies will start the show at one p.m. and there is an infinite small entry fee of ten cents. The whole show is over at two o'clock so nobody will miss any lectures.

The Victoria College and SPS third hockey squad tangled yesterday at the arena with the Vic team, led by Jenner, shading the engineers by a 5-4 decision. Jenner shot two nice goals, his first in the starting frame and the second at 9:02 of the last period.

Deadlocked at the end of the first half, Vic started strongly in the second and while SPS found an answer for the first two red and gold tallies, they were handed the clincher by Hearne who scored at 14:55 assisted by Birkenshaw.

Jenner with two, Russell, Henderson and Hearne were the Vic markemen with Birkenshaw and Henderson collecting assists. Howe, Woolatt, Lawrence and Cole contributed the Skule goals and Shkordoff, Stallwood and Jeffries gained assists.

Two St. Michael's College basketball teams split the honors yesterday on the major basketball floor. The Bees dropped a decisive 44-19 decision to Sr. UC while the C quintet beat out the SPS IV to the tune of 39-29.

The red and white seniors completely outclassed the collegians with their display of shifty ball-handling and shooting prowess. Herb Cooper paced the group with fifteen points followed by Goldberg with nine to his credit. Other UC scorers were Harry Cohen and Forrest Montayne with six and Johnson and Brockwick who counted three apiece.

Steve Carr and Dick Brown came to the fore for the double blue clad hoopsters with their fine ball-hawking and hit the hoop for three points each. Gerry Washington was high for the Mikemen with four.

In the noon hour encounter the double blue C squad fared better than their basketball brothers. Tommy Flynn came up with thirteen points to head the list of scorers. Dick Blazso followed with eight and Bill Kennedy and Tom Kane added sevens while Brennan and Larmer were in there for two each.

Strykowski was a standout in the Skule cause hooping twelve points and playing fine ball all game. Grossman scored seven points and Wright and Stroesser netted four for their efforts.

In the minor loop UC-PHE IV doubled the count on the Vic VI in a 34-17 hoop duel while Vic IX lost to Engineering Business by a 27-9 count. Neil Field of the sixths was top man for his game with an eleven point effort. Washer of the Next Tuesday night the girls will start banging a volleyball over the net. By the looks of things it's turning out to be the most popular girls' sports of the year. Eighteen teams have been organized under the leadership of Alice Entwistle and her cohorts. Let's hope plenty of tall girls turned out to spike those balls at the net so the finals won't be running at exam time.

Almost every faculty is represented. Even Public Health has sent in two teams. What's happened to Institutional Management? They are the only girls not represented in the league. They must all be on the hockey team. By the way, if you are already playing hockey you cannot play volleyball too. (That's so you won't be too tired from playing games to do any essays that might be due before April!)

Like previous years, the games will be squashed into the LM gym. Don't fret though, some day you will be able to serve that ball without hitting your fists on the wall behind. Let's hope they hurry up with the plans and construction of that women's building we've been fighting for since 1916.

This year an all-Varsity team will be chosen from the top-notchers in the league. If you want to make the team you will have to do more than just get the ball back over the net. Be ready for an assist on a fluke serve, and try to place some of those shots. Use your wits as well as your hands and you will be playing a top-notch game.

Registrar Fennell Retires From Post, Marks End Of Era

Retirement of A. B. Fennell as registrar of the University of Toronto and appointment of Joseph C. Evans as his successor was announced recently by President Sidney Smith. To many of Varsity's 50,000 living graduates Dr. Fennell's retirement on January 1 will mark the end of an era.

Won M. C.

Except for service in World War 1 when he won the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry, "A. B." has been associated with the University since shortly after the turn of the century. Born in Napanee 67 years ago, he entered Victoria College on an Edward Blake scholarship, graduating with honors in mathematics in 1906. He joined the staff of the registrar's office in 1910.

Senate Resolution

A resolution adopted by the University Senate reads, in part, "To the office of Registrar of the University of Toronto are assigned many duties and responsibilities. The adequate performance of the Registrar's tasks requires an adroitness in handling diversified and changing situations; a thorough knowledge of academic procedures; and an immediate apprehension of rights and rules established by long tradition and promulgated in the acts of legislative bodies. The registrar must be alert to sense what may threaten established standards, and yet remain receptive to innovations. Above all, in a University whose strength grows out of its diversity, where Faculty, College and School are bodies in their own right and, at the same time, parts of a greater whole, the Registrar can and should be a powerful unifying force."

Achieved Mean

The resolution says that in carrying out these duties Mr. Fennell "has achieved the golden mean between the strict law and the richer equity; to the reading of precepts and regulation he has brought the quickening spirit of common sense and human sympathy."

The new Registrar is one of seven children of T. W. Evans, a Bradford barrister. All seven attended the University of Toronto. Two brothers are practicing as lawyers in Toronto and a third is Reeve of Bradford where he also practices law. The other brothers, graduates in Applied Science, are engineers in Toronto. A sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson, won her B.A. at Victoria in 1929.

For several years the six boys formed their own hockey team at Bradford during the Christmas holidays and challenged all comers. Three of the six had played on Varsity's hockey teams.

Few Coed Skiers For Intramurals Need Volunteers

Volunteer flag watchers and time scorers are needed for both the Men's and Women's Intramural meets that will take place at the beginning of February, said John Rankin, SPS., at the Ski Club meeting yesterday. Also, entries should be in well ahead to facilitate the arrangements being made.

There is a definite lack of women intercollegiate skiers and Conn Sparrow, UC, wants all those who would like to try out for the team to get in touch with her before the week-end.

Reserve Early

Students wanting to stay at the Varsity Ski House, for an inexpensive week-end of skiing in the Blue Mountains near Collingwood, are urged to make their reservations early in the week with Willi Boyd of the Athletic Office, Hart House.

Jules La Prairie, president of the club, announced that tickets have gone on sale for the Varsity Ski Night which will feature three movies by Luggi Foeger, as well as some amusing skits under the direction of Pete Kingsmill, who skied on the Varsity Blue team for several years.

Show Ski Movies

A movie on recreational skiing taken by Clint Melville during his tours of Ontario ski centres was shown and thanks go to Bob Graham, SPS, for getting this picture of just plain skiing with a little bit of the fast stuff for the racing section.

Some of our own skiers were seen slugging it out in a cross-country race. The jumping section of last year's Intercollegiate team was shown in action at Peterborough.

The next meeting will be Wednesday, February 2, and the film is one of Joe Woschitz's, portraying the 1948 Olympics at St. Moritz in Switzerland.

All that is needed now for the club to go ahead with its plans of ski instruction at Newmarket, intramural and intercollegiate meets and skiing for fun, is snow.

Successor

Joseph C. Evans, who recently replaced A. B. Fennell as University Registrar. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto, and has served three years an Adjutant of the U. of T. COTC Unit.

No Recognition Caput Decision On New Journal

A request for official University recognition of The Reporter, new campus paper which published its first issue earlier this week, has been refused by the Caput, J. C. Evans, Caput secretary said yesterday. Confirmation of the Caput decision has been sent to Jack Tinker, co-editor of The Reporter, Mr. Evans stated. The decision was reached at a meeting of the Caput held last Tuesday.

Makes No Difference

"We do not expect that not having official recognition will make any difference to us," Tinker explained in an interview yesterday. "It merely means that we are not able to use the name of the University," he added. The Reporter has already received permission from various faculty heads to distribute copies of the paper in University buildings.

Members of the Caput refused to elaborate on the decision when questioned. "Any statement will have to come from President Smith," Mr. Evans said. The president was not available for comment.

The Caput's action was taken before members of The Reporter staff were threatened with court action by Milton E. Nuttall, executive secretary of The National Seaman's Defense Committee. Nuttall has indicated his intention of laying libel charges in connection with a signed column carried on the editorial page of The Reporter's first issue.

Use of Europe Aid For Political Tool Condemned By LPP

Canadian economic independence of the United States came in for heated discussion last night when a Mock Parliament session at Trinity College passed an LPP motion advocating, in effect, condemnation of the Marshall Plan, and defeated a CCF amendment condoning ERP.

Raps Ottawa

"American imperialism" connected with the Plan was denounced by LPP Leader Steve Endicott, IV Vic, and an independent Canadian economy was endorsed by Endicott and other government speakers. Endicott ascribed an alleged Canadian economic crisis to the shortage of American dollars and to the efforts of the Dominion government to meet the shortage through high taxes on imports and currency restrictions. Endicott's remedy called for less economic dealing with the U.S. He criticized the ERP as a restriction on Canadian export trade and as a means of solving American problems, "and nobody else's".

Canada Mere Hinterland

"Canada is being turned into a mere hinterland for producing raw materials for the American industrial machine," he said. He advocated government protection for Canadian industries built up during the war.

Leader of the CCF opposition, Michael Hicks, IV Trinity, protested against what he termed the insular view of the government and its concern with the Canadian economy alone. The CCF opposition proposed an amendment endorsing the ERP though deploring the tendency to use the program as a political weapon. "The Americans can and do attach political strings to the Marshall Plan," he said, "but the strings are not as numerous as the government has

Christian Morals Needed by Press Asserts Prelate

In an address before the International Relations Club yesterday, Bishop Stephen Neill, assistant to the Archbishop of Canterbury, claimed the Christian Church is the most international organization at work in the world today.

Discuss War Prisoners

In his address, "The Christian Church in International Affairs", the Bishop related how the World Council of Churches did relief work for displaced persons and prisoners of war from their headquarters in Geneva. "In this way," said the Bishop, "links were maintained between Christians on both sides of the chasm of war all throughout the war."

"The Church," said Bishop Neill, "will have to maintain a middle line in international politics—not a middle line of indifference, but a middle line of common sense."

Methods of Maintaining Standard

He enumerated four points which must be carried out in educating and maintaining Christian standards. They were:

1. A passionate pleading for the truth in international affairs. "What is needed is a high Christian moral standard in the press."

2. A clarificaiton of vocabulary terms. "Terms like 'near-communist' are recklessly used to blur the issues under consideration."

3. A drawing out by the Church of the moral implications in international situations. "Moral forces are imponderable, but in the long run they are what wins the day."

4. A reminding of the rulers of the world by Christians that there are laws of God to which the authorities are responsible. "It is the task of the Church to draw the attention of the world to these laws and obligations."

The Bishop summarized his view by saying: "With an enlightened moral concept of responsibility among Christians, there is no limit to what can be achieved."

Dollar-a-Student Exchange Scheme Delayed at UBC

Vancouver, Jan. 20—(CUP)—Department of Veterans Affairs has refused to contribute to the University of British Columbia's unique "dollar a student" German exchange scholarship plan.

Non-Veteran students will pay an extra one dollar with second term fees to establish a pool for the foreign scholarships, but DVA has told UBC authorities it will not pay the extra levy for student veterans.

The plan was conceived by the UBC students Cliff Greer and Gregory Belkov and approved last year by a general meeting of UBC students.

Refusal of DVA to contribute to the automatic checkoff depletes immediate contributions by almost $3500.

To Make Appeal

Student president Dave Brousson hopes, however, to recapture most of the lost revenue by appeals for contributions from veterans at the February pay parade.

Veterans will be asked to contribute one dollar on the same basis as non-veterans when they receive DVA cheques.

Greer and Belkov hope to offer four $1500 scholarships to German students. They would be brought to UBC for one year, on condition they return to Germany.

With all students paying the additional fee the total fund would have amounted to $7500.

UBC's four scholarships will be offered at the University of Hamburg, recently "adopted" by UBC.

Overworked Profession

Fifty Dentists A Year From Toronto

By PEARL PARNES

Burns' "wee, tim'rous beastie" had nothing on The Varsity's reporter as she peered inside the door of the red brick building at Huron and College streets marked "Patients' Entrance". The Dental Clinic sat back and waited. Come right in, it invited, and the sets of false teeth in the cabinets seen through a partially-open door grinned and seconded the invitation. But, instead of the mob of leering students rushing to attack a potential patient, two nice young men approached at a slow walk and asked if they could help. And they did, taking time from their 1100 hours to demonstrate their art.

Work On Dummies

For it is an art. One section of the impressive-looking Dental Creed is " . . . to cultivate the science and art of the profession by study, by research, and by self-sacrificing devotion to duty." To achieve this aim, dental students spend their first two years working on dummies and taking lectures and their third and fourth studying case histories and working on actual patients.

Each week seminars are conducted by the head of the Dept. of Dental Public Health, Dr. G. T. Mitton. A talk on positive dental health is given to a mother and a four months old baby before a group of five or six students. Three talks are conducted in one morning, in the belief that after hearing the lecture three times the dentists-to-be will remember them when they have opened their own offices.

Stress Care of Teeth

The family is instructed on the normal development of the child's dentition. Because of the high importance attached to the baby value of proper care of the baby teeth which serve a human being for one-fifth of his normal years is stressed.

The Clinic keeps in touch with the child's dental growth. He is called in every few months for check-ups and at two and a half he graduates to the "cubby-hole" stage. By this time the legendary fear of dentists has been nipped in the bud, and the child sits in a special cubby-hole designed for children from 2½ to six years and opens his mouth willingly and quietly to the student's expert hands.

On the "floor" itself there are 76 chairs for the use of patients from 6 years old to the age of toothlessness. Here the students practise operative dentistry (for the layman that means they fill teeth).

Study Causes and Cures

There are special departments for straightening children's teeth (orthodontia) and labs for analyzing saliva to find the Lactobacillus Acidophilibus, the bacteria believed to cause decay.

In an attractive room lined with pictures of animals and an interesting poster showing the construction of a house (a set of teeth) with milk, vegetables and toothpaste as construction materials, diets are examined and corrective diets charted. A smiling lady dentist cleverly persuades children that they do want to cut down on sweets.

Dean Ellis is a tall, amiable man with the air of a philosopher. Still young to be head of the Dental College which turns out half of Canada's dentists, the dean stressed the new emphasis on prevention in dental education. Causes as well as cures are studied, and the oft-repeated maxim "a stitch in time saves nine" takes on new meaning.

The College itself, despite overcrowded facilities, has built up an excellent reputation. Machinery is up-to-date, but the halls are lined with lockers and every available inch has been utilized. Because of inadequate training facilities, only about 50 students graduate each year. The supply of dentists is gradually becoming scarcer and there is no oleo-margarine substitute.

On the way out I took another look at the Dental Creed. " . . . to give rather than to get, to lift rather than to lean", and with a sudden tooth-ache went to make an appointment with a new confidence in the well-trained dental profession.

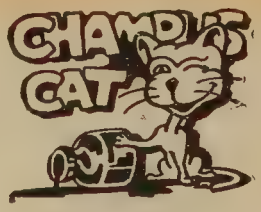
Can This Be Treason?

Whenever discussion of student responsibility arises on the campus, one can always find the odd undergraduate who condemns the entire student body because of the antics of a few individuals.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a letter which asserts students are incapable of assuming responsibility for student discipline. The writers point to two instances in which different groups of students displayed thoughtlessness and poor manners. They use these examples to point a withering finger of scorn at the concept of student self-government.

It is easy to make a sweeping generality, to vilify almost 17,000 students on the basis of a few minor episodes which concern only a small group. But it is unfair. And it is even more unfair to suggest that students do not deserve the opportunity to help govern their own affairs because of such incidents. One might, with equal justice, ask why all Toronto citizens are not deprived of their vote because a few miscreants are lodged in the Don jail?

The letter refers to the policy adopted in many American colleges where student self-government is well advanced, and asks "Are our universities to deteriorate to this level or are we intent on following the British and European system of subordinating such play to the advancement of higher learning?"



We have the greatest admiration for the British and European educational systems but we think British or European professors would be among the first to admit that the "advancement of higher learning" involves more than slavish devotion to text books. There is as much "higher learning" to be found in the practice of government at the student level, and in the opportunity to assume responsibility, as there is to be found in the lecture hall. And who can say which is the more important?

The co-authors of today's letter would probably be surprised to find that student self-government in British and European universities is, in general, much more advanced than in our own enlightened institution.

The observation that "if students clamoring for representation on the Caput" . . . would act . . . "more like mature, intelligent adults, they would then have a just request which would undoubtedly receive just consideration" indicates a naive faith in the inevitability of justice.

Students, in general, are sane and reasonable individuals, as sane and reasonable at Toronto as they are anywhere else. And if students elsewhere are capable of handling their own affairs, there is no reason to believe students here are less capable.

It might even make a few gray heads around here shake in wonder to see how mature and intelligent students can be if they are but given a little more responsibility.

Coal Operators Block Bill For Black Margarine

A bill to have margarine colored black was introduced into Parliament today by the Canadian Dairymen's Association. Officials of the Cape Breton Coal Mines have signified their intention of opposing their new bill as detrimental to the sale of their product.

Harold Lumpy, Coal Mines vice-president, said he and his organization were prepared to take the issue to the Supreme Court if necessary. "This bill is a travesty on justice," he said. "The ordinary coal miner, the average small town dealer, will be ruined in the long run if it is allowed to pass". "By mistake, people will buy margarine instead of coal, be disappointed in the heat it gives off and turn to some other fuel such as oil or wood."

Asked if he believed the public were of such low intelligence that they would confuse black margarine with coal, Mr. Lumpy pointed out that his company had had that experience with liquorice. "When the coal and margarine are wrapped, it would be hard to tell the difference between them", he said. He admitted that his company had not begun to wrap their coal individually but pointed out that if fuel prices rose any higher, the customers might demand it.

The government which in the past has exhibited great activity with respect to the margarine question, changed their policy by announcing a 'hands-off' attitude toward the proposal. Their communique reads as follows—"The Government was admittedly not prepared for the events which have taken place within the last 24 hours. It is true that we expected the Dairymen to introduce a measure to have margarine colored some pastel shade such as mauve or pink. This is a horse of a different color. We have appointed a Royal Commission to investigate the situation until the thing blows over". (Reliable sources within the government said the writer of this dispatch was suddenly relieved of his post at a late hour last night.)

Several groups showed interest in the attempt by the dairymen to influence the color of margarine. The National Association of young Mothers, plugging for Baby Pink, expressed disappointment. Cheese dealers heaved a sigh of relief, as it was believed orange was a close second to black.

The Dairymen said they had chosen black for two reasons. First it was a quite different color than butter and would save a great deal of confusion to the consumer and secondly because it was the only color which has not been openly objected to in the press. "We never thought of the coal miners," they admitted.

An unofficial poll of the man in the street showed he was taking the whole thing quite calmly. "It's too bad it can't be the same color as butter," one said, "but then specks of dirt won't show".

UNESCO Drive Seeks Books For Students

March of Books, a nation wide campaign to collect from Canadians books and periodicals of an educational nature for distribution to needy libraries in war devasted countries, is currently being held across the Dominion. The campaign is sponsored by the Canadian Library Association and the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO.

University students and faculty members who have books, texts, and periodicals, in every subject and particularly in the sciences are being asked to contribute to March of Books.

Later Than 1935

1935 has been set as a general dateline and books published during and after this date are especially wanted. Standard works, and classics in all subjects are also needed.

Folowing is a general list of the type of material needed: publications of learned and professional societies and institutions, Encyclopedias published after 1918, dictionaries, collected works of famous writers in complete or broken sets, any standard classic in any subject, books on science and technology published since 1935, books on treatment of disease or recent date, scholarly and objective works in economics, political science, sociology, and psychology, standard legal works in editions since 1935, and in particular works on public and private international and constitutional law; standard works in history, philosophy and religion; music scores and parts, complete and incomplete; histories and serious criticism of music; grammars and texts used in language study.

Not Wanted

Light fiction, games, cross-word puzzle books, humour, school books, badly printed or bound volumes and damaged volumes are not wanted.

Further information on The March of Books may be obtained from Dean Bissell, Simcoe Hall.

Visitors Examine Customs During Montreal Week-End

By Harry Rasky

(The Varsity is sending two members of its staff to Montreal this week-end to give Varsity readers an adequate coverage of the Carabin week-end.)

As you are reading this line 40 students from the University of Toronto are travelling on a railway line, headed for Montreal. They are part of "Operation Culture".

For possibly the first time, a group of students from the University of Toronto are rolling from Canada's second city to the country's senior city on an expedition that has culture as its climax.

The exchange of students is nothing new in university circles. For years teams have been competing for crowns and cups. Debaters have been crossing continents and words. But never before have customs been the cause of cross-country excursions.

What local students will find behind the traditional barrier is not yet known. Living with French-Canadian families for a two-day stay, they will find what makes the people of their own country sound different, but look the same. Students will get a living history lesson across the provincial border.

Among these students are a variety of religions and beliefs—all Canadian. From each college on this cosmopolitan campus, people have been chosen as delegates to represent our university. From their actions the people from P.Q. may form opinions on our standards and beliefs.

Some of the hosts will be students who were guests in a strange city not more than a month ago. From them we have already learned that the French-Canadian of history book fame is not quite as we were taught to believe in our school days. They are in fact mirror replicas of ourselves in many cases, differing only in the sounds that leave their tongues.

Revue Cast Goes

The train rocked its way out of the Union Station this morning at 9:15. Arriving in Montreal at four the people on board the pint-sized freedom train will have much time to discuss the reception that awaits them. Bonjours and brass bands with French 'Oompas' are expected to greet the men on the Montreal Mission.

On board will be twenty-five members from the All-Varsity Revue. Amazingly enough what the Carabins see and hear will not be similar to what we in Toronto witnessed during their week-long successful engagement. This to them will be as different as their 'Bleu et Or' review was to local showmen.

A few ivory towers may fall when the Montreal men open up their homes and possibly their hearts to the visiting representatives. Breakfast with the French-Canadian families will give them a taste of Montreal food and hospitality. A sleigh-ride of the city—if the weatherman permits—and a tour of the university grounds will give the Varsityites a living picture postcard to send home.

French Unnecessary

All will not be culture-conscious. A social evening is scheduled for Saturday night, and if the ill-fated popular song, "You don't have to know the language", is to be believed, then gestures will be the order of the evening.

Sunday is send-off day. When the train pulls out of the Montreal depot, there will be forty much wiser students aboard. Forty students will have had an intimate look at forty per cent of Canada.

Skuleman Nearly Arts King Is Ousted When Discovered

The long standing "friendly feud" between Artsmen and Skulemen on the campus took a new turn Wednesday night when an SPS man was chosen as potential "King" of Arts in the semi-finals of a talent show opened to Arts students only.

Posing as a Vic student, Herb Wedderburn, 2nd Ajax, entered the contest as a tap dancer and brought the house down, being the only contestant who received an "encore" for his performance.

The incident took place at the "All-Arts Night", sponsored by the UC Lit., where final candidates for the title of "King and Queen of Arts" were chosen.

The suspicions of Hal Rosenthal, UC Lit. Publicity Director, were first aroused after the show was over when he saw Herb departing with two well-known persons from SPS. "I should have known that something was funny," said Rosenthal, "when the contestant asked the announcer to be introduced as Herbie only."

Rosenthal then checked with Victoria College to find out if a student with the name of the contestant was registered there. The answer was "no". "They had never heard of him", Rosenthal then checked with the student's directory which revealed that Wedderburn was registered in second year SPS at Ajax.

When asked how the Lit. was fooled into this awkward situation, Rosenthal answered, "Since we consider men of the Arts Colleges to be gentlemen who can be trusted no one doubted the imposter when he said that he was from Vic and wished to represent Vic in the talent show."

Last fall a Victoria man almost was elected to the Engineering Society. The fraud was discovered when the official in charge of marking ballots could not find the name of the contestant in the Engineering registry.

The second candidate chosen to compete along with Herb Wedderburn for the title of "King of Arts" was Peter Bourke, I St. Mike's, who sang "Without a Song". Another contestant from St. Mike's was Paul Garner, a second year student. He gave a piano rendition of "Malaguena". Larry Heise, I Trinity, played a piano medley. Irving Morton, III UC, sang a folk song with his own guitar accompaniment.

Miss Barbara Ann Scott To Attend Western Ball

London, Jan. 20—(CUP)—Barbara Ann Scott has been "talked into" going to Western for the Arts Ball to-night.

Geoffrey Caldwell, business freshman and Barbara Ann's "date" for the annual dance, said he was only returning a favor. She talked him into going to Western. Barbara Ann will be the guest of President and Mrs. G. E. Hall.

Geoffrey made arrangements during the Christmas vacation to have Barbara go to the Ball. He kept his secret until yesterday— and for good reason.

"It would be nice to have Canada's sweetheart all to myself for awhile," he smiled.

Loyalty To Church In Spite Of Faults Bishop Neill Asks

To live as a Christian was the challenge which Bishop Neill presented to a capacity audience in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. In his last address on the campus, he attempted to sum up for his listeners the essence of Christianity and the way it has worked to mould a few men's lives in the pattern of the Christian ideal.

Disciples Despised

Historically, he showed how a small number of disciples, uneducated in the standards of their time, and despised by their fellow men, went about the task of proclaiming the gospel of Christ. Among the difficulties under which early Christians had worked had been those which had existed in the church: division in the fifth, 11th and 16th centuries. Perhaps "the most fatal gift of kindness" had been that of Constantine the Great, when by an edict he had made Christianity the official religion of the Roman empire. This same weakness, he explained, existed in his own Church.

Value of Brotherhood

Despite this and other weaknesses we should support the Church because of the value of Christian brotherhood. Perhaps Saint Francis of Assisi had come as close as possible to "living a Christ-like life." William Wilberforce fought for the freedom of slaves for 40 years, he said, and won the fight. Lord Shaftesbury, "the golden orator," had succeeded in getting passed for the benefit of the workers, the Factory Acts. Elizabeth Fry, had done what no other woman of her time would attempt; she had entered Newgate Prison and there worked with the most lowly of humanity.

These men and women had fol-

Dean Lewis On Mission To Plan Education Bill

Dr. A. C. Lewis, Dean of the Ontario College of Education, will leave Monday for the Philippine Islands where he will take part in an education survey for the new republic. Announcing that Dean Lewis had been granted leave of absense of from three to six months, President Sidney Smith said he would be serving on a UNESCO committee with two American representatives and one Chinese.

Dr. Smith said the mission was requested by the leader of the Philippine delegation at last year's UNESCO meeting in Mexico. Head of the mission will be Dr. Floyd W. Reeves of the University of Chicago.

Aid to Students On Federal Level Is Aim of Potts

A resolution asking for inclusion of a program of federal aid for university students in the platform of the national Liberal party will be presented to the Advisory Council of the National Liberal Federation by Joe Potts, Vice President of the Canadian University Liberal Federation, Potts announced yesterday.

Potts said he will attend meetings in Ottawa of the Advisory Council and of the National Executive of the Young Liberal Federation, being held Jan. 24, 25 and 26. He would be one of five Young Liberal Delegates from Ontario.

Potts explained that the Advisory Council is the body which recommends policy to the government.

The following statement was made by Potts:

"I intend to present a resolution on 'Dominion Participation in Education in Canada,' along the lines of increased dominion-provincial bursaries and increased exemption in income taxes for parents supporting students at universities.

At present there is no reference to education in the platform of the Liberal Party in Canada, and it is recognized that the present drive for a greater measure of equality of opportunity in Canadian universities must be directed to both the provincial and federal spheres.

Although the argument will be raised that education is a matter for the provinces under the present constitutional arrangement, the precedent has been set by the D.V.A. allowances. It is imperative that the Dominion government prepare a new program before the D.V.A. plan is a thing of the past.

In regard to the provincial sphere, the position on education adopted by the University of Toronto Liberal Association at a caucus last December was presented to the Management Committee of the Ontario Liberal Party and to the Education Committee of the Ontario Liberal Caucus. In both cases, the personal presentation was very well received."

Industry To Get Chemists; Small Quota for Research

Montreal, Jan. 29—The great majority of the approximately 2,400 chemists and chemical engineers graduating from Canadian universities in the next three years will get jobs in the industrial, teaching or other-than-laboratory fields, T. W. Smith of Montreal, president of the Chemical Institute of Canada, said tonight.

About 10 per cent of the employment opportunities available will be in research or laboratories, he told a dinner meeting of the Institute.

Face "Hart Facts"

This was the reverse of the situation in the United States where the majority of such graduates take up research work. Many felt the trend in Canada was an undesirable one but these were "hard facts" that that to be taken into consideration.

Chemistry had made excellent progress in Canada but in the main it had been geared to the nation's domestic needs and resources. The rate at which the chemical industry was employing chemists and engineers actually exceeded not only the rate of growth of the industry but of all industry.

Many graduates, consequently, found themselves in administrative, development, production, sales and equivalent jobs rather than in the laboratory.

Helps Financially

"This has not been detrimental to the economic progress of the average chemist but it may have frustrated the research-minded," Mr. Smith pointed out.

He said, however, there should be no difficulty in assimilating the next three years' graduates into industry, teaching and other fields than laboratory work.

"Many of them will be veterans and our experience in industry is that, far from being psychiatric problems, these men have adjusted themselves to their peace-time environment with the greatest of ease.

"Their problem now will be to adapt themselves again as chemists have in the past, but on a larger scale, to a variety of occupations in which their primary requirements will not be a knowledge of chemistry but in which their chemical training will stand them in good stead."

Unexpected Discovery

(T.S.O. Concert)

The prospect of playing a harp above has induced many candidates to express a preference for the other place; the blame for this rests largely with the composers of the last century who have degraded that noble instrument to an atmosphere-creating device destined to give the tear glands a last gentle shove. Marcel Grandjanay's playing of Handel's Concerto in B flat major was not only a revelation concerning the instrument's true nature, but also an addition to one's small collection of wholly unadulterated musical pleasures. I do not know whether the direct contact of fingers and strings makes it so humane an instrument or whether that is merely a rationalization derived from the visual—in any case those were sounds that had all the precise strength of the harpsichord with every trace of its occasional primness replaced by a quality that somehow seemed to spell sympat.. and wisdom. I know, one ought not anthropomorphize music like that, but hearing Mr. Grandjanay divest a trill for instance, of all suspicion of mere conventionality and produce it undreamed of necessity tempts one to transgress. The degree of blending with Sir Ernest's strings that the harp and its sensitive master achieved was another treat for which one had come unprepared. In Mr. Grandjanay's own "Poeme" an elegaic piece of impressionism the French horn appeared as associate solo instrument and helped give a glimpse of a vast expanse of exciting tonal possibilities where the ear, pure and simple, comes into its own, unhampered by the vagaries of association. And "Clair de lune" so often abused, distorted and molested by smutty hands, was a striking demonstration of what an interpreter's conscience and decency really mean.

Richard Strauss' "Aus Italien" was a somewhat over-extended lecture in embryology. It gave the indirect pleasure derived from identifying the future parts of perfection behind their wrinkles and floating in the illusion of being terribly important. One may smile a bit at that Strauss, because of the knowledge that so much talent became greatness.

Oscar Morawetz' Overture "Carnival" was an old acquaintance which is the exception in a work so young. In making his skill and charm so accessible and useful as a curtain-raiser, Mr. M. is rendering a service to all, including himself because it will facilitate the reception of more ambitious work which will undoubtedly come before us soon.

The variety of outlook and handling of one and the same medium is one of the things which makes the current exhibition of The Ontario Society of Painters in Water Colour so interesting. Some artists are interested in technique for its own sake, others in colour, others again in design; there are some who concentrate on combined tone colour. After viewing the exhibit, you can hardly avoid making these divisions. Yet, in all this wide field of treatment there are surprisingly few "startling" or "memorable" pictures. This is not to say that the work on view was not of a high calibre—it was, technically (a number were exceptionally moving but chiefly for their subject).

But it seems to this reviewer at least, that while the general effect was realized some of the artists failed to carry the effect right through their total work. Whether this fault is due to lack of sympathy or carelessness, I do not know. In saying so, I am not taking it for granted that quality and emotion are identical, nor am I trying to reduce paintings to certain ultimate elements, such as lines, proportion, colour. It does seem, though, that if the effect of a whole derives from the sum of its parts, a painting loses greatly, if one of its parts is neglected. But a whole possesses quality (or should) and the parts derive their quality from the whole in turn—so there you are. It would seem therefore that paintings may stand the test of analysis and reassembling of parts and, on return to the whole, prove more fully satisfying.

This observation on quality in relation to the whole and its parts may well be applied to the exhibit itself, not just to individual paintings in it. The paintings of OSPWC were technically very laudable, but it is often unsatisfactory to under-and a work of art solely as a pattern of sensation and a product of technique. After we have so understood it we look for other meanings in order to realize its qualities more fully. The general lack of deep meaning detracted noticeably from the whole exhibit. I realize that opportunities for wrong or disturbing meanings are infinitely greater than those for correct or truly beautiful ones; perhaps this fact could account for the few paintings which do achieve dynamic meaningfulness apart from sheer forcefulness of mechanics.

"Here goes the crabbed critic again," you say, 'why always meaning? Why can't you let the artist alone to express himself and/or his ideas." Paintings must eventually mean something to society since the obligations of the artistry and society of which he is a part are mutual. It is inevitable that the stimulating capacity of painting should develop slowly. Just as people seldom use the majority of words in the dictionary, so 'laymen' like ourselves are at fault in not recognizing meanings in art which are familiar. Granted, but meaning was still lacking in the majority of individual paintings in the OSPWC exhibit. There is expression and greater clarity of effect—there is room for more imaginative expression and greater clarity of effect. Over all there is a need for something vital—je ne sais quoi—unless it be a realization by more of the artists of essential fundamentals in every branch of living and an indication of that realization in a living way in their art.

Our Readers Write

Are Students Capable?

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

There is a current agitation on the campus to have student discipline vested in students themselves (see Thursday's Varsity editorial headed "Let's Have Some Action") But are the students capable of taking on such a responsibility? Below are two examples illustrating the thought behind this question:

(1) On Wednesday at a history lecture in Convocation Hall, one of our professors was subjected to humiliating treatment by those "exemplars of higher culture", viz. a group of civil engineers. The professor in question was delivering a particularly important lecture which was very difficult to grasp. It became necessary to go a few minutes beyond the hour, whereupon the abovementioned group created such a disturbance in the halls that the lecturer was obliged to call for silence, after which the noise increased until it was almost impossible to take notes. Not content with this rudeness and disrespect the instigators poured noisily into the hall before the lecture concluded, blocking the exits and resulting in general confusion. Many of these men were veterans from whom, by reason of their maturer years, we might expect a sobering influence upon the youths in their midst. Such, however, was not the case.

(2) At a recent performance of Hamlet, attended entirely by arts students, such an uproar ensued throughout the orchestral overture that the latter could not be heard. Those responsible will know who they are and to them we might point out that regardless of their likes and dislikes in the musical world, they must surely realize that tolerance, indulgence, and self-discipline are part of their college education if these virtues have not been already acquired.

The editorial in today's Varsity reads in part " . . . many students resent being treated as if they were irresponsible children, lacking any voice in matters that concern them." (These students are quite probably the very ones mentioned in the above illustrations). The article goes on to speak about extra curricular activities and the policy adopted toward them by U.S. universities. The colleges of U.S.A. too often concern themselves primarily with the rugby field and extra curricular work. Are our universities to deteriorate to this level, or are we intent on following the British and European system of subordinating such play to the advancement of higher learning?

In closing we might add that if the students clamoring for representation in the Caput would act less like "irresponsible children" and more like mature, intelligent adults, they would then have a just request which would undoubtedly receive just consideration.

Sincerely,
M. Bruce Evoy,
Glen Pettinger,
II Eng. Lang. & Lit.

By BILLY ROSS

St. Michael's A and B hockey entries made it a clean sweep over Vic's junior and fourth ice warriors yesterday at the Varsity arena. The A's trounced Jr. Vic 6-2 to hand the latter their first defeat. The Bees administered a 9-2 drubbing to the fourths in the noon hour contest.

Paddy McLaughlin and Tom McKillop stood out for the A's with two goals apiece, McLaughlin also picking up an assist. Baxter and Pat Duffy supplied the remainder of the double scores and Vince Kelly picked up two assists while Joe Prendergast got one.

Howard and Murry hit the scoring column for the red and gold skaters both unassisted. Johnny Rhame of high hurdles renown, put in a nice performance but was unlucky around the twine. Defenceman Leach and Joe Prendergast of St. Mike's took time out for a short display of rough and tumble in the second half. No winner was announced.

Baxter of St. Mike's was the top sniper in the B-Vic fourths' encounter. He potted three with Des Waters and Don Schmaltz in the race with two per. Bill Kelly and Jim Coughlan counted once for the double line blue squad. Rocket Riccotti garnered two assists while Bennett and Norm Nadeau pulled one each.

Smith scored the first Vic goal at 14.30 of the first period with the assist going to Thomas. Holden was responsible for the other Vic tally which he netted unassisted.

On the major basketball floor Vic fourths handed Forestry Bees a 26-18 setback. The Vic quintet hooped thirteen points per half to overcome the woodsmen who trailed them by only three points at the half.

Mann paced the winners with a total of twelve points which he gathered before collecting his fifth personal. Horvath followed with six and Kilgour got five. Sheldon led the Forestry group with ten points while Austin Herridge and Armstrong all came up with a basket each.

George McMullen brings it to our attention that the 5.4 seconds time posted by Bill Kelly of St. Mike's for the fifty yard event at the last interfaculty open track meet ties the record for the intercollegiate indoor track. This record was set by a McGill speedster named O'Brien last year. Kelly's time, however, is not official.

Vic Vs went on a genuine scoring binge yesterday when they overcame Pharmacy Bees by a 71-18 margin. Lanky Langdon Coles came up with one of his better scoring efforts to top the list with an even 25 points, "Cootie" Courtemarche also held a field day and rolled up 13 while Jakey Fulford and Ostrum hit for nine each. Other Vic scorers were Hendra with eight, Colbert with six and McCamus who got a single.

Watson led the druggist scoring parade with six to his credit followed by Hooper who sank five markers. Craft with four, Adams with two and Horowitz who singled round out the scoring.

The Accused

Once again Boy meets Girl, and in true Hollywood fashion after an hour and several minutes, Boy gets Girl.

To make it more interesting, the writers have turned the story into a psychological thriller — a type of picture that has been going across very well at the box office in recent months.

Loretta Young plays the heroine, a professor of psychology who kills one of her over-sexed male pupils when he tries to make romantic advances. Her fear of bringing disgrace to the dear old alma mater, makes her dispose of the body in such a way as it will look like accidental death.

Robert Cummings, the boy's guardian, is a lawyer who falls in love with the professor. When a clever cop uses some of his own psychology to trap the murderess, Cummings spring to her defence, and in a very touching and eloquent manner turns the verdict in her favour—and they live happily ever after.

The picture is interesting enough, even though the outcome is certain soon after the beginning of the story. For once a psychologist is presented as a perfectly human person, and is not surrounded with all the mystic powers of a mind-reader or a witch-doctor.

The cartoon is colourful, if not particularly amusing, and, if you come late enough, you can miss the news. If you have nothing else to do, seeing The Accused would be a good way to kill an evening.

Ron Stainton.

PIANO RECITAL

John Coveart, pianist, will be the guest artist in a recital at Wymilwood next Sunday evening at 9 o'clock. His program is opened by a group of Bach transcriptions for piano; "Jesus Christ the Son of God", the "Adagio from the Organ Tocatto in C major", and "Rejoice Beloved Christians." The Romantic School is represented by Chopin's great "Sonata in B minor", while the last group will be composed of works by Albeniz, Gershwin, Debussy and Dohnanyi.

Vic Loses Mulock Cup—Officially—In Alumni Hall

Victoria College's two year tenure of the Mulock Cup expires today with the presentation of the "mug" to this year's St. Michael's College interafculty football champions.

Varsity's Mustang-taming senior grid mentor, Bob Masterson will be on hand to enlighten rugby fans on the different interfaculty football systems in schools south of the border.

The program starts at one p.m. at Alumni Hall in Vic with the screening of the championship game between the double blue and red and gold squads. Art Chetwynd is slated to give a short commentary on the films which he took for the St. Mike's team.

Lorne McIntyre, star half of the cup winners will accept the prize on behalf of St. Michael's.

Pugilists To McGill

Seven Varsity boxers leave for Montreal this morning to take on McGill in an exhibition boxing meet as one of the attractions of a McGill Sports Night in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium tonight.

Hank Henshall, senior intercollegiate champion of the 125 pound class leads the brigade which includes Dave Geary (133 pounds), Carl Leprich (140), Roberto Coucheiro (147), Red Wells (155), Patrick (165), Clem Scott (175).

Blues Play Clinton If Sun Cooperates

The Varsity intermediate hockey club goes to Clinton, New York, today to play the Clinton hockey club —they hope.

Representatives of the Clinton club phoned last Monday, saying "we play on natural ice here, and we haven't had any for the last three weeks. Hockey fans are going nuts waiting for a game. Come Friday night."

Joint House Committee Decides Against Dance

At a meeting of the Ajax Joint House Commitee held in York Hall on Thursday a report was received from Bob McKnight and his Fire Prevention Committee. He suggested that a system of fire wardens be set up in each residence.

The All-Residence Dance originally planned for January 28, has been cancelled. A committee was formed to investigate the possibilities of bringing Skule Night to Ajax, establishing a bursary, giving a coffee party near exams or subsidizing a steak dinner in the cafeteria, with the money remaining in the treasury.

Sportswoman

Occupational Therapy was defeated yesterday in hockey by Physio to the tune of 5-0. The first period opened with a scuffle around OT's goal and Phil Wilks managed to score for Physio. Lil Bantanoff made it 2-0 in the second period when she flipped one in from Little. Jean Cossar followed up with another marker, assisted by Lid Toland. In the final period Phyl Wilks came through again with her second goal and Lid Toland counted with an assist from Jean Cossar.

Denelda Kingston, goalie for OT, did a good job in the net while Physio hummed around, making some very wild attempts at slamming in the puck. Lil Batanoff and Betty Coo with fast skating sparked for Physio and Jocelyn Alenander played a good game for OT.

A little humor entered the game when Glenna Wylie, defence for OT, took a slam at the puck, sending it all fully one foot and breaking her stick in two.

Dr. Vinci and Students Present Musicale

Dr. Ernesto Vinci and a group of twelve students from the Royal Conservatory of Music presented a full evening of Italian music at the meeting of the newly formed University of Toronto Italian Club in Wymilwood Wednesday night.

The program, under the direction of Drfi Vinci, contained selections from such famous Italian music as Lucia di Lammermoor by Donizetti, Il Trovatore by Verdi and La Tosca by Puccini.

represented. Canada does benefit from American investments in this country."

Trotskyite Raps LPP

An independent speaker identified only as "the member from Goodie" injected a note of "Trotskyite communism", as he called it, into the debates. He represented, he said, the working class struggling against capitalism. "I am a follower of the great Lenin."

The member said the Marshall Plan was "the weapon of American economic imperialism" and called the United Nations an organ of a similar sort. Criticizing what he termed "so-called communist members of the House", he rapped their suggestion that Canada or any other country develop an independent economic plan. Economics, he said, are a world-wide thing, and cannot be dealt with on any smaller scale.

"The task for the students," he said, "is to all make the University Christian."

The speech concluded, the Bishop closed the meeting with a simple prayer, a hymn, and a short passage from Revelations. All who wished repeated with the Bishop the Benediction.

"HUNGRY" BLUES MEET McGILL

McKillop Moves Up And Art Bell Down In Player Switch

By HAL HOLDEN

Tonight will mark the first appearance of the season for the McGill Redmen in Varsity Arena when they tangle with the Blues at 8.15.

But according to reports from Montreal the Redmen aren't as strong as the team that twice in a row forced post-season playoffs for the Queen's Cup and the Intercollegiate title. Jack Gelineau is still the same tough nut for opposing forwards to crack but the Blues did not think much of the McGill defense in the previous meeting of the two teams in Montreal earlier in the season.

The Blues won that contest 4-1 after a bruising struggle and are not taking the Redmen lightly. "There'll probably be a lot of feudin' and fightin' out there," said Ace Bailey, Blue mentor last night.

Bailey is not displeased with the way the Blues are functioning these days. "The boys have the old jinnegar and desire. They wanted to let go in practice tonight but I wasn't having any. But I'll let them loose against McGill."

Wants 4 Victories

Bailey was keen that the team should win the next four games which would put them in a good spot when they hit the road for a siege of away games. Next Wednesday the Blues move into Kingston for a game against Queen's Tricolor.

Tom McKillop has jumped up to the club from the Intermediates in a recent player switch. He will likely play on a line with Pete Ferguson and John Fox. Artie Bell went down to the Intermediates in the change.

Howson, Boyd and Frey will make a second attacking trio while the high-flying threesome of Turcot, Henry and Spence is out to add to its already substantial point total.

Blueline Patrol

The blueline patrol tonight will be made up of Hayes, Ecclestone, Digby and LaRose. Behind this quartet is Paul Hutzulak, the coolest custodian in the league.

The usual dance will be held in the Drill Hall immediately after the game. So far this year these affairs have been victory celebrations. They're much more enjoyable that way.

The McGill team has set a record of sorts this year but they're not too proud of it. For the first time in history, University of Montreal has beaten them twice in one season. The last time, 8,000 fans watched in horror.

The Boss

Pictured above is Irvin H. "Ace" Bailey, mentor of the senior hockey Blues. Ace will lead his defending intercollegiate champs against the McGill Redmen tonight at the Varsity Arena. Game time is 8.15 and the blue and white dance will follow at the Drill Hall.

The Varsity Cage Story

Seniors Meet Assumption And Thomas

By ED VOIGHT

Coach "Red" Nantais leads his Assumption Purple Raiders into Hart House gym tomorrow night to take on the Varsity Blues in the feature attraction of the second Athletic Night of 1949.

In this exhibition hoop contest, the ninth of the season for Toronto, the Blues are still seeking their first triumph over an outside team. They won't come any closer than they did last Saturday when the Buffalo State Teachers College squeezed out a narrow one-point decision over the locals 44-43.

To knock off the Raiders this coming Saturday p.m., the Blues will have to pay special attention to the Raiders' colored star, one Freddy Thomas.

Thomas Still Terrific

Thomas has been leading Assumption hoopla teams for the past three seasons, and this year appears to be no exception. In the Raiders' games so far this year, Thomas has been swishing the strings for an average of slightly over 20 points per game.

Against the Western Mustangs two weeks ago, Thomas looped in 23 points. That game was played right on the Mustangs' home floor in the London Arena, too.

The last time that a Toronto cage squad defeated the Raiders occurred away back in January, '46, three long years ago. The score was 57-51 for the Blues; the game played here in Hart House.

Since that contest, the Blues have dropped five in a row to Assumption, most of them by rather close scores.

Last year, the locals went under, 52-41 in Toronto, and 60-50 in Windsor. In that return game in the Border City, Thomas pumped in no less than 30 points.

And from the way he's been going this year, he's liable to break out in a similar manner at any time. Let's hope it's not this weekend.

JUNIORS MEET HAMILTON

Barry Lowes leads his junior basketball quintet against Westdale Collegiate in Hamilton tonight. The juniors are the hottest basketball club around Varsity currently, having won four of six games in their T & D loop.

La Rose Will Eat It Won't Let Puck In

Ace Bailey, coach of the Varsity Blues, and Bob LaRose, Varsity defenceman, were talking over the Queen's-Varsity game in the Hart House Tuck shop the other day.

"Look at this," commented Bailey, pointing to a record sheet of the game. "LaRose and Digby were on the ice for all three of the Queen's goals.

"You can quote LaRose as saying 'there'll be no more goals scored while I'm on the ice—I'll stop the puck if I have to eat it'," quoted the coach.

"I hope," added defenceman LaRose.

McM. Here For Intermed Sked Opener

By BRUCE MACDONALD

At seven o'clock tomorrow night, the Varsity Intermediate basketball team will play the opening game in their league against McMaster University from Hamilton.

The game will be one of the features of the Athletic Night in Hart House. Still smarting from their defeat at the hands of the Y.M.H.A. Seniors last week, the Intermediates are determined to be on the other end of the score when the smoke of battle clears away this time.

This league includes McMaster, O.A.C., Western Intermediates, and Varsity Intermediates. Last season Varsity tied with Western for the league leadership, O.A.C. was in second place, and McMaster occupied the cellar slot.

However, this year McMaster is entering a brand new club with lots of height and skill to burn. The team is composed mainly of freshmen who made a name for themselves in high school ball last year. Perhaps new blood will be the spark that McMaster has been looking for.

The two clubs will be evenly matched, and the outcome will depend on the performance of such Intermediate stalwarts as Andy Andrews, Doug Wigle, and Ted Luck.

Game time is seven o'clock Saturday night, and the place is Hart House lower gym.

Seek Revenge

Win In Basketball Would Soothe Football Wounds

Windsor, Jan. 21—The Assumption College Purple Raiders will be out to avenge a defeat handed them in football when they invade Toronto this weekend.

The Blues pasted a 37-11 loss on the purple shirted warriors in October in the Raiders' initial attempt in Senior Canadian Intercollegiate rugby. A win in basketball would soothe the wounds somewhat, especially for Tom O'Hara, Bill Kohlman, Fred Thomas and Al Angus who performed in that grid affair.

With ten games behind them, the Raiders are confident of besting their mark of thirteen wins and nine losses compiled last year. To date Assumption has won six, but in two of those games, the team has been without Fred Thomas, who has been suffering from a recurrence of an old knee injury.

Thomas has played in seven contests thus far, running up 129 points. That is a bit below his average of last year when he made 375 markers in 19 games.

Have Weird Week

Last week saw the Raiders involved in just about every kind of game possible. They started off by tying Olivet in a disputed game, then were barely nosed out by Wayne, 43-39 in a thriller, and wound up by waltzing to a 78-21 victory over Cleary College. In the latter contest all ten players dressed for the game scored at least four points, with Thomas high man with thirteen points. Glen Carpenter, reserve guard, was second high with 10 points. Three other players hit the eight point mark.

Coach Red Nantais will start Thomas, O'Hara, Kohlman, Pare and Campbell against Toronto. These five have been playing together for the last three games and their teamwork has been steadily improving as they have grown used to each other.

Pare, a 5' 11" Junior, has more than justified the confidence placed in him by Nantais when "Red" promoted him to the first team.

DETROIT FENCERS HERE

Varsity fencers, who are still embroiled in the senior interfaculty meet, will take on fencers from Detroit University in Hart House Saturday afternoon. The intermediate team vies with OAC tomorrow night as one of the attractions of Athletic night.

OAC GRAPPLERS MEET BLUES

They grow them big in Ontario Agricultural College they say, and they will have a chance to prove it tomorrow night when OAC brings their boxers and wrestlers against Varsity as one of the attractions of Athletic night. This show is in the big gym.

Jr. Cagers Win 61-38 Drop West End YMCA

By JOHN KENNEDY

The Junior Blues spread the scoring honors around fairly evenly last night in a T. & D. basketball game when they trounced the West End Y entry 61-38. Flashie Frank Denton led the team both with his scoring prowess and his all around floor generalship, hurling in 12 points.

The first quarter produced ragged and rugged ball largely because the Varsitys were frustrated by the Y men's pattern play. This factor lead to a great deal of erratic passing but gradually, the team was pulled together by Braithwaite and Denton. There were so many fouls in this period that the game got rather boring to watch, but Varsity took the lead by a 14-12 score.

In the second canto the Blues started pulling away but still showed a lack of finesse around the bucket spot. The Y team intercepted several passes but were unable to capitalize on most of them.

Denton finally started finding the range with his set shot after missing many previous efforts and potted three fast ones. Dave Burnstein also got his shooting arm limbered up and the team ended the half on the long end of a 31-21 score.

Braithwaite Stars

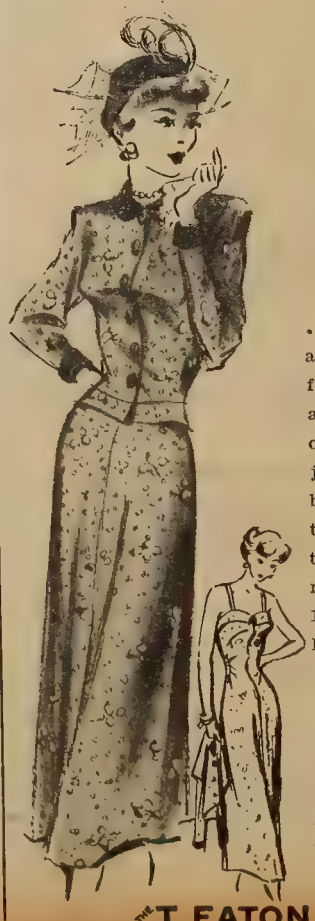
Jumpin' John Braithwaite played spectacularly in the third quarter with his stellar rebound work at both ends, besides which, he found time to throw in two baskets. He also set up his team mates on numerous occasions.

Frankie Denton used John's screening to good effect in sinking a couple of long set shots. Varsity started playing as if they had finally been introduced in this period. Carr and Burnstein teamed well together as did Hamilton and Freeman.

In the last quarter the West Enders visibly ran out of steam as well they should, bringing along only five players. As a result the play reverted to the first quarter brand of scramble ball. The bucket men began to play their positions better toward the end of the game. Ron Carr especially showing to advantage.

Y-Free Shots Good

The Y men were particularly accurate with their free throw shooting, Darichuk sinking seven out of eight and Ford getting five for seven. Darichuk ended up the high scorer of the contest hooping 13 points.



All the Varsity players got hot at the end of the game and left their opponents 'way behind. Gary Glover was fairly consistent all the game scoring four in both halves.

Line-ups:

TORONTO — Burnstein 8, Freeman 6, Carruthers 4, Bonsall 6, Denton 12, Braithwaite 4, Dancy 2, Hamilton 7, Glover 8, Brown, Carr 4.

WEST END Y—Beedie 6, Darichuk 13, Pleasance 6, Ford 9, Hously 4.

Osgoode Dean Resigns

When Dean Cecil A. Wright tendered his resignation from Osgoode Hall on Friday, three members of the staff of five full-time lecturers also quit. The Dean, a graduate of the University of Western Ontario, objected to a system whereby students spend part of their day in law offices. Shown on the left is Dean Wright and on the right is Stanley E. Edwards, one of the lecturers who resigned.

Law School Dispute To Split Profession Lawyers Prophesy

By DAVE ARMOUR

Dean Wright of the Osgoode Hall Law School and three lecturers resigned last week. The resignation hinged on the proposed change in the curriculum of the School. The Benchers Association of the Upper Canada Law Society want Osgoode students to receive two lectures a day and spend the rest of their time working for a practising lawyer.

Following closely upon the resignation of Dean Wright, a Toronto lawyer demanded an investigation, charging that the action of the Benchers, who govern the School, would make the Law Society of Upper Canada "the laughing stock of the legal world."

Dean Kennedy of the University School of Law yesterday refused to make a statement on the resignation, stating that there was no connection between the University Law School and Osgoode.

Law Faculty Separate

There are 82 students registered this year in the University School of Law. At the end of their four-year course, they are granted the degree of Bachelor of Law, but are not allowed to practise until they complete a further period of study at Osgoode.

When Dean Wright took over as head of the Law School last year, it was his avowed aim to give the students more lectures on law theory than they had received previously. The Benchers intend to give the students at Osgoode two lectures a day, and let them spend the rest of their time in practical work in law offices. Disagreement with this method caused Dean Wright's resignation.

Some In Favor

Opinion in the student body seemed divided. The editor of "Obiter Dicta," the Osgoode student journal, declared that many students favoured the new regulations, but upon condition that a five-year course be instituted. Others thought that Dean Wright was a "wonderful teacher, but too advanced for the average undergrad."

Under the new regulations, a graduate of the University law course can expect to spend most of his time articled to a practising member of the bar.

Four Not In Accord

Both Dean Wright and the three lecturers, John Willis B.A. (Oxon), Bora Laskin B.A., L.L.B. (Toronto), L.L.M. (Harvard) and Stanley Edwards B.A., L.L.B. (Alberta), L.L.M. (Harvard) feel that it is impractical for students to have the theoretical part of their course interrupted by work, which in the words of the Dean consists of running errands for practising lawyers, learning a few tricks of the trade and earning a comparative pittance for their trouble.

All four men condemned this proposed system of law teaching, Dean Wright maintaining that the Benchers' ideas would impose far too heavy a load upon the student body.

SAC Prexy Tours Clubs For NFCUS

"It is the duty of each member of the NFCUS group to spread the NFCUS gospel as a whole on each campus, by a direct personal approach," said Gord Gwynne-Timothy, national president of NFCUS yesterday.

Gwynne-Timothy had just returned from a tour of the Ontario members of NFCUS, with a side trip to McGill and the University of Montreal. The trip, he said, had the purpose of integrating regional NFCUS activities to the national effort.

On Tuesday, he spoke to the NFCUS group at McMaster whose function is publicizing NFCUS across Canada. The committee there intends to produce a pamphlet, which will give the facts of NFCUS to Canadian university students.

The University of Western Ontario, he said, has been given the job of handling the administrative details of the exchange of Canadian and American university students. Ten Canadian and thirty American universities are taking part in the program.

Western to do Work

The task of student exchange was undertaken previously by the University of Toronto, but since the scheme lacks official sanction on this campus, Western has agreed to promote the scheme and do all the paper work this year.

At Queen's, Gwynne - Timothy spoke to the student body regarding the position of the University in NFCUS. Although Queen's is not a member of the federation, a temporary committee was set up to inform the students there of NFCUS' aims and the benefits the student body could gain by joining.

On Friday, he conferred with the Quebec regional vice-president of the federation, Gilles Trahan. Although the official task of the McGill NFCUS committee is laying the groundwork for a proposed university radio federation, they are also working on a Flight to Europe scheme, whereby Canadian students would be able to fly to Europe and back to Montreal for $350. TCA officials have promised to meet the executive of NFCUS in February to solidify plans for the coming summer.

Reduced Rail Rates

One of the major items on the NFCUS agenda is reduced travel fares by rail for University students. Gwynne - Timothy conferred with representatives of the Canadian Passenger Association on this subject and was asked to draw up a brief for presentation to the association on student travel rates in other countries.

The climax to his week of work was a visit to the University of Montreal to greet the Toronto students who travelled down there for the French Weekend.

Speers Wins Senior Stick

The Men's Senior Stick at Victoria College for 1948-49 was awarded to George Speers, IV Philosophy in the final election last Friday.

The Senior Stick is an honor given to the man entering his fourth year at Victoria who, in the opinion of his classmates has contributed the most to his college in academic, athletic and extra curricular activities.

Elected from five other nominees by the men of his year, Speers has a good academic record, is prominent in sports at Varsity, and is this year's president of the Varsity Christian Fellowship.

McGill Debaters Win To Make Three In A Row Over British Universities

Montreal, Jan. 23—(CUP)—McGill's touring Debating Society team won their third successive debate Wednesday against Bristol University. The last debate won by the three McGill students was at the University of Birmingham.

The topic of the debate was "Resolved that the best antidote to the growth of Communism is more democracy." McGill, which upheld the affirmative side of the question, was given the decision by a vote of 75-41.

The hall at Bristol was packed to capacity, with over two hundred people attending. The McGill team considered it their best debate so far, and also that the Bristol team was the best so far encountered on their trip. The team's next debate will be at Oxford.

A Montreal Weekend With Very Much To Say

By LOIS MARTIN and HARRY RASKY

En route de Montreal, 4 p.m., Sunday.

Please read this story through to the end. You might learn something. We did. Trying to put it in black and white is like trying to describe the taste of a banana. You can't.

The Fathers of Confederation would have been pleased if they had seen what happened in Montreal this weekend. Some 40 Varsity students—more or less—sometimes more and sometimes less, learned as much from two days of actual participation as they could from two months in any library.

Afterwards

As we write this, 38 others, less or more, are digesting two days of culture. In front of us three girls and a boy are playing bridge in French. "Je passe . . . et vous . .?" Jane Hazard, on our left—the girl with the Mona Lisa eyes—gesticulates like a person describing a spiral staircase. (They have two of them at the University of Montreal—11 stories high). Some here on the train are just thinking.

Before

The 9:15 train left Union Station at a quarter to 10 Friday morning. Many of the "more or less people" were meeting for the first time. (And some haven't met yet.) They have all met the French Canadians.

By 10:30, the train rolled into Oshawa. Fifty copies of Friday's Varsity met us at the station, (courtesy of Mr. E. A. Macdonald, chaperon-extraordinary and newly appointed father to 40).

The Mission to Montreal consisted of 25 All-Varsity Revue-ers and 15 miscellaneous men and misses. Their original purposes in making the pilgrimage may have differed widely; but what they were to find was much the same.

We arrived an hour late.

There

Amid exploding flash-bulbs and cheering Carabins the Toronto travellers found themselves in Montreal Central Station. Feeling very much like a delegation from the crown colony of Ontario, we sang the Blue and White with Pottsian enthusiasm. (Potts himself was biting his moustache furiously; he had somehow been missed by the newspaper photographers.) Mouthing our phonetics carefully we shouted—with the aid of the welcoming committee—the Montreal "Chicalca cheer".

A special bus carried the delegation to the U of M campus. With open mouths and unbelieving eyes we stared like so many country cousins at the 20th century castle crowning Mount Royal—the University of Montreal.

It was in the spectacular salon (with a octagonal table of polished marble with ceiling to match) that the president, Mgr. Maurault, indicated that he was enchante to see us. And he really was. It seemed as though all academic functions had adjusted themselves specially to our two-day stay. It

H.H. Barber Shop

Tonsorial Art Is Busiest Faculty

BY HERB WOOD

Barber shops usually are the clearing houses for all the current news and local gossip. A woman leans over the fence to get the "low-down," but a . . . well a barber shop customer simply leans back and gets all the dope. Not so at our Hart House Barber Shop. The reason — it's too busy.

Any way you look at it, the shop is all business. Go there early in the morning (I call 9 o'clock early) and there's a line-up. You gotta get there at 8 o'clock to avoid a queue. By-the-way, it closes at 6 o'clock.

Those swinging - sitting - stools aren't just an innovation in this shop. Ask any one of the barbers, Tom, Jack, Ray or George and they'll tell you they couldn't keep the pace without the rest afforded by the stools.

Since we didn't want four hair cuts in one day, we singled out the man nearest the door to get our information from. That's Tommy Morton, manager of the Hart House Quartet. However, a little matter of time—his time—forced us to journey back for two separate interviews of only fifteen minutes each. We made our rendezvous two doors to the right of the barbershop.

Wetting the lead pencil with our tongue, we took a big, deep breath and machine-gunned . . . How old, I mean how long have you been here? "Twenty-three years." Do you shave many students? "No." Where did you learn your trade? "Father." Did you trim Professor de Champ's beard? "No . . . Sorry—gotta go—I've a customer waiting." . . . But . . . See you to-morrow.

The next time we had five whole minutes extra and everything was fine. As a boy, Tommy liked to watch his father barber so his mother wasn't surprised when he started training under his father's eye and hand. It was shaving . . . shaving in those days and little hair-cutting. As a result, there wasn't much a boy could do but "lather up". Later, he started to use the razor.

One day Harry Holmes, the station agent in Acton, came in for a shave. But when he saw Tommy with the razor, he said, "Nothing doing, son. I'm not letting you shave me." Another time, the local blacksmith came in when his father was out and said "sure." Tommy took "pains" and the operation was successful. Blacksmiths have tough whiskers, you understand.

Mr. Morton's is the only appointment chair, and some of his customers have been coming every week for seven years. Unlike most barbers, he hasn't a "special" hair restorer. He believes in looking after the hair while it's still there. "A good tonic and rub" is one of the best things for the hair and scalp. One of the little-known hazards of the trade is the short bristles that work through the clothing and into the pores of the skin. You take them out with tweezers.

Reminiscing again, Mr. Morton said, "One day a big, drunken Irishman came into my father's shop at Acton. I was shaving him. Unexpectedly, he jumped up and the razor cut his cheek,—blood spurted out."

—"A'me after thinking I was one of those blue bloods," the Irishman said.

Wake Up!

A few weeks ago we suggested that students, like the general public, were apathetic, especially in matters concerning government and politics.

On the campus, as well as outside the University, criticism of our elected representatives is too often based on sketchy information, prejudice, or sheer ignorance. Because of the general apathy, it is considered too much trouble to enquire, to examine, to criticize reasonably and intelligently.

Last week, when a few undergraduates were asked what they thought about student government and student responsibility, one offered the opinion that students were given enough responsibility, but later admitted that he wasn't quite sure what their responsibilities were. Another student charged the SAC was "unrepresentative" and composed of a "clique".

Such charges are not startling. Students have been making them for years and they have sometimes been true, but, generally, students have been too apathetic to consider clearly the work of their student government. Too often criticism has been levelled against those in office when actually the fault lies with a lethargic student electorate.

It is an unfortunate fact that students, like people elsewhere, delude themselves into thinking their democratic duty is done when they step out of the voting booth, firm in the conviction that they are furthering the cause of democratic government.

You can talk about student government, you can persuade yourself that you are democratically governed because you made marks opposite a voting slip, you can proclaim the ballot box as a prized possession, but the ballot box, by its mere presence, does not confer democracy. You cannot have democracy without democrats.

It is one of the disillusioning lessons to be learned at the University, that the campaign determines the election, and that representative government is too often a labor-saving device for the apathetic public.

The system is essentially good. You can be well-governed by a good committee or council. But you must not empower a group to govern you for a year and then fall asleep and pretend you are governing yourself. The student body, having gone through the mechanical procedure of voting, usually lapses into apathy, rousing itself on occasion to criticize the student governing body.

If the student governing body needs overhauling, the mood of the student body needs even more.

Is There Laughter Hereafter?

As I was tripping cheerfully between and around the puddles on the front campus one day, whom should I meet tripping over a very long beard tangled between and around his legs but our sophisticated but slightly repulsive Champus Cat.

"Help me out of this thing, jerk," he shouted at me quite civilly.

I hastened to comply because it is not every day that it is my good fortune to assist one of such renown as our hero the Champus Cat.

When I had helped him divest himself of a magnificent false beard some ten feet long, I politely asked him for an explanation. I immediately pulled out my pencil and little black pad which I kept for this purpose and began taking copious notes of everything Champus said, because it is not every day that Champus deigns to speak to one of us common mortals.

"You fool," said he quite candidly, "I have just come from the board of review which is reviewing the All-Varsity Revue, although personally I think it should be the other way around. The only way I could get on the board was by wearing this beaver and announcing myself as 'Poorfesser Champus Q. Cat', but Poorfesser Flounder gave me a tough time until they measured our beards and then they put me at the head of the board where I belong. My beard beat his by a full inch and a half."

"Oh goody", said I, "let's go back right away, and if I am extra special good and say pretty please, maybe they will let me in to see the All-Varsity Revue too."

When I said this, Champus fixed me with a sly contemptuous grin and began to sing this ditty: (the tune sounded suspiciously like that of the popular hit, "There Ain't Nobody Here But Us Chickens", but I could be wrong).

"There ain't nobody there but poor-

Lecture Less "Guide More"—Dean's Opinion

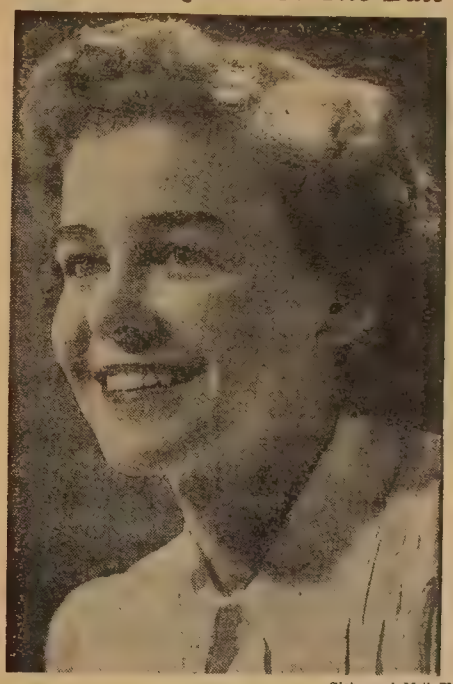
Stimulation and guidance of students in study on their own and by themselves might replace in part the large number of formal lectures of many university courses.

This was an observation made by President Sidney Smith in his annual report. The president asked in the report that his "academic colleagues consider the merit of my observation" which was based on analysis of the last few overcrowded yet successful years on the Toronto campus.

When asked their opinions on this subject, members of the teaching staff, representative of humanities and science courses, gave the following answers.

English Example

One Arts Dean declared that in the richer and more selective English Universities the ratio of professors to students is one to ten and the emphasis is placed on the two or three times a week that the student meets his tutor. If this system is too expensive to cope with even our pre-war years, we should at least aim at this ideal. With the professor-student ratio at the University of Toronto very much higher, such discussion groups as have been possible have fallen on temporary help and the results are not as good as though the professors had made the contact.



A professional course Dean said that this suggestion as applied to professional courses and humanities courses raises different questions. One of the chief concerns of the professional course directors is the fact that the faculties are providing a university education rather than trade school training. Professional training means setting up formal lectures and laboratory work. At the same time the student should be encouraged and allowed to help himself. It is difficult for a student with 32 hours of lectures to find time for his own reading and thinking. A university professional education strives to teach basic principles. There are continuous changes in every phase of human activity particularly in a profession and current changes can best be communicated to the student by the lecture system.

Sun In The Forest

Another Arts dean gave his opinion: If formal education were completely eliminated, a student would succeed only by his own efforts and

Western's Queen Of The Ball

Arts Ball '49 Semi-Formal, Ticket Sales Begin Today

For the first time in years, the Arts Ball will be semi-formal. Dress at the last Arts Ball was declared optional after a heated session of the UC Lit. voted down a semi-formal recommendation from part of the student body.

The tickets will be made available today to all faculties and colleges.

As a compromise between the students who wish to have an American name band for entertainment and those who wish professional local talent, the UC Lit has decided to have Canada's Oscar Peterson as the musical feature of the evening.

The entertainment highlight of the evening will be the crowning of the King and Queen of Arts by Diana Nesbitt, last year's Queen of Arts. The "Royal Pair" will receive gifts for their efforts including $50.00 of merchandise from the T. Eaton Company. The contestants will perform under the eye of the guest of the evening, Oscar Peterson, who will act as one of the judges. John Adaskin has also been contacted to lend his talents as a judge.

Forced to disqualify Herb Wedderburn, tap-dancing artist from SPS in Ajax, the U.C. Lit has decided in favor of Pat Garner, a pianist from St. Mikes. Pat came third in the semi-finals run off at the All-Arts Night last week. Wedderburn was disqualified because the talent contest is opened to Arts students only.

"The way things are going now," said Hal Rosenthal, UC Lit publicity director, "Next year will probably see a strong recommendation for a smaller Arts Ball, formal and strictly for University College students in a single ballroom."

A Montreal Weekend

was also in the salon that an unexplainable camaraderie sprang up between Varsity and U of M. It is still with us as we write this.

Still There

Just a quick synopsis. Vin et fromage, movies, party on Friday; a complete tour of the U of M (six and a half miles of corridors) and the city later winding up at a civic dinner in our honour the next day. By now we had learned that they would have presented us with their left arm if we had asked for it. (When we were shown the Anatomy Lab they did. Sue Decker, one of the fortunate 40, came away with an extra toe—a gift from her hostess, Lisa Desjardins.)

In the evening, the All-Varsity Revue was staged in l'Ermitage, a little theatre on the Cote des Neiges. Here, show-business was at its best. Propless, spot-lightless, and with more than half the cast home in Toronto, Jewison & Co. put on a show that Montreal will never forget. With the spontaneity that is French they applauded with unrestrained exuberance. Encore followed encore. You could feel the snow-balling rapport between audience and cast until it would have been hard to say where one left off and the other began.

The weekend reached a feverish pitch at a dance in the Montreal version of the COTC drill hall. Here you couldn't have picked out the English from the French or vice versa. Torontonians who could muster even a few words en francais were making phenomenal use of same; others were shocked to hear themselves speaking English with a French accent.

Les Choses

A highly informal billetting system led to a few delicate situations. Odd was the expression on the face of M. Provost, whose son Jean was host to three, when he returned unexpectedly from a business trip to find ladies' unmentionables strewn about the master bedroom. He was relieved to find that everything was above-board (and nobody was under the bed). Illustrative of occasional complications in the linguistics department is this sentence from a note which greeted one hazy-minded visitor on his return to his lodgings for the night: "S'il vous plait to not clatter uselessly; we are soundly endormis (ZZZZZ) . . ."

Sunday

For those sufficiently awake, a special student mass was sung at College de Breboeuf. After lunch, (a la carte), a coffee party—and this was the first time it had not been le vin—was held in the salon of the law faculty, a students' dream of a common room come true. Here, once again, the University dignitaries, including the friendly and witty Abbe Llewelyn, spoke to the visiting students as though they were visiting prime ministers.

A send-off that Montreal will remember for some time made the station resound like Varsity Stadium on a football weekend. Handshakes and au revoirs were exchanged with more than a little sentiment. At the last minute, practically everybody acquired a

Engineers Live With Plumber Mr. Zzlych

The unique distinction of being the last name in the Toronto City telephone directory belongs to Mr. J. B. Zzlych of 27 Classic Avenue. Mr. Zzlych is a plumber.

Sharing accommodation with Mr. Zzlych and his plumbing establishment is the Phi Delta Epsilon fraternity. The membership of this fraternity includes several engineers who feel very much at home, at home.

Needless to say the telephone number of the Phi Delta Epsilom Fraternity is the same as Mr. Zzlych and by the same token they share the limelight with Mr. Zzlych in being at the very bottom of the list in Toronto's telephone directory.

UC Vote Approves Lit-WUA Merger With Big Majority

Amalgamation received a clear majority in the two-day plebiscite held in University College, Thursday and Friday, concerning the joining of the UC Men's Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association. Out of a possible 2,100 voters in University College, 440 went to the polls.

Amalgamation Not Immediate

The result of this plebiscite is not binding in any way on the future of the two UC groups. The vote was taken simply for the purpose of finding the student opinion on the subject in view of possible amalgamation in the future, said Hal Rosenthal, UC Lit publicity director.

Separate committees will probably be set up by both the WUA and the UC Lit to make complete study of the question now that the student body has expressed a desire for amalgamation of the two organizations, but a final vote on the question will probably be taken next year, Rosenthal added.

Both Sexes Pro

Differently-colored ballots were used for men and women and final returns show that both men and women were in favor of amalgamation. Twenty-five per cent of the female registration voted compared to 15 per cent of the male students.

The other five questions on the ballot dealt with division of officers between men and women in event of amalgamation. Breaking down the figures, it was shown that the men are undecided on whether all offices should be opened to both sexes or whether some should be reserved exclusively for men and others for women. The men voted 93 for and 93 against on this question.

Female undergraduates voted in favor of having all offices open to both sexes. Ballot returns also showed that co-presidents and co-directors were out; single offices were preferred by both sexes.

On the question of whether the men's athletic board and the women's athletic board should be distinct from the amalgamated society or responsible to it, both sexes gave clear majorities to the latter.

On the final question on the ballot which asked whether the student body wished direct representation as in the present system or indirect representation through some form of parliamentary set-up, the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of retaining the present system.

Sabourin Speaks At Open Meeting P.C. Club Today

Ivan Sabourin, K.C., Progressive Conservative leader in Quebec, will be the speaker at an open meeting of the Progressive Conservative Club this afternoon. Mr. Sabourin will speak on the subject "Conservatism and Quebec." The meeting will take place at 4 p.m., in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's College.

Mr. Sabourin has long been a key figure in Progressive Conservative circles in Quebec. He has taken a leading part in reviving and expanding the P.C. organization in that province in recent years. He was French-speaking joint-secretary of the National Convention at Winnipeg, in 1924, and under the Bracken regime he was chosen to head up the P.C. organization in Quebec. At the Ottawa Convention in 1948, he seconded the nomination of George Drew as national leader of the party.

Mr. Sabourin's address marks the beginning of Progressive Conservative Week on the Campus. This program is intended primarily as a membership drive, but it is also an attempt to acquaint the University student body as a whole with the principles and policies of the P.C. Party. During the coming week students will have an opportunity to hear those policies explained and discussed, and to ask questions about them.

Copies of the new party platform drafted at the national convention at Ottawa will be distributed on the campus, and it will be available to any student on request.

Portia Debates Open At University College

Bright red posters announcing the Portia Debates for U.C. women have sprung up around the college and residences, inviting women to enter the contest. Tomorrow is the last day that anyone may sign although the debates begin today at 1.30 p. m. in Room 5, U.C.

W.U.A. Literary director, Nora Beacock, has stressed that previous experience in debating is unnecessary and that the debates are informal and brief. Women wishing to enter the contest should sign with someone else from their year. Finalists will be awarded the Portia Trophy.

Reject Lana's Glamor—Brains Before Beauty Is Robinette Decision

Brains are more influential than beauty, it was decided in Friday's Robinette debate. Al Schwan and Jack Nopitsky of the affirmative team defeated the team of John Bull and Paul Barbarik after a hectic verbal battle.

"If Helen of Troy had more brains and less beauty she might have saved the Trojans a lot of grief," Schwan pointed out. All four speakers cited examples from current and ancient history to illustrate their arguments. Schwan also declared that despite Napoleon's ugly habit of back-scratching, the Emperor was better known than Lana Turner.

Speaking for the negative of the resolution, "That Brains are more influential than Beauty," John Bull attested that the first impression of a date, which usually leads to marriage, was that of the beauty of the girl, and asked, "Where would we be if there were no marriages?"

Novitsky, second affirmative speaker, refuted Bull by quoting from his own experience that beauty attracts first but brains leave the lasting impression.

In answering an attack by the affirmative the brainpower of UC residence men, Barbarik, second speaker for the negative, stated that Whitney Hall girls still dated them, thus emphasizing that beauty was more influential than brains.

Let's LOOK At It

AND NOW we have an ice cream that contains the true ingredients of a fruit salad. The Acme Farmers Dairy people have made this ice cream, which costs a little more, tastes more exquisite, gives a new type of flavour satisfaction. Tudor ice cream is bulk packed to retain its creamier texture, and the fruit salad flavour blends deeply and comfortably with the just-right richness of the frozen cream. Other flavours are available such as strawberry fruit, sun-ripened crushed strawberries, chocolate nut fudge, grape-pineapple, and a new taste-experience, an ice cream with peppermint. To be sure of this new gourmet luxury, ask for the Tudor name.

WATT'S SPORTSWEAR at the Park Plaza corner is a friendly stop-over after your soda or coke. Sometimes in the "grab-bag" you can pick up anything from a belt to what-have-you at scandalous savings . . . but the more serious items, many of them now sale-priced to make room for the new season, are there to be tried on and discussed to your heart's content. Watt's encourage such visits, are building up a popular college-trade business which understands budget limitations, is always willing to co-operate on time payments if desirable.

A BEAUTIFUL EVENING GOWN is not an item, it is a creation. And being a creation a beautiful evening gown does not go out with the turn of the season. An evening gown from Joan Ribby is created with that long-range idea built into its every seam and lovely line. Now is the season to shop for such a gown at between-season savings, knowing that such foresightedness is one means of putting money in your pocket later when far more dollars will be necessary to purchase a gown of acceptable formal standards after the "sale season" has been closed up again. THE BIG NEWS is "Gabardine!" That's what Northway's tell us, and it's good news. The new suits are in. Best colour, navy, next skipper blue, powder blue. And the "Good morning colours." Roast'n coffee, of course. Prices are good to hear, too. There's a suit made of eighty percent wool gabardine, twenty percent Nylon, and you can imagine how that one will wear. Only 39.50. There are walking away . . . and pretty smooth futures they take with them. Fashionland is Northway's Third Floor.

ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING RINGS at Scheuer's, 131 Yonge Street, are exhibited, and the savings in bookkeeping, etc., are handed on to the customer. For an education on the subject of engagement and wedding ring prices we suggest a long visit to Scheuer's . . . and don't be afraid to ask them to show you everything at every price. They have an excellent assortment at a special price of one hundred dollars which they take pride in selling. These are priced to appeal to the young man who wants something definitely good, but who cannot go into astronomical payments. Other rings are even less, and very beautiful. Facing Temperance.

WE KNOW A GIRL who was always fussing about her clothes. Either her suit didn't seem suitable for the occasion and she felt a compulsion to rush away and change into a dress, or the dress was too fussy and she'd go back to residence between classes and change into something else. Her favourite suit was too rugged for classroom wear, her dresses too fussy. Then she wandered into an Evangeline Shop and began picking over those new jersey blouses, came up with a couple that brought colour and gaiety to her suit, discarded the belts of her dress-maker clothes, nipped 'em in with a good solid costume-type belt, and settled down to study. Meanwhile, some how her clothes had acquired stream-lining. Simple.

TEASDALL'S is the shopping centre for men around these parts. Everything possible is done to make the schoolman feel Teasdall's is his store. Pricing is scaled to the college convenience, post-payments are arranged when necessary, items are chosen for the "college trade" by a man who talks the language. Drop in any time you're around Bloor and Yonge. You'll find a welcome, and a nice spot to stop and chat if that's at the moment is all you're interested in. 804 Yonge.

Swimmers Lose

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 24—Varsity Blues swimming team were handed a defeat at the hands of Cornell and Niagara U. here last Saturday.

Battling strongly, the Toronto swimsters emerged with 12 points against 63 for Cornell and 23 for Niagara.

Star man of the meet was Cornell Captain Bob Hill, who grabbed individual honors in the 50 and 100 yds. free-style. In the latter, his time of 53.5 bettered the Canadian mark.

Blue standouts were Ken Tulley and Don Thom, who placed second and third in diving. Hugh McCallum, fourth in the back event, Chris Arnold, fourth in the 50 free-style and Larry Rosen, third in the breast stroke event.

Varsity Fencers Win and Lose

Detroit fencers won their third straight victory in Hart House Saturday afternoon at the expense of the Varsity Senior fencing squad.

Varsity won the foil class 5-4. However, the visitors swept the sabre events 7-2 and handed Varsity a 5-4 setback in the epee division for a 16-11 triumph in the meet.

The Varsity intermediate fencing team beat OAC 10-6 in foil competition Saturday night.

Nerveless Jack

Boston Has Eye On Jack Gelineau

Definition of "ice"—that substance you skate across on your way from the players' bench to the penalty box.

After Friday night's fight card at the Arena maybe Doug Maxwell, the P. A. announcer, ought to understudy Don Murphy and give a blow by blow account for the benefit of fans in the back rows.

Jack (Nerveless) Gelineau, the McGill goalie, is the holder of the British Empire Medal, awarded to him while on service with the R.C.A.F. Gelineau had a try-out with the Boston Bruins earlier this season. Johnny Pierson, who is now starring with the Beantowners is a former McGill star.

At last we've found out why McGill maintains an entry in the Intercollegiate Football loop. It's to keep boys like Dave Hackett, Rocky Robillard and "Slim" Heron in shape for the hockey season.

Doug Heron, the crowd's favorite, played a very sound brand of hockey scoring one goal and assisting on another. Heron also used his 236 pounds to advantage on defense, especially in the second period, when the Varsity attack was smashed at the Redmen's blueline.

McGill were aided considerably by luck. Toronto bounced no less than seven shots off the goalposts in the final twenty minutes.

A breakdown of the penalty list shows 44 minutes for the Redskins, 24 for the Blues. One misconduct, 4 majors and 19 minors were meted out by Referee Allen. At no time in the entire third period was the sin seat vacant.

Digby and Hennessy, and Ecclestone and Robillard were the participants in the feature bouts of the evening. Digger is now being scouted for the wrestling team after the prowess he displayed in making Hennessy earn his three stars.

The next bit of equipment that is needed in Varsity Arena is a set of fog lights. The mild weather outside plus the heat of battle inside combined to set up a thick haze over the ice surface. Considering the result of the game maybe it was just as well that the Blue supporters couldn't see too clearly.

The largest crowd of the season attended Friday's game and despite the lop-sided score, nearly all of them stayed for the final whistle.

Bob Henry was rewarded for displaying the old college try when he netted Bill Spence's pass in the final second of the match.

Blues Win Five Bouts In Boxing

Varsity picked up all the marbles in the boxing events at the Athletic Night Saturday when they beat O.A.C. in five eciting bouts. The Doctor's Dilemma

As has been pointed out by others, George Bernard Shaw's face is a dichotomy, one half that of a comedian, the other, the tragedian. After seeing "Doctor's Dilemma" presented at Hart House this week, the Shavian paradox becomes even more vivid. Shaw uses this piece as a vehicle in which to display his abhorrence of the medical profession, and yet coupled with this, is the deeper theme of artistry and obligation.

The third Robert Gill production of the season, brings to the fore new talent, has an attractive set and audience appeal in that the esoteric services of doctors are still laugh material. The woman who causes the dilemma is played by Aila Filppula. Her naive charm is flute-like and appealing, but on occasion the fuller notes of a cello would have given more substance to the part. Her roguish artist husband, Robert Shepherd, is quietly winning. Of the doctors, Stafford Lawrence and Gordon Askwith enjoy their roles, and so add vigour to the show.

The director's interpretation in the last act is indeed puzzling. After keeping the balance of Shaw's wit and wisdom in check for four acts, the sudden plunge to burlesque is startling. Further, the Mr. Danby touch in the final scene is not justified from the text.

The over-all picture is not of the usual stellar Hart House calibre, due, partly, to the fact that this play is not Shaw at his best.

Guest, Not Customer

(Mina Grant, soprano, Hart House Music Room, Friday)
(Eva Le Gallienne, scenes from plays, Eaton Auditorium, Saturday)

It is not my intention to weep nostalgic tears over the cold anonymity of the large hall in contrast to the informality of the 'salon'. But the two events noted here did serve to remind one that at least the illusion of meeting the artist socially instead of being entitled to the best he or she can give on the strength of a piece of cardboard makes not only for a pleasanter atmosphere, but perhaps even for greater receptivity.

In the case of Miss Le Gallienne who did present her scenes from Shakespeare, Goldoni, etc., from a stage in a large hall, all the credit goes to the effectiveness of her charming personality, her expressed determination to further the cause of the legitimate stage which she did with delightful elequence and, possibly to the state of her larynx for which she asked and received due sympathy.

Miss Grant's informal manner, on the other hand was underlined, perhaps conditioned by, the size and character of Hart House music room, the smallness of the audience which derived obvious pleasure from her singing of Hebridean songs, her French songs and the 17-18th century group.

In both events the feminine regime was enhanced by the tact and competence of the supporting gentlemen (Mr. Dawson as supplier of cues—and more than just that; Mr. Atack accompanying Miss Grant). In both cases one was permitted to forget all about qualifying conditions for admission (financial in Eaton Aud., anatomical, alas, in Hart House) and was enabled to think of the two ladies as one's hostesses.

It is worth considering, whether this state of affairs, which is almost bound to reduce one's determination to apply the most rigid of yardsticks to the performances is not rather beneficial, because, as long as certain standards of ability are maintained—and Miss Le Gallienne possesses a very great deal of that commodity and Miss Grant quite some—it serves to direct attention more fully to the works performed than when the artist seems to stand in the prisoner's dock.

Vronsky And Babin

Although the literature of original works for two pianos is not rich, keyboard teams do not have to rely on the customary arrangements of doubtful taste. Proof of this was the recital given by Vronsky and Babin (wife and husband) at Eaton Auditorium. The team impressed chiefly by precision of attack and by a clarity of sound that few solo pianists possess. Hardly less striking was the adaptation of tone to the style of each work.

To hear Mozart performed with such a warm and soft tone is rare. Yet there was a little too much "flavor" which could have been avoided by occasional use of more vigorous tone. The slow movement in this original sonata is the best one with its "wrong-note" effects and harmonic surprises providing a welcome relief to the rather heavy dose of D major of the whole work.

Rhythm and harmony are well integrated in Stravinsky's Concerto per Due Pianoforti Soli. I liked the music for its refreshing coldness of sound and because like Mozart, Stravinsky achieves emotion through meaningful patterns rather than nerve-tickling or sound-splashing, so overdone by some romantics and impressionists. The flow of musical events is as clear as the sequence of thought in his book "Poetics of some students cannot organize their work from books. It is a little illusory to talk too seriously about this elimination for the lecturing system is here to stay. This system is faulty, however, in that students are apt to think that the last word has been said by the lecturer. The lecturer is only carving a road through a dark forest to let in the sun.

Lecture Less

A dean of a professional course concludes: Give a graduate student a few principles and he will chart his own path of study but most undergraduates would flounder and come continually to their lecturer with "What do I do next?"

Most students need direction and leadership in their studies. The matter is somewhat different in arts and in professional studies as there is a great deal of reading necessary in Arts.

There are, however, certain disciplinary and technical skills that have to be acquired by the professional student. Before he is sent out into his profession he must be perfectly trained. He will be guided by the principles he has learned at university, and these principles must not be hazy. Half his time is spent in laboratory work in direct experiments to clarify these principles. A lecturer cannot say, "Go into the laboratory and play around by yourself." Regimentation is needed or such work is of little value.

BLOOD is LIFE

This is your opportunity to save a life!

Children are Canada's most precious possession. Yet every year scores of youngsters, struck down by accident, or illness, die for want of blood.

Will you donate life-giving blood through the Canadian Red Cross? The Red Cross is opening a great new civilian Blood Transfusion Service. The object of the Service is to provide hospitals and the patients they serve with whole blood and plasma FREE . . . for life-saving transfusions. Men, women and children from coast to coast will live because you have donated blood that means life itself.

This great new Service will mean life to many whose lives hang in the balance . . . YOU can make sure the balance swings the right way!

After you register as a voluntary donor, you will be asked to donate blood only twice a year. It's only a slight inconvenience. CONTACT THE RED CROSS CLINIC, 50 BLOOR ST. EAST, (PRincess 3784) AND TELL THEM YOU WILL GLADLY BE A BLOOD DONOR.

They better not be anything but
If they don't watch out and take it slow,
They'll find out MacDope is gonna bust a gut.
If they don't watch out, etc.

If you'd like to know exactly what happened.
If you would like to know what went on,
Then don't go near Poorfesser Gout
Or you're gonna be sorry you'd gone.
What he thinks ain't worth a dime.
'It's not appropriate to say a thing at this time.'
What he thinks, etc.

Now they have slashed the script all to ribbons,
They really threw it on the rocks,
'But never fear,' says Poorfesser Pox,
Who tore a lot of pages out,
'Never you fear,' says Poorfesser Pox,
'There's not a single thing to get excited about.'
'Never you fear,' etc.

'Now,' says Pans, 'the script is just dandy,
We've gone and made it white as cream.
And no one can come out and say
That it is vulgarity in the extreme.'
And no one, etc

Pans was right there drawing them pictures
Of what the jokes were all about.
When he got through with his masterpiece,
Then Poorfesser Gissel really knocked himself out
When he got, etc.

When the boys came up with an oldie,
A joke with whiskers down to the floor,
Then Poorfesser Flounder opened his trap
And he let out a mighty roar.
When he straightened out he explained
An angle no one ever figured out before.
When he, etc.

Students can't get into this hearing,
What they'd hear is 'too risque,'
So go on home and play with your doll,
It's not for you to dig these kicks.
These jokes are not for kids at all,
But here's a nickel, call us when you're eighty-six.
These jokes are, etc.

Champus then fixed me with a sly contemptuous grin (I was well fixed by this time) and disappeared into the period which ends this sentence.

Poor Ice Slows Game As Blues Drop Clinton

Clinton, N.Y., Jan. 23 —(Special To The Varsity)— The Clinton hockey club played host to the Varsity Intermediates Friday night, and congenial hosts they were too, bowing 6-4 to our boys, in a rather slow and penalty-ridden contest.

Varsity jumped into a quick lead soon after the "Star Spangled Banner" on a neat passing play which ended with Griff Pearson firing home the rubber assisted by Clare (The Count) Morrison. Clinton tied the game up at 4:15 with Tarolli scoring on a pass from Miguel. At 15:45 Batt of Clinton gave his team a briefly held lead, scoring unassisted. Before the period ended Wes Moore and Pat McLaughlin both scored to give the Blues a lead which was challenged for a short time in the second session when Redmond scored from Batt to tie it all up again. At this point the win-hungry Clinton fans really whooped it up and the resultant hot air was probably a factor contributing to the sticky condition of the ice. Count Morrison got an unofficial assist on the play.

After a sustained ganging attack, Cooper put the Blues ahead again with a score assisted by Doug Dies. Suddenly inspired, the intermediates got hot and on a smooth passing play McLaughlin drove one in with the help of Bill Patterson.

Artie Bell, just down from the seniors, celebrated his baptismal to intermediate fire by picking up two stitches in a small fracas in the third period. Toward the end of the game Redmond of Clinton beat Foote to complete the scoring. McLand Moore were the offensive aces for Varsity while Batt shouldered the main load for Clinton.

Line-ups:

Music" is incomprehensible to me.

One of the few Schubert works that can be called "pretty", the Rondo op. 138 was performed in its proper setting of one piano four hands. Artists of lesser taste might have made superfluous arrangement for two pianos. There were short works, some arranged, by Telemann, Babin, Debussy and Tschaikovsky. Four encores testified to an enthusiastic reception.

RAIDERS UPSET 51-48

Rams Down Int. Blues In Cage Tilt

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Despite a scoring spree mid-way through the second half, the Intermediate Blues were unable to overtake the McMaster Rams and the whistle blew with Varsity on the bottom end of a 41-33 count, in the Intermediate basketball schedule in Hart House Saturday night.

The last quarter saw the only real basketball of the whole game, when play speeded up from a walk to a run. The McMaster shooting and ball-handling was not good, but at least it was eight points better than that of the Intermediates.

Play Ragged At First

Play throughout the first half was slow and ragged with the score at half time standing at McMaster 19, Varsity 11. Things began to click a little better after the half, and as play moved into the fourth quarter, Al Stevenson and Doug Wigle teamed up on some long-range sharp shooting to give the Blues a 30-27 lead.

Not to be outdone, McMaster returned to the attack under Stanley's leadership, and managed to roll up an eight point margin by the end of the game.

Doug Wigle with 12 points, and Andy Andrews with seven were standouts for Varsity, while Stanley, who netted 12 points, and Mullen, who scored 10, were the chief factors in the McMaster win.

Lineups:

Varsity—Maher, Stevenson (4), Tisdale, Furlong, Luck (4), MacKenzie, Wigle (12), Andrews (7), Cole (6), Anderson, Gough.

McMaster—Stanley (12), Mullen (10), Mooradian (2), Paolini, Smith (4), Harper (2), Bingham (3), McTaggart (6), Mesaros (2).

Smiling Cy

Cy Beigler, captain of the McGill hockey team for the second time this year, was wearing a smile exactly like this one after his team's 6-2 victory over the Blues on Friday night.

HOCKEY

Last year's league-winning Vic Firsts racked up their first victory of the season on Friday by defeating St. Hilda's Firsts 4-0. The Saints put up a hard battle but were outskated on all sides by the Scarlet and Gold. Alison Jeffries can add another feather to her cap for tallying three of the winners' scores. She was by far the best player on the ice, but was ably assisted by fellow team members Jean Myers and Di Rogers. Di got the fourth goal. Mary Martin, the St. Hilda's goalie, played an excellent game for the losers as did Donna Haley and Alison Miller.

Varsity Beats Assumption Scoring Spree In Second Half Stacks Up 36 Points

BY ED VOIGHT

For the second consecutive week, the improving Varsity Blues cage squad put on a real thriller-diller hoopla exhibition before a "sold-right-out" crowd in Hart House on Saturday p.m. in the main feature of another Athletic Night.

Only this time, the final result was much more favourable to the locals as they knocked off the visiting Assumption Purple Raiders 51-48 in a keenly-contested game that was in doubt right up until the final seconds.

The Blues got off on the wrong foot again Saturday as the raiders outplayed them at both ends of the floor to build up a 25-15 lead at the half. But the second half was an entirely different story as the Blues played their best ball of the year to overcome Assumption's lead midway through the fourth period, and went on from there to protect a slim lead for their first win of the season over outside colleges.

Pettinger, Zeaton Star

Starry forward Glen Pettinger and veteran guard Wally Zeaton were the sparks of the Blues' torrid second-half drive in which they rang up 36 points, as compared to the Raiders' 23.

Pettinger was a ball of fire as he sped through the visitor's close man-to-man checking for 15 points in the last two periods. Zeaton came up with has best game of the year, his defensive play in that last half being slightly terrific. He also swished eight points through the strings in the second-half offense.

Dusky Freddy Thomas played a standout game for the Raiders, was the best player on the floor with his terrific speed, stalwart rebound play and general floor-leadership. The "Ebony Rhapsody" from Windsor was the high score of the night with 24 points, 14 of them on foul shots. He was given 17 free throws in all, missing only three, which must be some sort of record for a Hart House game, as the Blues' tight 2-1-2 zone defense paid particular attention to the Raiders' colored star.

Thomas Airs One

Thomas sank two of the nicest hoops of the game within a minute of play early in the second period. On the first one, he dribbled right past the Varsity guards as if they were rooted to the floor to go in for a soft lay-up shot. The second deuce came via a beautiful hook-shot that Thomas threw up while he was a couple of feet in the air.

Later in the game, Thomas threw in another lovely hook, this time with big Doug Tyndall, who stuck to Thomas like glue all night draped over him.

Woody Campbell with 12 points was another high Raider scorer working very smoothly with Thomas around the Toronto hoop. Bill Kohlman played well for Assumption, sank two long shots in a row from the same spot on the court early in the second quarter.

For the Blues, Pettinger with 21 points was outstanding. He tied the score 43-43 at the half-way mark of the final period with a well-earned deuce that he potted while in the air with his back to the hoop. Defensively, Pettinger teamed up with little Eddie Brennan on their forward spots in the zone defense to give the visitors no end of trouble with their all-over-the-floor-checking tactics.

After that tying hoop by Pettinger, Brennan and Zeaton swooshed for four points apiece to finish Toronto's scoring and protect the play. The excitement reached such a pitch in the last few seconds as Assumption whittled down the Blues' eight-point lead that Tom O'Hara had a technical foul called against him for protesting a call by referee Bill Zenner.

Next week, the Blues continue their victory parade against the Western Mustangs of Johnny Metras.

Summary: Assumption: Kohlman, 4; Pare, McEwan; Campbell, 12; Harrison; O'Hara, 2; Thomas 24; Angus, 2; Carpenter, 4; Total, 48.

Toronto: Stockman, 5; Tyndall, 2; Volpe, 2; Gray; LaChance, 2; Adams; Pettinger, 21; McManus, 3; Zeaton, 10; Brennan, 6; Total, 51.

Can Beat Western Says Red Nantais

"Varsity can beat Western basketball team if they play the way they did against us," Red Nantais, pilot of the Assumption basketball squad commented after Saturday night's fracas. Assumption beat Western by ten points earlier in the season.

"Western isn't as good as they were last year," was the comment of Freddy Thomas, star Assumption forward.

Thomas, incidentally is one of Canada's top athletes. He's on the Cleveland Indian list in baseball, has been approached by Argos in football, and is perhaps the best player in college basketball.

McGill Blasts Hockey Blues 6 To 2

By HAL HOLDEN

A bruising band of fast-skating McGill pucksters handed the Varsity Blues their first loss of the Intercollegiate season on home ice Friday night at Varsity Arena. The score was 6-2.

Bob LaRose, Blue defenceman, was injured in the third period and will not play Wednesday when the Blues tackle Queen's in Kingston. LaRose was bodychecked by Doug Heron of McGill and twisted his knee.

The Blues came out strongly with some neat passing in the early minutes of the first period but goalie Jack Gelineau who proved to be the chief stumbling block all night for Varsity was hotter than a four-alarm fire as he turned back all but one Blue thrust during the first frame.

Gelineau Breaks Hearts

Again in the second period, Ace Bailey's crew carried the play in the opening moments but this time they couldn't even fool Gelineau once after numerous heartbreaking tries. The McGill netminder was both sensational and lucky and it takes more than what the Blues had Friday night to beat that combination. Fox, Boyd and Frey had the puck sliding back and forth in front of the McGill net like they were juggling a hot potato but couldn't pop it into the goalmouth.

After their failure to put the puck past Gelineau, in the first few minutes of the second period, Varsity seemed to lose the organization which sharpened their attack and the Redmen quickly took over. They drilled in three goals before the period ended as they took advantage of Varsity mistakes. With a four-goal lead to take with them into the third frame, the Redmen decided to forget about scoring goals and concentrate on banging the Blues about. The heavier Redmen had the edge in this department too.

Hale Clicks Twice

McGill's Tom Hale counted the first goal of the night. Three minutes later Gord Ecclestone knotted the score on a screened shot from well out. Gelineau couldn't have seen it. Husky Doug Heron gave the Redmen the lead again at the 16.53 mark of the period, completing a smooth passing play with Sanderson.

Reg Sinclair broke away from a Blue power play to score the first of McGill's third period goals. Hale notched his second goal midway through the period and then fed a pass to Robillard for the other score.

Hackett Feuds

There were several skirmishes in the third frame but only two amounted to anything. Hackett and Ecclestone put on the best show but the referees broke it up quickly. Both got a major penalty for fighting while Hackett was awarded an additional two minutes. Sinclair finished off the goal-scoring for the winners while Bob Henry issued Varsity's last gasp with one second left to play in the game.

Reg Sinclair and Tom Hale spearheaded the McGill offensive with Doug Heron a bulwark on defence in front of the flashy Gelineau. Harry Boyd, Johnny Fox and Ernie Frey were the best of the Blue attackers. Bob LaRose and Will Digby had their moments on blue-line patrol for Varsity.

McGill—Goal, Gelineau; defense, Heron, Goselin; centre, Sinclair; wings, Hale, Robillard, alts., Hennessy, Sanderson, Henry, Hackett, Parsons, Hayward, Beigler.

Varsity — Goal, Hutzulak; defense, Hayes, Ecclestone, centre, Turcott, wings, Henry, Spence; alts., Digby, LaRose, Frey, Boyd, Ferguson, Howson, McKillop, Fox, Prince.

McGill Gains Tie For Second Beat Queen's By 3-2 Count

Kingston, Jan. 24 — (Special to The Varsity) —The McGill Redmen climbed into a tie with Varsity for second place in the Intercollegiate Hockey League by virtue of a 3-2 win over Queen's University here Saturday night. The win was the Montrealers second in as many nights and was featured by the spectacular netminding of embryo-Bruin Jack Gelineau. Urie, in the Kingston nets, also played a steady game.

Reg Sinclair potted the winning goal, his second of the night, late in the third period. Previous to that, Sinclair and Parsons had scored two quick second-period goals to wipe out the fast-breaking Gaels' lead. Murray and Robertson were the Queen's marksmen in the initial stanza.

The game was fairly clean throughout, with only nine penalties being doled out. Fights in the second and third periods enlivened the proceedings somewhat.

Line-ups:

Queen's		McGill
Urie	goal	Gelineau
Gosselin	d	Johnstone
Heron	d	Finnagan
Robillard	c	Morgan
Lincoln	w	Sadler
Heiney	w	Robertson

Queen's Subs: Hamilton, Stevenson, Potts, Kemp, Strobilsky, Murray, Mercier, Hews, Maxwell.

McGill Subs: Mary, Hennessy, Sanderson, Hale, Hackett, Parsons, Beigler, Hayward

2—Queen's, Robertson (Morgan) 7.07
Penalties—Henry, Sanderson.

Second Period

3—McGill, Parsons 16:02
4—McGill, Sinclair (Robillard, Heron) 17:37
Penalties—Sinclair, Hale, Kemp.

Third Period

5—McGill, Sinclair 14:30
Penalties—Flanagan (2), Sadler (major).

Meds Winners Of Swim Meet With 30½ Pts.

Meds were the victors in the Junior Interfaculty Swim Meet on Saturday's Athletic Night program.

The cadaver cutters snared four of the eight events to amass a total of 30½ points. Runner-up Trinity collected 19 points, with Vic and Ajax following with 15½ and 11 points respectively. Points were awarded on a 5-3-1 basis, except for the 200-yds. sprint relay with an 8-5-2-1 count.

Dave Wishart of Trinity won the 50 and 100 yds. free-style events to score the meet's only double victory. Medsman Bill Fruster showed good form in winning the 200-yds. free-style and leading his team to a first and second in the relay events.

Individual results in swimming follow:

150-yd. medley relay—1, Meds; 2, Vic; 3, Ajax Time—1 33:5

Diving—1, Wortley, Vic; 2, Huycke, Trinity; 3, Rogers, Trinity.

50-yd. free style—Wishart, Trinity; Sullivan, St Mike's; Edmonds, Meds.

100-yd. breast stroke—1, Smith, Meds; 2, Huycke, Trinity; 3, Feldberg, Ajax.

200-yd. free style—1, Fruster, Meds; 2, Gracie, Vic; 3, McKenzie, Meds.

100-yd. back stroke—1, Lyman, Meds; 2, Lawson, Vic; 3, Maunder, Ajax.

100-yd. free style—1, Wishart, Trinity; 2, Edmonds, Meds; 3, Lawson, Vic; McKenzie Meds (tied)

200-yd. sprint relay 1, Ajax; 2, Meds; 3, Forestry. Time—156.3.

Western Wins 2 In Hoopla Here Saturday

Kingston, Jan. 23—(CUP)—Showing flashes of the prowess that won the Intercollegiate basketball championship last season, the University of Western Ontario Mustangs succeeded in winning both their games played this weekend to open the senior Intercollegiate league.

Against McGill in Montreal on Friday night, the Mustang squad was paced to a 51-35 win by George Wearing who netted 16 points. The second game, played Saturday night in Kingston against Queen's University team was almost a repeat performance. The Western machine rolled to a 54-35 victory, and Bob Phibbs topped the Mustang scorers with 14 points.

The Mustangs will visit Hart House on Saturday, Jan. 29, where they will meet the Blues in Varsity's first scheduled encounter in the Intercollegiate league. The Western Intermediates will accompany their big brothers to tackle the Intermediate Blues in another feature of the Athletic Night.

Here's a sample of basketball spiced with a wee bit of rugby. Nick Volpe, starry defensive back for the rugby Blues can't seem to acclimatize himself to basketball. Here he is seen charging through two Assumption players for a gain of five or six yards. He also got a free shot. We expect to see Nick dribbling the rugby ball up the field for a touchdown next year. But Assumption's defensive tactics such as this clowning didn't help them any at Athletic night when the Hoopla Blues downed them, 51-48.

Prog-Cons On Rise Could Win Quebec Declares Sabourin

The conservative principles of the people of Quebec will lead them to support the Progressive Conservative Party in next federal election, declared Ivan Sabourin, Quebec Progressive Conservative leader, in a speech yesterday to the P.C. Club. Mr. Sabourin's speech on "Conservatism and Quebec" opened Progressive Conservative Week on the campus.

Evaluate Quebec Election

Sabourin pointed to the smashing victory of the Union Nationale in the Quebec provincial elections last year as a vote against the federal Liberal Party. Provincial Liberals were supported by members of the federal parliament in that election.

Sabourin sees this strong "anti-Liberal" vote going to the Conservatives in the next federal election. "There is a change taking place in Quebec today—Conservatism has permeated the province and will have the effect of defeating the Liberal Party in the next federal election," he declared.

Sabourin outlined the conservative nature of the people of Quebec, explaining that they are "traditionalist", stable and slow to change. The rural aspect of the province and the habits and customs of many generations lie behind this conservatism, Mr. Sabourin stated.

Says Quebec Conservative

This conservative nature of the French-speaking Canadian is carried over into his politics, Mr. Sabourin said. "No matter what political party we join, conservatism propels us into it," he stated. It is this conservative element, which finds adequate expression in the present program of the Progressive Conservative Party, which will lead to victory for the P.C.'s in the next federal election, he declared.

The two planks of the present P.C. platform which appeal most to the people of Quebec are the ones guaranteeing provincial autonomy and condemning communism, Mr. Sabourin said.

Lauds Drew

"We have at the head of our party a fighting man who believes in what he fights for, and knows about the things he believes in," declared Mr. Sabourin. One of the things that Mr. Drew believes in is the "preservation of provincial autonomy — an important issue in Quebec," he added.

"We in Quebec are absolutely opposed to communism," he stated, explaining that this plank of the P.C. platform will draw support in Quebec.

Sabourin advised university students to join political clubs. "It is only when the individual becomes more and more interested in politics, and ready to fight for his views that we can be sure of a politically healthy nation," he declared.

Palestine Policy Of Great Britain Will Be Debated

British government policy regarding Palestine will form the topic for the Hart House debate tomorrow night.

The official resolution, "That this House condemns the policy of the present government of the United Kingdom towards Palestine", will be upheld by A. K. Dixon, University College, and J. E. Eberle, St. Mike's, and opposed by J. E. F. Hastings, Medicine and J. Peters, University College.

Gelber Is Guest

Marvin Gelber will be the honorary visitor. Mr. Gelber was a director of the Palestine Economic Corporation, the largest American investor in Palestine, and is a member of the national executive of the U.N. Association in Canada. He has written and spoken extensively on the subject of Palestine.

Jews' Task Long

Speaking last night on the stand he would take in the debate, Mr. Gerber said, "The re-birth of the Jewish national home after 2,000 years is an event of considerable importance. The Jews commenced their arduous task during the Turkish regime and have continued to build during periods of friendliness, indifference, or hostilities, depending on the political vicissitudes of their rulers. The British mandate was ushered in during an Anglo-Zionist alliance. Unfortunately, the subsequent history of the mandate led to a straining and eventual breaking of this entente cordiale."

Commenting on the resolution, Speaker of the House, V. L. Richards said, "Some people might feel that recent events indicate the debate subject is less important. But there has been no significant change in the policy of the British government; just a few comments from Mr. Bevin, but no actual change."

"Mr. Gelber is fully conversant with the problems of the Israeli government. I am sure all who attend will find it an interesting debate."

The debate will take place in the Debates Room at 8 p.m.

Dramatic Operetta Feature of U.C. Musical Fantasy

"Fantasy of '49," the University College Music Club program, is being prepared for presentation in Hart House Theatre on February 8 and 9. The tickets are half gone and the remainder will go on sale in the U.C. rotunda on Tuesday, January 25.

With a cast of 120 players, the program is in three parts: selections from "Brigadoon," and Victor Herbert by the U.C. Singers, solo violin numbers by Bruce Duncan, and a dramatic operetta entitled "Down in the Valley."

The U.C. Singers are under the direction of John Lind, choirmaster at Trinity College; the operetta is directed and produced by Hugh Douglas — with W. E. Abray, III Musc. Bach., musical director. Mr. Sidney of Eaton's, veteran producer of Gilbert and Sullivan operas, has offered his ability in the production of the operetta.

"Down in the Valley," is the most ambitious project yet attempted by the U.C. Music Club. It is equally important for the fact that the opera marks its initial presentation in Canada. Kurt Weill, the author, numbers among his successes: "Lady in the Dark," "Knickerbocker Holiday," "One Touch of Venus," and his present Broadway success "Love Life."

Bill Copeland, I Arts, plays the part of Brach Weaver; opposite him is Deltra Eamon, II Musc. Bach., as Jeannie Parsons, and Ray Cairns, III Arts, is the villain Thomas Bauche.

Letters have arrived from neighboring colleges and alumni as well as from every department in the University.

Propagandists Studied By Club

A belief that the work of any author will suffer if he writes propaganda or makes the spreading of propaganda the aim of his writing, was expressed by Professor J. C. Garrett, honorary president of the Trinity Arts and Letters Club during a talk given last week to the club on the topic "Literature and Propaganda."

"In a work of art the part which is really ephemeral is that which deals with passing events," he said. "Therefore propaganda proves ephemeral."

Differing opinions on the inclusion of propaganda in literary works result from different opinions regarding the place of the individual in society, the professor said. He explained some people believe the state should be the frame within which individuals develop themselves. They deplored propaganda in literature. Others wanted the individual to subordinate himself to the "good of the community." They required authors to further the interests of the community by supporting those interests with propaganda.

Give Evaluation Of Campus Press In Ottawa Paper

Special to The Varsity

Ottawa, Jan. 24 — The following are excerpts from an article which appeared recently in the Ottawa Citizen, dealing with the state of journalism in Canadian Universities . . . Throughout the country the student press flourishes to a degree not generally recognized. It gives opportunities of apprenticeship to many who later become numbered among Canada's writers and editors.

Of campus newspapers, 20 belong to the Canadian University Press, their co-operative news service . . .

Though concerned primarily with campus life, these newspapers reflect also the thought and events of the times. As might be expected, original writing is perhaps less frequent than too-faithful imitations of John Dos Passos or whoever is the literary lion of the moment. Criticism is often sensitive to good books and films, and quick to ridicule humbug.

"College humor" tends, of course, to be esoteric, and the grade of levity may expose a wetness still behind the writer's ears, but admirable wit is not uncommon.

Campus editors treasure the traditions of a free press and try to be a constructive influence.

But copying a current trend, news columns are sometimes overrun by kinds of writing that do not belong there. For its own sake and the sake of the writers who wish to turn a hobby into a vocation, the university press should maintain strict standards of journalistic competence.

Accurate, objective news is a great need of today's world.

University Gets Endowment For Acoustics Laboratory

The University of Toronto has received $7,000. from Andre Dorfman to set up a psycho-acoustic laboratory at the Toronto General Hospital, President Sidney Smith announced yesterday. The new laboratory will have an important role in the development of Toronto as the centre of Canada's fight against deafness, Dr. Smith said.

The president pointed out that Varsity is providing the technical advice at Sunnybrook where the Department of Veterans Affairs is concentrating its efforts to rehabilitate veterans with impaired hearing and said that a similar program at St. Michael's Hospital is being integrated with that of the Toronto General and the Sunnybrook projects. The research program which was initiated in the university by the R.C.A.F. and continued under the Departments of Physics and Otolaryngology provides trained, technical experts in the field of acoustic engineering and the basic scientific studies of hearing loss.

Principal function of the new laboratory at the Toronto General will be to analyse difficult cases among the hard-of-hearing, in order to discover whether surgery, radiation or other treatments, such as psychology, are required.

Next week the second annual refresher course for eye, ear, nose and throat specialists is being held at the University of Toronto. Heading the panel of speakers will be Dr. Lawrence R. Boies of Minneapolis discussing "General Problems of Interest to the Practice of Otolaryngology" and Dr. Ramon Castroviejo of New York whose topic will be "Cataract Surgery".

Why?

Almost every year at this University some individuals or groups of individuals protest against what they conceive to be abuses in University life. Yet, faced with the smothering blanket of student apathy, their efforts are crippled, if not halted entirely. Why?

On certain occasions the undergraduate body is able to band together and act in concert for the common good. Yet it is interesting to note that this fusion of effort occurs only when there is some glamour attached to the occasion. Most of it dies when the last whistle is blown at the last football game of the season.

To some people this frenzied activity on the part of students must resemble the fabled rush of lemmings to the sea.

Whether or not lemmings do commit suicide at certain seasons of the year, is a pretty academic question. Yet a pretty parallel is provided.

At only one season of the year do the students of this university display any collective animation. At that time the citizens of Toronto are made too painfully aware that there is a university in the center of the city. For the rest of the year students seem to be in a peculiar state of suspended animation.

The university, long heralded as the sentinel of Freedom and the warehouse of Truth and Inquiry, sometimes gives the appearance of a hospital ward whose patients have been given sedatives and lapsed into unconsciousness.

Youth, which is supposed to be the age of ambition, too often needs its high spirits laced with a dash of glamour before its ambition is translated into action. Right now it seems to be in the middle of a long lotus-eating spree.

With the winter term already well-advanced and spring examinations looming on the not too distant horizon, students still seem to be coasting along listlessly, still supporting the mediocre, the petty, the unimportant, while leaving such matters as effective student government to the opportune and the inept.

The Fable Of The Smellyfish And the Jellyfish

The Jellyfish

The jellyfish ain't got no spine
In this it ain't alone,
For many men who seem most strong
Got jellly there for bone.
It ain't the looks
But deeds wot count
And this I find most quaint
I sit and make a list of names
That stand for men who ain't.

The Smellyfish

The smellyfish got lots of spine
In fact its brain is bone
It smells most sweet in "schools" or packs;
It also smells alone.

THE FABLE

The captain and crew, they were happy to find
Were men of both substance and means;
They always prepared their attacks from behind
To stop any shouting or scenes.
At liberal spouting
When out at an outing
And waving of flags they excelled
And yet for such bleating
When in at a meeting
Some members were quickly expelled.
Their motto was simple, and easy to quote
Though others have said, and 'tis here that we note
Their principles were of the worst.
Yet "sans" hesitation
And with acclamation
Give credit where credit is due
At co-ordination.
And administration
Their working was thorough and true.
They called every station
For centralization
For after all man after man
Was happily freed of the choice or the need
Of thinking apart from the plan.
Now here's the submergence
Of over-divergence

Need Planning For Progress, Campbell Says

"The leading problem in democratic planning is the compromising of efficiency and democracy," stated Ralph Campbell, president of the U.C. Lit and Rhodes scholar, at yesterday's U.C. C.C.F. meeting. The meeting was the first discussion group of the newly-formed U.C. club. Ralph Campbell led the discussion on the topic "Is C.C.F. planning democratic?"

Points To Past

"In primitive times everyone worked for the common good of the tribe, and surplus was rare," Campbell said. "As communities grew the relative importance of the individual decreased. With division of labour, planning was necessary and companies were formed."

Campbell differentiated between private enterprise planning and proposed C.C.F. planning: "Individuals in big companies work for themselves in the main. C.C.F. nationalization is proposed for the benefit of the entire community and the entire nation. Their aim is to control the business cycle, which results in alternate depressions and booms".

Discuss Pressure Groups

The problem of "pressure groups" was discussed. Farmers wanted higher prices from a company, and to maintain their profit, the company lowered wages. Workers demanded higher wages and prices to the public had to be raised. The problem of combining efficiency and democracy necessitated the compromising of the two.

"The Liberal party has had two national conventions in the past thirty years, and the desires of small groups within the party have had difficulty in reaching the leaders," Campbell said. "The C.C.F. annual national conventions give everyone an opportunity to air their differences and resolutions are brought to the floor and thoroughly discussed."

Answers Trotskyist

In answer to a member of the Trotskyist party who said that the C.C.F. planning is still capitalism, Campbell pointed out that a program of gradualness is highly preferable over complete change in organization which could result in disorganization.

The desire for bank nationalization to place loans on a qualitative as well as quantitative basis was stressed in the discussion. Loans for building private houses should be given preference over loans to big companies for large-scale movie houses.

Famous Doctor Flies Home; Lectured Specialists Here

By NAN McKENZIE

Dr. Ramon Castroviejo, probably the world's most famous eye doctor flew back home to New York last night after lecturing yesterday at the University of Toronto's Opthamology and Otolaryngology Refresher Course.

The famous doctor answered questions from the press with the same careful precision for which his work is known. Dr. Castroviejo, interested in all specialized eye surgery, has performed many successful cornea transplantation operations. The procedure of this operation has reached standardization only in the last 24 years.

New methods in eye surgery are being tried constantly said the doctor, who believes, as do most surgeons, that good physical condition is a professional necessity. An important and common problem with which researches are now concerned is retrolental fibro plasia—a condition usually found in the eyes of pre-maturely born babies. A tissue layer that should have disappeared at birth is still present behind the pupil of the infant's eye and operations to remove the tissue, commented the doctor, have not been up to now too successful, although in some cases there has been definite improvement.

The doctor, who speaks with a touch of continental accent, is Castilian by birth. The United States has been his home for over 20 years but he received his professional training in Spain. He worked with the Mayo Clinic when he came to America, and later went to New York to practice.

In New York, waiting for him today, besides a full schedule, is a wife and baby daughter.

The University of Toronto's second annual refresher course, at which Dr. Castroviejo yesterday performed and lectured on a cataract operation, is restricted to a registration of 20 ear, eye and nose specialists representing all sections of the country.

Advocate Reforms Of Senate, Taxes, At Liberal Caucus

Ottawa, Jan. 24. (Special to The Varsity). Joe Potts, III UC, was appointed as one of two representatives to the resolutions committee at a meeting of the national executive of the Young Liberal Federation of Canada here today.

Advocate Senate Reform

Potts, who is vice president (Ontario Region) of the Canadian University Liberal Federation, introduced motions advocating immediate consideration of Senate reform and implementation of plank fourteen of the August Liberal platform, which states, "The tax burden should as far as possible be distributed equitably and in accordance with the capacity to pay. In reducing taxes, first consideration should be given to easing the burden of the lower income groups and to reduce those forms of taxation which interfere with freedom of trade, increase the cost of living, restrict incentive, or otherwise discourage the expansion of employment."

Resolution On Education

Among the resolutions passed for submission to the Advisory Council, National Liberal Federation of Canada one related to education, which reads: "The Liberal Party believes in equality of opportunity in education and that University education should not be restricted to any privileged group, but that each individual should have educational opportunity to the full extent of his mental capacity to absorb it profitably. Recognizing, however, that education is constitutionally the responsibility of the provinces, the Liberal Party of Canada, in co-operation with the provinces, is prepared to translate into a reality the principle of equality of educational opportunity by such measures as:

"The continuation and extension of Dominion-Provincial bursaries and scholarships; the encouragement of exchanges of students inter-provincially and internationally; the increase of exemptions in income tax for parents with dependent children undergoing training; and the continuation of per capita grants to universities and vocational training schools on a similar but smaller scale as is presently done under the DVA program."

Debate Approves Finance By State For Universities

The motion, "Resolved that university education should be financed by the state", was passed by a vote of 16-14 yesterday afternoon in the Victoria College Debating Parliament.

Doug Maxwell (III Vic), opening for the government, summed up their arguments under five main heads and thus they remained with little variation throughout the ensuing discussion.

Service To Communities

"Everybody gains so everybody gives", was his coined summary of the proposed plan. He was of the opinion that state intervention with the necessary teaching facilities would be of great service to the community at large, in the case of doctors and many others.

The second and third points of the government were that the present fees act as an unfair barrier which could advantageously be replaced by a test as to aptitude, citizenship and leadership.

The fourth and fifth points were that state aid would make possible more graduate studies and that students, no longer saddled with acute financial worries, would be able to take summer jobs with an eye to the experience they give as well as the money.

The leader of the opposition admitted the existing hard cases but felt that placing the problem in the hands of the state would be "leaping from the frying pan into the fire". Instancing the dearth of scholarship applicants which has recently led the application time to be extended at Queen's and which has built up one scholarship at Harvard to the phenomenal sum of $39,000, she said she felt that more than a mere scholarship or financing plan was called for.

Raps Mass-Produced Education

Saying, "I, for one, have no desire for a mass-produced, factory-type education," she listed the evils which would follow from state aid. She foresaw that crippling taxes would be one certain outcome. Later in the debate, when this point was brought up again Maxwell quoted an eminent American authority to the effect that the war budget had clearly shown that the states were capable of financing anything they really set their minds to.

She also predicted that, since "it is a well-known fact that one is more careful of one's own money" state aid would lead to many cases of people using their university time to lead the gay life and do no studying—for one year at least.

The second speaker for the government quoted figures which showed that DVA students obtained better results than their unaided brethren, however, and saw no reason for supposing that state-aided scholars would not behave likewise.

Chuck Tompkins (IV St. Mike's) raised the objection that since a university is a place for thought, state financing would mean state control of the country's thought and he cited examples of this in countries where state financing had been tried. This point led to considerable and sometimes heated discussion from the house.

Small Quantity, But—

Wonderful Quality At School Of Nursing

By NAN McKENZIE

If it were not for the fact that the demand is far greater than the supply, a lot of Varsity men would be marrying students or graduates from the University of Toronto School of Nursing. But, as things now stand, the hospital more than the home needs the young women who study at the little school house at 7 Queen's Park. It is tough to get them to say "Yes", anyway.

Study Everything!

For a few minutes let's imagine married life with a School of Nursing grad—a young woman who has just completed a five-year course of study which gives her a firm grounding in most of the social sciences, a few of the practical sciences and every phase of nursing. For her efforts in studying English, history, psychology, chemistry, zoology, philosophy, physiology, bacteriology, preventive medicine, nutrition, social welfare, education, sociology, hygiene, and for hours of duty in hospitals throughout the city, she is awarded the degree B. Sc. N.

Potent Potions

After all that study she is really equipped for marriage as well as nursing. Hubby gets up Monday morning feeling under the weather and ready to crawl back into bed; the little woman leaves for the moment her preparation of the Balanced Breakfast, whips off to the medicine cabinet, returns with a spoonful of something which sends him on his way to the office with gay step. No dull breakfast conversations either. With her liberal education she can exchange views on any topic you may wish to discuss.

With the specialized care you would get from a nurse-wife you could expect to add a few years to your normal life span and that of your children.

Graduates of the School of Nursing are not ordinary nurses. They are equipped to handle supervisory work in any hospital. Their main responsibility is to supervise the nursing staff. So, if you don't feel up to it you can always detail your wife for the breadwinning job.

Apart from the degree course given by the school there is a three-year course for Registered Nurses. At present there are 242 women studying at the school. Of these, 72 are taking the degree course and the rest are R.N.'s studying their choice of five courses: clinical supervision, nursing education, nursing education and administration, public health nursing, general or advanced.

"New Look" For Course

The first graduates from the degree course, which was started in 1946 (it used to be a three-year course) will be leaving college in 1951. If you'll be patient, we can have a mass wedding ceremony in the spring of 5T1.

Where's My Black Book?

Then while our wives are off to work we can talk about their pet college likes and dislikes. About the residence piano that was never tuned. (Incidentally, the residence addresses for the girls who wear the white shoes, stockings and caps, and the royal blue dresses, are: 7 Queen's Park and an annex on Grenville Street.)

Another thing that all School of Nursing grads will remember is the holiday system. In their first year they enjoyed the regular university Christmas holidays with three months during the summer. In second year they only took it easy for two months in summer. Third and fourth years were a bit tougher to take—only one Christmas week and one summer month. In their final year the girls have it all over the rest of the university as they take a six-month vacation.

Varied Activities

Most of all, apart from the 13 amiable lecturers, the girls will remember the annual sporting and social functions. Everybody gets a chance to play basketball and baseball. In the fall of each year was the Hard Times Party which attracted a large percentage of the male student body. On top of the numerous class parties were the Uniform Dinner and Skit Night, the Christmas party, and best of all the School At-Home. This year the girls will be at-home on March 1 out at the Kingsway Club. Round up three dollars and a nursing student—and we'll see you there.

McGILL DEBATERS DEFEATED

Montreal, Jan. 24 — CUP — The McGill Debating Society team has just completed an undefeated tour of Britain, during which they competed at Glasgow, Bristol, Birmingham and London universities.

The team consists of Isidore Rosenfeld, Sydney Phillips and Ted Hugesson.

No decision resulted from the debate in which they took part at Oxford, since the two teams exchanged one member each. The Canadians were described as the best speakers who had visited Oxford in recent years.

Phillips and Rosenfeld will arrive home tomorrow, but Hugesson intends to remain in England until later in the week.

Women In Education Are Standing Up

Editorial

Something For Nothing

Is the teaching profession becoming more like a trade and less like a profession?

Some people are maintaining that the recent upheaval in the teaching world is giving a bad aroma to this old and established profession while those who have taught for years and others who understand the situation feel that these indications of discontent demand public attention.

The main point to be understood is that in the hands of the teachers today lies the training and education of the men and women of tomorrow. If the moulders of the coming generation are not considered worthy of a decent salary then we must stop to take stock of ourselves. Those values for which we have stood for are being tossed aside for a mere pittance when we consider the full import of the problem.

We must consider not only the training that the teacher must undergo but the constant maintenance of patience and understanding for all at all times. To this task has been added in recent years the responsibility ordinarily taken by the home. With larger communities this is not unexpected but the problem remains, for those who must bear the extra burden are not recompensed with even a living wage.

It is all very well to howl about the poor taxpayers but those that kick the most are the very people who will not take the responsibility for their own children at home and then turn about and criticize the teacher for misunderstanding "Johnny's" misdemeanors.

And so it goes . . . There is one thing, however, that the women are objecting to. The male teachers at one school have suggested that they should be recognized for their extra curricular work in sports. They claimed that the extra hours put in are not put in by the women. Here is a minor point for disagreement but we hope this is only trivial.

Large Variety Of Jobs Held Out To Highly Trained Social Workers

If social work is your ambition, it doesn't seem to be a good idea to cut your education short. Asked if it is possible to work for a year or two before entering the School of Social Work, Mrs. Joy Martin Jocelyn, case worker with the Infants' Homes of Toronto, advised that except for financial reasons, a candidate should not seek employment with one of the agencies which employs people without the degree of Master of Social Work.

Mrs. Jocelyn was the speaker at the third in the series of vocational guidance talks sponsored by the Victoria College Women's Alumnae Association. At after dinner coffee in Annesley Hall she outlined the possibilities for a vocation in the field of social work.

At first the first people to undertake any kind of social work, Mrs. Jocelyn said, were well meaning Englishwomen who years ago visited poor homes with gifts and advice. Today social work is a profession, and the breach between workers and clients has narrowed down considerably. Social work aims at helping people in difficult situations to lead more satisfying and helpful lives. A prime requisite in entering social work is that you like people as they are without any great desire to change them or to have them like you.

The main fields of social work are organizing, case work, and research. The organizational worker is concerned with expansion and promotion of welfare in communities. Besides work in the whole community there is work in groups, in settlements, camps, recreation, and the YWCA. Case work deals with individuals, families, children, prisons, schools and hospitals. The problems to be solved in this area are due to emotional difficulties or to environment, such as housing difficulties or unemployment. Research is based on sociological or psychological studies and from the cases on file in the offices of social workers. There is a great need for more research workers, as the social workers at present are too occupied with practical work to devote much time to research.

Most social work institutions require a degree from a recognized school of social work, of which about half a dozen exist in Canada. The Toronto school asks a BA degree for entrance, with courses in Sociology, Psychology, Economics and Political Science. These may be taken in extension courses if necessary. The school has a two year course as well as a research problem which usually requires a summer's work. The graduates receive the degree of Master of Social Work, and a Bachelor's degree is given at the end of the first year. Scholarships and bursaries are obtainable for the second year and for further work.

The starting salaries in social work are now on a par with high be about $2,400 a year with an increase of $100. Married women are school teaching, and will probably acceptable for positions, but, as Mrs. Jocelyn added with a twinkle in her eye, your husband needs to be interested in your job and to be able to cook. There is not much opportunity of working with men, although the chances are getting better, as the enrolment at the Toronto school this year is about 50 per cent male.

DISTAFF SIDE

By PAULA ZUMSTEIN

"The skiing was excellent in Montreal this weekend", so said Isobel Ward, make-up member of the All Varsity Revue. While Varsity students at home glared out their windows on Saturday morning and blinked in the warm spring sun, the Varsityites in Montreal shuddered to think of the long slow trip in a driving, snow storm the night before. While we thought disconsolately of our new Varsity House near the bare hills of Collingwood, the Carabins entertained their guests with tales of the University of Montreal Ski Hostel at St. Sauveur. Every weekend students can use the facilities of the Hostel, paying only for their meals. A few of the hosts and hostesses went up to ski on Sunday and just came back in time to bid their guests "Adieu". Ah, yes, our neighbours in the big sunny south have nothing on us this year.

The disconsolate and depressed looks of our students, wandering through the dark corridors (we haven't got six and a half miles) are not just exam and essay blues; it is the grey skies overhead and the mud and ice underfoot. It is amusing to watch the men finally do a spread-eagle on the ice but it would be infinitely preferable to have to charge through six foot snow drifts.

The snow and cold have their effect on the Carabins. Many men wear fur coats. There they cannot achieve the distinction that Joe Potts received with his coon, almost unique on our campus. Beaver, muskrat and coon are all popular with the Montreal students. The women on the campus wear about the same proportion of fur and cloth coats as we do but have one distinguishing feature. They wear drop-earrings.

The snow and cold did not, however, have any effect on the Carabins' hospitality to their Toronto guests. Indeed, the Torontonians might take a lesson from our friends sun, te Varsityites in Montreal spirit of hospitality which characterized their attitude was a revelaton. One Montreal family, with eight children (one of them was writing off a university exam Saturday morning) thought it no trouble at all to take in three visiting coeds. On all sides, there was an attitude of eagerness to please, of willingness to go to any amount of trouble to please the Varsityites.

Just Around The Corner

Greenwich Village Lives Within City, Preserves Old And New Craftsmanship

By JANET HARBRON

Have you some time to spare? Do you like shopping? Are you intrigued by atmosphere and pleasant surprises If the answer to any of these questions is yes, then you must visit Greenwich Village. A ten minute walk from the campus, it lies buried in the little considered heart of Toronto. The limits of the village are hard to define, but its atmosphere extends in the direction of Gerrard, Elizabeth and Bay streets.

ATMOSPHERE

It has a fascinating and substantial history. Some has been told already, some has probably never been printed or will be.

Originally a residential district of old Toronto, it began one hundred and twenty-eight years ago when the houses on La Plant street were built similar to each other in style and construction. As the city moved north the rents of this small section were gradually lowered. Artists and writers took over because studios and rooms were available and cheap.

Mary Johns tea-room was the first shop in the district providing sandwiches for nurses and doctors from near-by hospitals, while the upstairs rooms were rented to artists and art students. Rudy Renzius who now teaches at Pickering College moved into number sixty-five Gerrard street. His craft was metal-working and while he has left the village as a home, his articles are still on sale in various shops. Ernest Hemingway apparently lived here at one time. Many people have come and gone. Some such as the Sea Captain's Shop have moved to Bloor Street, others have returned to the village atmosphere.

RARITIES

Today the array of little specialty shops indicates that there is some support for Canadian arts. For here are Canadian craftsmen attempting to fill the need for art in Canada. For example Nancy Meek and her husband John Pockok work original designs in silver and gold. Personal jewellry designed to individual taste is often made with Canadian gems such as amazonite; these are highly polished stones which come from Bancroft. At present the Pockoks are preparing Canadian wildflower designs for an exhibition in Montreal. One particularly eye-catching piece was a brooch fashioned into a cluster of Indian pipes.

Albert Frank who has exhibited in the Royal Academy is also a member of the village. Some of his Canadian paintings are being shown now at the International Cinema.

ANTIQUES

If you are interested in the old as well as the new there is a group of little antique shops. The Old York has part of the Minton set dated about 1851 and made for Queen Victoria at the time of her wedding to Prince Albert. Here Clifford Trevor does very special work in porcelain restoration and material comes from all over Canada to this skilled craftsman.

THE MAYOR

Or perhaps you would be attracted by the Pink House where the unofficial mayor of the village lives. The Pink House in Georgian style was at one time a coach house and is one of the oldest buildings in the district.

If you are interested in fortune-telling then Mrs. Adams is the person to visit. She is an Aura reader, telling fortunes not by cards or tea-cups but by the emanations of your personality. Intriguing isn't it?

FRIENDLY VILLAGE

This is a neighborly village in the Music please, Announcer: "Blah, blah, blah! No other cigarette can make this statement!" And we should hope not! If we ever smoked a cigarette that could, we'd be scared stiff. Imagine the blood-curdling screams when it went up in smoke! This world is getting a little too complicated for us. It's bad enough trying to smoke a Camel, or a Chesterfield, but when we have to contend with a conversational cigarette, that's too much! Boy, our hookah, we're going to blow bubbles!

VIC'S CORNER

We sat by the hour, but still we felt dumb
We waited and waited, but nothing would come
With a Corner to write and way past midnite,
We were worried and tired and losing our sight
But then an idea! At last it had come,
We shouted for joy and wept in our rum,
For rich or for poor, for better or worse,
If we must write Vic's Corner, we'll have to use verse.

* * *

We've heard of a case ... uhh sorry, no; beer,
That needless to say is indeed very queer.
At the Arts talent hunt on Thursday just past,
A Skuleman was caught, (though it won't be the last)
Who gave as his College ... (this boy was no fool)
Victoria, no less ... NOT the house of the TOOL.
Like thousands of others, he'd just gone astray,
And was wishfully pretending, if for only a day

For the Vic At-Home, favours will be given at the door.
The girls will get flowers; we can't offer more
So now don't buy corsages, they're strictly taboo.
The question's been settled. We leave it to you.
The floor show is ready, the tickets are sold.
(Got one of the 600? Protect it like gold).
Looking ahead we can only exclaim,
That this year's affair will live up to its name
"The Dance of Distinction is THE dance of the year Bert Niosi, NO corsages, next week, Palace Pier."

For the people who signed the bus service list,
Here's a little announcement that shouldn't be missed —
Pick up your tickets, but not right away,
In the V.C.U. Thursday .. and you don't have to pay.

* * *

Each noon hour Friday, we're proud to disclose,
Your College Exec. have lined up some shows.
On Friday last week they charged you a dime,
To pay for the pictures, but that's the last time
The policy henceforth, and on this we'll agree
Is that noon hour programmes in Vic will be free
Like the owl in that letter, "Here's a word to the wise",
Be there this Friday. We've got a surprise.
And if you are curious like the proverbial cat,
Watch the Bulletin Board Thursday. Now let's leave it at that.

Oh pity! Oh shame! Alas! And Alack!
The desire is gone, I can't get it back

So if you will kindly pinch yourself and come down from those ethereal heights of aesthetic ecstacy to which you were undoubtedly carried by these musical meanderings we will continue the Corner in a little less lilting manner.

The Parlez-Vous (Woo! Woo!) Francais Club reminds us that a meeting of wide and varied interest will take place in Wymilwood on Wednesday at 7.45 p.m. A French Lyric song recital by Miss Mary Morrison will be followed by skits, games and refreshments Everyone is invited.

* * *

And finally a note from the Music Club (If unable to catch the pun in that line on first reading, please re-read until overcome by spasms of uncontrolled laughter).

The Glee Club Concert will be presented in the Museum Theatre February 3 and 4. The concert is entitled "Fiv Hundred Years of Music", but for unatelly does not require that length of time to present Why not ask you, At Home date to the Glee Club Concert for a pleasant evening of musical entertainment? Tickets will go on sale in Vic tomorrow and will remain there as long as they are available.

* * *

"Sir, I admit your general rule,
That every poet is a fool;
But you yourself may serve to show it,
That every fool is not a poet."

Until next time then, when the Corner will probably return to lesser levels of insanity I remain poetically yours.

60 YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

1889 1949

This is the type of street car used in 1889. It ran on iron rails spiked to long timbers. Today street cars are bigger, faster, safer, more comfortable. Nickel has helped to make them so. Their frames, springs and many mechanical parts are made of nickel alloy steels to provide toughness, long life, and great strength with light weight.

How Nickel Benefits Canada

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.

These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

John Coveart

Artistry . . . beauty . . . expression . . . sentiment . . . abstract terms? Perhaps, but the young Toronto pianist John Coveart, in his Wymilwood recital Sunday evening made them almost tangible realities. From the majestic Rummel arrangement of Bach's "Jesus Christ the Son of God" with which he appropriately opened the recital to the nostalgic "Volles" of Debussy, John Coveart maintained the same pinpoint clarity and precision of style throughout his entire program. With the Chopin Sonata in B minor the whole piano, strings, hammers, keyboard, pedals and all seemed to live, dancing madly to the allegro, skipping to the scherzo, reclining graciously in the largo, and escaping in wild terror with the finale.

The third part of the program might have been titled "Moods", for the four modern pieces served as profiles of contemporary composers of various nationalities: Albeniz, Gershwin, Debussy and Dohnanyi. Three encores followed.

So adequately does Mr. Coverat betray his emotions and convey his sentiments, yet not visibly but purely audibly, that one is immediately convinced of his perfect suitability to the piano as his chosen medium.

TIME FOR FUN

At Christmas the row of big candles decorating Gerrard Street was a joint effort on the part of the villagers and for this reason was one of the most intriguing Christmas displays in the city.

A New Year's party was held at the Old York Shop, everybody brought something, candelabra from some, cutlery from others and poeple that couldn't bring goods helped to cook. Many Toronto artists attended and the party was considered a great success.

For a stimulating change of atmosphere do visit these busy and interesting people.

The Varsity Invites SAC To Play BB

A defiant challenge guaranteed to rock the sports-world came from the offices of The Varsity last night, in the form of an invitation to the S.A.C. to step onto the Basketball court to face the staff of the student daily.

Sports moguls Harrison and Westcott expressed confidence in the ability of the newsmen to whip the SAC'ers, reportedly enfeebled from long discussions over fees and IUS-NFCUS affiliation. The game would afford ample opportunity for Messrs. Gwynne - Timothy, Potts, Suddick, and Love to prove they can share rebounds as well as space in the paper, and snipe at backboards as well as at the Board Governors.

The Varsity revealed that it would abide by the non-discrimination clause by permitting men, women and other SAC members to participate in the game of the year.

Already those "in the know" in betting circles are quoting the newsmen as 15 point favourites. The reason is easily seen by glancing down the roster of the paper boys, where such renowned hoopsters as "Easy Ed" Voight, John "Buckets" Kennedy, "Hoops" Harrison and "Goon" McGuire , are listed.

The SAC and its satellites committees boast such capable cagers as "Dribbler" Davey (whose bull-like rushes have time and time again brought the crowd in Little Vic Gym to its feet), Doug "Free" Love, the foul shot artist, and "Galloping G. T.," the pride of Trinity.

Although outside promoters expressed eagerness to stage the game at one of the huge downtown sport-palaces which could house the anticipated throngs, it is understood that in deference to the wishes of fans who would be unable to bear the cost of such a journey, the two teams will remain on the campus despite the financial losses entailed.

The Varsity challenge was prompted by refusals from top American quintets such as Kentucky, N.Y.U., and St. Louis to meet the Newsmen. The only excuse offered was that studies did not permit the scholarly basketeers from participating in such extra-sports activities.

Harrison, hesitant to commit himself on the outcome of the match, finally admitted under pressure that he felt that his men could even drub the SAC'ers on snowshoes. Westcott paused long enough from drafting plays to announce cooly that "we'll moida da bums".

The SAC reply is expected momentarily.

First-Place Junior Blues Meet Corner Boys Tonight

By ED. SOKOLOWSKI

The only Varsity hockey squad that is in top place at the moment is the Bill Wade-coached Varsity Junior team. The Juniors will get a chance to increase their lead in the Junior B circuit when they meet the Corner Boys in the second game of a double-header in the Varsity Arena tonight. The first game will be between the second-place Marlboros and the cellar-holders, St. Michael's College Buzzers.

The Blue Bees will attempt to extend their undefeated streak to five in a row tohight, while the Corner Boys have yet to hit the win column since the new year. This will be the third meeting of the two teams in the latter part of the season and in both previous games the Blue Bees emerged the victors.

The first meeting of the two teams proved to be a rough and tumble affair that Varsity just managed to win by a 4-3 score. Bill Wade's Juniors ran away with the second encounter by a score of 8-2. The Corner Boys play a rough type of game and have the rugged players to get away with it. The Juniors on the other hand usually stick to a fast brand of hockey but they can be rough if need be.

There has been plenty of rivalry between the two clubs and the game should be packed with excitement.

Looking after the nets for the Bees, is goal-tender Leuty who has come up with some fine puck stopping in the last few games. On the defence, MacClement and Porky MacDougal have the weight to dish out good body checks. Both of these men have also sparkled offensively and in the last couple of tilts have taken part in the scoring.

Al Conboy, Jack Raftis and Artie Holmes are a sure-fire line that B. Wade sends out whenever the Blues are in need of goals. Norm Fox centres with wingmates, Blake Sinclair and Bill Walters, to give coach Wade another potent trio. The team is loaded with reserve men and can count on any of the following to get on the ice and play hockey: Phil Arrowsmith, Vernon, Simms, Prendergast, Hyde and subgoalie Milne.

The Blues hold a four-point lead over the second-place Marlboro team and a win tonight will give them a firmer hold on that top rung. This game is free to all students of the University on presentation of the admit-to-lecture cards at the door. If you missed the game last Friday here is a chance to see the Varsity third team battling for a win.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB JONES

The time has come, Coach Bailey said,
To talk of many things,
Of scoring goals, and winning games,
And checking on the wings;
The hockey crown we ne'er will wear
With all your shortcomings.

Though the ice-borne Blues still sport a respectable .600 average, indications are that the team is going from bad to worse. In two '49 home games they have managed to squeeze out a win over the hapless Queen's team and absorb a 6-2 beating at the hands of the McGill Redmen.

That does not argue well for their chances when they again take to the road and attempt to overtake the onrushing U of M. Carabins.

From all accounts (at least, from local accounts) the Blues outplayed the Montrealers in losing on Friday but that doesn't bring in points, and we can remember an earlier game the Blues won 5-2 despite the fact that their efforts were equalled if not surpassed by the opposition. The week-end loss was in part attributable to the inspired netminding of "Legs" Gelineau, who put on one of his old-time displays to dazzle, among others, Baldy Cotton, erstwhile scout of the Boston Bruins.

And the remedy? Well, it's Ace's problem. The ferocity of Toronto's third period drive indicates that the team is not short on conditioning. But it would appear that the roster is about five men shy of Senior Hockey calibre. Player shifts have not solved the problem. No one can claim that the team is short on spirit. Anyway, the situation is far from hopeless; the championship's still here and it'll take a good team to abduct it.

The basketball Blues appear to have rounded into form at an opportune time. With the league opener against Western one short week away, they picked on Ontario's sharpest collegiate quintet to gain their first win of the season. The benefits of the gruelling lessons which the team learned in exhibition games south of the border, were in full evidence on Saturday eve as Assumption's hand-picked Raiders were edged in a thriller.

Freddy Thomas demonstrated, in a losing cause, just why he is Ontario's Mister Basketball, and gave a startling exhibition of ball handling despite Varsity's close checking. Sharing the spotlight with the coloured speedster were a couple of little pepper-pots name of Glen Pettinger and Eddie Brennan. Pettinger's sure-fire lay-up shots were the perfect complement to Brush-cut Brennan's aggressive checking display. Aggressive is the word for the Blues' style of play. Look out Western! ! !

Sportswoman

HOCKEY

Despite a spirited rally by St. Hilda's II in the last two periods, Meds kept the lead throughout winning by a 3-2 count yesterday.

Meds skated circles around the Saints in the first period scoring two goals. The first goal was netted by Mary Struthers on a pass from Irene Hain who racked up the next point assisted by Kay Batanoff.

Either Wheaties or 'Pep' Talk

Coming back on for the second period, the Trinity quintet seemed rejuvenated. Only the fast-skating and back-checking of the able Meds defence kept them from scoring several times. The persistent Saints kept pressing and were finally rewarded when Anne Chaffe, assisted by Helen Wilson, scored with one minute to go in the period.

Play in the last frame was parallel to the scoring—one goal apiece. The Meds goal by Kay Batanoff tallied due to a fumble by Joan Beattie in the Trinity net who otherwise played a first class game. Close behind the 'Docs', The Saints upped their score a few minutes later on a breakaway. Although the males netminder stopped the first shot, Ruth Hinton tucked the rebounding puck into the corner of the net past the prostrate goalie.

The brand of hockey displayed in this third league game does credit to the enthusiastic players and the hard-working coaches. There were few 'sit-downs' only two penalties, and some effective team plays used, especially by Meds.

Athletic Night

Watch Cagey Blues Boxers, Dancers Go

To quote Jim Coleman or Ted Reeve, "Who has tickets for us?" That may be the situation for this athletic night in Hart House. Small wonder if there are not enough tickets to go round when you sharpen up and realize that this is the day to polish up your "Beat Western" button.

The "untamed" steeds of Metras (sounds silly, doesn't it) are here again but this time the old mare is bringing along her colt in the hopes of saving a little face. Of course the Blues will be running around cagey-like, demonstrating the latest bronco-busting techniques so . . . it's anybody's guess who will triumph but those hoopla boys of ours looked pretty sharp last Saturday night against Assumption.

That's the main attraction next Saturday night but since it is next to impossible to give everyone a front row seat for this event an all-round side program has been planned. It is hoped that by the time the evening is over that you will be able to give the answers to these questions.

Where do the Highlanders get all that wind? Who has been guarding the fencing room door to prevent Metras from burning up the Yates Cup picture? Who is the fastest swimmer in the Intramural swim league Since when did they start using the gymnasium for gymnastics? Who is the most beautiful woman in the house?

These questions and many more will be answered for you if you take your host's advice and drop in to see what's going on in the fencing room, boxing room, wrestling, pool, and upper gym. Your hosts, the embryo doctors and dentists, know that you will want to dance so arrangements have been made to clear the floor rapidly after the game and it is hoped this will give you lots of time before midnight.

Hart House will be in a frenzy if those Blues can do it again. Who said, "Trample Toronto"?

(Ed. note—This was written by one of your hosts, a Dents-(ouch) - man and he should know.)

Blues Squash 7 Defeat Redmen, Lose To US Team

Montreal, Jan. 24—(Special)—In an invitation squash meet held at McGill on Friday and Saturday, Varsity won six matches from McGill and lost one, and were in turn defeated by Dartmouth by a similar score.

All the Toronto-Dartmouth matches were closely contested, the majority going to the fifth game before the winner was decided. John Roy was the only Toronto player to register a double win. He defeated John Raalte, Dartmouth, by a 3-2 count.

Roy, Ernie Howard and Ed Ross, all members of the Varsity ssuash team, played in the Canadian Open Squash meet in Ottawa, Friday, where they came up against top players from Canada and the United States. All three lost their matches but gave their opponents a tough time. Ross almost upset third-seeded L. Snelling of Ottawa who had to go to five games to defeat him.

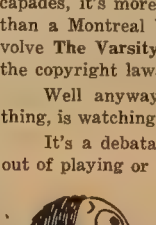
BOB HENRY APPEARS OFTEN

Bob Henry, scoring-wise right winger on the Varsity Blues, has figured in every scoring play the Blues have made in their last two games. Against Queen's, he picked up three goals and an assist, and against McGill he scored once and assisted on the other.

on the sideline

By JOAN EDDIS

When one sits down to write one's column and one has not one idea on what one should write, what should one write? One should write on the sideline, right?



What can one write on the sideline? Oh, plenty.

Sitting on the sideline every day at lunch hour are at least 30 men seeking entertainment. And they are entertained.

It's better than the ice follies, it's better than the ice capades, it's more fun than New Year's Eve, it's more fun than a Montreal Week-end. (Now please, don't anyone involve The Varsity in a law suit. We're not infringing on the copyright laws, really we aren't!)

Well anyway, this thing wot's more fun than anything, is watching the girls' hockey games.

It's a debatable point whether the girls get more fun out of playing or the boys out of watching.

Watching girls play hockey.

Ah, some skeptics among our readers. Not enough thrills, you say? What can be more thrilling than sitting on the edge of your seat to see whether that player breaking away past the defense will be able to skate as far as the goal. And if that isn't thrilling enough for you, what about the suspense of wondering whether she'll still have the puck when she does get there?

If it's laughs you're after, our hockey has as many as a normal person can stand.

STUPENDOUS CONTEST

Send no money, no box tops, just a copy of this column along with your letter telling why you enjoy girls' hockey to Box 999, The Varsity.

Prizes galore. A year's subscription to The Varsity will be awarded to the 10 top entries and the GRAND PRIZE winner will have his autographed by the Women's Sports Editor so that he can keep it forever in his scrapbook and show it to his children.

Hurry, hurry, hurry. There are only a limited number of copies available and entries must be in by midnight some night. Remember the great prizes.

Even if you feel you haven't sufficient literary talent to enter this prize-filled contest, come to see us play. You'll enjoy yourself and we appreciate your support.

Gelber Condemns Policy Under Bevin

Raps Britain For Program In Palestine

The resolution condemning the present British government policy towards Palestine was unheld by a vote of 35 to 34 in the Hart House Debate last night.

Denounces Britain

A. K. Dixon, UC, first speaker for the House, introduced the resolution. In his introductory speech he said that the particular part of British Foreign policy which deals with the Palestine question is inept and inadequate.

Now that India is independent, the Suez canal and surrounding area is not strategically important. Dixon further expressed the belief, that by supporting the Arab League, Britain is emphasizing the conflict to such an extent that war may result, and that the Arabs and the Jews would have come to an agreement already if it were not for British support of the Arabs.

Britain Acting Wisely

First Speaker for the Opposition was J. Peters, UC, who said that Britain's policy in Palestine is activated by a spirit of fair play towards all. He declared that under the covenant of the UN, Britain accepted two responsibilities: 1. to instruct the Arabs in self-government, and 2. to provide a national home for the Jews. Britain fulfilled both of these obligations, Peters said, but when the Israelis were given an inch, they took a mile. He maintained that Jewish extremists in Palestine are trying for expansion, therefore to protect the Arabs against this, Britain has acted wisely in withholding recognition of Israeli as a state.

Supports Motion

J. E. Eberle, SMC, second speaker in support of the motion, expressed the opinion that the main consideration of British foreign policy in Palestine is control of oil and naval bases. The means taken towards these ends, he said, have been badly played power politics. Eberle went on to say that Britain's appeasement of the Arabs has resulted in the continuance of unrest almost to the point of war. In this Britain has blundered, he said, because if war comes to the Near East, Britain's control of oil and naval bases there will not be solidified. Eberle quoted Harold J. Laski, a former British Labor Party leader, as condemning Bevin's policy in Palestine.

Oppose Communism

J. E. F. Hastings, Faculty of Medicine, second speaker for the opposition, said that the problem must be taken in its context with world conditions. He said that there are two ideologies in world thought today, and that we must uphold the Western ideology against Communism. At present the countries in the Near East are friendly to the west, he declared, and Britain is acting to keep them that way. He said he believes, that by throwing the Arabs into the camp of the Russians, or by allowing a pro-communist government in Palestine, a threat to the Western democracies would exist in the Middle East. In the face of wavering U.S. policy, Hastings said, Britain has taken a firm stand.

After discussion from the floor was heard, Marvin Gelber, Guest Speaker gave an exposition of the Arab position, the Jewish position and the British position. In drawing conclusions from the facts he had outlined, Mr. Gelber said,

"It is now evident to all that Mr. Bevin's Palestine policy, which he has been pursuing with great vigour for three and a half years, has not served British interest. The entente cordiale between the Jews of Pales-

Appoint James New President For Federation

Hamilton, Jan. 26 —(CUP)— Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of McGill University is now honorary president of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Douglas G. Seldon, Secretary of NFCUS, said yesterday that Dr. James had replied to an invitation to take over the post, saying he was "delighted to accept".

The collaboration between NFCUS and the National Conference of Canadian Universities, had been fruitful in the past, Dr. James said, and that he would try to preserve that collaboration and to assist the federation in any way he could.

Employment Situation Is Subject of Lecture By Supervisor Gibson

G. A. L. Gibson, Regional supervisor of the National Employment Service will address the graduate and undergraduate body of the university in a series of two lectures commencing Feb. 3. Mr. Gibson will describe the functioning of the National Employment Service in connection with the universities.

Gibson graduated from University College in 1920, was Secretary of the Alumni Society from 1922-26 and President of the University College Alumni Association in 1945-46.

SAC Committee Sees Smith To Talk Over Fees Problem; Council Hears of New Edict

Student Meetings In Lecture Hours Banned By Caput

In future student meetings in University buildings will be prohibited between 9 and 1 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, the Students' Administrative Council learned in a letter from the Caput read at last night's meeting.

Asks For Clarification

The move came as a result of a meeting of the Caput, January 18, when President Smith asked for clarification of the policy being followed in the use of University buildings by students during academic hours.

The Caput felt the clarification of policy was necessary to "insure that the instructional periods of the University are not seriously interfered with by meetings which would attract students from lecture and laboratory classes."

Section 79 of the University of Toronto Act gives the Caput jurisdiction over student conduct in all matters arising in their respective college buildings and grounds, including residences. However, responsibility for student conduct in all federated colleges will be the responsibility of the councils of these faculties and schools.

Student Applications

Any application from any student group or organization to hold a meeting in a college or building of a faculty or school must be addressed to the Head of the college or faculty. Groups wishing to hold meetings in Hart House, Royal Ontario Museum and Hart House Theatre must apply to the warden of Hart House, the Secretary of the Museum board and the manager of Hart House Theatre respectively. All other applications to hold meetings in buildings not designated in the foregoing section must be made to the Superintendent's Office in Simcoe Hall.

New Decree

The new decree of the Caput reads as follows: "In no case will permission to any student group or organization for the holding of a meeting between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. and between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and between 9 p.m. and 1 p.m. on Saturday when the university is in session in any such University building be grant-

SAC Raps Red Charge

Late last night, the S.A.C. rapped the recent statements, made by Pres. Watson Kirkconnell of Acadia University, that the U. of T. is a "hotbed of communism". By a unanimous vote, the following resolution was passed: "That the Students' Administrative Council of the University of Toronto go on record as strongly deploring unfounded and unproven statements which reflect unfavorably on this University."

This refers specifically to a recent statement which President Kirkconnell of Acadia University is reported to have made. This council feels "that the statement that the University of Toronto is a 'hotbed of communism' is gross misrepresentation of fact, and that it strongly resents such implications about the University being made without supporting evidence."

ISS Opens Drive To Provide Money For D.P. Students

The ISS campaign to raise money to provide scholarships for foreign students and to give material aid to impoverished and war-devastated countries will begin on Feb. 7. The campaign will last five days, finishing up with a large roam-around dance on Friday evening, Feb. 11.

The campaign will open on Monday with the selling of tickets which allows the purchaser admittance to all the shows and entertainment going on on the campus until Friday evening. These tickets will cost $1.00 and will entitle the purchasers to what the committee heads say is entertainment worth far more than a dollar.

In conjunction with the one dollar tickets a tag day will be held on

Fees Group Hopes To Send Brief To Queen's Park

The Students' Administrative Council's Fees Brief is scheduled to make another appearance before the Board of Governors of the University tonight.

The brief will be presented by President Smith with a recommendation that it be forwarded to the Hon. Dana Porter, Provincial Minister of Education.

Meet With Smith

The move was announced at last night's SAC meeting when Jane Hazard, chairman of the SAC fees committee, reported a meeting held earlier this week in the president's office. The president, she said, assured the fees committee that the brief would be submitted to a meeting of the Board of Governors scheduled to be held tonight. The president indicated he would also try to arrange an appointment for the fees committee with the Hon. Dana Porter, she added. Miss Hazard said she hoped action on the fees brief "will now be rapid."

"President Smith discussed the report with the committee," she said, "and approved the general ideas contained in it. He will notify the fees committee after the brief is discussed by the Board of Governors."

"We hope that in the near future we shall have some opinion on it from the provincial government," she added.

Sees Hope

SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, who was among the group which saw the president, said the president "was most co-operative in promising to inform the Minister of Education that members of the Council will seek an interview with him to discuss the brief."

Goethe Wrote Simply, Influenced Moderns, Says Barker Fairley

Goethe's interest in science and his approach to life based on the observation of nature are especially significant in showing his relation to the present, Prof. Barker Fairley of the UC German Department said in a lecture at Vic yesterday.

Goethe spent a great deal of his time in scientific experiment and realized that all studies must be united in a common aim. "Goethe stays abreast of modern literature and thought and we can not look on him as a figure of the past," said Prof. Fairley.

The language used by Goethe is simple and seems to talk to us directly, and linguistically he seems our contemporary, the speaker pointed out.

Goethe's interest in social theory appears most noticeably in "Wilhelm Meister" in which he criticizes his society and suggests reforms. Prof. Fairley said that conditions in Goethe's time were similar to those today as old institutions were crumbling and the individual had to work out new standards.

Prof. Fairley stressed Goethe's influence on subsequent writers down to the present, two of these being Thomas Mann and George Bernard Shaw.

Physical Ed Show

Say Health's-a-Poppin' Show Best Ever

Entertainment minded "fizzed-ders" have whipped up a conglomeration of acts ranging from a slack wire performer through singing and joke routines to a dance pantomime. The show, P. & H.E.'s second annual "Health's-a-Poppin'", is directed by Jack Life. The scripts are written by its participants.

The production will follow the same general lines as last year's success. It will be remembered that the first edition of "Health's-a-Poppin'" was invited to perform at Ajax, and that several of the acts appeared in the All-Varsity Revue.

One of the highlights of a reputedly very highlit show is a Duffy's Tavern act, which features Fred Sgambati as Duffy.

Another highlight: the pantomime of Peter and the Wolf, narrated by Al Affleck and including in its cast, Bill Danylchak, of Varsity Blues fame, the wolf of the piece.

The show will include professional talent, John Laxton presents his slack wire act and the three high hand balancers go into their routine. The slack wire act was the big highlight in last year's show.

Those who attended the "All-Varsity" dance will remember the "Penguins at the Waldorf" act which will be included in the show. Cam Bell is billed as the "Frankie Lane" of the campus and some close harmony is promised when the singing waiters come on.

Miss Betty Johnson and John Kilpatrick are featured singers who combine their talents in the duet "Bess You Is My Woman" from "Porgy and Bess".

Four football heroes have an act of their own. Ian Clarke (captain of last year's Varsity Blues), John Shore, Tommy Waldon and Ted Toogood (winner of last year's Most Popular Player Trophy) are being coached by Ruth Pullan this time.

Dancing plays a major role in the curriculum of the girls at PHE and advance notices claim this year's dance routine, and not least the girls, are "supreme." Dances are both chorus and interpretive and include a number by the "Can-Can" girls. Betty Moore Papeau directs the dances.

Hotbeds of Communism?

According to the president of Acadia University, Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, Varsity and McGill are hot-beds of communism. In recent speeches and magazine articles he suggests that these two universities have become plotting-grounds for a world revolution.

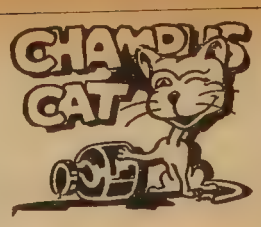
Dr. Kirkconnell is a world-renowned linguist and literary figure. But unfortunately he has never applied the patient scholasticism that brought him fame in these fields to his crude and naive attempts at political analysis.

With Dr. Kirkconnell at the head of the institution, it is a wonder that Acadia has not a disproportionate number of communists in its student body.

Ridiculous and unfounded statements such as those made by Dr. Kirkconnell do communists more good than harm. It is time Dr. Kirkconnell realized this. No one . . . least of all The Varsity . . . will quarrel with Dr Kirkconnell's opposition to communism. But he is certainly asking for an argument with the methods he uses to oppose communism.

Such unsubstantiated statements can do nothing but create sympathy for the philosophy he seeks to destroy. They can do nothing but give Canadian communists the propaganda opportunities which their American counterparts have obtained from the United States investigations into communist spying.

In the University of Toronto there are less than 50 members of the Labor-Progressive Party. There may be another 150 who are in agreement with the aims of the party but are not members.



This is Dr. Kirkconnell's communist hot-bed.

The world is torn apart today by a conflict between the capitalist societies of the west and the communist societies of the east. Capitalism has always emphasized individual liberty, frequently at the expense of social justice. Communism has stressed social justice, almost always at the expense of individual liberty.

There are communists in this country—a very few of them at Varsity and McGill—just because we have frequently neglected social justice.

Dr. Kirkconnell performs no service by telling us there are communists in Canada. Everyone knows that. He performs a great disservice by misleading the country with erroneous statements.

Dr. Kirkconnell is, no doubt, a sincere anti-communist. He would be more successful in his opposition if he were more sensible.

HOW TO HOLD YOUR HEAD IN THE BARBER'S CHAIR

(This is the second in a series of articles designed to save the student time and trouble as he goes about his daily life. Today's suggestions have a double value, they will help both you and your barber).

Rare Is The Fellow

Rare is the fellow who, musing over some idle thought in the barber's chair, has not been rudely shaken out of his reverie by a sharp belt to the head from some officious hair-cutter. "Get your head over," he will curse at you.

The opposite of the daydreamer is the kindly type who wants to help. As the barber moves around him, he shifts his shoulders, and tilts and turns his head to all angles to make things easier.

We are unfortunately nearly all in the same boat as these two—we botch up the simple job of getting a haircut. It is hoped the following suggestions will make things easier for everyone concerned.

Watch His Stature

1. Pay attention to the height of your barber—That is, if his head is above yours when you are sitting in the chair, tilt your head away from the floor. Vice versa if he is shorter. Try to get a barber level with your head. It will save a lot of tilting.

2. Watch where the barber is working. Most barbers like to cut at right angles to the grain. That is, if the barber is clipping on the left side, turn your head slightly to the right. Turn to left if clipping is being done on the right, and to the front when the barber is at the back. If you have the control, you can even turn your head very slowly in the opposite direction and in time with the barber as he circles it. (Like a slow-motion movie).

3. Shaving around the ears.—If you can wiggle your ears forward, it will allow light to reach the darker shadowed areas.

Advice to the Ordinary

The ordinary chap however will have to be content with merely clenching his teeth and stretching his skin.

4. Wear a shirt ready for the laundry—This has nothing to do with the position of the head in the barber's chair. It is the cheapest means of overcoming the problem of backscratching brought on when bits of hair fall down the back of the neck. By wearing a dirty shirt, you can run home after the haircut and change at no cost.

A word to the younger folks about panic. Some people lose their heads when they view great torrents of their hair falling all around and hear the barber grunt with the sheer pleasure of the thing as the scissors bite into another thick chunk. Try to think of it this way—Hair that is too long leads to dandruff and baldness.

In Conclusion

In conclusion a hint on how to leave. Unless you are an old customer or personal friend of the barber, this can be very awkward. Do not try to slink out the door unnoticed. Make a clean breast of it. Wave a gay goodbye and try to restrain yourself from running.

And above all don't comb out the wave the barber carefully cultivated in your hair until you are out of sight of the shop.

Pingboom.

Toronto Scorns Communist Charge

Free Tuition For Students On Exchange

Details of the Canadian Undergraduate Exchange Plan organized by the National Federation of Canadian University Students were announced by the Toronto NFCUS Committee yesterday. The plan, which provides an opportunity for university campus, is open only to honor students who will be in their third year next year, or pass students who will be in their second year next season.

The plan, as originally conceived, is designed not only to provide students with an opportunity to study at some other Canadian university, but also to give them a chance to live in another part of the country.

Free Tuition

NFCUS officials pointed out that those who are selected to participate will receive free tuition at the university they go to. It is hoped that in this way the cost of transportation will be eliminated.

Under the plan Canada is divided into four regions: 1) The University of British Columbia, 2) The Universities of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 3) The Universities of Ontario and Quebec, and 4) The Universities of the Maritime Provinces. With a few exceptions, students must plan to take work at a university in a different division than his home university is in. In the event of a student whose home university is in Ontario desiring to attend a French-Canadian university in Quebec for the purpose of taking special studies in the French tongue, exchange will be permitted.

All Faculties Included

Any student, male or female, who is applying for study at a university in another division in the third year of his course is eligible to take part in the plan, provided he plans to return to his home university to complete the work for his degree. All universities will accept candidates in practically every faculty except Medicine or Dentistry.

Students who wish to take part in the plan are required to make application to the local Selection committee. This application must be made before March 31st.

Plan Successful

Further information on the plan can be obtained from your faculty NFCUS representative. You may find his or her name on the NFCUS posters placed in college buildings.

NFCUS officials pointed out that the plan has been very successful in the past few years. "Quite a few students have taken advantage of the scheme and have voiced their appreciation of the opportunities it afforded them," stated George Wilkes, chairman of the Toronto NFCUS Committee.

Mighty McManus

Shown above is Johnny McManus, veteran Blue Basketballer who contributed greatly to Varsity's 51-48 victory over Red Nantais' highly touted Assumption Red Raiders. John is famous around hoop circles for the vast amounts of pep and energy he puts into each game. A dependable scorer, he is also an expert backchecker. McManus was particularly impressive in last year's final Western game and will be worth watching when the Mustangs revisit Toronto this Saturday.

Hold International Night For Students From Orient

Have you ever heard the chant-like song of an Indian lover in the sultry monsoon night? Or heard the pleasant plunking of a Japanese koto? Or seen the exotic shapes of Chinese pagodas in resplendent color?

All this, and even more, filled Cartwright Hall with a tang of the Orient, Tuesday night, at the International Students Organization social meeting sponsored in conjunction with the Chinese Students Club and the Nisei Students Club.

As examples of Oriental culture, Japanese, Chinese and Indian students presented a varied program which offered Japanese popular songs by Mac Ikuta, I Pre-Meds, and a concerto on the Japanese koto (a harp-like instrument about four feet long) by bright kimono-clad Martha Hori, an Indian love song by A. K. Mousuf, graduate student from Calcutta, and slides taken in China and India.

Frank Chiang, for the Chinese Students Club showed and described slides he had photographed during his stay in Asia as a civilian pilot for Pan-American Airlines, based in Calcutta. China was represented with views of beautiful Chinese architecture like the Peking city gate, ancient pagodas, the Yangtze river gorges, and Chinese city scenes after V-J Day, avec rickshaw. Highlight of the Indian photos was the glamorous wonder of the Taj Mahal.

Music by a seven-piece Nisei (Japanese Canadian) teen-age combo featured the dancing period which saw Indian saris and tight Chinese dresses swirl in the midst of more conventional Western dress.

Some Civilian Benefits From Defence Research, Topic of Dr. O. Solandt

Civilian benefits from defence research are to be discussed by Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the Defence Research Board, Ottawa, at Saturday evening's Royal Canadian Institute lecture in Convocation Hall. The lecture is open to the public, and will be illustrated.

A few of the benefits that came from the Second World War and of special interest to Canadians will be discussed by Dr. Solandt. He will explain defence research as aimed at improving weapons, and some of the work done for military purposes in civilian applications.

Dr. Solandt was born in Winnipeg and educated in Toronto and England.

Varsity Students Score Kirkconnell For Halifax Talk

Student reaction to a charge laid by Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, President of Acadia University, earlier this week that the University of Toronto is a "hotbed of communism" runs the gamut from "not enough" to "balderdash." The charge was made in a speech Dr. Kirkconnell delivered in Halifax on Tuesday.

Kirkconnell Wrong

Student leaders of political clubs and university officials interviewed yesterday indicated that they felt that Dr. Kirkconnell has his facts wrong.

Dr. Sidney Smith, President of the University, ducked the issue. Asked to comment on Dr. Kirkconnell's statement, he replied: "No comment."

All four leaders of campus political groups think Dr. Kirkconnell is wrong. They varied only in their approach to the problem. Their views:

A Minority Group

George Hogan, President of the Progressive Conservative Club: "It is perfectly ridiculous to say that two dozen communists out of 16,000 students constitute a 'hotbed'. The only reason that Dr. Kirkconnell could have for making such a charge is that the communists make a lot of noise. They are a negligible, though not necessarily harmless, minority."

Harvey Hay, President of the C.C.F. Club: "I agree with Dr. Kirkconnell as long as he defines 'hotbed' in any organization as an element that includes communists to the extent of one half of one per cent. For some years I have suspected that Dr. Kirkconnell's rose-tinted glasses could change even a light blue conservative into a scarlet communist."

Would Like More

Steve Endicott, President of the L.P.P. Club: "There aren't as many communists at Toronto as we would like. Anyway, it is well known that the communists fight openly for peace, and student needs. A man of his ill-repute doesn't do much harm." Endicott stated that there are "about 35" members in the L.P.P. Club at the moment, "but we don't feel that is the extent of our influence," he added.

David Stanley, President of the Liberal Club: "The charge is pure balderdash." Stanley also had some remarks to make on an article that Dr Kirkconnell wrote for Toronto Saturday Night of January 15. "The commentary and exposition of the article was entirely justified," declared Stanley. "I agree with his analysis but not with his assumption—that communists are present in large numbers on Canadian campi."

Martin Shubik emphatically denounced the statement made by Dr. Kirkconnell in Halifax. He also had a comment on the Saturday Night article. "Professor Kirkconnell's remarks that the sending of Gordon McLean to the NFCUS Conference in Winnipeg last year was a communist plot are completely unfounded. The SAC was well aware that McLean was a communist, but sent him as a non-voting observer anyway."

No Sleep Lost

Mr. J. C. Evans, University Registrar, explained that he was in no position to make any definite statement since he was not well enough acquainted with the situation, having been here only three years. "But," he added, "it's my own personal opinion that I wouldn't lose any sleep over it."

"The University of Toronto positively and definitely is not a hotbed of communism," asserted E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Student's Administrative Council. He noted particularly that he could see no trace of a "communist trend among the ex-service group here."

Dr. Kirkconnell also charged that McGill University, along with the University of Toronto is a "hotbed of communism". The charge was dismissed by Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice Chancellor at McGill. His comment: "No comment."

Social Workers Describe History Of Penal Reform

Last night at the U.C. Women's Union Dr. Stuart Jaffary and Mr. Murdock Keith addressed the University Social Work Club on the general topic of "Penal Reform". Dr. Jaffary, as the first speaker, traced the history of social reform from early communities to the present day. Mr. Keith attempted to show how the social worker today can help rehabilitate persons released from penal institutions.

In the 20th century Dr. Jaffary said, two factors worked in favor of social reform the rising humanitarian spirit in England, and the rise of the social sciences. About 1910 the trial of youths was removed from the criminal courts and appropriated to the juvenile courts. "That was a great step in penal reform," he said. A tragic feature about our prisons, he maintained, is that they break the spirit and destroy the initiative of the criminal.

Speaking of the present tendency of suspending sentences and placing criminals on probation, Dr. Jaffary described as "distasteful" the fact that in Toronto there are only eight adult probation officers.

Mr. Keith, continuing on the same general theme, described the routine of prison life and its effect on the convict. He also pointed out some of the problems of rehabilitating these men. Criminals, he emphasized, are not really different from other men "They are what they are simply because something has gone wrong." He pointed out some of the immediate needs of the criminal upon his release from prison and how the social worker tries to deal with them.

Dr. Jaffary is now a professor in the School of Social Work in the University and a member of the board for the training of dominion and provincial penitentiary officers. Last year he acted as mediator in the Burwash riots.

Mr. Keith, a graduate of the School of Social Work, is now assistant director of the John Howard Society, which cares for the rehabilitation of ex-convicts.

Plan 'Varsity On Revue' To Show Skulemen Arts If Students Interested

Varsity may go on revue. The Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee of S.A.C. intends to give the various faculties a chance to find out about each other.

"We've heard rumors about the insides of the Wallberg Building, of new hearing experiments, of guinea pigs and cadavers," said Keith Davey, chairman of the committee. "We would like to have a look at these things and we think others would. The only way to do it is to get sufficient student support to enable us to make the necessary arrangements—and it will take a lot of arranging."

To determine student interest, the committee is placing lists for those interested, in all college buildings today. If sufficient interest is shown, the committee will undertake to put "Varsity on Revue" in a one-hour tour during Brotherhood Week, February 20-27.

SAC At A Glance

At its meeting last night the Students Administrative Council:

Heard Finance Commissioner J. C. Haltom explain the All-Varsity Revue had made a net profit of $14.25;

Heard Ex-Service Chairman Bob Calvert outline plans for a cost-of-living survey to be undertaken among veteran students across Canada this week;

Heard Ex-Service Committee member John Gwynne-Timothy outline a report of the NCSV conference and explain that the University of Toronto owes $264 to the national organization. Council deferred payment until a financial statement is forthcoming from the NCSV.

Three Music Bursaries Established by Donors To Aid Music Students

Receipt of contributions which will finance three bursaries of $100 each in the Faculty of Music was announced today by Dr. Sidney Smith, University of Toronto president. Donors are Heintzman and Company, Canadian Music Sales Corporation Limited, and the Waterloo Music Company. First awards of this kind to be given in the Faculty, they will be used to help finance the education of promising students who need assistance.

Said Dr. Smith: "It is felt by the staff of the Faculty of Music and donors of these bursaries that the course in School Music is making a real contribution to the teaching profession of the Province and is worthy of this type of support."

Michelangeli

When the genius of a pianist transcends critical evaluation by the reviewer it seems foolish to attempt a criticism. For a concert like that of Michelangeli on Monday night, nothing less than a thesaurus of superlatives seems appropriate or adequate.

But here are a few personal impressions of that concert, for what they are worth. The young Italian pianist opened with two sonatas by Scarlatti, whose tingling vitality he intimately expressed. The massive Ciacconna of Bach-Busoni, though short of absolute perfection because of a slight tendency to melodrama, revealed a unique richness of tone and grandeur of architectural outline.

Michelangeli made the rather prosaic first movement of Beethoven's Sonata in C Major as interesting as is possible. His mature yet uninhibited delight in the playful last movement was spontaneously transferred to the audience; it was one of those rare, supreme moments in concerts, when a mysterious communion links artist and audience.

Pianists as rigorously precise as Michelangeli sometimes lack the flexibility necessary to be unashamedly romantic; but his rendition of the Chopin Berceuse was gentle and delicate. It was, however, in Chopin's familiar Scherzo in B flat Minor that the eminence of his genius became overwhelmingly apparent. His technique here was so completely adequate that his artistic insight was completely free to find exact expression.

In Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Paganini" three facts were obvious: his almost unique technical brilliance and exuberance, his comprehensive yet simple grasp of the formal structure, and his personal profundity. The third is the most significant. Michelangeli is, above all, a profound musical artist.

T.S.O. Special

To be able to say that the composer was the hero of the all-Beethoven concert, which included the Piano Concerto No. 4 and the Symphony No. 3, is to imply high praise for the performers. A compliment should be reserved for the Hall management which had placed this listener out of any temptation to let visual impressions, excepting some hats, interfere with work meant for the ear.

This extreme position, well out of range out of any draughts from the busy wind instruments which might cause a cold, was disadvantageous only during the piano concerto because one was incapable of judging whether the soloist, Mr. B. Boszormenyi-Nagy, was really as strongly dominated by the orchestra as it seemed at times. But then, perhaps, one has been spoiled or misled by the adjusted proportions of broadcast and recordings.

Mr. Boszormenyi-Nagy's playing was sensitive in the extreme and contained some moments of unforgettable delicacy and fragility. If this reviewer is more used to, and prefers, the more sober and even interpretation by his favorite pianist, it is no more than a very personal preference which blinds him in no way to the high calibre of the performer whom we may now happily call local.

The performance of the Eroica was fully up to the proportions and the magnificence of the work, and the progress towards the final and, I suggest, most exciting of all of Beethoven's symphonic movements was smooth and appropriately dramatic.

This wonderful age of machines is reaching pretty dizzying heights. It started with the printing press and now after the machines have rendered the majority of us useless physically, they are proceeding to complete the job. Cybernetics, the new science dedicated to the elimination of the human brain, is the Frankenstein that will do it. It's a simple matter now, of you can only prevent your mechanical brain from developing disgusting human frailities, to solve your most complicated problems. In this age of such wonderful machines, we've got a problem for them to solve—a question we could never answer. We want to know if these machines can guarantee us $40 00 a week, or are they just good for solving problems?

OUR READERS WRITE

LANGUAGE TROUBLES

The Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

At the forthcoming session of parliament a private bill will be introduced which would require that the Civil Service Commission give preference to bilingualists in all future appointments. This preference is to be exercised to the extent that an applicant speaking only French or English is to be hired only when there are no qualified bilingualists.

Since Canada is a bilingual country the bill has merit, but since Canada is not completely bilingual the bill is also discriminatory. There is a greater percentage of bilingualists among the French-speaking population than among the English and this bill would, if passed, check the careers of large numbers of undergraduates of this and most other Canadian universities who are fitting themselves for civil service posts on graduation.

We recognize that there are many positions where the ability to speak both French and English is an advantage, if not a necessity, and bilingualism is already required for these positions; but for the vast majority of government posts a second language would be of no value whatsoever.

In the past our government has been decrying the large number of Canadian university graduates who have been forsaking their native land in favor of more lucrative jobs in the United States. Why take steps which would encourage this practice? Your member of parliament will be voting on this bill in the very near future. On private bills his vote is influenced by your personal wishes. Write to him today and let him know your views.

K. M. Torrie, III Chem.

Ed. Note: This is a reference to a private bill sponsored by Bona Arsenault, Liberal M.P. for Bonaventure. It does not call for complete bilingualism, nor, we believe, does M. Arsenault visualize a steady stream of his fellow Quebeckers surging into the rest of Canada to take over the Civil Service.

The provisions of his bill are that preference should be given to civil service applicants as follows:

a) In French-speaking Canada, to those who have a fluent command of French, and who have a working knowledge at least, of English.

b) In English-speaking Canada, to those who have a fluent command of English and a working knowledge of French.

In the event that candidates fulfilling these qualifications are not available, unbilingual appointments would be made.

HOW FAR IS LEFT?

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

The recent Mock Parliament, in which the LPP constituted the government, should serve to cast grave doubts in the minds of serious politically-minded students concerning the alleged "communist" or "socialist" nature of this party.

The LPP resolution on foreign policy is an attempt to solve the crisis of Canadian capitalist economy while at the same time defending the interests of Stalin's reactionary little clique in the Kremlin. The interests of the Canadian workers and youth do not enter into the picture. This is the meaning of the Stalinist plank that "Canada develop an independent economic plan of development including a national steel industry."

Here we have the Stalinist "solution" to the crisis of capitalism. Not socialism, not a fundamental economic change—production for use rather than profit—but a continuation of the profit system with a few tactical shifts in policy which, the Stalinists dream, would turn it away from the path of war.

The joke is that when you accept capitalism you accept everything that goes with it—wars, depressions, fascism and the other refinements of a decadent, ultra-reactionary system. In this epoch of blood and iron it is necessary to look reality in the face and not to flinch. And that reality says — Capitalist barbarism or socialism. The issue is posed point-blank on a world scale. There are no alternatives.

When I arose in the House to ask a Stalinist spokesman whether we were to understand from the resolution that the interests of the Canadian workers and those of the Canadian capitalists are one and the same, he refused to answer, pleading a "sore throat". It was the only time during the evening that a question was turned down. But, then, no one likes to be stripped naked in public.

Is there any wonder now at the Stalinist hatred and fear of Trotskyism? We alone point to the socialist solution. The Stalinists are in a terrible contradiction; it is difficult to talk socialism while using your tongue to lick the boots of its most deadly opponent—the capitalist class, their state, their ideology and their system.

Barry Goody,
1 Soc. & Phil.

IS IT HERE TO STAY?

The Editor, The Varsity.

"The smothering blanket of student apathy" is due to what Hollywood has very succinctly described as "it". This is the answer to your query in the very pertinent editorial of The Varsity, January 5th. We could go into the multiple reasons for the contemporary student's obsession of sex, are of which is the excessive importance attached to co-education. But it is sufficient here to point out that it so diverts the student's energies that he cannot, in any extra strength do anything beyond the minimum necessities of study for passing his exams.

The danger is obvious—we are going to be a generation of selfish people, going down in history with this unpleasant qualification, unless something real is done about our plight. May we suggest that the Christian Mission should have the great majority—but we are trying to improve our lot by some coherent reasoning. Let a few be exposed to this mental condition, and the result might be encouraging.

Book Review

Home From The Cold Wars

Leslie Roberts'Home From The Cold Wars (Reginald Saunders $3.25) presents a searching analysis of the present international situation, attempting at all times to be completely objective. Mr. Roberts, one of our better-known jounalists, has the happy faculty of going to the heart of situations, which, combined with his open minded interpretation of history makes this book well worth reading.

The author recognizes the vital role played by propaganda in world affairs, and in discussing the Russian attitude towards news dissemination he pulls no punches. One does feel that he lets the American press off easily, for hidden inference and subtle suggestion can be infinitely more dangerous than bombast. We were especially interested in the comparison of the techniques used in "The Iron Curtain" and a Russian film of the same type. In another chapter Mr. Roberts sets down a number of pronouncements of American supremacy made by prominent individuals like Averill Harriman, William C. Bullitt and Major General Claire Chennault. He points out that this sort of thing can do more to cloud the waters of the international understanding than any number of disputes within the walls of the United Nations Assembly. All in all Mr. Roberts presents a fairly completely documented analysis of the propaganda lines followed by the participants in the Cold War. He does however ignore consideration of the morality of the various techniques involved.

One of the most illuminating sections of the book is a chapter called "Conversation in Prague" which gives one of the clearest and most unbiased interpretations of the Czech coup which we have read to date. Here, too, a conclusion might have been in order, for what Mr Roberts does is to examine the situation from the point-of-view of the position of the country through the past decade. This would seem to be the salient point about present-day interpretation of historical events, we interpret them out of their historical context, and thus issues become confused.

The one serious criticism I have of this valuable commentary is that the reader is left to draw his own conclusions. One deduces from the examples Mr. Roberts cites that the attitudes prevailing between nations as well as the techniques of diplomacy are at fault. Undoubtedly it is a challenge to the reader's intelligence to put the finishing touches to the author's work, but in this particular field, he is so used to being told the answers that when answers are not supplied he is inclined to think that perhaps the author doesn't know himself. And in this case he would be quite wrong.

Movie Review

The Red Shoes

It is often said that literature is thought which is first moulded into form by the idealizing process of the human mind, and then, when so moulded, expressed in writing.

J. Arthur Rank's production of "The Red Shoes," currently playing at the Odeon- Toronto, has gone one step further by taking the Hans Christian Andersen fairy tale and adapting it into a motion picture expansion of the theme.

It cannot be denied that comparison lies at the root of all judgment in art and literature. But this judgment is valid only in proportion to the range of experience on which it is based. I am not a qualified movie, art or music critic. The only criticism I do with a reasonable amount of success is self-criticism. But, if sensations and emotions received from visual job added to simple taste, will serve, this film is the first to give me genuine enjoyment in years. It deserves the world's movie critics' best adjectives rolled up into one.

The core of the plot in a story about life in a ballet company is Andersen's fairy tale in which a young girl is charmed into buying a pair of bewitched slippers. At first very happy dancing at a carnival, the girl finds the bewitched shoes will not let her stop dancing. From there on her world is a long nightmare of dance. Moira Shearer's educated toes are at the best here. In a 15-minute sequence of continual dancing, the color, the decor, and the lighting effects are nothing short of sensational. Exhausted, the girl finally dies.

In the film plot, the heroine, Victoria Page (Moira Shearer) falls in love with a young composer, Julian Craster (Marius Goring). Ballet company impresario Boris Lermantov (Anton Walbrook) resents the romance because he feels that if Victoria is to become a great ballerina, there is no room in her life for love. He dismisses the composer, but Victoria chooses to leave the ballet company despite her success in The Red Shoes, and marries him.

Yet Victoria cannot stay away from dancing very long and again returns to Lermantov. Once more unable to choose between her two loves, her ballet slippers and her husband, she kills herself. The final sequence is the most touching scene in the picture.

The famous Leonide Massine plays the part of ballet-master Grisha Ljubov. He is only overshadowed by Moira Shearer, young English ballerina, who makes her debut in this picture. Anton Walbrook is magnificent as Lermantov.

The only regret is that apart from the Red Shoes dance, Miss Shearer dances only excerpts from Massine's "La Boutique Fantasque" and a few other classical ballets.

But then if she danced any more, the movies would last longer than the two and a half hours which it now does.

Intellectual Relief

At its recent conference in Montreal, the National Federation of Canadian University Students resolved to assist the work of International Student Service in every way possible. The NFCUS recognized the value of the broad program of material and intellectual relief which I.S.S. has planned for this year.

The work of the Canadian Committee of ISS has been given strong support throughout the past few years not only by students on campuses across the country, but also by such organizations as the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO and by leading church officials of the Jewish, Catholic and Protestant faiths.

An outstanding example of how the importance of the work of ISS has been recognized was the seminar held in Germany last summer. The seminar brought together 140 students from 16 countries, including 50 students from universities across Canada, so that they could exchange ideas, learn more of the cultures of other nations, and gain a better idea of the importance of free academic discussion.

The British Control Commission of Germany felt this project was so important that the commission provided a meeting place, made many facilities available, and generally assisted with the problem of getting the students into Germany. The Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO contributed a major portion of the funds for the seminar. The provincial governments of Canada financed the transportation of Canadian students to Europe. The Department of Veterans' Affairs and the Department of External Affairs provided books and pamphlets for the seminar library.

Thus ISS was able to hold a seminar whose success has been widely acclaimed. Not one cent of the money collected in the annual campus drives was used for the seminar. The reputation of ISS in Canada was so high that it was able to obtain the money from the sources mentioned.

The Canadian Committee of ISS is now working on a project to bring D.P. and other European students to Canada and the project is receiving wide support.

The plan is to bring one D.P. student and one other European student to Canada for every 2,000 students on Canadian campuses. The D.P. students would remain in Canada, but the other students would be pledged to return to a university in the country from which they come. The International Refugee Organization of the United Nations has promised assistance for the transportation of the D.P. students to Canada.

Anyone who has seen at first hand the frustration and hopelessness that is the daily fare of Latvian, Lithuanian, Esthonian and Jewish students who seem to be condemned to a useless life in wretched camps in Germany, knows the real need to offer them something more hopeful than material relief.

And anyone who has visited Europe since the end of the war knows the tremendous need for an exchange of ideas such as would be made possible by bringing other European students to Canada for one year.

It is to be hoped that McGill students will participate in this year's ISS program to bring European students to Canada and to provide material relief for students in Greece, France and India.

ed by the Superintendent's office."

J. C. Evans, Secretary of the Caput, said the edict applied only to those buildings under the jurisdiction of the President. Victoria, Trinity and St. Michael's Colleges and other affiliated schools did not come under the decree. The president hoped however that the heads of these colleges would assist in maintaining the principle of the resolution, he said.

"The President feels the new decree is necessary to clarify the policy of the Caput towards meetings which are held during the lecture hours. He felt that no meetings should be held which would interrupt the regular study hours," Evans said.

Addition To Resolution

An addition to the re stated that no applications be considered from any student groups wishing to hold meetings in Convocation Hall unless the Board of Governors or governing body of any federated institution imposes or collects a compulsory student organization fee.

The members of the Caput are the President of the University, the Deans of the Separate faculties and colleges, the heads of departments and the warden of Hart House.

SMC and SPS In Deadlock For Top Spot

Saint Michael's As and Senior SPS are tops in the first major basketball group of the interfaculty league according to statistics compiled Tuesday. Sr. SPS has won two and lost one up to the above date while the Mikemen have won both of their two games.

UC and Vic Tied

Junior squads from UC and Vic were tied for second group leadership as of Tuesday but last night's encounter boosted the Vic quintet into the number one spot. Dent A: and Jr. SPS have lost two each to tie up for third spot.

Senior UC leads the third group with two wins and St. Mike's Bees and Senior Meds As have split the two contests that each have played thus far. SPS seconds occupy the cellar with two losses.

A strong Trinity A quintet dominates the fourth group with a record of two wins against a single loss. SPS thirds and Pre Meds with a win and a loss each are tied for second with the PHE II who have one win in three starts bringing up the rear.

Three Way Tie

A three way tie for top billing exists as of Tuesday in the fifth group. Forestry As, UC thirds and Vic thirds all have a win and a loss while Senior Meds Bees have only a loss on their record.

Pharmacy As leads the sixth groupers and Emmanuel As hold down the first spot in the seventh Vic fourths are high in the eighth division while Vic fifths and Institutional Management are deadlocked for the lead in the last group.

There will be two teams from each of the first three groups entered in the playoffs while the other groups will supply one apiece.

Zeaton and McManus Hoop Co-Captains

Veterans Wally Zeaton and Johnny McManus have been elected co-captains of the Varsity Blues basketball team, coach Bob Masterson announced yesterday.

For Zeaton, this will be the second consecutive year in which he has been a co-captain of the cage squad. Last year, Zeaton and Bruce Tettmar, who graduated from the U. of T. last spring were co-captains.

For McManus, in his sophomore year with the Blues, it will be his first season of Varsity basketball as a co-captain.

VARSITY SPORTS

"Cec" Sinks Duo—Potts Pots Two—Blues Win 6-4

Kingston, Jan. 25 — (Special to The Varsity) — Ace Bailey's Varsity hockey Blues came out from behind a single-goal deficit in the final frame to hand a win-hungry Queen's aggregation a 6-4 setback tonight in the Jock Harty Memorial Arena. Veteran Varsity centre Cec Turcott, was the top sniper for the winners with two goals to his credit in a fast, clean encounter.

The Golden Gaels, a rugged hockey team who are always willing to mix it with all comers, came out of tonight's game without a single penalty mark on their side of the score sheet. The Blues had four misdemeanors called against them, but all were considered cheap penalties.

Varsity's Bill Spence lost no time in opening the scoring as he netted the first tally at the 15-second mark on a passout from Bob Henry. Potts countered for Queen's at 5:58 when he went in alone to deke Hutzulak and end the first period's scoring with the count knotted at one-all.

Turcott put the blue and white squad ahead at 7:56 of the second period on a pass from Henry, and Rich Howson sank another to give Varsity a two-goal lead with assists going to Fox and Tommy McKillop.

At 14.37 Kemp of Queen's went in alone to score, followed by another, unassisted effort from the stick of Potts who was high man for Queen's with two tallies. Potts' goal came at 15:39 and deadlocked the count at the end of the middle stanza at 3 per.

With only thirty seconds gone in the final frame Wagar put Queen's ahead on a pass from Hews. Harry Boyd, starry Varsity centre, retaliated for the Blues at 7:08 with the assist going to Wilf Digby.

Ernie Frey, who started this year with the Blues, netted the next Varsity goal with an assist to Boyd, the goal being scored at the 8:15 mark. Cec Turcott wound up the scoring with his second of the night which he sank after taking a pass from Henry. This was Henry's third assist of the game.

Varsity mentor Ace Bailey was loud in praise of Paul Hutzulak, stellar custodian of the twine, who turned in another splendid performance. Bailey also remarked that the squad was improving their ability to work as a unit.

Lineups

Varsity—Goal, Hutzulak; defense, Digby, Ecclestone; centre, Turcott; wings, Henry, Spence; alternates, Frey, Boyd, Howson, Fox, Hayes, Prince, Ferguson, McKillop.

Queen's—Goal, Urie; defense, Flannigan, Johnstone; centre, Murray; wings, Hews, Mercer; alternates, Wagar, Sadler, Potts, Kemp, B. Hamilton, Batachio, Robertson, Strehliski.

Ernest Man

BY COLLETTE FERGUSON

More information has come our way for all shuttlecock enthusiasts. For those who have as yet not realized that there are less than 90 days before the campus turmoil and torture of exams and wish to have their last fling at sports, the Girls' Intramural Badminton Tournament has been set for Mon., Tues., and Wed. of next week. Dates are January 31, February 1 and 2.

The scene of the tournament will be the Badminton and Racquets Club, commonly known as the B and R Club, situated behind Fran's Restaurant on St. Clair, west of Yonge. All entries will be welcomed. The tournament will not be restricted to winners of the College Tournaments.

All who wish to enter the tournament must be at the Club at 9 a.m., Jan. 31. After preliminary games have been run off, the time schedule will be drawn for those who manage to successfully come through the first round.

Although rules are a bit bothersome, the powers that be consider it necessary to default all those who do not turn up at the time they are posted to play—no excuses acceptable.

It seems that last year, St. Hilda's walked away with top honours in the Intramural Tournament, followed closely by Vic and U.C. The singles champion, Jane Mathews, St. Hilda's, and the doubles champions, Mary and Elizabeth Russell, will be entries this year and from all reports are in top form. However, some new stars have been showing real style in the College Tournaments that are in the last stages this week. In short, if we may be allowed to prophesy, the tournament will not be a walk-over for any of the entrants.

With the winners of the Intramural Tournament, Varsity hopes to hit the top spot in the Intercollegiate Tournament to take place on February 11th and 12th at Western.

Oh yes, before we forget, white is the required colour of dress at the B and R Club.

Pitching Sportshoes

By BILLY ROSS

Interfaculty hockey fans may expect to see less fighting and rough play as of today. This stunning statement issues from the fact that the Intramural office has sent out a statement to all managers, coaches and refs to the effect that all donnybrooking from here in will result in dire consequences to the offenders.

The communique signed by Mac McCutcheon, states that the penalty for the first offence of fighting or rough play shall be a match penalty and suspension from the next game. The second trespass will mean suspension for the season and the loss of 100 intramural trophy points from the college or faculty total.

High sticking and boarding are also mentioned in the warning which is aimed at those second half do or die efforts where anything goes. The injuries which result are all unnecessary and sometimes serious. Should be a good thing for the league member's life expectancy rating.

On to the news. St. Mike's hockey A's took a 5-3 decision from Sr. Meds yesterday at the local arena. The medsmen started strongly netting two goals in as many minutes but were on even terms with the double blue pucksters as the half ended.

Horan of Meds was top scorer with two markers to his credit and Halliday netted the other score for the doctors. Baldy Prendergast got the first Mike goal and Mulvihill and O'Hara also notched singles. Pat Duffy went in alone to beat Barker on a nice play and Pat McLoughlin was responsible for the remaining St. Mike's tally.

St. Mike's A—Goal, Wainhouse; defense, McIntyre, Mulvihill; centre, O'Hara; forwards, Duffy, Daly; alternates, McDonald, Kelly, McLoughlin, Prendergast.

Sr. Meds—Goal, Barker; defense, Davies, Thompson; centre, Thompson; forwards, Wynne, Smith; alternates, Cecutti, Horan, Halliday, Haliburton, Soper, Daly, Evans.

Dent A's handed SPS thirds a 5-2 beating in the puck palace yesterday at noon hour. Scoring three in the first half and adding two in the final the dentists had little trouble holding the two goal lead which they obtained halfway through the first stanza.

Rondeau started the ball rolling for the winners with his effort at the five minute mark. Walker followed scoring at 9:20 and Ross McMullan made it 3-0 with his marker at twelve minutes. Cole was first for the skulemen with his 19:20 tally which ended the initial half scoring.

Murchison at 28:30 and Wilson who made good at 30:10 finished the Dent's scoring and Woolatt notched the remaining SPS goal.

Dent A—Goal, Diefenbaker; defense, Mewha, Cudmore; centre, Hurton; forwards, Wilson, Young; subs, Walker, Langmaid, Kennedy, MacMillan, Glenny, Murchison, Rondeau.

SPS III—Goal, McKay; defense Lawrence, Stallwood; centre, Watkins; forwards, Shkordoff, Woolatt; subs, Jeffries, Cole, Stowe.

Junior basketball aggregations from UC and Victoria clashed yesterday in the main gym of Hart House resulting in a 31-28 decision to Vic. The red and gold hoopsters took a six point lead in the first half but were outscored 19-17 in the second.

Bobbie Rumble, erstwhile Vic football star, proved his versatility as he hooped in 12 points to lead the scoring race. Young of UC came up with a nine point effort to top the losers and "Buckets" Kennedy sneaked in seven. Ludwig, Devereux, Gore and Elson of Vic all got four points while Kuzmocha and Gibson of UC scored likewise. Wengle and Badner got two each for UC as did Torrance for Vic.

In the four o'clock hoop duel Pre Meds trampled the SPS III by a 45-29 margin. The smooth working Meds quintet was led by Tanz who turned in a 17 point effort and was followed by Gamble with eight. For Skule Lemon was tops with eight and Lafontaine sank six points to supplement the engineers' total.

In the minor league St. Mike's D won by default from Vic fifteenths while UC XII took a 21-14 decision from Architecture Bees. Top man for UC was Greben with 14 while Beckstead got 7 for the Bees. Dents I Yr. outclassed III Engbus with a 34-24 total in their favor. Heckman got ten for the winners while Clarke hooped eight for Engbus.

SPS firsts blanked Meds firsts in an aqua polo encounter in Hart House yesterday. Maynard and Curry accounted for two goals each with Jones, Fydell and Rosewarne counting one each.

Varsity Boxers Divide Six Bouts With McGill Men

Montreal, Jan. 21—(Special)—In an invitation boxing tournament held over the week-end at McGill, Coach Tony Conzano's Varsity team won three of the six bouts and lost three others while Hank Henshall the seventh man was without an opponent in the 125 pound class.

The meet at Montreal Friday was the first time that Varsity had participated in such an invitation and it is hoped that a return tourney can be arranged in the near future.

The regular intercollegiate boxing meet will be held at Kingston on February 25-26.

There were no knockouts Friday, all of the bouts resulting in decisions.

Friday's results:

135 lbs. Fergus (McGill) decisioned Geary (Varsity).
140 lbs. Leprich (Varsity) decisioned Heaney (McGill)
147 lbs. McLeod (McGill) decisioned Concerio (Varsity).
155 lbs. McAllister (McGill) decisioned Wells (Varsity).
165 lbs. Patrick (Varsity) decisioned Neil (McGill).
175 lbs. Scott (Varsity) decisioned Nichols (McGill).

Female Skiers To Hold Meet This Week-end

Toronto Ski Club is holding its Annual Invitation Ladies Ski Meet at Collingwood this weekend, providing there is snow. Pat Ellard, III Vic and Conn Sparrow, III UC, two members of last year's team will be upholding the Blue and White, as well as Anne Sharpe, PHE I.

There is a need for women competitors, for the Intercollegiate team, which has not been chosen yet, because of the lack of snow and try-out races. Conn Sparrow, president of women's skiing, is still looking for eligible members.

The Women's Intramural Meet, consisting of downhill and slalom events, takes place at the Varsity Ski Club at Newmarket Sunday, February 6th. Racers should sign up soon, as the lists have to be in a week ahead.

On Saturday, February 19th, the Men's Intramural Meet begins with cross-country and jumping events, with downhill and slalom on Sunday, February 20th.

McGill is having its Winter Carnival in February and it is hoped that Varsity will have a women's ski team chosen to send down to compete against those from Middlebury College, Vermont and the red-shirted guls from McGill.

Professors Debate If Russia On Way To Marxist Ideal

The Soviets have been progressing toward the social utopia of Marxian communism since the revolution of 1917, Professor C. B. MacPherson of the Political Science Department said at a forum on "The Soviet Union in Theory and Practice" sponsored by the IRC and recorded by the CBC for radio broadcast last night.

Move Toward Goal

"I see them moving along the lines they intended, and I think it is possible for them to achieve their goal," he stated.

Professor J. C. Garrett, of Trinity's English Department, who opposed Professor MacPherson, said that social revolution in Russia is a joke, and that a great tyranny now exists there.

"A new privileged class exists now in Russia," he contended.

Introduce Incentives

He said that 30 years ago a step toward social progress was taken but that since then the Soviet government has departed from the Marxian ideals. He read from a prepared text that the Soviet Union has had to introduce new incentives to carry on their program that are contrary to the original program, and that a new wealthy class may invest capital in state controlled industries at a guaranteed rate of interest. In Russia there is education by propaganda, a controlled press, a more rigid police system than the Nazis had, and absence of choice at elections, Professor Garrett declared. He said that he believes that the result of these conditions is complete regimentation. He said that freedom does not exist in the Soviet Union, and that social security and freedom are not the same thing, as proponents of Sovietism claim.

Liberty Is Increasing

Professor MacPherson, in refutation, declared that education by propaganda, the controlled press and the police system were insurance against a counter-revolution and were included in the original plan. He said that the Russian people do not have as much freedom as we in the Western world have, but that they never expected that at this stage of the plan that they should have. They have more freedom than before 1917, and will have more in the future, he stated. It should be understood that the Soviet state is at present in the developmental stage, and that if it were not for the recent war and present conditions, the Russians would be nearer their goal, MacPherson stated. He contended that in Russia as in Western countries, liberty does not mean liberty to undermine democracy.

Frank Peers of CBC was chairman of the forum, and Michael Macklem of IRC was interrogator.

To Award Trophy At Interfaculty Drama Festival

The U. of T. Inter-faculty Drama Festival, featuring five plays from the various colleges on the campus, will be held next Monday and Tuesday evenings in Hart House Theatre. The winning play, chosen by a group of three adjudicators, will receive the Cody Award and will compete in the Inter-Varsity Drama Festival on Feb. 19.

The bill of three comedies for Monday night features two plays by Canadian authors. "Overlaid" by Robertson Davies, is the University Players Guild production, and Victoria College will present Merrill Denis' "Brothers In Arms". St. Michael's contribution is "Miracle Merchant" by Faki.

Trinity College will present a fantasy by Cedric Mount, "Twentieth Century Lullaby" on Tuesday evening. The All-Others Group, made up of the theological and nursing colleges, will complete the festival with "This is Impossible" by Patrick Hamilton.

Andrew Allan To Judge

Andrew Allan, CBC producer, Dr. H. M. McLuhan, and Prof. E. A. Dale, head of the Board of Syndics, will judge the plays on a basis of acting, directing, staging and choice of play. Presentation of the Cody Award will be made to the student director representing the winning college.

The award, donated by Canon H. J. Cody, former chancellor of the University of Toronto, was established in 1937 for annual competition under the auspices of the U. of T. Drama Committee. It is designed to encourage dramatics at the university, and is in the form of an illuminated vellum sheet done by Scott Carter, one of Canada's foremost designers.

Questionnaire For NCSV Survey

On Thursday, Jan. 27, the Ex-Service Committee of the SAC will distribute a cost of living questionnaire to 10,000 student veterans.

The questionnaire is part of a survey drawn up by Professor Curtis of Queen's University for the National Council of Student Veterans. Prof. Curtis, a well-known economist, will analyse the returning questionnaires and his report, an analysis of living conditions of ex-service students all across Canada, will be included in the NCSV brief presented to the Dominion Government next March.

Questionnaires should be completed and handed in by Jan. 31.

Campus Book Costs Should Be Reduced Say NFCUS Heads

The price of text books on the Toronto campus is too high, the Toronto NFCUS committee charged last night. The charge is laid in a report prepared by the Committee which draws the conclusion that "there seems to be no justifiable reason why the price of text books to Toronto students should not be lowered."

Run At Cost

Ways to lower the price of texts were suggested in the report. Foremost is a proposal to change the policy of the University Book Room from a commercial enterprise to a service for students. The NFCUS Committee suggests that the Book Room should be run on a cost plus maintenance basis.

The report also called on heads of departments and professors to make up definite lists of books needed in the following year each May. These lists should be made public and not changed at the last minute, members of the committee commented.

The report also charged that The University of Toronto Press "refuses to sell Coles U of T Press books when Coles can undersell the Press in these books." Coles Book Store, which the report cites as one of the three main places students obtain books, currently offers 10 per cent discount on all new books sold to Toronto students. The report states that Mr. Coles said that "if co-operation could be perfected he could lower student text book prices by as much as 25 per cent."

Take Extra Profit

One other recommendation called on the University of Toronto Press to stop taking "extra profit" from students by the 5 per cent to 10 per cent mark-up which they put on all texts coming from the United States. The report pointed out that this extra mark-up is sometimes necessary because the Press must buy these books from an exclusive Canadian agency which sells them at a higher price than the United States list price.

The report also recommends that cheaper bindings, a poorer grade of paper and more "pocket editions" should be made of books which students want only for one year.

The entire report was adopted unanimously by the Toronto NFCUS Committee. A resolution calling on the SAC to "take immediate action on the local situation" concerning the costs of texts was passed and will be presented to the next meeting of the Students' Administrative Council. Meanwhile the Toronto Committee intends to carry on with its investigation of the text book situation across Canada.

"Disgusting"

Members of the committee expressed great surprise at the conclusions drawn by the report. One thought the picture was "disgusting."

The committee also drew up a resolution denouncing the implications contained in an article in Toronto Saturday Night of January 15, written by Watson Kronnell. The House Debaters To Travel South For Competition

The Hart House Debates Committee will send a team of debaters to a number of American Universities to take part in competitive debates to be held in February.

The Hart House debaters will meet with debating teams from the University of Wisconsin, University of Notre Dame, University of Illinois, University of Chicago and North Western University.

The first debate will take place at the University of Wisconsin on February 15. The Toronto team will take the affirmative of the resolution "That the United Nations should be resolved in a federal world government."

Discuss Socialism

The following day the team will go to Notre Dame University at South Bend, Indiana, where they will debate the resolution "Resolved that the socialist trend in the United States and Canada is desirable." The Toronto debaters will again take the affirmative.

February 18, in Chicago, the team will take part in a panel discussion with students from the University of Chicago and North Western University. The topic, debated at the University of Illinois and Notre Dame, will be the subject under discussion at Chicago.

The choice of representatives for the Toronto debating team will be made on January 31 at a contest to be held in the Music Room, Hart House, 8 p.m. Contestants will be asked to give a five minute speech in support of the motion. "Resolved that the United Nations should be resolved into a Federal World Government."

All members of Hart House, who have participated in at least one Hart House debate are eligible to apply to represent the House.

Alma Mater

"What Price Rudy Vallee??"

By BOB McLAUGHLIN

Will NFCUS and IUS affiliate? Will the WUA and the UC Lit amalgamate? Will NCSV join the legion? Will Joe Potts go back to the army? Will the memorial building be coedified? Will we pass our exams?

Major problems for us today, surely. But how about former U. of T. students? Do we stop to realize ever that each year has its own particular problems? To the students of the 1930's the question that raged for nearly a month was:

Should Rudy Vallee be allowed to croon the "Blue and White" song, our Alma Mater, over the radio networks of the United States and Canada?

The Varsity of October 8, 1930, carried a front-page story that told how Vallee wrote to the University requesting permission to sing our anthem. "It's only a matter of days now," the article began, "before 'The Blue and the White' will rival the 'Maine Stein Song' as a household word throughout Canada and the United States."

But this story of Vallee's request for a copy of the song and of the comment of Mr. W. J. Dunlop, then Director of University Extension, that it seemed "justifiable publicity" was not the end of the affair.

Urging Students

Let us glance back through the pages of history—or through the pages of The Varsity, anyway—as far as October, 1930, to see more of the story. In that same issue of The Varsity we find a long editorial urging the students to assert themselves. After all, didn't the song actually belong to the students rather than to the university offi-

San Carlos Summer School Offers Seven-Week Course

The Summer School of the University of San Carlos of Guatemala presents its third annual seven-week session, primarily for North American students and approved by the Veteran's Administrative, in Guatemala City from July 1st until August 19th, 1949.

A wide variety of courses in the fields of Spanish and Latin American languages, literature, and institutions is offered. Courses are for two units of credits with a maximum of six credits.

For the beginning student there is daily intensive training in Spanish grammar, composition, conversation, and literature all conducted by Guatemalan instructors. The more advanced student can select from a variety of undergraduate and graduate courses lectured in Spanish and including economics, geography, history, literature, philology, phonetics and stylistics and composition. To the graduate student the School is prepared to offer a Master in Arts degree in three summer sessions in either Spanish literature or Latin American studies, or courses at the graduate level.

The Summer School faculty includes distinguished professors from both the United States and Central America. The summer catalogue which contains information concerning expenses, housing, special student discounts for air travel, and sight-seeing opportunities in the coastal plains and Mayan Highlands, can be obtained by writing air mail to the Secretary of the Summer School, University of San Carlos, Apartado 179, Guatamala, C.A.

Increase Steel Production In Century Of Experiments

The production of iron and steel has increased during the last hundred years from an infinitesimal amount to the enormous quantity used in modern industry. Dr. O. W. Ellis, Head of the Department of Engineering and Metallurgy at the Ontario Research Foundation, spoke on "100 Years of Iron and Steel" in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon.

The history of iron smelting goes back 2,400 years to furnaces made by digging holes in the ground and laying the iron-ore and charcoal in alternate rows. The charcoal was ignited and the iron was smelted into a solid state called sponge-iron. This iron was being smelted in a similar fashion in above-the-ground furnaces until a hundred years ago.

With the introduction of forced air blowing to increase the heat, the smelters discovered that they were producing a molten [illegible] fluid, when cooled, became the product known as pig-[illegible]. hearth-type furnaces developed into the modern blast furnace. Coal was used instead of charcoal and production increased tremendously.

Steel, in its early history, was made in small quantities and was a rare commodity. Boxes of fireclay were filled with wrought iron and charcoal and put in a furnace for several days. This produced a blistered steel. This was changed when the impurities were taken out by blowing air through the molten metal which produced a hard steel similar to that manufactured today.

Henry Bessemer, an Englishman, perfected a process by which the air was forced through the molten metal. His process [illegible] Bessemer process and is in use today. Another [illegible] steel is the open-hearth furnace method.

Everyone Has The D.T.'s

It has often been said that students are, both by right and tradition, free to determine their own course of action on any matter which is their concern alone.

Although such freedom continues to be staunchly upheld by our after-dinner speakers, it is becoming increasingly evident that many of our paternal citizens wish to temper that freedom with what they choose to call respectability and common-sense. The weary cliche that universities are hot-beds of radicalism again seems to be causing nervous tremors among our good burghers. And the tremors are spreading.

In Halifax last week, The Dalhousie Gazette editorialized: "If the public regards with pious horror the idea of their students associating themselves with an organization known to be 'red', that is their concern entirely. If students turn down the idea for purely practical reasons let no one breathe a sigh of relief and assert that at last our students have become respectable

"One of the great purposes which a university must try to fulfill is to instill a sense of independent criticism into its students. Freedom, to a university, is more important than propriety; public opinion or private opinion should never see itself justified in attempting to impose a ready-made code on an institution whose very purpose is to seek out the truth. The fact that our universities must depend upon private subscription for their very existence is one of the great tragedies of our culture—that the very institutions supposed to propagate freedom must depend to a certain extent upon private pocketbooks."

The university, among others, might well view the symptoms with alarm.

High Button Shoes

Popular opinion would have us believe that after "Oklahoma!", "Bloomer Girl", et al., no other musicomedy is worth taking free tickets to. Don't you believe it. "High Button Shoes", currently at the Royal Alexandra, is as good as these shows, but in a different way.

The weak spot — a second-rate musical score — was arranged and played in a first-rate manner. I might add, this is one of the best pit orchestras Toronto's music halls have heard in many a moon. But it is the pace which earns the show its spot amongst the musical comedy greats. It's amazing how this streamlined show whisked its audience along.

Beautifully costumed and staged, H.B.S. offers captivating ballet, as well as high button shoes kicking capers of their own era, mixed somehow with the slick clowning of star Eddie Foy. All of which exploded into a mixed grill of the Keystone Cops, Gaietie Parisienne and Olsen and Johnson in the opening of the second act. This planned chaos quite befuddled the poor old Toronto audience — alone worth the price of admission.

I liked especially: the gentle nostalgia of the "old folks" cutting up in "I Still Get Jealous"; young Ralph Linn's superb gobbett of ballet-mime; and the intense burlesquing of "Tango" (1913). Noticed on the boardwalk at Atlantic City: straight man Marty Barrett, ingenue Ellen Hanley and a relatively tame gorilla.

cials?

Immediately the student body rose up in arms. And for days The Varsity's pages were filled with news articles, editorials, and letters to the editor on this subject. Said one reader, B. D. Park, III-S.P.S.: "It would only cheapen our song to have it sung in the dance halls of the continent."

Apparently our predecessors in the halls of the U. of T. were not the lovers of swing and jazz that we are. S. Ball, Pre. II-S.P.S., stated: "Rudy is only a cheap entertainer and won't last long. We don't want to hand our song over to him." No doubt about the way he feels.

Others said that the University didn't need that kind of publicity, that Vallee had plenty of songs on his side of the border to choose from, that the Alma Mater was too good for a fox-trot. Still, there were some who thought he should be allowed to use the song. As one student put it: "It would be a good way to have the students learn it."

Even the S.A.C. considered the question worthy of its official pronouncement. It formally deplored the use of the song for "any other purpose than as a university anthem".

Indeed, the question of atomic importance to the students of those days seems to have been: "What price Rudy Vallee and 'justifiable publicity'?"

article concerned communism on Canadian university campi, and implied, in the opinion of the Toronto committee, that NFCUS at Toronto is "infiltrated with communists." Members pointed out that such an implication was erroneous, and that proper investigation of the LPP Report from which Kirconnell took his information would have shown that in reality the LPP's are not as strong here as they would like to be.

The resolution calls on the National Committee of NFCUS to direct a protest to Toronto Saturday Night.

PITCHING SPORTSHOES

By BILLY ROSS

Victoria College's crack relay squad captured the four lap event of the interfaculty track meet yesterday as they turned in a creditable one minute, thirteen and one tenth seconds for the distance which measures approximately 628 yards.

The Vic foursome consists of Gefry Taylor, Bill McMackon, Jack Milne and John Devereux. Trinity placed second in this event with te UC entry finishing in the show spot.

The twelve pound shot put was also contested with Sam Neill of St. Mike's taking top honors with a forty three foot toss. Tim Turner was runner up. Turner, a Trinity entry threw the shot thirty nine feet, Ted Gawinski and Ken Davis both of UC copped third and fourth places respectively.

St. Michael's ⚙ pucksters suffered a 4-2 defeat at the hands of SPS IV yesterday at the arena. The golden sweatered engineers piled up a 3-1 lead at half time and coasted to their win scoring once to St. Mikes' twice in the last stanza.

Kurznier, Harper, White and Norman were the snipers for SPS netting one apiece. Chapeskie and Quinn scored likewise for the Mike-men. Both Garder and Currie of SPS and St. Mike's respectively, showed will in the rubber stopping department.

In the course of the day's major b-ball doings yesterday Sr. UC and SPS II's tangled resulting in a 38-38 deadlock. Shork of the deuces was top scorer with ten points to his credit. Brockneck and Penny of UC followed with eight apiece.

Other scorers include Chorestecki and Brown of the engineers with seven and Montayne of UC with same. McPhail of SPS came up with six and teammate McHenry garnered five.

Corner Boys Defeat Bees In Rough Tilt

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Junior Bees wound up on the short end of the 3-1 score in one of the roughest games ever played in the Junior league. The Corner Boys notched a goal in each of the periods while the Juniors were kept to one goal, scored in the first frame.

A total of 15 penalties were given out by the referee, Perc Allen; seven going to the Varsity team. Clement, of Varsity and Boudreau and Craig of the Corner Boys received five minutes each for fighting and Corner Boys' DiMarco received a 10 minute misconduct penalty.

DiMarco, Henderson, and McAllister were the goal getters for the Corner Boys while Jack Raftis notched the only Varsity tally of the game.

The Varsity team still are on top of the league while the Corner Boys move to second spot.

Mart Kenney: "How do you translate this sentence in La Presse? It says, 'Je demande la grammaire'."

Jack Fowler: "It means 'I demand a grandmother'."

U.C. it's this way...

Well, it seems pretty definite that U.C. wants Amalgamation, doesn't it? But it's a pity that only 20 per cent of the potential voters expressed an opinion. However, when a joint constitution is drawn and presented for approval to the men and women, maybe the UC'ers will sit up and take notice.

U.C. is really dishing up entertainment treats these days. ... No need to tell you that one of these is the Arts Ball tomorrow night and no need to tell you what's in store for you there—meaning, of course, Oscar Peterson and his trio, Mart Kenney and his orchestra, the Stardusters AND the crowning of the King and Queen of Arts. .. The search for the King and Queen this year brought forth many talented contestants and we're sure it was a difficult task for the judges at the All Arts Night last Wednesday to choose four semi-finalists from among their number. It will probably be an even more difficult task tomorrow for the judges to choose between Margo McKinnon, U.C., and Marjorie Elliott, Trinity, as Queen, and between Peter Bourke and Paul Garner, both from St. Mike's, as King. ... Among the judges will be Peggie Miller, herself a talented young lady, who is chanteuse at Winston's Theatre Restaurant on King Street. . Lucky Miss Queen and Mr King, whoever they may be, for there are some lovely prizes in store for them. The T. Eaton Company, Nat Freedman and Jerry Cooper have been donors of gifts and flowers.

Gals, here's a plea ... If you get asked at this 11th hour to the Arts Ball, please go, because we still have fellows coming up to us and saying, "Gee, it sounds like a wonderful dance, but if I buy a ticket do you suppose I could get somebody to go with me NOW?" ... and we always reply, "Sure. Betcha you can." ... So gals, please don't let us down. We promised the fellows you'd go.

Another treat to be dished up ... but not quite as soon as the Arts Ball . . is "Fantasy of 49" being presented by the Music Club February 8th and 9th in Hart House Theatre. They'll present the Canadian premiere of the operetta, "Down in the Valley" by Kurt Weill of New York, who has already become a prominent figure on Broadway with his "One Touch of Venus" and "Knickerbocker Holiday". ... As though a complete operetta were not a large enough undertaking, this enterprising club also intends to present, the same evening, songs from "Brigadoon", a medley of Victor Herbert selections and a group of folk songs by the U.C. Singers, and violin selections by Bruce Duncan, a member of the club. Bill Avery and Hugh Douglass are directing the operetta and John Linn is director of the Singers. Tickets for this all-musical evening are $1.00 and are on sale every day in the rotunda. ... For an organization, in its first year of operation, the Music Club has had ambitious plans and to date they have all been successful. There have been several record hours and there is to be another on this Friday in the Women's Union. There was a Christmas Musicale and another of equal calibre is being promised for some time in March.

Getting away from the social side for a while ... we'd like to remind all U.C. mermaids that practices for the intramural meet will be held every Monday and Thursday beginning January 31st, in the O.C.E. pool. Speed and style will be practised from 5.30 to 6.30 and ornamental and diving from 6.30 to 7.30. Anyone who missed the U.C. swimming meet, but is still interested, is invited to come out anyway. Zi Murray may be contacted at MI 3243 for further information.

Have a wonderful time at the Arts Ball. See you there.

P.S.—And when you're remembering what a perfect dance it was, remember that Social Directors, Mary Ritchie and Harry Rasky, are to be congratulated for a lot of hard work.

Blues At Kingston Tonite Seek Second From Gaels

By Hal Holden

Ace Bailey's hockey Blues hope to break the deadlock for second place in the Senior Inter ollegiate standings when they tackle Queen's collar-dwellers in Jock Harty Arena, Kingston, tonight.

The Blues' next intercollegiate fixture at home is with the league-leading Carabins of University of Montreal. The flying Frenchmen have not lost a game since Varsity beat them in the local opener on Dec. 3.

After the Montreal game here on Feb. 4 the Blues are hosts to the Tricolor of Queen's a week later and then go on the road for their next three games before closing the schedule against McGill on March 4. The three-game road trip will just about make or break their playoff chances.

Bob LaRose and Bud Hayes will not accompany the team to Kingston tonight. In their place, Danny McDougald and Paul Kavanaugh will share blueline duties with Wilf Digby and Gord Ecclestone. Bob Henry is suffering from an injured ankle, a result of the McGill fracas Friday, but is ready to keep his scoring punch in the line-up.

Varsity shaded Queen's 4-3 in the only other meeting of the two clubs.

Basketball Ints In Guelph Tonight

The Intermediate basketball Blues will journey to Guelph tonight, and tangle with the O.A.C. Aggies at 8 o'clock in their second scheduled league encounter of this season.

The Intermediates lost their league opener to the McMaster Rams here in Hart House during last Saturday's Athletic Night. If the Blues hope to be at the top of the heap when the end of this season rolls around, they can certainly stand a good deal of improvement particularly in the passing and foul shooting departments.

Boston Signs McGill Star Gelineau

Montreal, Jan. 26—(Special to The Varsity)—Star McGill netminder Jack Gelineau will start as goalie with the Boston Bruins of the NHL tonight as they face the Leafs in the Bean City. The announcement that Gelineau had been signed to a Boston contract was released last night with the information that he will also continue performing for the Redmen this season.

This is Gelineau's fourth season with the Redmen for whom he has been the mainstay in their bid for the Queen's Cup this year. The twenty-four year old netminder has been a constant stumbling block for Varsity snipers and was the individual star of last Friday's ice battle in Montreal. His stellar effort on that date was largely responsible for the 6-2 McGill triumph.

HOCKEY

PHE I and Vic I fought to a 0-0 stalemate yesterday. Both teams played all out from start to finish but the even calibre of the two squads combined with excellent netminding at both ends resulted in the scoreless deadlock. The last game between Vic and PHE also ended in a tie (1-1) and so the teams are now tied for the leadership in League I. Only the playoffs will show the better team.

During the fast tilt yesterday, first one team had the edge and then the other. Both goalies, Jean Rose of Vic and Joan Summerville, PHE, stopped goals that seemed sure-fire.

We stretched our necks toward the pictures, then quickly gave up to the rushing stream. The crowd was thick, restless and appeared to be completely wretched. There was a uniform blankness in their expression that would not have been there on a similar Sunday expedition to the Zoo. The Lord's Day Alliance should prevent the T.T.C. from exploiting their Sundays with subtle street-car advertising (Take Harbord or Dundas cars, get off at Beverley). Sunday is a day of rest and quiet relaxation, and for the sake of those who like paintings, the T.T.C. should be compelled to advise their passengers that the routes to the Zoo are still open.

May Subpoena Co-Editors Of Reporter

A possibility that the co-editors of the Reporter, the new campus journal that made its first appearance last week, may be called to Cornwall to answer charges of contempt of court, was expressed last night by George Bagwell, district counsel for the Canadian Seamen's Union.

On January 19, executive secretary of the Seamen's Defence Committee, Milton E. Nuttall, charged he had been libelled by an article in the Reporter erroneously stating that Nuttall was serving a term in the Federal penitentiary. He said then that his lawyer would also ask the court for a contempt order against the editors of the paper for commenting on a case still before the courts.

Bagwell was in Cornwall on Tuesday this week to defend Nuttall on a charge of forcible seizure and forcible confinement, a breach of section 297B of the Criminal Code, arising out of last summer's shipping tie-up on the Great Lakes. Nuttall was convicted on the charge and sentenced to three months in the Cornwall jail.

Commenting last night on the pending libel charge against the Reporter, Bagwell said, "I have had no further instructions from Nuttall about the charge." Before his sentence Nuttall said he was definitely going to take action on the charge.

Regarding the possible contempt charge, Bagwell said, "While in Cornwall I brought the Reporter article to the attention of the judge trying Nuttall's case. He turned it over to the Crown Attorney, R. P. Milligan, who is now determining if action should be taken to punish the author of the article."

When the article was printed, Nuttall said he was backed in his

Ridout Presents Musicale Of Glees, Madrigals, Solos

Five hundred years of music, a program under the direction of Godfrey Ridout will be presented in the Museum Theatre Thursday and Friday, Feb. 3 and 4 at 8.15 p.m. It will feature the music of that rich and creative period in English history when such men as Thomas Morley, Samuel Webb, and Edward Elgar were composing.

The madrigal, "April Is In My Mistress' Face", by T. Morley is characteristic of this Elizabethian period. "Now Is the Month of Maying" by the same composer is a simple madrigal in dance rhythm.

In the next period, Samuel Webb wrote the glee, "Glorious Apollo", originally written for men's voices, it is here transposed to accommodate the female range. The glee may be described as a continuation of the madrigal which until the nineteenth century was one of the few remaining forms of unaccompanied vocal writing.

Finally Edward Elgar is represented by two compositions, "As Torrents in Summer", and "My Love Dwelt In the North Land". Also included in the program are solos by Dit DeCarrol, II Vic.

Families Too Large, Houses Too Small

Seattle, Jan. 28 — (Exchange) — High birth rate in student-veteran families at the University of Washington poses a problem for campus housing authorities.

Osgoode Students Disagree 128-37 On Legal Education

Decision of the benchers of the Upper Canada Law Society to revise the present sytem of legal education at Osgoode Hall was "respectfully disapproved" by a vote of 128 to 37 at a mass meeting of students Thursday night. More than 300 of the 750 Osgoode students turned out for the meeting but by the time the vote was taken, after three hours of debate, almost half of the original number had left, many disapproving of discussing the motion at all.

Take No Sides

Some students reminded their colleagues Dean Cecil A. Wright, who resigned when the Benchers decided to have the students take fewer lectures and get more practical work in law offices, advised them "not to take sides" and said the meeting should not be called.

One student described the benchers as "a group of stubborn old men who are out of step with the times." Another referred to the faculty as "teachers of stuff which many of us feel is useless." The motives of both groups were described as being of the "highest level", but one student declared the open controversy exposed the profession as a whole to criticism

Many minutes were spent on points of procedure before the meeting discussed the main business. The first resolution was as to the advisability of any student comment at all.

In Public Domain

John Clary declared the legal education problem was now in the public domain and demanded comment from the students first and foremost. Garth Moore, who favored silence by the students, insisted "the problem should be dealt with by legislation."

The students decided to offer opinions on the issue and debate was invited on the resolution: "Resolved: that the members of the Osgoode Legal and Literary Association respectfully disapprove the policy on legal education decided on by Convocation."

Many of those who favored "no comment" on the benchers' decision left at this point. Few of the remainder flatly condemned either the benchers of the faculty and the view was frequently expressed that some compromise should be achieved between the two.

No Alternative Plan

No alternative plan was decided upon but a resolution suggesting compromise between Dr. Wright and the benchers was defeated.

"A Royal Commission is simply another way of shelving the issue," one student declared, adding it was better to have no meeting than to suggest such an alternative.

The question of the advisability of asking for investigation by a Royal Comission almost reached a vote but was ruled out of order because the students had not been informed

Lively Lush Likes Law Lectures

Law 3A had a new addition to the student body yesterday. During a lecture held in the church on College Street at 8 a.m. yesterday an unshaven citizen, apparently under the impression that prayer was being conducted, ambled in, seated himself and listened intently for several minutes.

From this point on the lecture was interrupted by frequent mutterings which culminated in the seeker of knowledge arising and asking in a loud voice if he was protected under the Evidence Act and could go to jail, or words to that effect. He lurched down the aisle, introduced himself to the lecturer and again repeated his request. Laughter by this time being widespread he tottered back to his seat performing a minor juggling act with his hat, and sat down.

At the close of the lecture he was observed cavorting about the vestibule.

Yale Philosopher Outlines History Of U.S. Thought

The effect on modern education of the philosophical school of pragmatism and of the pragmatist leader, John Dewey, was emphasized by Professor Brand Blanshard, head of the Department of Philosophy at Yale University, during a lecture he gave in University College yesterday.

The subject of the lecture was "Changing Patterns of American Thought." In it the professor outlined the history during this century of five philosophical systems: idealism, naturalism, pragmatism, realism, and a recent reaction to

To Report On Book Prices

Beginning with Monday's issue, The Varsity will run a series of articles by Wils Harrison, Assistant News Editor, outlining the facts which lie behind the present sale of used texts and the reason for the discrimination in prices.

Harrison began the investigation January 10, after The Varsity had received several vindictive letters to the editor charging a downtown book seller with using discriminating practices against the students in the buying and the selling of used college text books.

As the investigation progressed he found that many of the charges laid by students were without foundation. The main reason for this was that the situations which the book seller had to face warranted and justified his stand.

In seeking information for the articles, Harrison tapped the following sources: Coles Book Store, the University of Toronto Press, Horner and Bowes Book Exchange, Queen's University, Western University, members of the university organizations and the NFCUS report.

Lecturous Thoughts

Psychology And 1,896 Panes

By STAN LEE

High in the second gallery of Convocation Hall, sits a student. You could hardly call him apathetic, but the professor's voice is droning on and . . .

". . . and in studies with groups of children it has been found that this type of education is quite ineffective. One such study closely watched a group of more than one thousand . . ."

. . . one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-four, one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-five, one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-six. One thousand, eight hundred and ninety-six panes of glass! . . . two of them cracked . . . gawd, I'd hate to be the glazier that has to replace them . . . that dome must be 50 feet high . . . maybe more . . . think of climbing upon the roof and putting in the new panes . . . quite a job . . .

". . . quite a job to find the cause. Then it must be the task of the psychologist to look deeper into the patterns of behavior of the child and to discover if . . ."

. . . if there are eight clusters of lights, and if each cluster contains 50 bulbs, that makes a total of . . . well approximately 400 bulbs . . . wish I knew how to run one of those slide rule gadgets . . . 'course I could multiply it out the long way . . . no, better not . . . would spoil the look of the page and notes . . .

". . . and notes the difference in this type of behavior in the 15 year old and the pre-school age child. The adolescent conceals his emotions to a much greater extent than the younger child. The adolescent is becoming mature and developing a personality that is integrated and well-knit . . .

. . . knit, knit, knit! . . . don't those girls do anything but knit? What do they come to lecture for . . . to learn something interesting about psychology or to tie complicated knots in a length of string? Think they'd be more courteous to the profes . . . wonder what it is they're knitting on? . . . shapeless sort of articles . . . probably dish cloths for their mothers . . . kind of gaudy colors for dish cloths though . . . hardly look like sox . . . might be. Wish Mary would knit me sox . . . she can't even knit a dish cloth . . . you'd think she'd at least make an attempt . . .

". . . make an attempt to discover what lies behind the child's actions and, in terms of this discovery, direct the re-education of the child along the lines of standard forms of behaviors. To separate the children with these objectionable habits from the others requires careful selection or screening . . ."

Screen; all the time it's sitting up there and we never have a picture . . . think he'd get wise to himself and give us a film once in a while . . . might save me from getting writers' cramp every lecture . . . darn hard trying to get everything he says. Would save him time too . . . he's human, maybe he'd like a free evening at home when he didn't have to prepare a lecture for the next day . . . wonder if they do show pictures to any classes? Wish he'd give us some variety . . .

". . . some variety in the situations that are provided for the child. In the eating situation, for example, variety should be provided in the foods . . ."

FOOD! That's what I need . . . gosh but I'm hungry . . . must be nearly one o'clock . . . not a speck of food since eight this morning . . . maybe he thinks we're robots . . . maybe he doesn't get hungry but I do . . . must be almost time to . . .

". . . time to close this lecture. "I have a request to make of this class. Sometime before next period, would each of you jot down on a pice of paper any complaints you may have about this course—any disappointments you have experienced in the subject matter, anything you would like to see included in the course that is not now studied. If you would hand these to me at the end of next lecture period, I would greatly appreciate it.

"And now, good day."

Good night! Complaints! Complaints about this course! Gosh, maybe I should tell him how much I get out of these lectures.

Rabbi Creates Tempest Among Fraternity Men On Anti-Semitic Issue

Vancouver, Jan. 28 — (CUP) — Rabbi David C. Kogen's statement that University of British Columbia fraternities were "ridden with anti-semitism and social cannibalism" has created a tempest in a teapot according to campus fraternity men.

Anti-semitism has never been an issue in UBC fraternities, they said. "Anyway, a Jewish fraternity was established here about the same time as other fraternities and Jewish students have always tended to associate with their own fraternity so the problem has never arisen," spokesmen pointed out.

"The relationship between Jewish and other fraternities hal always been most friendly", they added.

"As far as I am concerned, race is the last thing I would consider in passing judgment on a prospective member," one fraternity man declared.

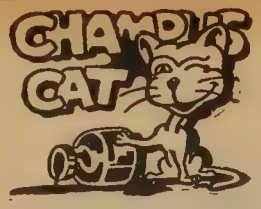
Another Restriction

The latest Caput regulation, announced yesterday, which curtails meetings of student groups in university buildings during lecture hours is one that deserves the serious consideration of every student organization.

University officials point out that the only buildings affected by the decree are buildings which are under the direct control of the president's office, buildings such as Convocation Hall and McLennan Laboratory. They hasten to add that the regulation does not include buildings belonging to federated colleges and faculties whose jurisdiction lies in the hands of individual college heads. But, they point out, the heads of the federated colleges are being asked to co-operate in order to uphold "the spirit of the regulation", although they are not necessarily bound by it. Since the college heads involved are all members of the Caput which passed the regulation, it is reasonable to assume that they will enforce the restrictions imposed by the new regulation, in their own college buildings.

By limiting facilities which have always been inadequate in any case, the Caput has taken another step in the regimentation of student life. It is especially serious because, at the present time, there is not one building on the campus specifically designed for student activities although students have been clamouring for years for such a building. And until a student union building is erected, the shortage will continue to be acute.



The Caput apparently felt the ruling was necessary "to insure that the instructional periods of the University are not seriously interfered with by meetings which would attract students from lectures or laboratory classes."

It is difficult to believe that the number of student meetings held during lecture hours in the past has been great enough to warrant such a regulation, and it is almost amusing to note the Caput's sudden solicitude towards students who may wish to miss occasional lectures.

Oddly enough, little official concern seems to have been felt at the sight of a thousand students missing lectures to line up for rugby tickets at 10 a.m. We noticed little official concern last fall when a red feather campaign attracted students from lectures. The examples are innumerable.

The new ruling is one more indication of the inconsistency of the Caput. It is the same inconsistency which bans the use of loudspeakers on the campus because they make too much noise, but permits the University band to play during lecture hours.

As it has done so often in the past, the Caput has presented a new regulation which restricts student activity on this campus. And, as before, the reasons offered seem inadequate.

A Bison Is A Bison Is A Bison

Ugu (Hugh) Tigerfangef was polishing off his last mural commissioned by the Council of Old Men. The cave was dark and Ugu was glad to be done for the mammoth fat supplied by the Council was of inferior quality and gave a very poor light. But Ugu was glad for another reason. He was tired of drawing bison to look like real bison. After all, every time he looked at a bison he drooled with the thought of the nice juicy lives inside and all the vitamins it contained. Why should he not show the liver too, dripping with bright red blood. He knew and everybody knew it as the. Everybody knew that the bison's skin was not there just to shut out the view—it was there to hold the liver in until Ugu and others of his tribe could get at it with a glistening flint blade.

And as Ugu put his few pigments away and wiped his hands on his shaggy brows, he thought about the bison. How it was more than just a bison. It was an experience, a way of life, a terror, a pleasure and a grocery store all in one. And why should he not depict these things in his next drawing?

Really a Genius

If you had told Ugu that he was a genius . . . he would have smiled and wiped his hands on his shaggy brows, he would have smiled at you with incomprehension. But Ugu was a genius. No doubt of that. And the inspiration of genius was suddenly turned on like a 60-watt lamp. Ugu was galvanized into action. He scraped off the old mural with his flint knife while his dolichocephalic head seethed with the flood of his ideas.

He picked up a choice piece of burned ember and began to work. He was free now, the past was behind, the dead hand of tradition was deader than a split flint head. First, of course, he drew in a mammoth (pardon me) a bison's heart, big and juicy and Ugu's mouth drooled with pleasure. Deftly he sketched in lines and planes and areas to represent terror, fear, pleasure, satisfaction, the hunt, the pitfall, the baying hounds and the opposite side of the bison which only a fool would say could not be seen.

Work Finished

Soon the great work was finished. Ugu regretted slightly the absence of any clear picture of a bison. But he knew that this was it.

Next morning excitement grew in the camp over Ugu's new drawing. By noon the tribe had divided into two factions—who thought that a bison should look like a bison and those who said that a picture didn't have to look like anything to be real art. By suppertime epithets were flying and by nightfall flint clubs and boulders filled the air. The champions of Ugu's new-fangled art were driven off, with Ugu well in the van hugging his flintpots of pigment and trembling with speculations on the Influence of Art in Daily Life.

At the crack of dawn the remainder of the tribesmen rolled huge boulders up to the entrance of the cave and sealed it off for good. Muttering curses at Ugu and Fate, the tribemen picked up their clubs, gathered up some fire and womenfolk and set off in search of a new cave, where they could begin life anew, with bison on their walls that looked like bison.

New Arts Monarchs Chosen At UC Ball At R.Y. Last Night

Judges at the Royal York Hotel last night chose a first-year honor Music student, Margo MacKinnon, to reign as '49 Queen of the Arts Ball. With her as King was chosen Paul Garner, II St. Mike's.

Paul Garner is a pianist in second year Pass Arts at St. Michael's College. His home is in St. Catharines. Miss MacKinnon is from Windsor. She attended Walkerville Collegiate and is now studying singing at the Royal Conservatory of Music. After winning the crown, Garner said, "I shall continue my studies ... unless somebody hooks me first."

All four contestants were the recipients of beautiful gifts. The lovely Queen received a silver dresser set from the T. Eaton Company and also a large bouquet of roses from Cooper Florists. The gold pen and pencil set from Birks was given to the King who had to appear from under his elaborate crown to view the gift.

The runners-up received two albums of George Gershwin's recordings. Marjorie Elliott, who was second to Miss MacKinnon, played Bach's "Toccato and Fugue in D minor". The runner-up to the King was Peter Bourke, a baritone from St. Michael's College. Bourke, whose home is in North Bay, attended collegiate at Scollard Hall. His rendition of "I've got you under my skin", was chosen as second best by the judges.

The judges were Oscar Peterson, Mart Kenney and Bonnie Clark.

Diana Nesbit, last year's Queen of Arts, crowned the winners in the finals of a month-long Arts Talent search. The finalists were chosen at the All Arts contest last Wednesday.

Paul Garner was chosen as a finalist when the University College Literary and Athletic Society decided that "Slim" Wedderburne, Ajax student, was not eligible to compete in what was essentially an All Arts Talent contest.

Margo MacKinnon, the newly crowned Queen, sang a medley of Gershwin selections, including "Someone to watch over me".

Peace Offensive This Afternoon Features Movies

The Peace Offensive to be held in Vic. Chapel today from 2 p.m. to 9.45 p.m. will feature five speakers, a movie, and discussion groups.

Dr. Walter Strangway, a United Church Medical Missionary, has recently returned from Portuguese West Africa. He will speak on the "Voice of Africa".

Dr. "Bob" McClure, another Medical Missionary, will speak on the subject "Just Back From China". Except for furloughs, Dr. McClure has worked steadily in China since 1923. He is at home now because of illness in his family but expects to return to China as soon as the illness is over.

Mrs. Gordon Agnew who was formerly with the United Church of Canada in West China will have "Why a Peace Offensive" as her topic. Mrs. Agnew has recently returned from Yugoslavia.

Director of School

Dr. Leland Albright of New York City and present director of the Canadian School of Missions, Toronto, will speak on "Missions in a Revolutionary Era".

Miss Eunice Pyfrom, who has just returned from three months spent in Sweden, Finland and Germany where she visited the International Volunteer Work Camps, will speak on "Europe Today".

The Peace Offensive has been described as "a conference for the special re-evaluation of Christian responsibility in a world hovering between peace and war". Its aims are "to present Christianity in its essential, dynamic objectives" and to "bring people to a consciousness of Christ".

Defeat Motion For Domestic Science Work

The resolution, "There should be a compulsory course in domestic science in the university" was defeated in the first Portia Debate held yesterday at noon. Pearl Parnes and Joan Easser comprised the winning negative, and Malca Goldenburg and Norma Shankman, the affirmative.

"It is a well-known fact that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach", stated Miss Goldenburg. Pearl Parnes, defending the negative pointed out that meals comprise only two hours of the day. There still remains 22 hours in which a woman's only tool is her wit and intelligence.

"A woman must learn the art of keeping her home clean from cellar to attic, so that when a man comes home, he can boast proudly to his friend: there's my wife", affirmed Norma Shankman, upholding the resolution.

Joan Easser pointed out that compulsory domestic science would add emphasis to the old-fashioned idea that a woman's only place is in the home. With a liberal education, true university value would round out the modern woman's interests.

Christian Ideal Should Be Goal Says SCM Report

The reason for the so-called state of crisis in the world today is that man lives with no real conscious reference to the purposes of God, the SCM Commission on Politics stated in its recently published report. The three ideologies existent in the world today, Communism, Capitalism and Fascism all contain the inherent weakness that they do not provide the individual sufficient freedom for fellowship with God and his fellowmen, the report said.

The commission recommends that Christians in any social system should work for the Christian ideal, that is, to take his stand upon the belief that because man is made in the image of God his eternal destiny gives him inherent value, and never succum to the materialistic setting of the existing ideologies.

In the section on practical issues, the report says, "There is an emphasis in society that man has the right to do what he will with his private property wtihout reference to the will of God or the needs of his fellowmen. Because we believe that the means of production and the land are ultimately God-given;

Comment Refused By Higginbottom On Fees Report

No further information concerning the presentation of the Students' Administrative Council Fees Brief to Hon. Dana Porter, Provincial Minister of Education, was available yesterday. A meeting of the Board of Governors held yesterday afternoon discussed plans to present the brief to the Provincial Government. Officials of the Board of Governors refused to comment on the discussion.

C. E. Higginbottom, University Bursar and Secretary of the Board of Governors, declined to comment. "Any information on the question will have to come from President Smith who has been dealing with the brief," Higginbottom stated.

President Smith was not available for comment. He left the city immediately following the meeting and will not return for several days.

Blue Intermeds To Meet Colts

Tonight at 8:30 the Varsity intermediate hockey team will make their league debut when they meet their arch-rivals from London, the Western Colts.—(fanfare).

The Intermediates have won ther last two exhibition starts, one against Waterloo College and one against Clinton Hockey Club (NY).

Reports from Western say that they have the best intermediate team that they have ever iced. If you want to see a good brand of fast, passing hockey, drop down to the arena tonight and help the team get off to a good start.

Osgoode Hall

A Report By The Benchers

In a statement issued yesterday members of the legal education committee of the Law Society of Upper Canada admit that the system of office apprenticeship "has broken down" as charged by Dean C. A. Wright of the Osgoode Law School and five other full-time lecturers of the school.

Dr. Wright and his colleagues resigned from the school last Friday in protest against the committee's recommendations. Dr. Wright favors a full-time law school.

The report recommends that the resignation of the five members of the law school be accepted by the convocation at its next meeting, February 17.

The text reads in part, "The chief argument put forward by those who advocate a full-time law school is that the system of office apprenticeship had broken down. There is some weight in this criticism but the situation is due largely to post-war conditions which are capable of being remedied. Many persons who favor a full-time law school are frank to state that they consider the apprenticeship system the most effective one but they think conditions will never again be such that students will receive a proper training under the old system. They advance as a main argument that there is so much specialization in present-day offices students cannot obtain a broad general practical training and most members of the profession are so busy they can no longer devote the time necessary to supervise the training of students articled to them."

Students Overburdened

Going on to point the more serious defects of the present system the statement says, "There has been a great deal of criticism of the existing system by students and largely due to the fact the amount of academic work instead of being reduced to bring it into balance with office practice. has been substantially increased. This has resulted in students, who have endeavored conscientiously to do hte required amount of both academic and practical work, being overburdened, and in some instances failing to do justice to either." The statement also says some practitioners have come to feel they cannot count on the student articled to them being available when they could be given opportunity of practical work.

The statement points out "in this connection there is one factor which has seriously affected the standard of office practice and which should be specially mentioned. This is the change instituted some years ago where students have all their lectures in the morning instead of one at nine o'clock in the morning and another at four-thirty o'clock in the afternoon as had been the practice at Osgoode for sixty years or more." Pointing out the prejudicial effect on the student's opportunities for practical training the statement says a student is now unable to report to his law firm in the morning and accompany his lawyer to court. Thus he is not able to follow a case from beginning to end.

Do Practical Work

Enlarging on this point the statement says, "Even in offices which do little or no court work it is important that students be on hand by ten o'clock so that when the day's work is being planned they will be available for any task which may be alloted to them. This also would enable them to conduct Division Court and other minor court matters which for the most part they are not able to do under the present time-table. While it can be said all lectures should be given in the morning when the minds of the students are fresher and more receptive, this is outweighted by the other considerations mentioned, particularly in view of the past satisfactory experience in giving lectures in the morning and after noon for so many years."

Osgoode Standards High

The committee claims in the statement that academic standards at Osgoode Hall are higher than at most comparable institutions and actually are on a post-graduate level.

"It is unfortunate that in recent years there have been differences of opinion between the Legal Education Committee and the full-time Law School staff," said the statement. "These have been detrimental to the work of the school by making impossible the full and harmonious co-operation which must exist between all those concerned in the work of legal education if the best results are to be obtained. These differences are largely due to the opposition of many of the full-time staff to the system of Concurrent Law School and practical training. There are other factors contributing to the differences of opinion, but the fundamental cause is the difference in viewpoint as to the respective merit of the concurrent system training and a full time Law School. The full-time members of the Law School staff, in general, favor a full-time school, and some of them have given public expression to such opinions. This is regrettable, as the Benchers who are elected by the profession are responsible for the policy of legal education, and should be able to

Wednesday Five

The Conservatory Concert Hall is well suited for a concert intimate in style of music and performance. The third concert in the series was given by Gesza de Kresz, violinist, and Norah Drewett, pianist. The two sonatas played were both written by men who were primarily pianists, Mozart and Busoni. Add to this the temperamental difference between an energetic pianist and a more restrained violinist and as a result the tonal balance is too strongly in favor of the piano. Nevertheless, both performers were one in the impression of carefully planned and sound work.

The Mozart sonata in E flat is perhaps my favorite in the whole volume because of its personal and expressive slow movement. The last movement bring a great contrast and the saucy spirit of its little variation tune should have been more emphasized.

A curious mixture of stylistic components makes up the Busoni sonata 36 a, composed around the turn of the century. Romantic indulgence in full luxuriant sound is combined with a classical directness of utterance and a fin-de-siecle hypertrophy of form. Like many a nineteenth century composer from Liszt to Strauss, Busoni set out to write lofty philosophy and often achieved something very little above the level of salon music. Lack of harmonic interest is the greatest fault, but the last movement shows a good sense of climax. I was grateful to hear a work that is so rarely performed.

Eliot's 'Murder'

The versatility of University of Toronto dramatics was never more startlingly and magnificently demonstrated than at the All-Varsity reading of T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral", Wednesday night. Four colleges, under the auspices of the University Players Guild, cooperated.

Play is one which requires careful and repeated readings for full understanding. Therefore, a special bouquet is due John Howe and his outstanding cast for the clarity which greeted those who were not too familiar with it.

Each character had obviously been studied with sincere earnestness and the feelings of each became an intricate part of the audience's understanding of mankind. One felt compelled to concentrate ever atom of intelligence and emotion on the unfolding of the story of Archbishop Thomas Becket of 12th century England. For the play is one of those rare creations which are both intellectually and emotionally stimulating.

The calibre exhibited seemed to merit a little more support than was advanced. And here let me inject a note of "I told you so" superiority to the many who missed this truly satisfying studio night.

Might I suggest to those in power that these people be given the means to show us what they could do with a full-scale production. The cast has adequately demonstrated what they can accomplish in a short time and with no mechanical help from staging or actions.

A final plea—The performance of Eliot's play adequately demonstrated that student drama can reach a higher intellectual level than has recently been displayed. Do not let this movement towards a higher standard of dramatic art die.

Bloor Choir & C. Crozier

Catherine Crozier was the guest organist in the third Casavant Society Musicale Wednesday evening at Eaton Auditorium and was assisted by the Bloor Collegiate Glee Club directed by Hugh Peart.

Oddly enough, Bach had no part in the organ program, and what proceedings in his absence! To me, Franck Chorale in B minor as Miss Crozier played it is a poor opener to any program . . . lugubrious, at times almost monotonous, and definitely lacking the zest that is subtly written into it. But the Schumann Sketch in F minor suffered the worst. Such liberties in tempo and registration! As if the fluctuating speed were not enough, the juicy-fruit stops drawn for the middle movement were decidedly out of place in this barochial piece. Bingham's "Rhythmic Trumpet" was gay and witty and Dupre's Variations on a Noel were particularly well done.

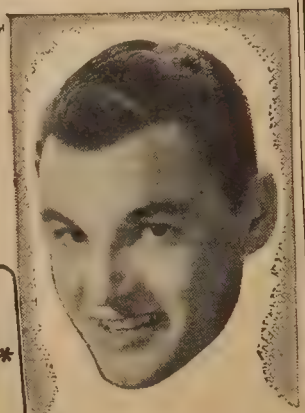
In the modern group (Messiaen, Verne, Mulet) her style left little to be desired. With her accuracy on the pedals equally that of the manuals and her general registrations imbued with exquisite imagination and invention, she can rightly be placed first among the great organists of her sex.

The choir is composed entirely of girls. Despite their large number, their fortissimi were weak, even in the strenuous "Hallelujah Chorus". Their attacks were precise and resolute . . . no hesitancy here . . . and their clarity of diction is to be commended. Their contribution to the program provided varied interests from Bach to Canadian contemporaries and was well managed by Mr. Peart. Kenneth Davis.

Chorus, Orchestra In First Concert

Harold Neal conducts the first of two concerts of the All-Varsity Orchestra and Mixed Chorus in Convocation Hall, Friday, at 8:20 p.m. The major choral work is Faure's Requiem Mass. Soloists are Jean Patterson and John Blair of the Toronto Conservatory. Chorus accompanist, Bertram Turvy is studying for the degree of Bachelor of Music. His previous experience includes six years with the army touring with the Tin Hats, and giving concerts in Africa and Italy. He also worked with the BBC. Organist soloist with the orchestra is Norman Hurrle, conservatory student and silver medallist.

Last year, the chorus and orchestra gave three outside concerts and 13 concerts in Convocation Hall and Ajax.



The orchestra was created in 1934 at the instigation of John Weinzweig, Toronto composer. Hans Gruber, who is now with the Vancouver Symphony, conducted last year. The chorus has been in existence two years. This year besides Convocation Hall, concerts are planned for Ajax, McMaster and possibly Kingston.

Osgoode Report

count on the loyal co-operation of the staff."

Unsettling Effect

"Unfortunately, the opinion of the staff has been made known to the students and this has had an unsettling effect, since those who are finding it difficult to keep up with their work are prone to blame their troubles on what they visualize as a struggle between two conflicting schools of thought. During his years at the Law School, a hard-pressed student, who is in daily contact with a lecturer whom he knows to be an advocate of a full-time school, is likely to be strongly influenced by the views of the lecturers. In most instances it is not until a student has graduated and embarked on practice that he appreciates the value of the training received under the concurrent system. It is most important that all persons entrusted with the task of carrying a system into effect must bend every effort towards making it a success. This they obviously cannot do if they are ready to criticize openly the very institution under which they are working. Such an attitude is bound to have detrimental effect on the students who are committed to their charge and steps should be taken immediately to remedy this situation."

Passes Resolutions

The Law Society Convocation of Jan. 20, 1949, passed the following resolutions:

1—That a system of concurrent Law School and practical training be continued, and that no change be made in present entrance requirements or the length of service under articles prescribed for graduate or matriculant students.

2—That the present curriculum of the Law School be reviewed by the Legal Education Committee in collaboration with the Dean and that such modifications and changes be made therein as may be deemed necessary to provide a better balanced course of training as between the academic and practical branches of the course.

3—That the course at the Law School be limited to ten fifty-minute lectures a week, of which two will be held each day from Monday to Friday inclusive, at 9 a.m. and 4:10 p.m.

4—That the practice group system be continued for students of the First Year.

5—That steps be taken as expeditiously as possible, having regard to the problems of War Veterans, to enforce the rule under which students are required to work in legal offices during the Christmas and Long vacations, except for reasonable holidays.

6—That the practice of holding Christmas examinations prior to the Christmas holidays be restored.

7—That oral examinations be held in each of the three years. In the first year these could take the form of tests as now prescribed to insure that students are working satisfactorily under the practice group system. We recommend that in the second year oral examinations of at least fifteen minutes duration be held and that in the third year such examinations be of not less than thirty minutes duration.

8—That consideration be given to the appointment of a member of the profession as a salaried official of the Society on a full-time basis to superintend the system of service under articles, to keep in touch with the offices in which students are working, to interview principals and students when necessary, and generally to insure that students are receiving the requisite practical training.

9—That consideration be given to the establishment of a post-graduate course in law.

Nothing Personal But . . .

It is not the intention of the Legal Education Committee to enter into any personal controversy with Dr. Wright but the following must be said:

(1) No assurance was given to him that he was to participate in the work of the Special Committee.

(2) He was in fact invited to appear and did appear on two occasions before that Committee and was given a full opportunity to present his views.

(3) He, immediately prior to his appointment as Dean, knowing that Convocation was not in favor of a full-time Law School, promised to co-operate with the Benchers.

NFCUS Pres. Urges Queen's To Rejoin

Kingston, Jan. 28 — (CUP) — A strong plea on behalf of Queen's officially re-tying her parted strands with the National Federation of Canadian University Students was made last Thursday by Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, National President of NFCUS, at a meeting sponsored by Queen's student council.

About 40 people attended the meeting, which was held to discuss future relations between Queen's and NFCUS. Following Mr. Gwynne-Timothy's speech outlining the aims and accomplishments of NFCUS, the meeting formed a committee to promote affiliation with the student federation.

Campus Publications

Acta Victoriana

The December issue of Acta Victoriana represents a considerable advance over the previous number and, although the balance is turned in favor of poetry, there is one serious essay of merit. The editors deserve praise for excluding much of the extraneous matter with which college magazines are usually littered. Literary efforts can never be adequately presented in a glorified rugby program.

Of the poetry, Norma Arnett's poem "Nieda and the Vision" is outstanding for the childlike simplicity of its imagery and the complete harmony of mood throughout. In "Alder Song" she has not quite captured the tenuous theme she sought to present. Douglas Valleau's "Effusion" was one of the more finished poems of the issue. I liked particularly the lines:

"Savour the incense-bite scathing the retreating nerve Excitingly."

Harry Green's essay, "Noufoundland Occasion" was both timely and extremely well-written. A. McEwen contributed a short essay, "If My Kingdom" which touched on the morality of war and power politics and would have greatly benefited from further development along these lines.

There are two major faults to be found with this issue of Acta. Firstly, although the editors have been successful in eliminating non-literary trash, they have not managed to cut out some of the contributions which do not deserve space. Secondly, there is a surprising dearth of good shorts. Ann Berkovits' "Tale" falls far short of the mark as does J. C. Marrs' "Eden Spells Hell", although it seems unfair to class these two together. Hope Arnott's "The Aging of the Young" is the one redeeming story in the issue; here the writer shows a real grasp of the medium.

Only one book review was included in this issue, surprisingly enough. E. G.'s article on Lauren Harris' work is one of the few objective discussions of his technique to have reached print. Considered as a whole, the quality of this Acta is thin and there is no proper balance maintained between the fiction and poetry and the essays and critical work. Maybe next time.

Blues Basketball

played their best game of the year to edge the Raiders 51-48. The Blues have improved greatly since their first contests two months ago—of that there is no doubt at all. So leave us disregard that Albion game—yes, leave us.

So there we have the Blues' excellent showing against Assumption, and added to this fact is the spirit of the players themselves. They're out for a win, with no inferiority complex when it comes to Western.

(Ed. Note: Don't think that we're trying to boost the game . . . it's a sell-out already.)

Glen Pettinger says he's going out after 20 points again. Big Doug Tyndall promises to check Wearring into the floor.

Co-captain Johnny McManus vows to stick so closely to Bob Phibbs that Phibbs will think that he's found a real pal (Yak, Yak). The rest of the Blues have similar sentiments.

So come on you Blues, we're calling you to win by five points.

before the meeting that such a problem would be voted on.

Minority Present

Only 128 out of a total enrolment of 750 students were present to vote in disapproval of last week's decision of the benchers and only among the first-year students was endorsement of the faculty general. The general consensus of opinion, however, was than any resolution which condemned the action of the benchers was not to be interpreted necessarily as approval of the stand taken by the faculty.

One student felt that the meeting did not produce any positive result.

"No-one succeeded in defining what better arrangements could be made," he said, "and I don't feel that the opinions expressed showed in definite terms why they were held."

"We have spent four hours arguing brilliantly but decided nothing," remarked another.

For partial text of last week's decision of the benchers see page 3.

Christian Ideal

because we believe that men hold these in stewardship for God and man, and are therefore responsible to God and man; because this possession of property enables some men to exercise control over other men, we feel that this emphasis is anti-Christian."

The report further stated the control of employers over employees' means of livelihood spoils the brotherly relationship of God's children and is essentially anti-Christian. The outcome, the report continues, is the battle being fought today between large international trade unions and the capitalist monopolies.

The report said it is the duty of Christians within each group to work together, and recommends as more Christian: 1. Co-operatives, and 2. A system of economic democracy.

The report also offered suggestions on Civil Liberties, the Canadian Indian Situation the Japanese Canadian question, Anti-Semitism, Discrimination on Political and Economic Bases, Questionable Uses of Force, Arms to China, Unilateral Action, Palestine, and Relief.

CORRECTION

A typographical error in yesterday's story of the Hart House debate was responsible for a reported vote of 35-34 in favor of the resolution which condemned the United Kingdom's policy on Palestine. The vote was actually 54-34 in favor of the motion.

Pitching Sportshoes

By BILLY ROSS

At the local puck palace Trinity blasted Vic fourths by a 6-1 mar- in the noon-hour ice engage- ment. Harley of Trinity, with a trio of goals, led the pack and teammate Hilborn came up with two while Whitehead got a single and Fleming figured in two scores. Thomas was the lone scorer for Vic.

In the four p.m. encounter Meds birds whipped the St. Mike's Cs. 5-2 yesterday. Five men divided the Meds' scoring evenly. Farrel, Morrison, Hilliard, McIntyre, and Perkins were the markmen. The doctors got four goals in the first game while the Mikemen went scoreless.

Cameron and Chapeskie netted the St. Mike's tallies. Art Currie stood out in the double blue nets although suffering from non-support from the rest of the team.

The St. Michael's major hoop A's and Bees split the bill yesterday on the Hart House floor. The A's took a tight 33-32 decision from the PHE I and the Bees bowed to St. Meds A's 34-27.

The A-PHE I tilt was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way with the double blue hoopsters holding a single point edge at the end of the first half while both squads scored eighteen points in the final stanza.

Ryan paced the A's with nine points, followed by Bags McKeown with eight to his credit. Figel, smooth-working guard of the collegians, was responsible for five points and Keans got four. Murphy and Wiley with two each and Giblin with a single round out the Mike's scoring list.

Strom of PHE was the high man for the game, turning in a fine fifteen-point performance while Gayman got eight. Bell with four, Gourley with three, and Genese who sank a free shot, were the other PHE marksmen.

Al Varga of Meds A's, with eleven points and Jim Smith, with twelve, were the large cannons for the winners. Smith hooped four points and Kent Armstrong got two along with Axe Halliburton. George McMullen was best for the Bees with Steve Carr runner-up with six. Carr was also very impressive around the backboard. Murphy also tallied six points while Washington and Tex James were in there for three each. Philipovic supplied the remaining two for the Mikemen.

Yale Philosopher

believers in the philosophy of pragmatism stress the importance of practical results of thought. John Dewey had applied this emphasis to the subject matter and methods of education. He had claimed that education should deal with "useful" subjects and students should learn by actually putting into practice what they learned.

Recently, Mr. Blanshard said, Dewey's methods have been adopted widely in American schools, especially in those that practice "progressive education." In these schools, he added, pupils learn English by doing assignments in creative English and study drama by acting in plays. Such "impractical" subjects as pure mathematics had little importance in progressive schools.

The speaker said however that Dewey's theories on education have not had as great effect in university methods of teaching. "The pragmatic program has proved unconvincing for higher education," he said. University leaders felt that its emphasis on the practical and functional would limit the scope of higher learning.

At the beginning of the twentieth century virtually all American philosophers were believers in idealism, Professor Blanshard said. According to this system thought, not matter, has true reality, he explained.

These philosophers had not yet been affected by scientific methods nor had they developed logic to as fine a degree as had modern philosophers. "But they were wise men, more so then their successors," Mr. Blanshard stated.

Idealism had first been attacked by George Santayana, founder of the philosophical system called naturalism. He had taught that all thought was the result of physical processes. Professor Blanshard commented: "It seems to me to make all rational thought, including Santayana's own, a miracle."

Professor Blanshard outlined the two other systems, pragmatism and realism, whose followers attacked idealism. The pragmatists' belief that "thought is a means to ends which is to be realized by action" was described by the speaker as "the most original note in American thought."

COLE SCAN

One of the more obscure, but exacting, professions we have come across in our investigations, is that of tea judger, or taster. For this profession, the aspirant must have a tongue as sensitive and perceptive, as the tongue of the South American ant-eater is long and accurate. There's an involved technical glossary for the various grades of tea, but for the ordinary layman, tea falls into three categories of taste:

(i) stimulating
(ii) wishy washy
(iii) dish-water

The experienced tea-taster can find something good to say for the last two categories, doubtless in self-justification. To us, dish-water is dish-water.

CAN BLUES HOG-TIE MUSTANGS?

We Sure Can, Says Varsity; Tickets For Athletic Night Featuring Cage Opener Gone

Meds-Dents Night Has Kilted Girls Gymnastics, Pics

Meds and Dents play hosts to the hosts to the student body this Saturday in the second Athletic Night of the season.

Featured event of the evening will be a basketball contest against Western seconds and seniors. The senior kickoff will take place at 8:30.

The Senior Intramural Gymnastic meet will take place in the Upper Gym, while Frank Buck, coach of the gymnastic team, will be looking for musclemen to fill out the team.

In the pool, the Senior Interfaculty Swim Meet will take place, followed by an exhibition game of tank tennis by the Varsity water polars.

Football movies will be shown in the fencing room from 8:30-11:30. These pictures are of the McGill game and the game train.

At half-time in the Intercollegiate basketball fixture, a group from the U. of T. pipe band plus four bonny lassies will give an exhibition of Scottish dancing.

As usual, the two gymns will be open for dancing after the athletic events, the wrestling room will be turned into a combined games room and lounge, and the tuck shop will be open.

Head Horse

Captain Paul Thomas is enjoying his best season since donning the Purple and White, and he is runner-up to Phibbs in the scoring department. He specializes in one-point shots, and has dropped 29 of them so far this season. Thomas will lead his team against the Blues at Hart House tomorrow night.

BEAT WESTERN

Western Dropped McGill and Gaels But Not Raiders

By ED VOIGHT

Coach Bob Masterson's biggest worry right about now is whether or not his Varsity Blues hoopsters can come up with a performance similar to last Saturday's exhibition with the Assumption Purple Raiders.

For if the Blues play tomorrow night versus Western at the third Athletic Night as they played last week against the Raiders, the locals have an excellent chance of knocking off the Metras Mustangs.

In fact, we are going on record to say, right here and now, that the Blues, if they play as well as last Saturday, will knock off Western, and cut the Londoners' current win streak at exactly two.

Western Won Two

For last weekend, the Mustangs opened the '48-'49 Intercollegiate basketball season with a double triumph over McGill and Queen's in Montreal and Kingston. Western subdued the Redmen, 51-35, on Friday night, and the next night defeated the Gaels, 54-35.

The only absentee from Metras' championship team of last year is Dick Farley, who graduated last spring. Otherwise the Mustangs are intact, and as evidenced by last weekend's games, are already rolling along in high gear.

Top Scorers

Bob Phibbs and Big George Wearring are once again Western's one-two scoring punch. Wearring popped in 16 points against McGill and Phibbs sank 14 against Queen's to top the Mustang scorers in the respective games.

George Arnott, Paul Thomas — this year's Mustang captain — Don Scott, Bill Ford and Bill Wade are all back again to round out the '48-49 Mustang aggregation.

The only possible comparisons between the Blues and the Mustangs stems from their respective games with Albion College and Assumption.

Western rolled over Albion 75-57 early in December, but this same Albion team knocked off the Blues 57-38 the next night due to a rather lack-lustre performance by the locals.

Lost To Assumption

The Assumption Raiders, with Freddy Thomas leading the way (which is nothing unusual) defeated the Mustangs 54-44 in London three weeks ago. Last Saturday, the Blues

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB JONES

A band of comparative unknowns walked off with a substantial measure of the crowd's plaudits at Saturday's Athletic Night. The group invited to present a display at the half-way mark of the feature basketball game was composed of a quartet from the University of Toronto Gymnastic Club. The young men performed a series of astounding and intricate gyrations on the high bar as the spectators alternated gasps and cheers in appreciation of their muscle-rending efforts.

The gmynast is a rare species of athletic animal in these environs (the weekly attendance at the Club classes numbers 35 at best), but no group works more earnestly at their sport or has contributed more glory to the old Blue and White in their field than this one.

Intercollegiate competition in gymnastics is limited to Varsity and McGill, since no other colleges have seen fit to floor a team, but competition for the Caron Cup has gone on since 1920 with the two schools alternating in holding the trophy for long periods. When the Toronto team enters Montreal to compete on February 12, it will attempt to retain the honours for the 12th straight year. What other Blue team can boast such a record?

The task of choosing this year's team is as yet unfinished and will be accomplished, to a great extent, by the Intramural meet being held at this Saturday's Athletic Night. Positions are virtually certain for Johnny Laxton, twice winner of the Wherry Cup for the individual Intercollegiate Gymnastic championship; Joe Humphrey, Gord Gibson, and Marty MacDowell. The remaining positions on the six-man team are being contested by students from all the faculties on the campus. This is a decided contrast to the usual predominance of PHE students in the group.

Those who enjoy a good gymnastic display, would be well advised to visit the upper gym, if in attendance at Hart House on Saturday night; the contortionists will manipulate their physiques on the parallel and high-bars, pommel horse, rings and mats in quest of a berth on the team.

Mr. Buck, who lectures in accounting for the University Economics Department, where he is known as Frank "Bring-'em-back-Balanced" Buck, succeeded the popular Charlie Zwygard as coach of the team last year. With the able assistance of George Nick, Frank is whipping his charges into championship shape, but wishes it known that anyone interested in the sport, is always welcome to the weekly gqmnastic classes in Hart House.

Swimming

The intramural swimming practices are starting Monday, Jan. 31, and will be held every following Monday and Wednesday until the intramural meet at Hart House on March 5.

These practices at OCE are open to everyone regardless of whether they swam in their college or faculty splash party or not. The speed and style portion of the practice starts at 5:30 and the divers and ornamentalists take over at 6:30.

Hockey

Yesterday's Physio vs Institutional Management game was cancelled as the Managers' team has dropped out of the league. The ice was used for an All-Varsity practice which attracted over twenty hopefuls.

On Wednesday, St. Mike's rallied with two goals in the last period to tie UC I, 3-3.

Hockey Gets 'Treatment' From Blue-White Society

The Blue and White Society is at it again.

With the object of giving flagging Varsity spirit a shot in the arm, machinery is being set in motion by the Blue and White Society of the SAC to provide the senior hockey team with the same kind of support that the footballers received in their quest of the championship.

In order to secure greater publicity, student support, and to give all concerned a real time, a hockey committee headed by Keith Davey, has been set up. Among its plans are more adequate coverage of, and publicity for hockey activities, to be achieved by improved liaison with downtown papers and by radio interviews with some of the players.

Perhaps the biggest boost, however, is planned for the post-game dances. In the past these have been regarded as rather minor events. In the future they are to be a social must to complete the evening. Arrangements are being made to have a celebrity present to choose the three stars of the game who will receive suitable awards. Refreshments will be available for the thirsty dancers.

That isn't all. The Blue and White is planning to act as host to visiting players who will be provided with dates for the dance.

By such planning and organization the B. & W. is going to restore hockey to the status of a major sport from which position it has been allowed to slip in recent years. Your first chance to observe the effects of the change, is Friday, Feb. 4, when the Blues cross sticks with the first place Carabins from the U. of Montreal.

'Met' Singer Steals Show At Frat Tea

Debates, mining, riding, reforestation—ask Jean Dickenson questions about anything, she'll have a well-thought answer ready.

Miss Dickenson, "Nightingale of the Airwaves", could even identify the stephantos in the corsage presented to her at the Gamma Phi Beta's tea last Wednesday. No one else could. Miss Dickenson is a member of the Denver branch of that fraternity.

Born in Montreal, Miss Dickenson has travelled widely, a fact accounted for by her father's profession of mining engineer. Because of the wandering life she led, her education took on an international aspect too. She received her schooling in India, South America, Europe, and the United States.

Now, she and her civil engineering husband consider New York home.

Since making her debut at the Metropolitan Opera, she doesn't travel as much as she used to. "Since I've been working, I'm restricted by having to be in New York on Sundays." During the war, however, she temporarily resumed her wanderings by going on tours for the USO, giving concerts for thousands of service men.

Miss Dickenson was informed on every topic that came up for discussion at the Gamma Phi tea. About reforestation: "They tell me the South is going to be revolutionized by the growth of white pine", on law; "For years I wanted to be a lawyer, but a professor told me I won debates only because I was a girl. I never went back."

She inquired about Billy Bilshop's daughter. "He (Bishop) and my father were school mates."

Talking about riding, Miss Dickenson said she preferred riding a "reliable Indian pony out west" to following the bridle path in Central Park.

She expressed concern about the living standards of the white collar workers in America. Maids are paid much more than professional workers in New York, she said. She contrasted this to the conditions now prevailing in South America. Her family is now living there and they pay only four dollars a month for efficient help.

Miss Dickenson was enthusiastic about Toronto. She said, that like all other artists, she enjoyed Toronto audiences. "They are so very appreciative of our efforts." She liked singing in Eaton's auditorium and was "thrilled" with the acoustics in Massey Hall.

Coronation

Mad Artist's Masterpiece Model for Typical Co-ed

Once upon a time a mad artist sat down in his garret room and started to doodle with his brushes. A creative urge surged through his mind till finally he was a slave to it. The net result was a large size oil painting of a typical co-ed on a campus.

The masterpiece stood in the corner of the garret for months gathering dust. Not that the artist wasn't proud of it, but what can you do with the picture of a typical co-ed, except prop it up in the corner of your room. An inquisitive first year artsman provided the artist with an answer recently.

The picture will be put on demonstration on the stage of the Casa Loma Feb. 9, when the first year people have their Hi-Neighbor Hop.

Three judges will study the picture of the typical co-ed and then study the numerous number of co-eds who will be present dancing around the floor. The girl whose "sum total" resembles most the artist's dream picture of the typical co-ed will be judged the winner and crowned Miss Typical Co-ed of the Class of 5T2.

Miss Typical Co-ed and her escort will receive a full evening's entertainment at Vanity Fair and numerous other gifts. Other prizes such as passes to the Casa Loma, a corsage from the Arcade Florist, an album of records from the Promenade Music Centre, and gifts from Birks, Northways, Eaton's, Simpson's, and Mac's Drug Store, will be awarded for various events during the evening.

The Hi-Neighbor Hop is opened to all first year students in all colleges and faculties.

Varsity President, Labor Union Head, At Labor's School

By DAVE ARMOUR

The heads of two great Canadian institutions were present last night at Ajax to address this year's class in the Union Winter School. Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, and Mr. A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labour welcomed union members taking the course in the name of the two sponsoring organizations.

President Smith

"God help a University which thinks it has within its confines the whole of knowledge."

"If there be any place where a University can retreat to a mountain top and ignore the problems of those on the slopes, it cannot be in the field of industrial relations."

With these words, President Smith officially welcomed the members of union locals from all across Canada to the second annual Union Winter School, sponsored jointly by the Institute of Industrial Relations of the University of Toronto and the Education Committee of the Canadian Congress of Labour.

Speaking on the joint project, Dr. Smith expressed the hope that both the unions and the University would benefit from this session of the School. "We of the Universities," he said, "have much to learn from association with the men of the labour unions of Canada."

"There is no point where anyone can say he is fully educated," he declared. "One cannot catch an education in the same way one can catch a cold."

Commenting on the aims of the school, he warned the union delegates that "we are not engaged in equipping anyone with the tactics of a labour dispute." The aim of the school was rather to give to all the students integrated knowledge in the field of labour problems so that they might better serve their supporters and their country.

Liberty Versus Discipline

"Liberty without discipline may result in anarchy, discipline without liberty brings about tyranny. It is to be hoped that the union movement can arrive at a happy balance for an ordered society. Discipline will come from within if we are convinced of the validity of our principles and are willing to fight for them."

"A head packed with facts is of little value, unless those facts are put to use. It is not sufficient to understand how a thing is done; it is necessary to know why it is done. It is relatively easy to know how, but far harder to know why."

Mr. Mosher:

Every individual has certain natural resources which must be organized in the same way as a labour union to form a collective bargaining power."

"The labour union wants in its ranks and particularly in its leadership those who have the education to cope with labour's problems," stated Mr. A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labour at Ajax last night.

"Education should encourage the spirit of service, rather than greed for profits of exceptional privilege."

Mr. Mosher declared that the education offered by the Union Winter School was not biased in favour of the labour movement, but was intended to present to union members certain basic facts which play a large part in the relationship between labour and management in this country.

He pointed out that education helps to combat Communism and "all forms of reactionary tyranny."

"Learning alone will not produce a Utopia," he said, "but we cannot hope to reach our ambition without it."

Aims of Education

Stating that in his youth he experienced a lack of opportunity and lack of desire for education, Mr. Mosher proceeded to outline his views on education in a manner that caused president Smith to remark that "it was the finest dissertation on education I have ever heard".

Education, he said, forms habits, both good and bad. It enables men to judge wisely and correctly of the validity of ideas and the value of achievements. Education broadens the scope of men's thinking, gives background to his thoughts and opinions and makes for tolerance and cooperation.

Education helps man to adjust himself to new and different situations and environments, and thus

Probe Book Price Discrepancies

TRACKS DOWN COMPLAINTS

By WILS HARRISON

The first in a series of articles on the text book problem. In this artilce Harrison interviewed John Cole of Cole's Book Store to try and find the reason for the discrepancy in the price of used texts.

Students, who in the past two years have made some very vindictive charges against John Coles, proprietor of Cole's Book Store on Yonge St., would be ready to retract some of their statements if they had a talk with Mr. Cole and could see the evidence which he can produce to justify his stand.

During the fall term The Varsity received a large number of letters from students complaining of the great disparity between the prices Mr. Cole offered them for their used texts and the prices he charged on the texts when they were resold. These prices, when viewed in the light of the prices the students were receiving from the Horner and Bowes Book Exchange for their used texts, showed, at least on the surface, that the charges made by the students in their letters were justified. It was this fact, and the fact that last summer I had taken a number of my used texts to Cole's to sell, (I couldn't locate Horner and Bowes at the time. They were in the process of moving), and was offered a meagre sum for my books that led me to investigate the reasons for Cole's stand.

The first day of school in January I telephoned Mr. Cole and made an appointment for an interview. The first question I wanted answered was the reason for the discrepancy between the price he offered for a used text and the one at which he sold the same text to students. Why, when a book was in almost perfect condition, could he only offer the student half price or less and at the same time resell the text to students in the fall for a price perhaps 25 or 30 cents below its original price when new?

Cole's Reasons

"I'll tell you why," Cole declared. "It's all based on this one fact. When I buy books in the spring I'm faced with the problem of not knowing whether the books will be used on the course the next year or not. Professors and lecturers are continually switching from one text to another and from one edition to another that many of the books I buy from students in the spring are not used on the courses in the fall. I tie up all that money in books speculating on their sale at the beginning of the school term in September and end up in many cases with a loss because the book is no longer used on the course."

I couldn't see where any speculating entered into the matter, when he had the university calendar to use as a reference. In a large number of instances the calendar lists the texts to be used in the various subjects. I pointed this out to Mr. Cole. I also asked him why he didn't contact the members of the various faculties and procure a list of texts to be used in the courses? Even if they weren't listed in the calendar, he could have a list made up in this way.

"I do use the calendar and I have tried to find out from the faculty members the books which would be used in the various subjects when the university opened in September. But some of the texts listed in the calendar are not always used and only a few of the faculty members will co-operate by giving you a list of the books that will be used. All I can go by is the calendar and where the calendar doesn't list the texts, I have to go by the demands of the students themselves. Even then we can't be sure," Cole stated.

Gave Examples

"I'll give you some examples of what I mean," he said. "There is a Spanish text, 'El sombrero de tres picos,' published by the Macmillan Company. It's listed in the calendar. I stocked up on this volume in preparation for the coming year. When the term opened the students all bought the Macmillan edition. A few days later they were all brought back because the lecturer preferred the same book in the Holt edition." Coles said he then ordered enough of the books in the Holt edition to supply the students. A few days later he found the text had been cancelled from the course because the University Press could not supply the book.

He pointed out other books, from a list he had compiled, which were not listed in the calendar but had been in the past in regular use by the students. This year they were no longer being used. Here are some of them, The Theory of Competitive Price, An Economic History of Europe, (a new edition was being used in this), Plato's Republic,

Engineers' Union Shatters Hopes Of Charioteers

The Annual Olympic Chariot Race will not be held this year, it was decided at an emergency meeting of the Engineering Society last night. The meeting also moved to strike the word "annual" from the title of the classic because "it would be a contradiction in terms."

Suspension of the race this year was necessary, the society felt, because no offers from other contestants had been received. "The challengers that have applied so far do not meet the requirements of such a gruelling race," a society spokesman said. "The outstanding way that School outran the other contestants in last year's Olympic race convinced the committee that it was unnecessary to make arrangements for the race."

Last year's race was held on the road circling the front campus and Skule was pronounced the winner (Ed. note: Enough of this nonsense, The Varsity team won!) defeating entrants from all other faculties. Meds placed second.

Committee members decided they might consider any challengers but expressed a doubt that any would be received. "You won't get the Artsmen out for a race like this. They are too busy sleeping in the library," Engineering Society vice-president, Pat Suddick commented. "The whole contest seems futile—what competition could we find on the campus?"

This Inevitability Rubbish

(The following editorial is reprinted from an article which appeared in the Queen's Journal last week.)

There is a lot of rubbish being spread about these days concerning the "inevitability" of a war with the Soviet Union.

There is, of course, no way of proving that war is either certain to come or not. But people who toy with the idea that war is inevitable should realize just where this will lead them.

First, it should be observed that this is the same sort of thing which the Nazis fed the Germans before the recent world war: "We are surrounded by enemies!" screeched Goebbels. "We have chosen guns, not butter. The future of the Reich—the safety and prosperity of Germans unborn—is at stake!" and so on.

Having thus decided that war is coming, we thus strengthen our sinews, gird our loins, and ring our frontiers with iron.

And rightly so. For, having decided that war is inevitable, we make it so. We are in the position of consumers, who, believing that the price of a commodity is about to rise, rush to the shops and bid the prices up.

What then? Erect our iron curtains; let loose a flood of hate; denounce all opposition, all moderates, as "un-Canadian", or "un-American", burn the books; give the secret police carte-blanche—it is a too-familiar pattern. And we are falling for it. We are fast becoming today's Nazis, the North American Herrenvolk.

Of course we have not arrived at this point yet. And it may be argued that our traditions of liberalism, freedom and democracy are strong enough to moderate the process before we reach the state the Germans arrived at in the late thirties. But the history of this century indicates that freedom and democracy are apt to crumble before nihilistic militarism.

Let us wise up to what is going on. Let us see clearly that these people who clamour for artillery and jet-fighters (defensive, of course) are ready to sacrifice our traditions. Let us recognize that there are people who prefer war to peace, uniforms to civvies, orders to arguments, and tanks to Ford cars.

What we need is not more hate, but less; not less liberty, but more.

Let us now consider our chances for peace, when we do not accept the premise that war is inevitable.

Insofar as our conflict with Russia is ideological, each year of peace synthesizes, to some extent, our opposite views. Each year of peace, therefore, lessens the probability of war. Merely by not going to war this year we have increased the likelihood of the continued peace.

There are other ways too, of lessening the probability of war if we believe that the peace will continue. We may discover that Russia is inhabitated, after all, by men and women who in many ways resemble ourselves. There is every evidence that the people on the "fringe", the Czechs, Poles, Hungarians, and Yugoslavs, in spite of their governments' efforts, are not completely lost to the West. By making every possible effort to contact these people, to export our ideas to them and to understand theirs, we will pave the way towards future concord.

This is a positive action. Positive, too, is a continued attack upon the economic and social abscesses of the world which spawn hopeless men.

Let us reject, then, this idea of war's inevitability, and goad ourselves to positive action in the direction of peace.

COLLEGE BEAUTY CONTESTS—

May they continue until the Judgment Day! Everyone likes to look at co-eds who have a little more of this and a little less of that. And in Canada's colleges, it's natural to look to Player's Cigarettes for fresh, cool smoking.

Pass Anatomy Mentor Attacked

Fear and the odd engineer are high around the campus these days with the report of another attack by one of the infamous reet-pleet gangs. The latest victim was a little-known lecturer in pass anatomy, who while skating across Queen's Park was suddenly blocked in his path by a long black Fiat. 155 men in wide-brimmed mortarboards and bright green "drapes" jumped out, destroyed the fellow's notes and tied him to a tree with a copy of the Communist Manifesto. The lecturer remained in this condition for three days, as passing students thought he was one of Steve Antishott's men campaigning for new L.P.P. members.

Among the suspected are the Hart House Hoodlums, known to gather in a subterranean "dope den" referred to as the Muck Shop. Indeed the long zoot chains these addicts carry may be the ones recently filed off Hart House coat racks. Other Varsity vandals such as the Buttery Boys and the Therapy Thugs are being kept under close scrutiny. Pres. Didney Miss declared today that such actions might cause a depletion in the staff. Civil servants would make better victims for surely a few of them wouldn't be missed.

Meanwhile this withering reporter, trying to unearth a clue finally did so by digging up the body of a freshman, buried by sophomores under the steps of U.C. some decades ago. He not only refused to make a statement but threw his clavicle at the Champus Cat. Then, nodding with a sinster nothingness in his eyeholes, his head promptly fell off. Realising that he was going to pieces, we advised him to get some more rest.

One vibrant scholar gurgled, "Duhhh, us pass arts men get all

ISS Objective To Be $10,000 From Varsity

Canadian executive secretary of I.S.S., Mathew Saunders, announced recently that I.S.S. will canvass the universities of Canada for $65,000 this year The money will be used to finance a European scholarship plan, and to provide relief for students in war devastated countries.

Mr. Saunders went on to explain that $15,000 of the total sum will be used to support four direct relief projects. They are:

1) $3,200 to furnish textbooks, mimeograph equipment and scholarships for the Universities of Athens and Salonika.

2) $3,500 will provide scholarships for the university students in Paris.

3) $2,800 will be sent to Hungary to buy shoes for the students in the University of Budapest.

4) $5,500 will help finance the construction of a student hostel in Bombay, India.

Scholarships for D.P.'s

Mr. Saunders pointed out that another portion of the money will provide scholarships for European and D. P. students. Under this plan European students will be brought to Canada to study for one year, and will then return to their native country. In the case of the D. P. students, they will come to Canada to study in Canadian universities, and will be expected to stay in the country after their graduation. If there is any remainder it will be given to the general fund of World Student Relief.

Warren Goldring, chairman of the local committee of I.S.S. announced last night that the University of Toronto objective is $10,000. He explained that International Student Service is a world wide non-partisan organization, devoted to the promotion of international understanding in the university community. He pointed out that I.S.S. in Canada is an autonomous body, but it maintains contact with I.S.S. in other countries through the international office in Geneva. Since the war it has had to take on relief activities, and is a constituent member of World Student Relief.

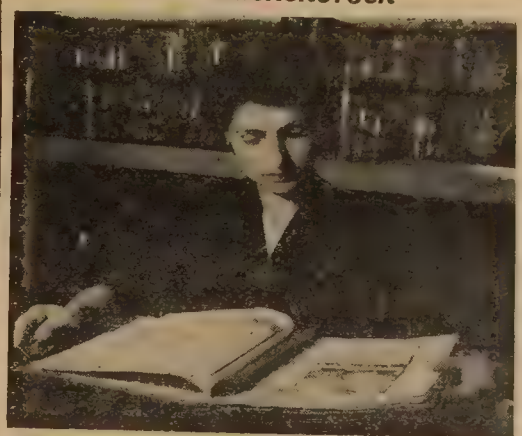
Need Still Exists

"The need for relief still exists," Goldring said. "And as long as it does, I.S.S. will strive to fill it. We are asking every student possible to give a dollar to the campaign. Each one who contributes will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is helping needy fellow students, but at the same time, he will be given a terrific round of entertainment. This year we hope that the generosity and enthusiasm of Varsity students will push the campaign way over the top."

Chancellor Warns Against Russian Peace Overtures

New York, Jan. 28—(Special to The Varsity)—Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, called tonight for an "array of force" by the western nations to guarantee peace. The chancellor was addressing the annual dinner of the Canadian Society of New York.

Chancellor Massey warned: "The free world has been deceived more than once in this generation. This time, pray God, let us recognize danger when we see it.



"Negotiations with dictators will always be futile and perilous save when they are conducted on the only basis the dictator understands —negotiation from strength.

"One thing alone can give us peace—the array of force on the side of right," he concluded.

As evidence of the common interests of Great Britain, the United States and Canada, the Chancellor pointed to "that great system of defense now in the making, which will span the Atlantic."

Regarding recent Russian "peace" overtures, he said, "Beware of voices which cry 'peace, peace,' when there is no peace."

Support ISS, Says G.—T., Hearken to Appeal—Smith

"There are a few students in Canada who can fail to be aware of the increasingly significant work which the International Student Service is achieving," said Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, recently appointed President of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, in a recent interview. He pledged the support of ISS in the name of NFCUS and urged all university students across Canada to support the ISS of Canada in its forthcoming campaign.

"There is still a great effort to be made if we are to win what Matt Saunders, National ISS Secretary, called "the battle for men's minds," added the NFCUS president. "It is my sincere hope that every Canadian University student will recognize his own part in this battle, and help to win it by contributing generously to the ISS drive for funds.

In a statement issued recently, President Smith gives official recognition to the ISS national campaign and issued the following proclamation:

"Whereas, the European student faces the ordeal of intellectual and spiritual re-orientation;

"And whereas the staff and the students of the University of Toronto recognize that they have a peculiar responsibility in supporting and strengthening the freedom of the mind and the freedom of the spirit throughout the world;

"And whereas the International Student Service has shown, both by its ideals and by its practical

Wilson College Awards Classics, History Post To Toronto Graduate

Chambersburg, Pa. —(Exchange) — The appointment of Miss Margaret Elaine Reesor, a University of Toronto graduate, to the staff of Wilson College as instructor in Latin and Roman History was announced last week by President Paul Swain Havens.

Miss Reesor has successively held a graduate scholarship and fellowship from Bryn Mawr College where she has been research assistant while working on a Ph.D.

Ancient Craft Is Revived In Texas

Course BA 204—A remedial course in handwriting—has been added to the degree course in Business Administration at North Texas State College. More than 100 BA students whose penmanship has been reported as unsatisfactory will be required to take the course.

Reaction to the new ruling was varied, but most of the victims grudgingly admitted that it was for their own good. No comment was immediately available from U of T authorities.

Practical Approach Great Need Today —Peace Offensive

Need for new weapons in the campaign for world peace was stressed by Dr. R. B. McClure in his talk on China conditions in the Peace Offensive program Friday, at Victoria College. Dr. McClure was one of six representative speakers who took part in the one-day conference.

Practical Weapons

"The day of evangelistic missions is finished," declared the former missionary to China. The one supreme weapon is that of the Christian witness—the working out of Christian principles in life. As examples, Dr. McClure suggested medical work, engineering, architectural and agricultural advice for countries like China and India which are in great need for technological assistance.

China is undergoing mental ferment, declared Dr. McClure, and in a time of black market parasites and inflation, teaching of morals is useless. Practical gestures are the effective weapons of Christianity today.

Stomach and Mind

"Civilization is finished if we're going to live as Christians in our ivory towers," stated Mrs. R. G. Agnew, who returned recently from a European trip. Mrs. Agnew told of the necessity to consider the health of the whole man — his stomach as well as his mind — in the approach of Christianity. Economic suffering in Holland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, France and England was reviewed by Mrs. Agnew.

Cost-of-living in Holland is so high that full shops in Amsterdam are only window-shopping attractions. Quoted the Dutch opinion that "our economy is based on our colonies and we can't raise our standard of living until we get our colonies back", which was soon followed by the Indonesian war-attempt.

Other situations which must be combatted by the Peace Offensive, detailed Mrs. Agnew, were the growth of racial strife, the nationalistic and militaristic doctrines which led to the last war and are still alive today.

Cry for Independence

Professor V. E. Devadutt of India stated that only those who have lived under foreign rule can realize the demoralization one feels. This is why India and the rest of Asia are crying for the beginning of self-respect and independence on an economic as well as a political basis.

Racial strife and need for medical work are the chief African crises, Dr. Walter Strangway, African medico, maintained in his talk "Voice of Africa." Those who will express strongly the belief that all are one in the sight of God are needed in overseas work, he said.

SAC Will Operate New Book Store On A Cost Basis

The Students Administrative Council will open a book-exchange shop in the Torontonensis office on April 8, it was announced over the week end.

The new book-exchange will operate at cost, and will deal in second hand books which will go on sale next fall. The date was set back to April 8 so there would be no conflict with the work Torontonensis is doing in putting out the year book. The announcement further states that prescribed texts only will be taken for sale.

The SAC has long felt that a book-exchange was needed on the campus and has been planning for a long time to open one but met with repeated failures in trying to locate space on the campus for the store. University building officials made every effort possible in an attempt to locate a suitable room to house the project but could find none.

For a while there was talk on the part of the SAC of buying the Book-exchange store of Horner and Bowes on Charles Street. But this plan fell through when it was discovered that by a new civil By-law, Charles Street was made into a restricted area with no trading establishment permitted.

The final plans on the method of exchange have not as yet been completed and will be released later.

Portia Debaters Beat Motion Recommending Fine for Jay-Walking

Pedestrians should not be fined for crossing the street against traffic lights asserted Portia debaters Del McKay and Katherine Tyrrell to defeat the resolution and the team of Barbara Bambridge and Claire Bacchus, Friday.

The legal, economic, and safety aspects of the question were discussed with the infamous Harbord and St. George crossing cited several times by both teams.

Debaters are asked to note that future Portia debates will be held in Room 4, University College, instead of Room 5.

Agatha Leonard

Danseuse, Librarian In Six Languages

By HERB WOOD

Do you think that libraries are dull? Are the people who work in them even more so? Some think so. Now these are the special ones we want to convert; the rest of you can listen and nod approvingly and say "Didn't I tell you?" in the right places. First of all, let's take a look in at the Medical Library cum reading room.

Meet Miss Agatha Leonard. She's the librarian down here, you know, but did you know also that she did hundreds of performances during the war in the revue "Merry-go-Round"?

Had you been here during the war, you would have noticed her sitting on her beg every Thuraday at 4:30 in front of the Anatomy Building waiting for the bus to pick her up. Once a week the all-girl troupe did a show and once a month went for a week-end. Perhaps you caught her act when you were in the services, she played at Jarvis, Clinton, Newmarket and most of the camps in Ontario. Once, by special invitation from the mayor of Buffalo, she played at the Army Air Corps station. The girls staged their revues in any building that was handy at the time, ranging from converted boxing rings to hangars to drill halls.

The librarian's job here is stimulating—ask Miss Leonard. More important it is a time-saver for researchers measured in terms of months and years. You see, they can check here if there is any duplication or overlapping in their particular propject. A quick look in the material index can save a man a lot of time.

A reading knowledge of French, German, Italian and Spanish plus Latin and Greek comes in handy for Miss Leonard. The library receives many foreign-language periodicals. When some one comes in asking for a book on Acetogenetics Sarcoma, she makes a mental nosedive into her Latin and comes up with the right book. The library has a good lending service. Copies of books that cannot leave the library are microfilmed or photostats made of them.

Getting back to where we started, the "Merry-go-Round," show had a unique and interesting beginning. Early in the war, in a badminton club, the idea came up of what could be done in the way of entertainment for the boys. Someone suggested "Why not a review?" "Sure,—let's," another added. Right there and then they started a collection and netted $75.00. The presence of some American visitors helped.

A group of twenty to twenty-one girls got together and under the expert direction of Lorna Sheard, well-known around town and Hart House for her dramatic skill, soon had a couple of shows to their credit. Nervously, a theatre night in Eaton Auditorium was arranged for two evenings. The show was a sell-out and $1,200 was cleared to go into costumes and scenery.

The "Merry-go-Round," had a total roster of 100 or more, but as the particular girls became expert, radio would make an attractive offer and off they'd go. The season started in November or mid-October and ran till June. A six-weeks' practice beforehand put the girls in shape. One of the more well-known exmembers is Anna Russel, comedienne, who appeared in Eaton Auditorium last Saturday. Miss Leonard was on the "Merry-go-Round" committee in charge of skits and arranging the programme.

The best traditions of show business were maintained during these service-camp trips in spite of everything. And just about everything seemed to happen during one winter trip to Jarvis, with the thermometer below zero. The big T.T.C. bus, filled with girls, was behind schedule and to save time, some were

All Varsity Mixed Chorus

The audience which heard the All-Varsity Chorus Friday, certainly did not tax the seating capacity of Convocation Hall. If there are as many vacant seats at tonight's repeat performance, we shall nevertheless think more in sorrow than in anger of you who have deprived yourselves of an evening of fine music, admirably performed by the chorus, the U. of T. Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Norman Hurrle, solo organist, two singers from the Royal Conservatory, and Mr. Bertram Turvey, the Chorus' accomplished regular organist.

Mr. Hurrle's contribution included a brilliant performance of Bach's Fugue in G minor, and an interesting interpretation of Clokey's Ballade in D, a modern American composition. He also made a fine impression by his work in Handel's Concerto in B flat minor for organ and orchestra, while the orchestra itself, after laboring slightly in the second movement, went on to capture that "open-air quality" referred to in Mr. Ross' excellent program notes.

Conductor Harold Neal has dealt well with the problem of equalizing the volume and blending the tone of a chorus, which, like most choirs, appears to be suffering from the chronic shortage of male voices, and only on a few occasions was the disproportion noticeable enough to interfere with full enjoyment. The chorus is excellently trained, always alert, firm in attacks and clean in releases. The Ave Verum of Mozart was impressively sung, and in the group of four A Capella songs the parts were clearly defined, and the pitch secure. Possibly the Czechoslovakian dance song could have stood a slightly faster tempo, but it was still infectiously gay.

The principal work was, of course, Faure's Requiem, and Mr. Neal approached this restrained yet beautifully proportioned composition with a clear conception of its essential character and shape. Its limited dynamic range seemed particularly suited to the exigencies of an under-manned chorus. We were delighted with the remarkably pure and round tone of the soprano section. Though consistently beautiful and perfectly controlled throughout the evening, it was particularly effective in the Sanctus and the In Paradisum.

The tenors, striving, perhaps, to compensate for numerical inferiority, were not always attentive enough to tone quality, and occasionally an individual voice stood out. We wondered whether a more covered tone would have eliminated the slight roughness in the initial tenor phrases of the Introit.

Both soloists for the Requiem were from the Royal Conservatory. The clear quality of Jean Patterson's lyric soprano was ideally suited to the Pie Jesu, and to a very promising voice she adds more than average intelligence and sensitivity. Mr. Blair has a baritone voice of richness and depth which will undoubtedly show to greater advantage when he has gained more freedom and assurance.

The growing reputation of the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus will be enhanced considerably by its performance this year, and it is not possible to give too much credit for its success to its conductor, Harold Neal.

Rubinstein

Artur Rubinstein played at Eaton Auditorium Thursday night. I had never seen him play before. Impresario epithets, "most exciting pianist of our time" and "poet of the piano", by-words for Rubinstein, crowded the mind as I went in. They were still there, much magnified as the night closed.

As poet, Rubinstein played Beethoven's C Major Sonata the "Waldstein", Chopin's "Funeral March" Sonata, and encored with his "Nocturne' in F sharp. All three aptly filled Wordsworth's definition as "spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings". Rubinstein overflowed with power in everything he performed.

The programme's final half was Rubinstein on parade. Just as the first half was almost pure art, the last was all showmanship. There were four "Mazurkas" by Szymanowski, Stravinski's dazzling "Petrouchka", and Debussy's "Ondine" and "L'Isle Joyeuse".

Most characteristic of Rubinstein's flagrant style were his effervescent bouncing off the bench for pyrotechnical effect, as in De Falla's "Ritual Fire Dance", his impeccable note-tone control (Scriabine's "Nocturne" for Left Hand), and a climactic sense of rise and fall (the "Waldstein" and the "Petrouchka" suite).

Unlike Rudolph Serkin, Schnabel and Casadesus, Rubinstein never forgot his audience was there. Possibly that is why his interpretations had depth but were not profound, had mastery but no mystery, and held his audience through an artful play on empathy and rapport.

His personality in performance is so dominent and intense that I was ever aware of the performer, even in the Beethoven and Chopin. This dominance held us spellbound for the entire night—a spell that has since disappeared. That of Serkin and Casadesus still remains.

Varsity Story

Thursday night I forewent my weekly session with radio's outstanding theatre of thrills on an American network to hear how they slice it locally—viz. "The Varsity Story" on CJBC. The story in question was called "Prophet in the Valley of Bones" (by Oscar Halina), but was less for the horror fans than for meds with a diabetes quiz coming up, the bones in question being those of the incurables of pre-insulin days.

If I sound flippant it is because this very instructive half hour occasionally — just occasionally — bordered on the ludicrous, and in John Walker's valiant attempts to wring drama out of the pancreas (as Sir Frederick Banting he eventually got insulin out of it), or in the husband voices and menace music that accompanied the case history of a diabetic dog.

As a serious criticism I would suggest that the play was of a too special interest to appeal to the average listener, including the average Varsity listener, and a little more "human interest" would have made it more palatable. Of those listeners who fall into the special interest group — well meds may or may not care for their pathology with drama.

The cast and production were on a sufficiently high level to indicate that in a story of wider scope "The Varsity Story" would compare fairly favorably with professional Canadian radio. Next week they are doing Mel Breen's prize-winning script, "My Brother's Keeper."

The Years Between

It is difficult to imagine how anything could be more drab and tiresome than the University Extension Players' presentation of Daphne DuMaurier's "The Years Between". Of course when one makes a statement as unkind as this one must be prepared to show reasons in support of it. It is not enough to say that a certain reaction to the play took place, one must try to say why there was such a reaction.

The production was a failure because the direction was inadequate. George E. Bettson was not familiar with the characters that Miss DuMaurier had created, nor did he understand her theme. It is also doubtful whether he understands any of the basic principles for turning a script into a dramatic presentation for an audience.

I don't know where to start pointing out faults, but I suppose the first mistake was in the casting. Mary Duncan as Robin, Madelyn Balfour-Swan and Guy Purser as Richard Llewellyn, three out of a cast of ten, were the only ones who were suited to their roles. Michael Hamilton and Joan Ridewood as Michael and Diana Wentworth were valiant in their attempts to overcome the double disadvantage of being miscast and subsequently misdirected. Miss Ridewood's too obvious and mechanical gestures made it evident that she was acting all through the play. She was never genuinely Diana Wentworth. It is that two beginners with such pleasant stage manners and so much promise as Miss Ridewood and Michael Hamilton should have been the central figures in Friday night's travesty.

Guy Purser and Madelyn Balfour-Swan understood their roles and played them well. The same may be said of Mary Duncan, though it appeared that her natural vivacity, which the role called for, had been inhibited by the director during rehearsals.

There are many details which can add to or detract from the mood or atmosphere intended by the author. Among these are costumes, stage setting and lighting, and are, in the last analysis, the responsibility of the director. In Bettson's version of "The Years Between", the costumes did not always reflect the personalities of the characters, the set was not reminiscent of a library in an Old Manor, and the lighting caused interesting but confusing shadows on the faces of the players. The concept of stage balance is obviously foreign to Bettson.

used the Lindsay edition for years. This year it was discarded for the Cornfield edition); Disha's Organic Chemistry, (He stocked up on this book because they had been rather scarce. This year they are of no use. Karer's edition is now being used. The former book sold for $3.00. The latter sells for $7.00); Introduction to Electrical Engineering, (used for years. This year it is no longer used) . . . and so on ad infinitum.

Money Tied Up

"The majority of these books are expensive and represent a large sum of money tied up. Some of them may be used again, but past years have shown me that the most of them will lie on the shelves for years and never be used. This hasn't been happening this year alone but for quite a number of years," he declared.

When I had gone into Cole's office for the interview, I was skeptical of the whole affair. I was still unconvinced. For, while he had put up a very good argument, quite heated at points, all I had was his word for it that this was true. I wanted to see evidence of the books that had been left on the shelves and asked to see them.

We left his office and went down to the basement, where the college texts are sold. We went in behind the counter and started down the line of texts on the shelves underneath. As he checked off the books which were no longer being used, I made a note of some of the texts and their prices. A rough estimate of the value of the texts noted, shows Cole had a loss of $3,000 on these books alone. The total loss for this year, I have no doubt, would be a much larger figure.

The Leftovers

From the counter, we moved into the back part of the basement where there are two large vaults. "This is where we keep the books left from other years," Cole said. He opened the door of the first one. We stepped in and were greeted with the musty smell of old books, hundreds of them. We walked out of the first vault and over to the second. He opened the door and we went in. It was the same as the first, packed full. Each vault is about twenty feet square and seven feet high. Except for small aisles approximately a foot wide between the rows of books, the vaults were filled to the ceiling. They were all college texts because I checked them to make sure.

We started back to his office. "Now maybe you'll see why I can't offer the students better prices for their used texts," he said. Cole said he didn't want to gyp the students. He was a business man and his business depended upon the goodwill of the students and of keeping it. He could not pay them any better prices for their used texts as long as he faced the problem of not knowing whether the books would be used from one year to the next.

Books A Headache

"I try to save the students' money by buying second hand texts for the courses rather than new ones. I give them 10% discount on all purchases," Cole said. "I don't like offering them the low prices on their used books any more than they like getting it. When the students came in complaining about the disparity of prices, we decided not to bother buying the books at all. They were only a headache to us."

Cole pointed out one instance where he was selling a text cheaper than the University Press. The book he referred to was Representative Poetry, volume 1. He was selling it for $3.00. The Press was selling it for $3.50. "When Mr. Gordon Burns of the University of Toronto Press found that we were selling this book cheaper than the Press, he phoned me and told me to raise my price to $3.50 or Cole's would no longer be supplied with texts from the Press," Cole stated.

Can't Get Books

He said that formerly he had purchased his University of Toronto Press publications through S. J. R. Saunders, distributors to the trade. They phoned him and told him they could no longer supply him. He would have to buy all his texts from the Press itself. "We haven't been able to buy a book from the Press for the past two months," Cole said. "I say that Mr. Gordon Burns has restricted Cole's from buying books from the Press because we are underselling them."

I asked him what the profit margin was on a new book. He said that he received a 20% discount on the retail price from the publishers. On a book which sells for $2.50 he makes 25c. Out of that profit, he gave a 10% discount to the students. He said that was not normal business practice in other stores and that many merchants would agree 20% was not enough to cover the overhead and handling in the business.

"If I could get co-operation from the faculty members and know in adequate time the texts which were to be used on the courses for the next term, I would guarantee the students better prices on their used texts, more texts so there would not be any shortages and better prices on their new texts or supply them with second hand texts at a reasonable price. I wouldn't have the overhead or the headaches at present." Cole said.

Asked For Meeting

"Any student who wants to drop in and discuss the situation with me is welcome to do so at any time. About a year ago I phoned E. A. MacDonald and tried to arrange a round table discussion with the students over the book problem. I have never heard anything about it since," Cole said.

Well, that is the Cole story. When I walked out I was convinced that he was doing his best under the difficulties he had to meet. I was also convinced that in a few cases texts had been changed for very minor reasons. I don't mean to infer that I know more than the faculty members in the choice of texts to be used in the courses. The University student must have access to all the new and best books available on the various subjects if they are to gain the best out of their university education. But I do think, if there was more co-operation on the part of the faculty members in preparing a list of the requried texts and adhering to it, if there was more discretion used by the lecturers and professors in suggesting a change of texts, (where only minor changs have been made in old ones), the greater part of the problem would be solved. The student would be the beneficiary. For it would not matter whether the student was buying his or her books from a private book store or a book exchange, they would still be the one who paid as long as this problem existed. I decided then to find out what problems faced the book exchanges and to seek further evidence to substantiate Mr. Cole's charges.

Stan Patton became a proud father, a few years ago, and when people asked him how many that made his family add up to, he replied: "Two and one to carry."

Contest Prize Apartment Falls Short Of Paradise

By NAN MCKENZIE

Where could it happen but in America?

Free cars, refrigerators, radios, trips to New York—and fully furnished apartments donated by movie colossi—these things we proudly view as phenomena peculiar to America.

Still, another side exists, as your reporter discovered. Situations like examinations, overcrowding, and babies may not hit the headlines as often, but are much more typical of North American civilization.

Visits Contest Winners

First year Optometry student, Norm Lilos, and his wife, Marg, who won last fall's contest for a furnished apartment, (sponsored by Twentieth Century Fox in co-operation with the SAC), still love their attractive little room as much as they did when they moved in last November. But there are things like three flights of stairs to climb when there is a baby in the offing; trying to find a spot of space to put the box of baby's drugs the folks sent for Christmas; parading down the twisting flight of stairs every time you want to use the 20 minutes allotted you in the bathroom which you share with 14 others.

No Room For Junior

These are a few of the irksome day-to-day problems that face Marg and Norm Lilos in their haven. With the baby coming in two months (it's going to be a boy, they "just know") the couple are looking for another place to live. There's no place to put Baby when he comes. They figure they might put him in a dresser drawer, ("and close it if he cries too loud") or more practically, simply put the crib in the middle of the floor and move it about as they wish to (a) study at the trim little desk, donated by A. J. Siggner and Co., (b) get breakfast at the nifty new two-burner stove, (c) make up the bed-couch, (d) set the table that Norm has just finished painting.

"No Place Like . . . . "

Norm and Marg joke about their situation with all the old standard jokes that people use in this old standard situation; but with both examinations and baby due in the very near future, the vicissitudes of job-hunting, moving and having a child seem particularly difficult. The trials with which they have to cope may not seem extraordinary, or even beef material to other married vets, but there are more details, like the missing ice-box promised by the landlady for Christmas, and the plumbing guaranteed for the same time, that will not make its appearance till long after Baby's arrival. Then there's the light bill, which the landlady of 14 boarders attempts at times to reduce by shutting off the power for 5 hours a day. The couple are paying their $50 a month, since the two rent-free months have expired. The vet's $90 a month goes only so far, especially with Marg unable to work until at least next fall (if they can find a nursery where Baby can stay during the day).

Couple Still Optimistic

Marg and Norm don't view all this through eyes of great dread; they celebrated their sixth anniversary last month—and know that they are just another couple swinging in and out the doors of Life, meeting breaks, joys and disappointment at every turn.

making-up their faces and legs and stepping into open-toed slippers. At the first curve on the way up Hamilton mountain, the bus stalled. "Everybody out and push," bellowed the driver. How the girls pushed the bus to the top, Miss Leonard did not say. They arrived at Jarvis via a detour through a barnyard at 10:30. The boys expected them at 7 o'clock.

Within twenty minutes and with the help of steaming coffee, the show got under way. After the show, and fortified with steak dinners, the girls left and were preceded as far as the main highway by a bulldozer. The return trip down Hamilton mountain was breathtaking, to say the least. Earlier, the heat had failed in the bus and on the way down, the brakes let go—leaving only the emergency. That they got down safely is testified by Miss Leonard's presence here—but, how is a mystery. Back home by 5:30 a.m., she didn't bother going to bed since she had to be at the University by 8:45. Around this time, the Medical School was extra-busy since the courses were telescoped to turn out more doctors.

Nowadays, Miss Leonard is busy in the Alumni Dramatic Club. Last Saturday, in the play, "The High Back Chair," one of three presented by the group, she was outstanding, according to a morning paper dramatic critic. Little known, is the fact that Miss Leonard is the only woman member of the Board of Syndics of Hart House Theatre.

endeavor, that it is an invaluable agency for discharging this collective responsibility;

"Therefore, be it proclaimed that the week of February 7-12 be designated "I.S.S. Week" within the University of Toronto, and that the members of the University will hearken to the appeal by I.S.S. that will be launched at that time".

Permanent Effects Christian Mission Hoped On Campus

With the formal aspect of the Christian mission over, and the student enthusiasm once more at a normal level, members of student body and staff who organized the mission sat down to take stock attempting to evaluate its success in terms of lasting values in the lives of those who took part.

Rev. D. C. Candy said that the response to a sense of need and a willingness to do something about that need was the most satisfying result of the mission. "The final night we had to lock the doors of Convocation Hall," he said. In noon question periods held in the west hall U.C. the response was overwhelming. Some associate missioners were up until 3 a.m., working with their groups. By a conservative estimate, 4,000 students showed interest in the mission.

Great Leader

"With no sale of tickets and no compulsion of any sort, there were never less than 800 people in Convocation Hall to hear Bishop Neill," said Mr. Candy. "The forceful intellectual personality of the great Christian leader so led the mission that it was a success far beyond the dreams of even the most hopeful enthusiast," he went on.

"It is up to the students," said Dr. C. W. Leslie, "to see that there is a lasting value in the mission. The committee of staff and students has carried out its plans well," he continued, "and it is now up to the individual."

Duty To Decide

"Bishop Neill based his religion on God as a source of all truth," said Temple Kingston, Trinity, "and with no super-salesmanship. It is the duty of all who call themselves Christians to make a personal decision regarding Christian values."

"The mission is now a completed event but much of its value will lie in the follow-up program and the long-range repercussions on individual lives," said Paul Morris, I Emmanuel. "I feel sure that this is a good beginning and that Christianity will play an ever important role in the future life of the university."

de doit. Between me lectures at 8 and 4 I aint got nuthin but nuthin to do. Taking a walk I happens to bump into a lecturer. Can I help if he don't get up?" A weird-looking bird with a slime rule around its neck, known as a Toike had no comment. It apparently doesn't understand English.

To correct the problem, some suggested special Bursarys for wayward students. These would provide among other things, a year-round pass to the Casino and a key to the Famous Door. Of course applicants not guilty of at least five minor offences would not even be considered.

The other viewpoint was supported by Cont. John M. Innitall who rasped "the situation at present is such that it will certainly warrant a . . . uhhh . . . in strict accordance with it, in such a case . . . harrumph!" Presently engaged in a man-to-insect battle with local cockroaches, the Controller believed that young Scotsmen would never wear the hideous zoot clothing. Mr. Innitall had to admit however that it is much harder to put a drape in kilts.

The latest suggestion received was that the simple and logical way out was to leave the reet-pleeters alone and blame it all on Mr. Gorge Dew. The Cat wishes you a Happy Hooligan.

We think bull-fighting should be introduced to Canada. It's certainly no more blood-thirsty than professional boxing and without doubt it is far superior and more dramatic display of skill and high courage. There's no comparison between watching man versus bull or the ludicrous spectacle of two hulks flailing the last little bit of sense out of each other. Besides, there's a sense of completion about a bull-fight that you don't get in boxing, except in rare instances. However, the outcry against such a gory display as the bull-fight would probably be overwhelming. And the outcry would probably be loudest with those who yell for blood at the fights. Apparently they can make some subtle distinction that escapes us.

The Victoria College and UC junior squads tangled on Friday at the local arena with Vic coming from behind to edge the red and white hockeyists by a slim 4-3 margin. UC held a three to one lead at the end of the first half but Jr. Vic's scoring spree in the final frame was good for three goals and the game.

Linton of Vic initiated the scoring at 1:15 of the first with an unassisted effort and five minutes later Edwards knotted the count for UC. Spencer, who was high man for the game with a duo to his credit, popped in his first at 10:01 and followed with another at 14:50 to end the scoring for the first half.

The second part was all Vic with Lorne Lodge leading the parade when he converted Rhame's pass into the second red and gold tally. Leach from Ledley at 9:40 made it a three-all deadlock. Ledley came up with the clincher for Vic at 12:10 on a solo rush to end the scoring at 4-3.

Forestry A's shaded Dent A's in the four o'clock encounter by a 2-1 count. Mewha put Dents one up at three minutes even of the first stanza but Turnbull clicked for the winners just a minute and ten seconds later to tie things up. Forbes sank the winning goal at 7:10 to give the woodchoppers the decision.

Vic and UC hooked up again, this time on the major b-ball floor and UC's hoopsters made up for their hockey playing brothers' failure by taking a 33-24 decision from the Vic thirds. Both the UC thirds and their Vic counterpart hooped for sixteen points in the first half but the red and white quintet was too powerful in the last as they pushed in seventeen to Vic's eight.

Perlstien paced the winners with eleven good ones and Cullen followed with seven. Charendoff paced off with six while Webb contributed four and Davies and Stupp got three and two respectively.

Pond was hot for Vic with eight, McKenzie got five and Lowery four. Murray supplied a trio of points. Armitage and Harris sank two points each to round out the red and gold total.

Those old war-horses, the Vic Paths, administered a very decisive 40-14 walloping to the Institutional Management entry on Friday. Courtemarche led the fifths to the wire with eleven points while Connie Coles and Colbert dropped in ten each. McCamus got eight and "Flash" Fulford was in there with a single.

Montizambert was tops for the Inst. Mgt. boys with seven followed by Sheppard with three. Miscovich and Bredhaulp each tallied two for the purple and white quintet.

In the final hoop encounter Friday, Architecture A's out-classed Forestry Bees 28-10. Overs piled up a fourteen point total for the winners and that, as any advanced mathematician will tell you, is half the team total. Freedman garnered five while Tilbe, Daskin, Foster and Griffin got two per pop. Sheldon was high for the woodsmen with six. Ross had two and Bockwell and Turner each got one.

In the minor loop St. Mike's K bowed to Pre Meds I 26-12 and UC X downed III Engbus 36-23. Vic XVIII routed Trinity Dees by a 56-12 score. Vic XII shaded UC XVI 27-25.

Three water polo tilts were run off on Friday as UC IV blanked Trinity B 3-0. Shaw Cameron chucked in all the winners' goals. UC II beat Vic thirds 5-3 with Beatty performing the hat trick for UC and Tulley and Schriber each netting singles. Lloyd, McEwen and Brown split the Vic total. Dents II won from SPS III 2-1 while Woollidge got both for the winners and LaFontaine got the lone skule counter.

Intermeds Swamp Western 13 To 2 In Hockey Clash

BY JOHN KENNEDY

In a free scoring tilt at Varsity Arena Friday evening the intermediate hockey club waltzed to 13-2 victory over the Western Colts.

The first period ended in a one all tie but the Blues showed their superior skating ability and general all round moxie in the remaining two sessions and didn't allow another Western score until the dying minutes of the game.

Bill Paterson was the most prolific scorer, picking up three goals and as many assists. High scoring rear-guard Bob Cooper also performed the hat trick as well as notching an assist to register four points.

First Period Fast

The first period was fast and very rugged with Varsity finally taking the lead on a goal by Pearson from Moore at 10:57. Two minutes later, Western retaliated with a score by Schiller from Wainwright to give them a brief sense of equality.

Early in the second Wes Moore started the attack that netted five goals for Varsity in that period. He scored from a scramble with an assist going to "Lover" Cooper. At 3:20 Cooper beat Hainsworth with an accurate shot from close in that never left the ice.

Paterson Nets First

Rocky Howson after doggedly trying to split the Western defense, finally succeeded, and fed Moore a pass that he had no trouble canning. Paterson got his first goal by taking a long forward pass at the red line from Lennie Turner, and beating one defenseman before out-guessing Hainsworth. The last goal of the period was tallied by Cooper after an attack with Kane and Morrison.

At the :55 second mark of the final stanza Pearson got his second goal after a nice piece of team play with Moore. Howson watched this goal from the penalty box.

Paterson then picked up two assists in a row on goals by Turner and Doug Dies.

Morrison Disagrees

Shortly after, Count Morrison got a penalty for what was called "trip with hip" — apparently Morrison disagreed with this decision for he was also handed a ten minute misconduct. At the half way mark of the period Cooper got his third goal with Paterson and Dies getting assists.

John Pingland was the next scorer, camping just outside the crease and getting a pass from McLaughlin and Bell. He calmly addressed the puck, requested the goalie to move over just a little, then taking careful aim parked the biscuit in the nets.

Paterson scored a fluke goal from behind the Western cage before Western again counted on a goal by Bibbing from Williams. Bill Paterson completed scoring at 19:30 on a pass from Turner and Dies.

Western Seconds Drop Blues 69-48

BY PANTAGRUEL

In the prelim cage bout Saturday night, it was the old—and sad story of too much and too little reach respectively, reflected in the final Western Seconds 69, Varsity Seconds 48. Led by big Walley Wade, the junor Mustangs took three out of every four rebounds off both backboards, and after the first quarter had things all their own way.

Varsity started strongly, and were enjoying a four point lead when Wade, who came down from the seniors to bolster the number Two squad for this one game, took charge. He grabbed rebounds right off the rim at both ends, racked up 14 points himself (of which some six were on foul shots), and even managed to deke Varsity's Anderson out of what seemed a sure score by reaching up through the the mesh to re-route the inspinning ball. This last was of course strictly hors de la loi, but Art's protests went unheeded and the electric scoreboard similarly.

Also prominent for the winners was Doug Horne, a very smooth operator from a just off-key position, who found his one-hand floater most effective—it was good for six field goals, and three out of four free throws brought the total to 15 for the evening. Young, large Chris Ellis also turned in an excellent performance for 12 points.

Barry's boys will win games, and are capable of playing a lot better ball than they showed Saturday.

Varsity: Maher (12), Anderson (11), Stevenson (7), Andrews (6), Wigle (4), Luck (4), Gough (3), Mackenzie (1), Furlong.

Western II: Horne (15), Wade (14), Ellis (12), Fitzgerald (8), Hunt (6), Robertson (5), Yuhaz (4), Davidson (3), Beck (2).

Redmen Beat Queen's 10-4 In Puck Tilt

Montreal, Jan. 31 — (Special) — Both teams had new goaltenders guarding the nets as McGill swept to a 10-4 win over Queen's before 2,500 fans in Montreal Forum Friday night.

It was the third straight win of the intercollegiate campaign for the Redmen and moved them into a second place tie with Varsity.

Queen's — Goal, Maxwell; defense, Hamilton, Stevens; centre, Murray; wings, Mercier, Hews; alternates, Flanagan, Johnstone, Wagar, Robertson, Sadler, Potts, Kemp, Stroblski.

Ticklish?

That's Johnny Laxton in the middle of the flying formation above, but he was away out on top in the senior interfaculty gymnastic display in Hart House Saturday night when he won four events to take top honors easily. Co-pilots above are Harold Bee (top) and George Nick (bottom). Makes you wonder what would happen if someone tickled Mr. Nick, doesn't it?

Laxton Top Gymnast; Wins Four

Johnny Laxton is still the best gymnast around Varsity. He proved Saturday night when he won four out of five gymnastic events to win the senior interfaculty gymnastic meet in Hart House. But it's nothing new to Laxton. Twice before he has won the individual gymnastic title, and has seen the Harold Wilson cup go to the faculty he represents. This year it's OCE—it used to be PHE.

Laxton won the High Bar, Parallel Bar, Rings, and Mats for 20 points and first place at Athletic night. M. P. MacDowell, of Meds, was second and he too placed in four events. He won the Horse event, came second in the High Bar, and third in the Parallel Bars and Mats.

J. B. Murphy of PHE was third. OCE was first in the faculty war with 20 points, Meds second with 10, PHE third with six.

High bar —1, John Laxton (OCE); 2, McDowell (Meds); 3, Humphrey (Vic)

Parallel bars—1, Laxton (OCE); 2, Murphy (PHE); 3, MacDowell (Meds)

Horse—1, MacDowell (Meds); 2, MacDougall (Vic); 3, Price (Trin)

Rings—1, Laxton (OCE); 2, McElroy (St. Mike's); 3, Kewin (St. Mike's)

Mats—1, Laxton (OCE); 2, Murphy (PHE); 3, MacDowell (Meds).

But the place was really crowded, Fred Sgambati (on the loud-speaker) said that the tickets had all been sold by Thurday and that the ticket office was besieged for two days. The poor fellows that gives out with all the "Sorry, sold out's offered some sage advice to those that were turned away—"Get your tickets early next time and don't come without them."

Mustangs Revenge Football Defeats In Basketball Tilt

By ED VOIGHT

The faculties of Medicine and Dentistry, the hosts of the evening, were quite thoughtful in inviting the champion Varsity Blues rugby team en masse, but the desired result didn't materialize as the Western Mustangs cage team atoned for their football defeats by knocking off the Toronto cagers, 42-37 in the main feature of the third Athletic Night of '48-49, Saturday night in Hart House.

Western's victory entrenches them solidly in first place of the Senior Intercollegiate basketball league with a three won-none lost record. In their first two games, the Metrasmen defeated both McGill and Queen's. Saturday's game was the first for the Blues.

Bob Phibbs, big George Wearring, and Captain Paul Thomas were the sparkplugs of the Western win, Phibbs in particular coming up with a red-hot performance in the second half as the Mustangs pulled ahead.

Phibbs Roars Back

After a poor first half in which his usually accurate one-hand push shots were miles off the hoop, Phibbs came roaring back to swoosh in five field goals, all on his one-hand shots, in the last two periods to emerge as the game's high scorer with 13 points.

Wearring, 6' 5" Mustang centre, hooped 12 points, and played a strong defensive game, especially under the Western hoop in grabbing off rebounds, one pnase of the game, by the way, in which the Blues looked weak. Captain Thomas hooped only four points, but was the trickiest player on the floor, faking the Varsity guards out of position with some fancy ball-handling time and time again.

Pettinger, Brennan Star

Forwards Glen Pettinger and Eddie Brennan were the pick of the Blues. Pettinger popped in 10 points, played his heart out in a losing cause. Brennan sank 11 points, but was seriously handicapped, especially in his defensive play, by incurring three fouls before the first period was over, and his fourth midway the second period. When the Toronto player slapped George Arnott, who was particularly adept at drawing fouls, for his fifth and final foul, he looked almost in tears as he walked off the floor.

Brennan dropped in one of the nicest baskets of the game in the third quarter when he went roaring down the floor, changed his dribbling hand by bouncing the ball behind his back to completely fool his check. Co-Captains Wally Zeaton and Johnny McManus played well, and did their best to organize a Varsity offence through Western's close man-to-man checking.

Summary:

Western — Scott, 2; Thomas, 4; Ford, 5; Wade; Wearring, 12; Phibbs, 13; Arnott, 6. Total, 42.

Toronto — Stockman, 2; Voice; Gray; LaChance; Henderson, McManus, 5; Zeaton, 4; Tyndall, 5; Pettinger, 10; Brennan, 11. Total, 37.

Varsity Wins In Wrestling Over U of B

Buffalo, Jan. 31—(Special to The Varsity)—Visiting University of Toronto wrestlers surprised University of Buffalo fans and fighters Saturday night as they won four bouts and tied one on the eight-fight card in Clark Memorial Gym. On a points basis the visitors won 16-13.

One of the best encounters of the evening was in the 165 pound class when George Davies of Toronto fought to a 4-4 draw with Buffalo's Price. In the feature fight for the night Buffalo's Beetleman at 220 lbs., proved too much for Leonard of Varsity who was 37 lbs. lighter.

Results:

121 lbs.—Oswald (Buffalo) def. Lubbock (Toronto) 9-1
128 lbs. — Gidvini (Buff.) def. Lee-Wright (Tor.) 8-3
136 lbs.—Cassels (Tor.) def. Smyth (Buff.) 9-0
145 lbs.—Kurkup (Tor.) def. Krysezuk (Buff.) 9-8
155 lbs.—Shaver (Tor.) def. Cesar (Buffalo) 9-2
165 lbs.—Price (Buff.) drew with Davies (Tor.) 4-4
175 lbs.—Graham (Tor.) def. O'Donnell (Buff.) 5-0

Scalpers Invading 'A' Night Territory

BY BOB DNIEPER

Athletic Nights are in. The sure sign of a successful promotion is a flourishing scalping business. Saturday night the hallways in front of the ticket office resounded to cries of "Two here—Buck and a half" or "Over here-dollar each." It was just like Rugby Day on Bloor street.

Western had quite a few supporters out for the ball game and they raised quite a rumpus. One beauteous damsel told us a sad, sad story of getting lost while driving here to explain her late arrival. She was peeved because the seating was inadequate but was full of admiration for Hart House. When we told her she had seen only the athletic wing and that there was a restaurant, theatre art gallery and other assorted facilities she refused to believe us.

The lounge next to the big gym was crowded all night with various characters sitting in the deep chairs holding hands with their girls while a pretty young lady pounded out soothing melodies on the piano.

The movies of the Varsity-McGill game drew quite a crowd. They were in slow motion, so that every move made by Toogood or Waldon seemed soooooooo easy. The Toronto supporters were shown tearing down the gal posts, and someone at the back of the room yeld out "Look, there I om—getting the cross-bar!"

There was an artist doing sketches of anyone willing to sit for him in front of Great Hall, and he got quite a play from the less inhibited girls. The usual comment on his work was "My! Is that me?" Quite a fellow. He was the kind of a guy that if you saw him on the street you would immediately say "There goes an artist." He was just the type.

Montreal Lead Increases To 4 Beat Gaels 10-5

Montreal, Jan. 29—(Special To The Varsity) — Twenty-five hundred fans saw the University of Montreal Carabins drub the Queen's Gaels to the tune of 10-5 in a Senior Intercollegiate hockey game tonight.

The Carabins' win gives them a four-point margin over Toronto and McGill. The game was remarkably free from penalties with only two being handed out in each period, Pinard of the Montrealers was high scorer with two goals and two assists.

D. Dix Would Frown But Meds Win Swim

Dorothy Dix might not have approved of the Meds swimming team on Saturday night. For the Red and Black crew celebrated their night as hosts at Athletic Night by scoring a decisive victory in the senior interfaculty swim meet in Hart House Pool to share the limelight with Sig Wigle, UC's record breaker.

The Medsmen, winners of last week's junior swim meet, piled up 25 points to lead the field. The combined UC-PHE squad racked up 16 points to take second spot, while Vic. Architecture, and SPS were tied for third with 12.

Sig Wigle swam the 100-yard backstroke 1:08.1 to shatter the the former senior interfaculty mark by nine-tenths of a second. Record breaking, however, is nothing new to Wigle. Last year he combined with Warren Clayson and Al Marshall to crack the intercollegiate and interfaculty records for the 300 yard medley relay.

Smith Wins McCatty Cup

D. Smith of Meds carried off the McCatty Trophy, awarded annually to the winner of the 200 yard breast stroke. The trophy is in memory of Winston McCatty, a former member of th Varsity swimming and water polo teams, and honorary coach in these sports after his graduation in graduation in 1936. He was killed while with the RCAF during the war.

Only double winner of the meet way in both the 50 and 60 yard free was Ross Anderson who showed the

McGill Triumphs In Hoopla 58-49 Over Queensmen

Montreal, Jan. 31—(CUP)—The McGill basketball team captured its first victory in two CIAU starts this season downing Queen's 58-49 at the Currie Memorial Gym here Saturday night.

But to scupper Queen's, the Redmen had to weather one of the most powerful last-half drives seen here in a long time. They held a commanding 25-9 lead at the half but the Gaels came back to run it to 25-15 within two minutes.

Here the game broke wide open. McGill assumed command again to lead 51-31 at the 13-minute mark, but the Gaels led by Lampman again got hot to run the score to 58-49 by game's end.

Dave Caldwell paced the McGill crew in the scoring department with 12 points, but Bobby Duford was only one point back. Robbins and Lampman each potted ten for Queen's.

McGill—Duford 11, Flemwelling 1, Bloom 8, Berger 3, Fraser 5, Sharpe 3, Wilson 7, Endman 4, Caldwell 12, Godel 4. Total 58.

Queen's—MacNiven 7, Logan 2, Weir 2, Bland 8, Holder 5, Soutter, McLaghlin 1, Bahner 4, Robbins 10, Lampman 10. Total 49.

ENTRIES POURING IN FOR RACE

S.P.S. Dean Retires

Dr. C. R. Young will have completed eight years as dean of SPS when he retires at the end of this term. The dean has spent 42 years on the staff of the university's engineering faculty, and has expressed an intention to make up for his years of hard work by becoming "a first class loafer." Some would disagree that his plans leave much time for loafing for he intends to write "an early history of engineering in Canada." (See story on page 3.)

Aged Philosophy Professor Passes In Brantford Home

Professor Emeritus of the philosophy department, James Gibson Hume died Friday at the home of his daughter in Brantford. Professor Hume, retired for 23 years, was 89.

Prof. Hume taught mine at the university previous to his graduation in 1887. Following his graduation he went to Harvard where he received his M.A. and Ph. D.

He joined the staff of the University of Toronto in 1891 where he taught philosophy and ethics for 37 years.

Following his retirement he devoted much of his time to lecturing and writing. He wrote a series of articles warning of the coming of the Second World War, and advocated military preparedness.

Chariot Classic Challenge Draws Quick Arts Response; Mysterious Trophy Offered

Meet All Comers In Race Classic, Skule Spirit High

The heat is on.

The World Championship Chario. Race classic will be run on Thursday, Pat Suddick, vice-president of the Engineering Society announced yesterday. "Skule regrets the unfortunate twist given Monday's story in The Varsity concerning the race, Just some Varsity reporter trying to get out of running in the race," he charged. The Monday story announced that because "the challengers that appeared so far do not meet the requirements of such a gruelling race" it was to be called off.

"Since the article appeared we have had numerous phone calls claiming that Skule is afraid to put the trophy up for competition. This has riled Skulemen to such a pitch that they will definitely accept any faculties that are able to field a team." The sneer on his face caused some hard words to pass between The Varsity reporter and Mr. Patrick Joseph Michael Suddick.

"When will the chariots be ready?" we asked. "Soon" Suddick replied.

"What is this about a trophy?" we asked. "We have always won it, and so we never bothered to show it to anyone. It is considered exclusive Skule property," Suddick asserted. "We have decided to bring it out this year just to let some of the more unfortunate members of the University have a look at it," he added.

(At this point Patrick J. M. "Suds" Suddick began talking about Artsmen. He frothed a bit and we were unable to catch any of his remarks clearly.)

Suddick expressed "frank disappointment" in The Varsity. "They are always challenging somebody to something and we had hoped to hear from them sooner," he said. (See Col. 5) "We want to give them a chance (snicker) to prove that the pen is mightier than the sword," he declared. (It is a well known fact The Varsity Women's Team smeared Skule in last year's race.)

Impartiality Charged

"We demand impartial judges in this year's Chariot Race," demanded Joe Potts, IV U. C. yesterday. Potts charged that there had been "gross discrimination" in the judging of last year's race.

"The trouble with Skule is that they don't know how to organize anything. They couldn't organize a peanut race in China!", he affirmed.

Potts called on the engineers to form a committee. "They should have at least twelve sub-committee chairmen, to take care of rules, judging, prizes, beer, and so on," Potts stated.

Potts is at present organizing an organization to investigate the possibility of setting up a committee to look into the formation of a council to review the collection of peanuts in China.

"I am all for committees," Potts said.

RULES OF THE RACE

The World Championship Chariot Race will be run at 1.00 p.m. Thursday, February 4. The race consists of one lap clockwise around the front campus. Chariots are supplied by The Engineering Society. A team consists of six students and a driver. Eye-gouging, tripping, kicking, biting, rough language, and other unseemly practices are prohibited.

All faculties may enter a team at The Varsity office. Deadline: 8 p.m. Wednesday night.

'We'll Win Again' Is Artsmen's Cry In Reply To Skule

Faculty spokesmen yesterday rose on every side to answer The Skule Chariot Race challenge. They expressed their scorn of what one Artsman described as "rawther unfair practices, cheating and that sort of thing you know."

Trinity, Vic, U.C., and The Varsity (Men and Women) have already been heard from, and further applications are expected today.

The Varsity Defends

Defending the title are The Varsity Women. "We are out to repeat our glorious victory of last year," declared Ibby Hay-Roe. "We understand there has been some dispute as to who won the race last year. We'll show them!"

Keith Davey declared that although Vic was extremely busy at the moment with the Vic At-Home, they would be there. "We won last year, and we will do it again," he asserted. Asked if he knew that there was to be a real trophy this year, Davey countered with "Are there to be real judges? We know that last year's judges were all impartial but then they were all Skulemen," he charged. Davey expects the Vic team to be strong. "If it were just engineers that we were running against we could field a better women's team," he stated.

Trinity To Enter

George Shepherd, Athletic President at Trinity, declared that the Trinity team would be in there again. "We placed first by a decided margin last year and we expect to repeat our victory this season," Shepherd said. "In spite of the rather rude attitude of Skule, we hope to show that their arrogance is merely false hope. With fair judges, and our trust in the Almighty we will win!" he asserted.

The Varsity team is already in training. Rumours that they are being fed nothing but raw meat were denied yesterday by Editor Mark Harrison. "In spite of our impartial coverage of last year's event, it will obviously be necessary for us to prove our superiority again to everyone's satisfaction," Harrison said.

A statement issued late last night by University College President Ralph Campbell presents the U.C. attitude in unequivocal terms: "Just as in 30 years the Artsman will be cracking the whip over the poor plodding Skuleman, so this week will the Artsman be giving him a foretaste of things to come. It would be appropriate if the U.C. chariot race were pulled by Skulemen, but since the latter will all be occupied with other menial tasks, we will prove that we have brawn as well as brains, and beat Skule at their own game."

U.C. Claims Victory

"We won hands down last year and we will repeat that triumph," Campbell growled.

Facts concerning the trophy to be presented were scarce yesterday. A Varsity reporter is currently conducting an investigation and his report is expected to be in today. Rumour has it that it is a memorial affair. Skule officials declined to comment when questioned yesterday. "You'll see," they said, "in good time." A rumour that the award is to be known as "The Keith Davey Memorial Trophy" was emphatically denied by Pat Suddick, Vice-President of the Engineering Society. "Such a suggestion," (a free translation), he fumed.

The Book Problem

Find Most Campus Exchanges Have Failed

By WILS HARRISON

This is the second of a series of articles on the text book problem. In this article Harrison examines book exchanges on the campus as they have operated to date.

After the Cole interview, I decided to check with some of the book exchanges which were in operation around the campus and try to find out just what problems they had to face. I knew there had been two book exchanges on the campus before the war. I wanted to find out why they no longer existed. I wanted to find out how long students had been trying to find some solution to the problem of reselling their used texts and what success and failures they had met in doing so.

Two Exchanges Run

The two book exchanges were operated by the Student's Christian Movement and the Women's SAC office respectively. The one operated by the SCM was housed in Hart House. The other was situated in the Women's SAC office in University College basement. It was managed by Miss Parkes, Associate Secretary of the SAC.

The exchange operated by the Women's SAC office was instituted because the girls were not able to use the exchange in Hart House. In order to sell their used texts the girls used to post a list of the books they had for sale on a bulletin board in the office and any prospective buyer would make out a slip listing the books she wished to buy along with her name and address. The slip was placed in a box somewhat similar to an open post office box, which each girl, who was selling books, had for the purpose. The boxes used to get so full, the slips would often be falling on the floor before the seller would collect them. It was to remedy these two situations that Miss Parkes decided to open the exchange and manage it herself.

No Profit Is Basis

It began to operate about 15 years before the war, (the 1939-45 war), and was run on a non-profit basis. The students brought their used texts in to the office. Miss Parkes then made out a card for each girl listing the books and the prices for which they were to be sold. The students were limited to asking two-thirds of the price the text had cost them. That is, each time the book changed hands the price to the student was reduced. If the book had been purchased new, the girl could ask two-thirds of the retail price. If it had been purchased second hand, she could only ask two-thirds of the price that the book had cost her. When the book was sold it was marked off the card and the student was notified when she came in to the office.

After the exchange had been in operation for a year or two the volume of handling increased to such an extent Miss Parkes had to employ two girls to help her.

Exchange Discontinued

However, it reached a point where too many books were being brought in. There was not enough room in the small office for the texts and at the same time to transact the regular business of the SAC. It was becoming a dumping ground for old texts which were no longer used in the courses. Miss Parkes said she found, in the time that she operated the book exchange, that students were told to buy a book in a certain edition preferred by the lecturers and the next year when the book was brought in for resale it would be of no value because a new text or a new edition was being used. Often, she said, the newer text, prescribed for the course, would vary very little from the older one. The latter would then become obsolete and be of no value to the student for resale. When this problem of dumping grew steadily worse, it was decided to discontinue the exchange. The texts left were kept for three years and those unclaimed were sent to the Salvation Army.

Here again the problem of obsolete texts accumulating had forced this exchange to close up shop. This was 10 or 15 years ago.

NFCUS Survey Scientific

I asked Miss Parkes whether any surveys on the text book problem, such as the present NFCUS report, had ever been taken before. She said there had been several surveys but none had been conducted as scientifically as the last one carried out by the NFCUS committee on this campus. Generally it was done by a single student or committee of students entirely of their own accord and not under the sponsorship of the SAC, she said.

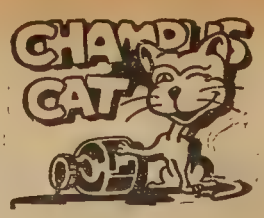
Used Books

The problem of used textbook prices—currently being highlighted by articles in The Varsity and Forum, and by the NFCUS report—is one that may soon be eased on this campus.

Yesterday's report that the Students' Administrative Council will set up a book exchange in April is some indication that action was needed to cope with a situation that has gradually aroused the indignation of many students.

The problem is not a new one. Complaints about used book prices have been aired on this campus for years. And, as Assistant News Editor Wils Harrison pointed out yesterday, some efforts had been made in the past to set up book exchanges as a service to students. But, at best, these have never filled the needs of a large number of students. Most SAC attempts to provide such a service in the past have been continually hamstrung by lack of available space on the campus.



Forum, in its issue last week, took an ill-chosen rap at the SAC because it felt the Council missed a "golden opportunity" when it turned down an offer to purchase Horner and Bowes book exchange recently.

Certainly the SAC, until recently, deserved no laurels for its half-hearted approach to the used book problem, a problem that is of campus-wide interest. But its action in turning down the purchase of Horner and Bowes was not quite as ridiculous as Forum apparently thinks. According to the terms, the SAC could have bought the book exchange for $50 in cash plus 2 per cent on gross sales (a minimum of $100) per year for five years. The SAC turned it down—and for a very good reason.

Firstly, the lease on the premises occupied by Horner and Bowes had expired and was not renewable, which immediately left the book exchange homeless. Secondly, practically all the books possessed by Horner and Bowes were owned by students who had left them there for sale, which would have left the SAC with no stock. The only asset to be purchased was goodwill, a rather intangible asset. By setting up a book exchange of its own, the SAC could generate enough goodwill of its own. Does Forum suggest that the SAC pay $50 cash plus up to $500 in five years to purchase goodwill?

Forum glibly offers the "obvious solution", namely, that students should buy the U of T book store and operate it as a student service. Sounds fine. But Forum betrays a woeful ignorance of the structure of the U of T Press. The U of T Press and its book store is controlled by the Board of Governors. The prices of textbooks sold at the book store are directly controlled by the Board of Governors and profits are used to defray operating costs of the Press and to finance ventures such as the new book store. In spite of Forum's suggestion we doubt whether the Board of Governors would smile benignly at the thought of the book store being taken over by students.

Criticism can be levelled at the SAC for its efforts in trying to establish a book exchange on the campus, but its efforts this year have been more energetic than has been the case in the past. More criticism can be levelled at University officials who might have offered more co-operation than they have done, a matter we will discuss later.

Student Thinking In Lecture Hours Banned By Catput

The Catput last night announced that they were banning all student thinking during school hours. This means that all University buildings will be empty mentally during lecture hours.

President Kidney Myth said that University of Toronto was becoming a hot bed for red hot thought. He claimed that students were cluttering up the b dings during school hours engaged in thought. He said that he didn't know how students expected to learn anything if they insisted on thinking.

Mr. Bevins, Secretary of the Catput said the decree applied only to all university buildings under the jurisdiction of the President. He said that affiliated colleges did not come under the decree, but he hoped that they would co-operate in halting excess student thought. Students may, however, think within the bounds of their own homes.

Catput Police

Mr. Bevins said, "Mr. Myth feels that the new decree (number 879 in your decree book) is necessary to clarify the policy of the Catput towards meetings held during lecture hours, hereafter to be known as 'non-thinking-hours'. Thinking is not to interfere with study hours."

An addition to the resolution (number 899 in your addition book) stated that no organization could think in Confiscation Hall unless the Bored of Governors had approved, and a suitable fee had been collected from the potential thinkers. This fee would be in accordance with the size of the thinker's brain and pocketbook.

Any applications for extra-curricular thinking should be addressed to the head of college or the head of the political party on the opposite side.

A Head Is A Head

"One head is as good as another", said Bevins. "This will hurt you more than it will hurt us," he said.

Any students caught thinking will not be allowed to stand in line for lunches at Hart House. If the same student is caught thinking twice in one week, he will not be allowed the privilege of standing in line for overnight books at the library.

"Students of the University unite. You have nothing to lose but your degrees."

Harpo.

News was received here late last night that the Advertising Journal's annual award had been won by the truest and bluest of the University of Toronto's student papers for its courage and imagination in making available to students a greater volume of advertising than ever before attempted by an undergraduate newspaper.

In making the presentation, Ulvington J. Misanthrope, the Journal's editor, commended the paper for resisting any tendency to let current events disrupt the rights of those to whom its first loyalties belong—its advertisers, and spoke warmly of its tireless adherence to the precept, "None of the news is fit to print". In closing he said that he was looking forward to the golden day when International Nickel should take its rightful place on the front page.

Honorable mention was given the 'Loblaw's Weekly Bulletin".

Must Combat Discrimination, Declares Kidd

"Anti-discrimination is not entirely an educational job," said Dr. Kidd, Director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education, in an interview yesterday. "Education and legislation are both necessary to combat this menace to democracy."

Dr. Kidd said that the Committee on Cultural Relations, on the national scale, (the U of T Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee worked on this campus) had been formed in Canada with the twofold objective of building better relations and of opposing and trying to remove intolerance.

On the campus, the SAC Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee is instituting a Brotherhood Week, Feb. 20-27, to coincide with the national event going on at the same time.

To combat discrimination, Dr. Kidd said it was necessary to break down segregation, and that without breakdown, understanding would be meaningless. "It is also important to note that minority groups will continue to suffer unless social conditions are improved. If social conditions are poor, some minority group is always made the scape-goat."

Commenting further, Dr. Kidd said that we have enough evidence from United States to justify legislation. "There is some value in a bill of rights—some statement of basic rights. Legislation seems to be necessary for fair employment practices."

However, problems of discrimination can't be dealt with in isolation. All are bound up with other kinds of human relationships. We must give much more attention to the social sciences. "We spend huge sums of money on the development of natural sciences, but have no money to spend on the social sciences."

To illustrate his point, Dr. Kidd said that all of the three new buildings on the U of T campus were for natural science. Facilities for sections of the University such as the school of Social Work were, he said, much smaller and less adequate.

Life Of Writing, Painting Is Foreseen By SPS Dean

The privilege of doing exactly what one wants to do comes only after years of devotion to a job well done. Dr. C. R. Young, Dean of S.P.S. since 1941, retires on the last day of the school year 1948-49 with definite plans in mind for cultivating a latent talent for loafing. "Up to now, I haven't had much chance," grinned the Dean, "but given the opportunity I believe I could become a first class loafer."

Plans Oil Painting

"I think," he said, "that I shall break into oils first thing. I should like to try soiling some canvas." The Dean's hobby for a number of years has been water-color and pastel works, five of which are being shown now at the Professional Engineers' Art Show with 75 exhibits of engineers' off-work-hours talent.

Will Write Book

"And then I have plans for a book," said the writer of several engineering volumes dealing wtih the engineers' responsibility to society, economics, etc. "It will be an early history of engineering in Canada and a biographical work of the earlier engineers which will take some time and digging, but other than that I'm not going to do anything but just what I want to do."

Feels Satisfied

The dean had hoped, he said, to retire last year but there had still been a lot to do in '48-49. When he leaves on June 30 after 42 years' service with the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, it will be with certain regrets and yet a feeling of neat and satisfactory finality. "It has been rather good fun to see the whole Ajax operation go through its full development and reach completion." He is content to see their two buildings, Mechanical and Wallberg, being at last finished. The latter will be officially opened in the autumn.

Dean Young graduated in 1903 from the old three year course, took his bachelor's degree in 1905 and began his professorial career in 1907, keeping professionally active in the summers until the later years.

Leaves Ancient Clock

As Dr. Young quotes Walt Whitman: "Aloof and light-hearted, I take to the open road," leaving behind deanly duties and responsibilities in room 38 of the Mining Building. He also leaves in that room to his successor, a 200 year old French clock whose workings are completely exposed and set into action daily by hauling up a 12 pound cannon ball that acts as a weight. Although he may miss this latter part of his daily office routine, it is certain that the absence of all the rest of the problems, cares and duties will be little regretted.

Back From Visit to France Says Conditions Very Poor

Professor R. D. C. Finch of the University College French Department, who has recently returned from France, consented in an interview to provide for students here the following information concerning life, and particularly university life, in France today.

The cost of living has doubled, and in some cases tripled since April. While rationing continues it is not so well organized as in England. Whereas there everyone gets a little of what is to be had, in France, owing to the unfortunate black market, a few people who have the price get nearly all they want; but the majority have a hard time to make ends meet, since no salary raises have accompanied higher prices.

Student life has never been humming with activity more than it is now. Students are on their toes and university residences are packed. There is intense interest in the doings of students in other countries, and many societies for promoting international relationships exist. They are more interested in international affairs than before the war. In the centre of "cite universitaire," the student resident section, is an international house which contains a large theatre. Leading speakers, actors, musicians and artists perform here at extremely low rates at least twice weekly to a packed house.

A student who got by on $30 a month in June now needs $60. The short summer vacation cuts earnings. Some do without food, and many have almost no clothes. There is a bin in one of the residences where clothes are left for those who need them most desperately. The more fortunate share what they have with those who have least. There is a friendly and cooperative spirit that pervades French university life. In comparison with Canadian students, and to a greater deal with American students, the French are very independent. They only attend classes when they deem it necessary. Term marks do not exist; exams are all important.

Bridge Tourney To Be Held Here

Bridge players from universities in Ontario and Quebec meet to decide the Intercollegiate bridge championship in Hart House this week-end.

The university or college represented by the winning team will be the holders for one year of a new trophy donated to the Canadian Intercollegiate Bridge League by the Toronto Evening Telegram. In addition the individual players will receive small trophies as mementoes of their success.

Play will start Friday night at Hart House Ajax and will continue Saturday afternoon and evening in Hart House, Toronto.

The Toronto teams, picked at a special game held by the Hart House Bridge Club last week will be:

Hugh Stephenson, II Trinity; Bob Gouinlock, III Trinity; J. S. Heron and W. S. Sparling, III Trinity; John Stephenson and Jack Morgenstern, IV SPS; R. Wormleighton and W. K. Nicol, IV U.C.

PRESBYTERIAN FELLOWSHIP

A meeting will be held Thursday, Feb 3rd at 8:00 p.m. in Wymilwood. Discussion on "Church Union" led by three students from Knox College.

No DVA Increase Gregg Tells House Vets Demand Raise

The Hon. Milton F. Gregg, Minister of Veterans' Affairs, told the House of Commons yesterday there would be no increase at this time in the basic rates for veterans' allowances paid to students attending universities. The minister was replying to a queryposed by Rodney Young, CCF member for Vancouver Centre.

The question was "Does the government propose any changes in the rates set for payment of veteran students attending universities?"

The minister replied "I do not propose to recommend any increase in the basic rates at this time."

Seek Increase

Commenting on the statement, Jack Gwynne-Timothy, IV Trinity, National Secretary of the National Conference of Student Veterans, said NCSV is convinced that an increase is necessary. At the recent conference all but one of over 40 NCSV delegates voted in favor of an increase commensurate with climbing living costs. The vote was taken, Gwynne-Timothy said last night, on the basis of surveys conducted independently by the affiliated university groups last fall. The surveys indicated, he added, that students were experiencing considerable difficulty in trying to meet rising prices.

Constant Since '44

The basic rates for students has been constant at $60 per month since 1944. The $10 increase in the living allowance for wives of students in 1946 did not affect the basic rate. The allowance for unmarried students has been the same for the past four and one half years.

Gwynne-Timothy said he and two other delegates, National President Peter Kohl, McGill, and Treasurer Donald Matthews, Queen's, plan to present their brief to the Department of Veterans' Affairs later this month. The brief, based on a uniform national survey taken in all Canadian universities, will ask increases in the basic $60 rate in accordance with government figures on cost-of-living indexes.

Atomic Research Almost Stopped When Fire Rages

Vancouver, Jan. 31 — (CUP) — Destruction of University of British Columbia's link in Canada's atomic energy research program loomed early Friday morning when a blaze which raged out of control some 30 feet away completely levelled the six huts which comprised the home economics department.

Estimated damage in the two and one-half hour fire is in the neighbourhood of $150,0000. It is the largest fire loss ever suffered by the university.

The blaze started with an explosion near the corner of the new million and a half dollar Physics Building containing atomic research equipment.

The fact that there was almost no wind may have saved the building from joining the six huts in ashes.

All labs and lecture rooms for the home economics class were completely wiped out, leaving only the skeleton remains of electric and gas stoves, washing machines, rotary ironers, etc., sticking up out of the embers.

The student Amateur Radio Club lost $3,000 of equipment located in one of the huts. This included their 500 watt short-wave transmitter and three receivers.

An ex-club member has offered the loan of his transmitter, and the club will lose no time in setting up their new station.

Will Inspire Hockey 'Blues' With Pennants, Sing-Song

Plans for promoting senior intercollegiate hockey games are being hurried to completion by the Blue and White Society of the SAC for Friday when the University of Montreal comes to town to cross sticks with the Varsity Blues.

Are Selling Pennants

Arrangements have been made for the sale of blue pennants measuring 10 inches in length, worded in white and proclaiming that immortal phrase "O.K. Blues, let's do it again!" This of course refers to the fact that Varsity have won the Intercollegiate hockey title for the past two seasons. To repeat they will have to slow down the Flying Frenchmen who are current favorites to win the title.

The pennants will be sold for ten cents to those who get there first.

Alec Campbell, ace interfaculty referee and skier, will demonstrate his talents in a third field between periods. Campbell will lead a sing-song with his accordion, a combination which the crowd warmed up to in the first Montreal game here.

Efforts are also being made to have smoking confined to between period drags as the haze which results from puffing in the stands makes it difficult for both the players and spectators to see. It is hoped to have the ushers enforce this ruling.

Choose Three Stars

Through the co-operation of the Athletic Association a more complete program line-up is being provided with notices of interest to hockey fans. A celebrity is to be present to select the night's three stars.

Joe Prendergast, who is in charge of the big post game dance, states that prizes galore will be the order of the night with a master prize to be drawn for later. Further details will be announced this week.

A capacity crowd is anticipated at Friday's game both to participate in the Blue and White festivities and to see a first rate hockey game.

Debaters Chosen For Trip To U.S.

In the debate trials held last night in Hart House, Al Noble, IV UC, and Ed Eberle, III St. Mike's, were chosen the team to represent the University of Toronto in a debating tour of American universities.

The nine contestants were required to give a five minute speech in support of the motion: Resolved that the United Nations should be resolved into a federal world government. This is one of the topics the team will debate in the United States.

Judges for the try-outs were Dr. D. M. Hayne, of the French Department at University College, J. M. S. Careless of the history department, C. A. Ashley, of the department of political economy, and N. Ignatieff, warden of Hart House.

The first debate will be on Feb. 15th against the University of Wisconsin, on the motion used for the trial here. Other debates will be against the University of Illinois, Notre Dame, Chicago, and Northwestern. The topic for debate will be: "Resolved that the Socialist trend in Canada and the United States is desirable."

Skirted Snoopers Scheming; Seek Six Stalwart She-males To Keep Chariot Championship

The Varsity girls will be out there ready to down the challengers. This is the official word from the female members of The Varsity staff who are not disclosing the attire with which they will bring the title of winner of the 1949 chariot race back to its present abode.

Last year the girls started off in the first heat winning against strong opposition from the SPS Toike Oike, University College and Victoria college. They then went into the finals winning through sheer persistence and will power against the combined forces of the remaining contenders.

The starters this year as yet have not been chosen but front lead of Flora Mulligan will have to be filled as will the place of Bev. Echlin. Hopes have not been down however as a strong women's sport staff will help to bear the brunt of the burden.

The guidance of the team will be this year in the capable hand of Editor-in-chief Mark Harrison who on being informed of this duty appeared stunned at the great privilege bestowed upon him and gulped. No further comment was forthcoming.

With keen competition for the six places on the team — there are still six places to be filled — the fervor and excitement are mounting. Other women's teams will probably be in the battle but no challenges have yet been forthcoming from the other women on the campus.

Pros, Cons For Teachers Described By Mary Casson

Entering the teaching profession is like engaging in a large scale bargain, explained Miss Mary Casson, teacher of Physical Education and Health at Central Technical School. If you give your very best to your job of teaching you are sure to get the equivalent in satisfaction. Miss Casson gave a vocational guidance address on the teaching profession in the series of talks arranged for Vic women undergraduates by the Victoria College Alumnae Association in Annesley Hall last night.

Like any other profession, Miss Casson said, teaching has its pros and cons. The teacher is presented with a definite challenge; she is in an excellent position to do something about laying the foundations for the future. There is no problem about finding employment. The shortage of teachers in Ontario is so acute that any candidate who has shown aptitude for teaching during her training course can get a position at once. Holidays are better than in most other professions, and there is an opportunity of getting a good general education and following up outside interests such as music and dramatics.

Another advantage is the salary scale which is quite good in comparison with the salaries of other occupations for girls, such as nursing, librarianship or stenography. The starting salary in high schools is about $2,000 a year, with an increase of $200 a year for ability and experience. The medium salary in 1947 was $30 a week. In large centres salaries are better, averaging $3,500 a year in Toronto, $3,200 in Ottawa and $3,000 in London. It is possible with specialist qualifications to get into a city school at the start of a career, though many girls prefer starting in small centres.

On the con side are the facts that

Our Responsibility

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but what happens when Jack becomes a playboy?

Our modern world offers us so many time-savers that we have more leisure than any previous generation. Modern reform has instituted the eight-hour day and the five-day week, higher wages and trade unions. These may be good things, but a good thing can go too far. Hovering in the air today along with the prediction of an atomic age, is a spirit of apathy. We just cannot be botnered giving a full day's work for a full day's pay.

The chief object of our lives here is to have enough time-saving conveniences that we won t need to work at all; drawing our paychecks will be the sum total of our efforts in that direction.

We realize that teachers should receive increased salaries and that the older teacners are pusning themselves to the limit, giving all they can to the education of the youth of Canada.

Unfortunately some of the "new crop" are reaping the benefits without putting their shoulders to the wheel. They are "too busy" to take over burdens which older teachers have been bearing for many years. They are afraid to put forth any extra objective effort, less they be "stuck with" some responsibility. They are looking more to the material ends and less to the raising of the standard of their profession.

It is to the people in the university today, who are intending to be the teachers of tomorrow, that we must impress the responsibility not only of their job but of their duty to the teachers of the past. You can only reap that which you have sown; so let us plant well.

But it is not only the teachers who are at fault. A commercialized attitude is the stamp of our age.

We are all tending to become bored, indifferent, and self-centred. In university, to put as little effort as we can into courses and assignments has come to be the accepted thing. Is it any wonder, then, that we take jobs where we loaf with one eye on the clock and the other on the size of the pay envelope. At the present time, when positions for women are relatively more plentiful than they have been, too many of us skip blithely from one job to another which seems to offer more advantages in the way of shorter hours, more rest periods, more holidays. Our thoughts are not directed towards how much we can accomplish during one hour, one day, or one week, but on how little we are able to "get away with."

We have decried the thinker in his "ivory tower", but even he did not expect to reach decisions without a little cogitation. However to realize that we cannot get something for nothing will be a step in the right direction.

Language Barrier

By JOAN HUME

English-speaking peoples as a whole, in the tradition of the Victorians who prided themselves on it, are very loath to expose themselves to other languages. They are particularly unwilling to speak anything else but their native tongue even when they try to understand a foreign language.

Opportunities Lacking

On this continent this idea is especially prevalent because the opportunity to travel in foreign lands is lacking. However, the trend in universities towards more language courses, particularly in Spanish, and the need for a reading knowledge of other languages in much graduate work has been a helpful factor. The importance of speaking another language was played up by the war and has since increased with the closer integration of nationalities in organizations like the UNO.

Students Need Practice

Practice in speaking other tongues is the big problem for students nowadays. One solution was advanced by University College last year when it opened the UC women's French House, a residence in which the girls are required to speak French. This is one of the the few places in which the atmosphere of the language can be maintained outside the classroom.

While this works out very well for resident women who wish to learn the language from each other, men students as well as the non-resident women have no such opportunity.

Dr. B. P. Skey, who teaches Russian in Toronto, suggested a new system last year when he invited his pupils to address groups of people, whose native tongue is other than English, in their own language. So far, George Johnston, librarian at Osgoode Hall, and Mrs. H. L. Welsh have been speakers.

Suggests Groups

This method is not, of course, adequate to accommodate the great number of students who require opportunities to speak the languages they are studying. Reading is not enough if a real mastery is to be gained. Dr. Skey proproses that students meet daily for stated periods to converse in whatever language they wish to learn. With constant work, this would get results. The only drawback here is the possibility that mistakes could be made of which the novices would not be conscious. Nevertheless, familiarity could be gained and self-consciousness lost.

In a country such as Canada where there are many other nationalities and especially with the present immigration of many peoples from far off lands a great opportunity presents itself both for the student and for the newcomer. Under organized groups people with the heritage of their own tongue could help us to acquire a working knowledge of their language while we in turn might help them to bridge the gap of loneliness natural to a newcomer in a strange land. Such a project could be possible if enough interest was shown by the students.

Pros And Cons

the hours are not fixed and long, and much daily preparation is necessary to do a good job. It is especially discouraging that after much explanation and repetition you may be faced with numerous students who still don't understand.

Although she disagreed with the sentiment, Miss Casson quoted an amusing poem against teaching by Jane Pope called "Don't Do It."

Wife of Physics Professor Delivers Address in Russian

Mrs. H. L. Welsh, wife of a professor of physics at the University, spoke in Russian to members of the Russian Church on Glen Morris Ave. Sunday night. The topic of her talk in Russian was the United Empire Loyalists, their arrival in Canada, and their contribution to Canadian history. As many of the members of the church are newly arrived in Canada, their knowledge of the English language was not extensive.

Professor and Mrs. Welsh both began learning Russian when they were in Ottawa during the war, and enrolled in a class at Carleton College. Since their return to Toronto, Mrs. Welsh has carried on her study of the Russian language under Dr. B. P. Skey in a university tutorial class, and by private lessons since she finished that course.

The Russian alphabet has several more letters than the English, but once this has been learned, the language is not too difficult, as it is phonetic, although vocabulary is hard to master, Mrs. Welsh explains.

The fact that many of the Russian people in the audience had come to Canada because of political difficulties in their native land suggested the topic of the Loyalists to Dr. Skey, who arranged the talk. Mrs. Welsh pointed out in her speech that the Loyalists were obliged to migrate northwards to Canada from the thirteen colonies when British rule there was replaced by the American Republic. They were, she said D.P.'s of an earlier age.

MISSIONER NEILL SPEAKS AT McGILL

Montreal, Jan. 30 —(CUP)— In an interview with the McGill Daily, Bishop Neill said, "Canadian students show an open-minded and frank spirit of questioning and a really serious desire to get answers. But their minds are in two halves. There is no integration between their traditional loyalties, including religion, and what they learn in the classroom. The task of the church," he went on, "is to help students to find honest and adequate answers."

VIC'S CORNER

When I was one-and-twenty,
I heard an old man say,
You mustn't miss the Vic-At-Home,
And today, friends, is the day!

Our friend, Stan, set a precedent we find hard to follow when he wrote the Corner last week in such outbursts of poetic fancy. With a little help from our friend, A. E. Housman, we tried to start off in the same vein, but soon found that the vein was in vain. So, being forced to agree with Stan that "every fool is not a poet", we apologize and continue in the old prosaic way.

Returning to the subject of the At-Home, there are only hours left between now and that great event. The social committee wants to remind all those who are taking a bus from Vic that these buses will leave here at 8:45, but that the Co-ed room will be open before that time so that no one needs to wait out in the cold. Also remember that flowers will be given as favors at the door, a solution to the Great Corsage Controversy (Thank-you, Jim Nethercott!)

The glowing predictions regarding Vic's athletic prowess that have appeared here on previous occasions are being borne out in fact. The Junior Vic hockey team cinched a play-off spot for themselves last Friday by defeating U.C., 4-3. The seniors are well on the way to the same achievement, their last victory being over Ajax by a score of 5-0. And not only this, but our junior basketball team is undefeated up to now, and promises great things for the future.

The Student Christian Movement at Vic has re-organized itself into four commissions, on Politics, the University, Evangelism, and Ecumenical Affairs. These commissions are holding meetings this week, and all students are invited to attend. The Commission on Evangelism meets today at 1:10 in the SCM office in the House Ec Building, and that on Ecumenical Affairs tomorrow at 4 10 in Room 22 of Vic.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast", and while we congratulate ourselves on not being savage (or at least we try) music still seems to have this effect on us. But whether or not you feel in need of soothing after the strenuous social affairs of this week, we would recommend the concert, "Five Hundred Years of Music", being presented Feb. 3 and 4 by the Glee Club. Realizing the long and rich musical tradition England has, director Godfrey Ridout will present a group of numbers dating from as far back as 1390, including selections by Bridge, Morley, and Elgar.

On the "what we really came to college for" side of the ledger, we would like to recommend the series of four public lectures taking place at Vic this term. The first, on the subject, "Goethe in Our Time", was given last Wednesday by Prof. Barker Fairley, and succeeded very well in instilling some culture into our unwilling skulls. The next of these lectures will be on Feb. 4, the subject "John Locke".

"There's no education like co-education", and there are no noon hour shows like those presented every Friday in our proud new co-ed room. This Friday Harvey Smith's "Swing Band" presents a full hour of lively entertainment, including reminiscences of the Feather Frolic and the Mulock Cup contest. See you there!

The staff of Acta Victoriana is holding an open meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock, at which time Keith Davey will discuss the work done by the magazine this year, and its prospects for the future. First, second, and third year students who are interested are urged to attend.

As "the Bard", Ogden Nash, once said:

"The trouble with a kitten is THAT
Eventually it becomes a CAT"

And the trouble with this column is that eventually it becomes a young book. So we will bring it to a close with best wishes for a fine time at the Vic At-Home!

Undergraduate Art Show

The undergraduate art show, now on display at the Hart House Art Gallery, is a disappointment. A show comprising the works of three interesting painters, Messrs. Bloore, Cooke and Best, that of two competent sculptors, Mr. Jarvis and Mr. Peters, and that of two or three others, is supposed to represent the interests of the whole student body in the creative arts.

The show is poor for there are not nearly enough painters represented. Part of the blame for the lack of contribution can doubtless be laid to student apathy, but the Art Committee must take the greater share of the blame for its failure to bring the advent of the show to the notice of the student body. At least one sculptor had no knowledge of the show until it had been hung.

If this is not a good undergraduate show, at least it is an impressive three man one. Apart from the work of the big three the standard is not high. This results in a very unequal show, because the experienced artists have chosen to do abstractions and to leave the representational ones to those who are not so good. These abstractions are about as good as abstractions can be.

Mr. Cooke impressed me with his technical skill. I would certainly like to see his work again, after he decides that nature is a better interpreter of herself than he is. Mr. Bloore has some very interesting experiments in media and color. Mr. Best attacks his ideas with vigor and manages to convey a great sense of life and movement to his paintings.

All the exhibitors in this show are willing, and it seems a shame that lack of publicity prevented the exhibition from having real variety, and from representing the university as a whole.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the party led by Premier David Ben-Gurion has been acclaimed by an over-whelming popular vote in the recent Israeli elections, and that the trouble - making, headline-hogging Irgunist and Sternists found no support at the polls. Israel has taken a significant step in her rejection of the domestic fascists that have plagued her efforts to achieve state-hood. Most effectively, it is an answer to those who tried, in the exploitation of terrorist activities, to condemn an entire people. The open Israeli elections have put the lie to an old trick. With the emergence of this newest State, the last of the wandering, stateless ones may walk with a new dignity and meet hostility and blind prejudices with a new strength.

Hart House Concert

(Conservatory Senior School Quartet—Victor Feldbrill and Morry Kernerman, violins, John Mair, viola, Donald Whitton, 'cello.)

In an earlier period before the days of the tightly strung bow and the itinerant virtuoso, string chamber music ensembles were called consorts of viols. It is a term rather more suggestive than the specific more mechanical string quartet. It kept always in the player's mind the character of delicate intimacy, of conversational interplay of voices which is a characteristic of consumnate chamber music. And this is a character of which the musician of today, much of whose playing time must be spent in the less urbane atmosphere of the orchestra, must be continually reminded.

This group has the makings of an entirely first-rate quarter. Throughout the concert, their precision of attack and their sense of rhythm were quite phenomenal. There was also an intelligent grasp and expression of the structural unities of the music. Passages occurred every once in a while when absolutely nothing further could be desired—the first few bars of the concluding section in the second movement of the Schubert quartet was such a magic moment. Between these delights, however, there was a trace of an edge to the tone, an effect more of the orchestra than the chamber group. This tendency to lack of intimate interplay of tone was heightened by the odd lapse of intonation, slight but damaging. Asking too much? Of course I am. I'm comparing them with the perfect quartet that exists only as an ideal.

The program was an especially good one with no nonsense about it. They played Schubert's Quartet in D Minor (Death and the Maiden) and Ravel's Quartet in F Major. This combination provided lively contrast yet, for all the difference, a considerable element of analogy. Both composers have used a theme recurring from one movement to the other (Ravel more persistently than Schubert). I was about to dilate further upon this canny device and the problems involved in its successful use, but I see I've run out of space.

The concert was well-conceived and, qualifications made, highly satisfactory.

Book Review

The Values Of Life

For what should man strive? Throughout history great men, Christian and non-Christian alike, have proposed various answers to this problem. In general, their answers stress immaterial values in opposition to the material advantages which so engross our daily lives. Belonging to this tradition is the collection of essays in The Values of Life (University of Toronto Press-Saunders: $3.50) by the late Professor E. J. Urwick, one-time head of the Department of Political Economy and Acting Director of the School of Social Work in the University of Toronto. What pleases us most in these essays is the fundamental sanity of the author, a sanity which cuts through the fripperies of civilization and lays bare with almost satiric bitterness the follies underlying certain social conventions. Yet Urwick makes a positive contribution as well to the theory of values; he postulates in no uncertain terms the worthiness of such abstractions as Truth, Love, Simplicity, and Beauty. Perhaps his viewpoint could be summed up by quotation: "The quality of excellence is closely related to the degree to which the possession can be and is shared with other people . . . Exclusive goods are never among the highest goods."

Though Urwick sees much in society that is foolish, dangerous, and evil, his view of society is tempered by the realization that man is by nature a social being. Therefore the way of self-denial proposed by the Eastern mystics is only practicable for individual man living in a vacuum. Men should not cease desiring things, but the objects of their desire must be carefully evaluated. Thus wealth should be regarded from the point of view of need: "It is never anything but extravagance to go on spending after all your essential needs are met." And progress is never really progress unless it brings men closer to the realization of the ultimate values underlying their society; progress in the sense of technological advancement is meaningless.

We might argue against the inclusion of the essays on Capitalism and Labor inasmuch as they deal with specific economic problems and were not intended by the author to form a part of his search for values. They do, however, provide interesting illustrations of the application of Urwick's concepts to practical questions. Couched, as they are, in the rather specialized vocabulary of the field of economics, they detract somewhat from the high tone of the essays devoted to more abstract topics. But the outline of the development of the capitalist system and the conclusions reached regarding the value of labor in the determination of the price of an article are excellent and thought-provoking.

The introduction by Professor J. A. Irving of Victoria College gives a lucid exposition of Urwick's social philosophy as deduced from his previous publications. It conveys also by way of vignette and anecdote something of the charm of Urwick's personality, a charm that makes a reading of The Values of Life a pleasurable experience.

New Building Threatened In UBC Fire

Vancouver, Jan. 28—(Special to The Varsity)—Fire today threatened the new $800,000 physics building on the University of British Columbia campus when flames swept through nearby converted army huts being used as lecture halls.

Students worked side by side with the fire department in combatting the flames which broke out in a household economics lecture hut. The fire spread to huts in the headquarters of the campus radio society and destroyed some equipment before students could remove the rest undamaged.

All buildings destroyed were converted army huts. Damage was estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

The facilities of the physics buildings were being used to carry on research in atomic energy. Scientists at the university expressed relief that the blaze had been checked before it had destroyed the research equipment.

The Book Problem

When I asked her what they had found in the course of the survey, she said that on one or two occasions the price of texts had been found too high. Representative poetry was found to be very high. They also had found the price of texts varied in price at the different stores, (none was named). She said there was always trouble over the constant changing of texts and students were provoked because of their lack of value in resale.

SCM Operates Exchange

The book exchange operated by the SCM in Hart House was manged on a different basis. To get the information about its system of operation, I telephoned Rev. W. Lockhart of Kingsway Lambton Mills United Church. Mr. Lockhart was formerly head of the SCM on this campus and manager of the exchange. He told me that the SCM book exchange was operated on a profit basis. The SCM took 10% of the selling price of each book to cover the costs of running the bureau and to provide funds for the SCM movement. The students were allowed to designate the price they wanted for the book. It was a thriving affair until the new exchange, (Horner and Bowes I presumed. He did not know the name of the exchange) opened up on Spadina. Business began to fall off and it looked like it wouldn't pay. So we closed it up," Mr. Lockhart said.

Large Losses Incurred

"One of the biggest problems we had to face," he said, "were the losses which occurred in the store. The managers were responsible for the books and any losses had to be met out of the SCM funds. It was so bad one year that it put one manager out of business," he said.

My next source of information was the Commerce Club. The book exchange operated by this organization functions on a 10% profit basis similar to the one formerly managed by the SCM. It started to function in 1934. At that time, students in Commerce and Finance were having difficulty in disposing of their used texts and at the same time were finding the prices, which the new texts were costing them, were too high. They needed a convenient way of disposing of their old texts so they set up an exchange in the club. It worked so well the first year they decided to continue it. As the number of students in Commerce and Finance grew, in the intervening years it became even more profitable, both as a means of disposing of used texts and of obtaining books in short supply. According to the executives of the Commerce Club, their book exchange in the last two years has sold 400% of what it has in previous years.

Books Lie Unsold

The next day I went to Horner and Bowes second hand book bureau on Charles St. I wandered around past the shelves of books and noticed that many of the books which I had seen lying unsold at Cole's were also facing a similar fate here. I asked Pete Horner, whether these books were from the courses and no longer in demand. He said they had been used in courses and that students had brought them in for resale in the hope that someone might want them for reference books. He said their policy was not to accept books which were no longer used in the courses but that sometimes students slipped them in along with the rest of their texts.

I asked Horner about some of the problems and headaches he had met during the two years he had been in the business. He said from his point of view the biggest headache was the students who lost their slips. When they came in to collect the money for the books, he had to search through all his counter check books until he found the right person. Other factors which made the job unpleasant were students who failed to pick up their unsold texts or failed to call for the money owing them on books which had been sold.

Text Change Main Problem

I asked him what he considered the main book problem facing students. Horner said, in his point of view, the main problem facing students was the constant changing of texts. He though the professors could be more explicit in allotting texts, especially to new students. As an illustration of this point Horner cited Mueller's Introduction to Electrical Engineering. It was used in first year electrical engineering. "The book is useless," Horner said.

When I asked him which texts were changed the most, Horner said he found the Spanish texts changed more often than any.

I then asked him whether he had any recommendations to make. "Any exchange should take in only the books which are on the course. Since it is impossible to tell in the spring what books will be used on the courses in the fall, the professors should compile a list of books as soon as possible. It would help a great deal," Horner stated. "Even the editions of texts preferred should be listed," he said.

Makes Only Wages

Horner said that during the two years he had been in the book exchange business he hadn't made any large profit but had made wages. However, he said this year they had to increase their discount from the 10% of last year to 15%. He said their insurance rates had been increased this year. This together with losses in books, which have to be made up to the students and other increased costs necessitated taking a higher percentage, he said.

The second hand book exchange in the Victoria College book bureau was the last port of call. They buy second hand texts but will only pay 50% of the list price of the texts and only texts which are on the courses are accepted. The books which students bring in here for resale must be in good shape as well.

There are other second hand book exchanges on the campus which operate on a similar basis to any of the ones mentioned in the story. The outstanding points in this rounaup are, again, that a list of the required books for courses should be compiled each year by professors. Secondly that each of the exchanges mentioned are, with one exception, run on a small overhead and thus can afford to pay the student better prices. They also do not incur any losses, when a text becomes obsolete and has no resale value.

Blue Bees Meet Buzzers In Hockey Tilt To-night

The league-leading Varsity Junior B hockey squad meet the much improved hockey team from St. Michael's College tonight in the second game of the double header at the Varsity Arena. The first game will be played at 7.30 with Corner Boys playing hosts to the Marlboro Juniors.

The St. Mike's Buzzers caused a major upset last week when they defeated the smooth Marlboro Junior club, and they were well worth their win. They started the season on the wrong foot but lately they stepped in the right one which has been paying off for them.

The Juniors suffered their first loss of the New Year last Tuesday at the hands of the team from the Corner House Grill in one of the roughest tilts of the season. The last period proved to be a busy one for referee Percy Allen, and he kept the penalty bench loaded at all times. In fact the last few minutes of the game were played with three men and a goalie on each squad.

Tonight, the game should be fairly clean, but with some fast hockey. Both the Irish and the Blues can play very fast and if they stick to that type of hockey, the game should be one of the better ones.

In the nets for the Bees will be Leuty, who has been playing very good games. He makes sure of most of the pucks that reach him and the players have found it quite hard to beat him. Most of the pucks he does let in are the ones that are screened from his view.

Coach Bill Wade has been looking after his team fairly well and he has some good men for his offensive. Jack Raftis has been one of the best little players in the league. He's fast and has been playing some real back-checking games as well as troubling the goaltenders with his shots. In the last game, he proved he can play hard too. With him are Artie Holmes and Al Conboy which rounds out one of the lines into a potent threat. Norm Fox, Blake Sinclair and Bill Walters give Coach Wade another fast line. Porky MacDougal, Harry Hyde, Mac Clement and Prendergast, are used on the defence for the Juniors and have played both ways very well. Phil Arrowsmith, Vernon, and Simms round off the Junior squad. Bill Wade also carries John Milne in case anything happens to the regular netminder.

The Bees still hold a good lead in the circuit, but the other three teams are closing in and they will have to battle all the way. After tonight, the Juniors will have four games left to play and those who haven't seen a Junior game, time is getting short. These games are free but the play-offs will cost two-bits.

U.M. Heads Scoring; Henry Tops For Blues

Georges Emblem of the league-leading Carabins tallied twice and assisted four times against Queen's to take the lead in the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey scoring race. Emblem replaced his teammate Andre Charest who did not dress for the Queen's game. His 14-point total gives him a lead of one over Charest.

Bob Henry leads the Blue snipers with 12 points for third place. Bill Spence, Varsity's other contender for the scoring honors, is tied with Redskin Reggie Sinclair and Pinard and Giguere of the Carabins with 11 points.

Sinclair leads the sharpshooters with nine goals. In the playmaking department Flynn's ten assists are tops for the league.

McGill's Jack Gelineau, now playing between the Boston Bruin nets during the absence of Frankie Brimsek, possesses the lowest goals-per-game average of the goaltenders.

Morley Maxwell, new goalie for the hapless Gaels, is the most consistent netminder as he has missed ten pucks in each of his two games.

PHE Takes Early Lead In Badminton Trials

The Girls' Badminton Tournament got underway yesterday morning at the Badminton and Racquets Club, with all but one of the quarter-finals matches completed. Three of the four shuttlecock stars who will be featured in the semi-finals to be played today are Pat Montgomery, PHE; Mary Mathews, St. Hilda's and Elizabeth Russell, PHE.

Totalling up points, PHE takes top spot with 11 points, St. Hilda's and Vic a. tied in second place with 7 points, UC is third with 4 points and Physio Therapy last with 1 point.

The doubles tournament will also be held today, starting at 10 a.m. If there are enough entries, the games will proceed in regular tournament manner, otherwise there will be a round robin.

Unfortunately only a comparatively small number of the 37 entries showed up for the singles tournament yesterday. The Tournament Committee are puzzled and disappointed. All those who were not present at the stated time automatically defaulted their games.

Word has been received that only two of the College Tournament have been completed. At St. Hilda's, Mary Mathews captured top honours with Jane (Curly) Mathews as runner-up. Winona Clarke is the badminton star at St. Mike's, with Victoria Bechler in second place. The remaining College Tournaments are expected to be finished some time this week.

PAUL HUTZULAK

Ace Bailey's fancy lightly turned to thoughts of Paul Hutzulak when he was looking for a goalie to take over the netminding duties for Varsity at the start of the term. Paul has another engagement against the league-leading Montreal Carabins Friday night in Varsity Arena.

Play Rugby At UNB?

Fredericton, Jan. 31 — (CUP) — Canadian football may replace English rugby at the University of New Brunswick if a plebiscite to be held indicates the students desire the Canadian game.

Controversy is going on at present with regard to the merits of each version of the game.

Sailing Club Trade Sails For Skates

Recently it has become the fashion among yachtsmen, not to pack up when ice covers their cruising grounds, but to transfer their sails to skates and spend the winter ice boating.

Accordingly a meeting has been planned to hear Mr. Gordon Ried, one of the fathers of Canadian ice boating, and to see his films. At this meeting an excursion will be planned to Hamilton as soon as the bay is frozen. It is possible that enough interest will be found to take a continued more active interest in ice boats. The meeting will be at the Women's Union at 7:45 on Wed., Feb. 2.

Varsity Fencers Lose To Buffalo

Buffalo, Jan. 31—(Special to The Varsity) — University of Buffalo fencers edged University of Toronto players 14-13 Saturday night. The visitors were represented by only four men—Jack Stanborough, Mark Kello, Pete Stevens and Gerry Belanger—who alternated in the sabre, foil, and epee events. They competed with nine men—three complete Buffalo teams.

In the sabre event Varsity won 6-3. Buffalo was victorious in the foil and epee matches, winning 5-4 and 6-3 respectively.

SPORTSWOMAN

Archery

Don't forget about the Archery Club meet this afternoon and every Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 in Margaret Eaton. Any woman interested should be sure to go and practice this week especially, for Varsity has been invited to send an indoor archery team to McMaster along with the basketball team on Feb. 8 (that's just a week from today) and Miss Slack will be looking for archers of bull's-eye calibre.

Volleyball

Because no space was available at OCE, all games will be cancelled until repairs on the LM gym are completed, which probably means that no games will be played until next week.

Hockey

CT outplayed UC II yesterday, coming out on top 3-1. The first period ended 1-0 for CT with Jean Anderson scoring from Jocelyn Alexandre. Therapy had the edge on the play throughout but were consistently offside. Mary McAuliff came through with their second goal early in the second period, followed closely by UC's Lee Cordner making it 2-1. The third period produced the best hockey as both teams were really fighting, but CT's Jocelyn Alexandre got the only goal while one of her teammates was in the penalty box.

Alexandre was the outstanding player, getting plenty of breakaways but stopped by UC's good netminding. Connie Eastcott and Ferne Watson showed that women can referee hockey just as well as the men did.

Challenge Accepted

Hoops To Lead Men To Battle

BRIAN LAND

College basketball circles on this continent are in a state of feverish suspense as a result of the bold SAC move to accept the Varsity challenge to trade jumps on the basketball court with the highly touted newsmen.

In a curt statement to the press, the SAC publicity director, Doug "Free" Love, who is better known for his ball handling, revealed that with customary SAC alacrity a committee had been appointed to hank-pick the starting quintet. A sub-committee has been detailed to study the advisability of drafting a cheer for the sad SAC'ers.

The Varsity, meanwhile, is disdainful of SAC ability to last one quarter against their fast breaking, unbeaten, untied, unscored upon, unplayed aggregation culled from the staff by "Hoops" Harrison. The newsmen themselves admit that they are the hottest thing in sports since Kinsey reported.

The SAC's stock soared when it was announced that Jumpin' Joe Potts had cut short his stay in Ottawa, where he supervised the opening of Parliament, and rushed back to Toronto to get in training for the gruelling event. Aware of the gravity of the situation Potts intimated that he would forsake his customary coon coat in favor of more suitable apparel (Potts is good for more than 22 points in the political league but remains untied in the big time.)

The SAC is expected to use its famous verbal attack as its main offensive weapon, "If we can't stop them on the ground we'll take to the hot air" Love pointed out, citing several cases where various sub-committees had talked issues to a standstill.

Referring to the challenge Love observed that "such audacity from these pseudo journalists will not, nay can not be tolerated. We shall fight them under the backboards, we shall fight them in the keyholes; we shall not flag nor falter, we shall fight on till the end."

The end may come soon as arrangements are being completed to house the huge throngs clamoring for tickets to the affair. Promoter Henry Westcott would not disclose the financial arrangements agreed upon but usually reliable sources reveal it will be the usual 60-30-10 arrangement 60 per cent for The Varsity, 30 per cent for the promoter, and 10 per cent for the SAC—largely a benevolent gesture since the SAC coffers are reputedly vying with Fort Knox for honors in thrift.

Bob Masterson, coach of another local basketball team declined to comment on the probable outcome of the stellar presentation.

VARSITY SPORTS

Athletic Night

Blues to Try Redmen In Hoopla At A. Nite

The Engineers, Foresters, and Architects combine their talents to present one of the best Athletic Nights of the season. With a full schedule of athletic activities, the three faculties will also include entertainment that will leave not one spare second throughout the entire evening.

The feature of the evening will be the basketball game between the Varsity Blues and the McGill Redmen. Both teams are in the "defeated by Western" club. The season at the moment is practically a repeat of last year and if it continues then the Varsity will come out on top. The same rivalry that exists between the colleges in Rugby and hockey is also included on the basketball floor, which should make the game one of the best of the season.

Last year the Blues split the two games with the Redmen and if both teams are as strong, the contest should feature two equally matched squads.

To start the proceedings off the Varsity Junior Hoopla' quintet will play hosts to the Kitchener Juniors in the first basketball game at 7.00 p.m. This is the first time that the Varsity Juniors have established a place in the Toronto and district play-offs, and they play a terrific brand of basketball. This should move the crowd into the right mood for the feature game of the evening.

For those who won't have long enough necks to stretch over the mob watching the basketball games, they can move to cooler quarters and watch the Colgate University swimmers attempt to dunk the Varsity fishmen in a swimming contest. It is also hoped to have a waterpolo battle in the Hart House pool played by the host faculties.

The girls will go for the wrestling meet between the University of Buffalo and the Varsity squad. These two Universities have been keen on wrestling and both schools put everything they have into these meets.

The Buffalo University will send their fencers along with the mat men in an attempt to take two victories back to the States. The Varsity fencers have been having a lot of trouble with the fencers from American Colleges and the Blue foilers will have tough opposition in this sport.

The above is just what will be featured in the field of sports. On top of all this, the three faculties have a full schedule of special entertainment.

'A' NIGHT IN BRIEF

Basketball—Lower Gym
Varsity Juniors vs Kitchener Jrs.
Varsity Blues vs McGill Redmen
Wrestling—Upper Gym
Varsity vs University of Buffalo
Swimming—Pool
Varsity vs Colgate University
Fencing—Fencing Room
Varsity vs University of Buffalo
Dancing
Old time—upper gym
Modern—lower gym

There will be the usual modern dancing in the lower gym while those who wish to really get rid of all their energy, will have the opportunity in the upper gym where Old Time dancing will be held.

To fill in all the blanks between the events, there will be various types of good entertainment and there will be plenty of variety. Each faculty will contribute something different and since each faculty are noted for their own brand of entertainment, this part of the programme will be terrific.

As everyone knows, tickets for these Athletic Nights are in great demand and for this night, the demand will be even greater. The Hart House has a limited capacity, so get your tickets early.

Union Political Action Needed Says Forsey

Unified Labor Prevents Fall In Wage Scale

BY GORD MILLING

Political action by trade unions is "necessary to avoid ills of omission in present-day labor legislation, and to achieve a broader basis of security through full employment and sustained production," said Dr. Eugene Forsey last night, speaking to the Graduate Students' Union.

The third in a series of speakers invited by the Graduates' Union, Dr. Forsey is Research Director of the Canadian Congress of Labor, and held to be an authority on Labor legislation. He was the first researchist to be appointed by Canadian labor organization.

Pointing out the "phenomenal" growth in the size and strength of Canadian organized labor since 1939, the speaker stressed the additional burden of responsibility thereby placed on the unions. The extent of modern industrial disputes, he said, affects the community as a whole, and not in the nature of a "purely local and private matter" as implied in the British North America Act.

Prevent Depression

In addition to the traditional functions of trade unionism — organization, labor unification and good collective bargaining ("bread-and-butter unionism"), Dr. Forsey considered it essential to prevent unemployment and depression, which leave labor "with nothing to organize, nothing to unite, and no wages or hours to negotiate."

"Further," he said, "purely industrial action cannot prevent the fruits of collective bargaining from being snatched away by price increases."

For these reasons, he stated, the CCL has decided to back a political party. Dr. Forsey refrained from naming the party, but described it as "the only party which aims at the necessary broad economic planning; and the only party to which organized labor may affiliate and in which it can participate."

Labor Leader

Mr. C. H. Millard, Vice-President of the Ontario CCF, MPP., will address an open meeting of the U. of T. CCF Club at noon today. Mr. Millard will speak on "Labor as a Political Force." He is well known as the National Director of the United Steelworkers of America. The speech will be held in West Hall, UC.

Small Attendance For Lit Meeting; Review Reports

Less than thirty members attended the University College Literary and Athletic Society open meeting last night, to discuss the reports of the Evan's and Noble Constitutional Committees.

The Evan's and Noble Constitutional Committees were set up to discuss ways and means of making the Lit meetings more representative. The committees investigated and clarified all the major criticisms of the Society. They also clarified the purposes of the Society and the meetings. Their report was presented at the meeting.

Following the discussion from the floor, the reports were tabled for the present time.

"Let Go and You're Gone" Warn Unromantic Debaters

By a vote of 29 to 6 yesterday, St. Hilda's and Victoria co-eds reached the decision that "Romance is incompatible with a college education." The informal debate took place in St. Hilda's common room.

Despite differing conceptions of the key word, "romance", the argument reached heights of feminine vindictiveness and ran the gamut of authority from Plato and Jonathan Swift's Houyhnhnms to the "personal experience" of one speaker from the floor.

Barricading herself behind a rampart of dictionaries and other quotable books, first speaker Pat Ketchum, II St. Hilda's, cited romance as "dreamy imaginativeness, an escape from reality." She launched a vehement attack against romance, as opposed to love, as a "bestial, corrupting emotion" rendering those in its clutches "utterly unfit" for university education. With fire and brimstone tactics, she preached the control of passion by reason.

Brands Romance

'Let yourself go and you're gone!" she warned her congregation. "Once you allow romance to seep into your life, you've had it."

Leaping to the helm of the opposition, Dorothy (Joey) McKay, III Vic, heretically branded the preceding speaker as a "potential F.O.M." (Frustrated Old Maid). Romance, she said, must be incorporated for the sake of mental health to "give drive to the university career."

The debate struck a serious note with St. Hildian Robin Taylor's counter that it was friendship, not romance, that led to love; romance led only to disillusionment in life. She quoted an eminent authority to the effect that romance was composed of "somnambulism . . . pish and posh, slip-slop, bosh and rot."

Wrings Confession

A quiet reminder ("No textbook will ever ask you for a dance") from Carol Weldon, I Vic, was followed by the plea, "Don't some of us come for a little romance?—I did."

The debate extinguished itself itself when it wrung from one of the members her true confession that her marks had shot upwards since she had forsworn flighty romance for "my one true love."

Eight New Race Entries Boost Grand Total To 14 In Jolte Mug Tilt

Chariot Champs To Receive Cup Donated By Skule

Here are the inside facts. At great risk to life and limb, a Varsity reporter, disguised as a slide rule, spent yesterday in the Engineering Society Office, getting information concerning the trophy to be presented to the winner of the World Championship Chariot Race to be run tomorrow afternoon. His impartial report:

Inside Facts

Although I did not actually see the trophy, I heard a lot about it. It is to be known as the Jerry P. Jolte Memorial Trophy. Talk around the Engineering office indicates that the trophy is not one that has been recently brought out of hiding to be presented for competition.

Jolte is one of the unknown heroes of Skule. He was the outstanding figure of the first Skule night held in 1909. No amount of checking has brought to light any records of Jolte, but from Skule talk here is the picture:

Star of Skule Nite

Jerry P. Jolte was a man whose weight was felt around the University. He was the Star of Skule Night—1909. Not only did he play the lead in a three act melodrama, but he was also head usher between the second and third acts, he took care of special effects outside the theatre before the show, following the show he held the heads of Skulemen who were overcome by the heat from the footlights, he sang the Engineer's Song in a high falsetto, was master of ceremonies, and sold more tickets to Skule Night than any other ten engineering students.

The melodrama had an interesting plot whose origin may be found in Bull's Mythology. The villain of the piece was an Artsman apparently, and he was so badly mangled during the action that later an investigation was launched by Trinity, Vic and U.C. "That stink has never really calmed down," one stalwart member of the Engineering Society Executive commented.

After his graduation (there are some who hold he was kicked out) Jolte wandered over the face of the earth. Like all good engineers he was well equipped to find a job —and find a job he did. Digging ditches.

Death Scene

The story of his death is touching. It seems that he had returned to Toronto, and was visiting an old haunt of his, now gone, but standing on the spot where its more famous successor now doles out the drafts. The place was filled with Skulemen, and Jolte had trouble finding a seat. There was some argument.

"Artsman" one of the patrons snarled.

'Artsman?" Jolte replied, but the very mention of the word had brought a sneer to his face. His adversary thinking he was being made fun of, bopped him over the head with a two gallon flagon (they were more liberal in those days) and Jolte died on his way to the hospital.

Such a man was the hero of Skule Night 1909. Out to avenge his honor tomorrow will go the brave men of Skule.

We are of the opinion that, again this year we will be able to present another impartial account of a victory by The Varsity.

Short, Sweet, Snappy

During a recent performance by the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra a sudden slackening was noticed in the trousers of the conductor, Harold Neal. It was while they were coming to the grand finale of Faure's Requiem that the buttons on Neal's suspenders became unattached. Neal, without halting his baton waving, reached around, hitched up his trousers, and continued reaching for the high note that had caused his let-down. When questioned about his accident, Neal said, "If the worst had come to the worst, I would have continued the score because I was wearing a freshly-laundered pair of shorts."

Liberals' Policy To Be Outlined By Hon. M. F. Gregg

The Hon. Milton F. Gregg, Minister of Veterans' Affairs, will speak to an open meeting of the University of Toronto Liberal Association at Wymilwood, on Thursday, Feb. 3. He will speak on the policy of the Liberal Party as outlined by the speech from the throne at the opening of parliament.

Mr. Gregg, former president of the University of New Brunswick, is the member from York-Sunbury, New Brunswick. Mr. Gregg's visit will coincide with the interest caused by his recent statement regarding the grants to veterans.

A discussion period will follow Mr. Gregg's address.

Drama Adjudicators Award Davies' 'Overlaid' Coveted Cody Trophy

"Overlaid" by Robertson Davies, the UC Players Guild entry in the Inter-Varsity Drama Festival, held Monday and Tuesday nights is this year's winner of the Cody Award. Opal Miller, assistant director, received the award on behalf of University College.

Andrew Allan, Dr. H. M. McLuhan, and Prof. E. A. Dale, were the three adjudicators. Prof. Dale commended "Overlaid" as a good play in itself and a fine vehicle for actors. "The Miracle Merchant" was described as a play written in a peculiar English idiom, and rather dated in tone.

Andrew Allan, former actor on Hart House stage and present CBC producer, commented on the need in Canada for larger audiences. 'There are lots of performers, and more still in embryo, but a co-operative audience is one-third of the show". Mr. Allan also pointed out that "This is Impossible", the play presented by the All-Others Group, was a title that leads critics to ex-

The adjudicators especially commended the director of "Overlaid", Donald Davis, and its stars, John Walker and Edith Greenberg.

Smashers, Thugs Infernal Machine Run Annual Race

With the advent of eight additional entries, the total number of teams, running in the great chariot classic tomorrow, had swelled to 14 by press time last night.

The new competitors in the race are The third year Mechanical's Infernal Machine, the Occupational Therapy Thugs, the Faculty of Music's Mushbacs, The College of Optometry's Atom Smashers, the Violent Violinists (anonymous), the Math's and Phys', St. Michael's Charioteers and a team of Jaxmen.

Emergency Meeting

Due to the great response the Chariot Race Committee held an emergency meeting in the little red school house last night and decided to accept all challenges. "This will give the other faculties another chance at the coveted award which has never left School's hands," an official of the committee stated.

The committee also decided, since School was the originator of the race, the rules would be made by school, and that only Schoolmen were capable of judging such a race. Therefore the Schoolmen would naturally judge the race.

Bill Clark, an official of the Racing Executive, said they felt positive that School would win but the rest of the faculties might as well be amused.

McBach Replies

In reply to Clark's statement, Stravinsky McBach, of the Mus. Bac. course and in charge of the Mushbac's Authentic First Inversions, said the Mus. Bach. victory of last year would be repeated this year running with one leg tied behind their back as a handicap for the other entrants.

"The dominant and sub-dominant factors of our success have always been our steadfast refusal to commercialize our art and to be extremely careful when approaching feminine endings," McBach said.

The Occupational Therapy Thugs galloped into The Varsity office and proclaimed in loud voices that they had won last year's event even though they didn't have a team in the race. This year they were entering a team just to prove it.

The Mechanical Infernal Machine will be led by J. E. "Brown". A renowned charioteer, Brown has just returned from a two months' course abroad. During this time Brown was brushing up on chariot racing technique under the able Slidus McSinus of Rome.

Team Motto

As a motto, the team have adopted a Latin phrase in honor of McSinus "non illegitimus carborundum" which when translated means "We'll grind 'em down.

The St. Mike's charioteers stated they held last year's track record and if they had not had to hack their way through Skulemen littering the road their win would have been even more astounding.

WEDNESDAY LECTURES

Continuing the Wednesday Lecture Series, the School of Social Work is sponsoring, the speaker for today is R. E. G. Davis. Mr. Davis will speak on "Social Work and Its Contribution to a Living Democracy". Mr. Davis is Executive Director of The Canadian Welfare Council.

Poor Co-operation

In yesterday's issue we indicated that University officials had not co-operated fully with the SAC in its attempt to find available space for a student book exchange.

Space on this campus is at a premium. Since the end of the war the University has faced a critical shortage of space, not only for academic purposes, but for expanding research projects. And, as must be expected, space for student activities has held a low priority.

But the fact remains that for many years, even before the war, student organizations have battled against inadequate facilities for student activities. Even before the first World War 35 years ago, an editorial in The Varsity pointed up the need for greater athletic facilities for women and called for a women's athletic building. The need still exists.

Part of the blame today lies in the cramped conditions at the University, a situation that can't be helped. But part of the blame rests with the University which has never made adequate provision for student activities. A more sympathetic attitude on the part of University officials might have made a difference. But little sympathy has been forthcoming. The proposed student book exchange is one example.

Very recently, the SAC was told there was no space available to house a book exchange on the campus. To meet the pressing need, the SAC considered the possibility of housing the book exchange in a trailer which might be parked somewhere on the University grounds for short periods during the year. Permission to park the trailer somewhere on the campus was sought from the Superintendent's office in Simcoe Hall. The permission was refused.

According to the Superintendent's office the scheme was "impossible". There was, apparently, no place on this campus which could accommodate a trailer. Nothing was required beyond a bare patch of ground no more than 100 feet square. Yet, even such a small concession was "impossible", according to the Superintendent's office.

We find it difficult to believe that on this sprawling campus no space could be found to park one small trailer. The University might easily have extended the small privilege and helped students to overcome a major undergraduate problem. But it chose to do otherwise. And in so doing it has done little to foster that spirit of co-operation which it seeks from the student body.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Convocation Hall Recital

Dr. Healey Willan played the first in a series of four organ recitals Monday afternoon at Convocation Hall. The first work, Bach's Prelude and Fugue in C major, seemed to "steal the show" almost before it began with its crashing entry of pedals and manuals followed by a highly developed fugue. The three Chorale-preludes on "Deck thyself, my soul, with gladness" by Bach, Brahms, and Karg-Elert were no less dignified in their simple freedom of style. I like to think of them as individual interpretations of impression.

The Sonata No. 9 in B flat minor of Josef Rheinberger was exceptionally well mastered by Dr. Willan. I do not hesitate to claim that Dr. Willan is one of the foremost living exponents and interpreters of every phase of Rheinberger in the world today. The Grave, Allegro, Romanze, Fantasie and Fugue all received the same sympathetic treatment.

The Merkel "Adagio in E" was typical of its kind. The recital came to a most impressive conclusion with the playing of the stentorian Prelude and Fugue in C minor, among the greatest of Bach's immortal output.

COLE SCAN

We've just been listening to some music on the radio taken from the sound-track of the 'Red Shoes'. It's interesting music but it's like an echo in an empty house, like trying to remember where a familiar piece of furniture stood in some private corner. We found that the wisp-like memories it evoked gave value to it. On the larger screen of the imagination, the 'Red Shoes', or the more memorable moments that it held for us became a personal and more permanent possession. This function of music, this ability to fix a time, an event or place is, to us, about the greatest treasure that music holds. Music is a personal thing to the composer and the listener, and any pretentious programme note that attempts a specific explanation for all listeners succeeds only in confounding personal participation.

ATTENTION VICTORIA COLLEGE EXECUTIVE!

The University College Lit. Executive has decided, in order to keep bright the flame of friendly inter-arts college competition, to challenge the men (and women if necessary) of the V.C.U. Executive to a game of hockey. Naturally the game will be refereed by some neutral from, say, Meds, Dents, or Forestry, and the game will be played in accordance with the rules laid down by the Ontario Hockey Association. (We will forward a rule book to you on request).

In order to stimulate the competition, it has been suggested that the losing team, as a manifestation of their defeat, contribute 2 cases of—of any brew that will later be decided upon in private conference of the 2 team captains.

Another suggestion is that we charge a small admission (the proceeds to go to ISS) since there is no doubt that a huge crowd will want to witness this fantastic contest of speed, courage, and skill. It should be worth the price of admission alone to see some of the Executive on skates.

Since only spineless, spiritless, and selfish men would refuse our friendly invitation to participate in this red-blooded Canadian activity, we presume that you will accept this challenge. Please get in touch with us as soon as you muster enough courage to accept so that we can make final arrangements.

Oh yes—if you want to pick up a little pocket change in the next few days, see your favorite bookie in the J.C.R. and get down a bet on the U.C. chariot team!

Note and Comment:

. . . That was a wonderful dance held last Thursday in Room 869 of the Royal York Hotel . . . I understand that there was something else going on in the 2 ballrooms on the Convention floor.

. . . Another reminder to all music lovers (and you don't have to be a long-hair) about the Fantasy of '49 being held on the 8th and 9th of this month. You can pick up your tickets in the Rotunda now.

. . . A special invitation is being issued to all frosh and freshies to attend the tremendous Hi-Neighbour-Hop being held at the Casa Loma, Wednesday, February 9th. Tickets sell for $1.75 a couple (it's cheap at half the price"—Ted Fielder.)

Bouquet of the week:

To the dates of the Lit Executives who were so sweet and patient about everything while their escorts hustled around at the Arts Ball trying to look important. (And a special bouquet to you, Miss Maybee).

Have fun and look for us next Wednesday.

Buzzers Blank Blues In Tame Ice Battle

St. Mike's Buzzers beat the bejabbers out of the Blues last night in a tame battle at the Varsity Arena. The first game of the double in which the Corner Boys scored a goal in the last 20 seconds to defeat the Marlboro Juniors proved much more exciting to watch. Fifteen penalties were dished out in the first tilt.

The Irish tallied once in the middle and final frames and scored twice in the first frame. This gives goalie Bob McLellan his second shutout in as many games. Rod Roy tallied thrice with teammate Bob Sabourin setting him up for each of his goals.

Rod Roy opened the scoring after ten minutes of play in the first play with line mate Bob Sabourin getting the assist. Three and a half minutes later the same combination paid off for another goal for the Irish.

Rod Roy notched his third tally of the game and again Bob Sabourin set him up with the help of Joe Mihilson.

The Buzzers ended the scoring in the final stanza with a three-man effort, Sandford getting the honors and McGillvary and Ingolsby assisting.

The St. Mike's Buzzers were worth their win and skated circles around the Blues. They outplayed them practically in every department. The Blues gave McLellan little work while Leuty, the Varsity netminder, was one of the hardest-working players for the Blues.

Rod Roy and Bob Sabourin played very well for the Irish. They carried the puck smoothly, passed well, and back-checked very well. Every time these two got hold of the puck, the Junior Bees really had trouble to take the puck away.

Jack Raftis and Al Conboy played well in a losing cause and both seemed to be off.

Forestall Sets Fresh Record In Half Mile

A new intramural indoor open track record was established for the 880-yard event by Paul Forestall of the St. Michael's squad who posted a 8:02.6 for the distance, the former record being 2:02.8. Bill Kelly, another St. Mike's entry, captured top laurels as he covered the 100-yard course in 10:09.5. Both events were contested yesterday in Hart House as a part of the intramural indoor open track meet which runs off two events each Tuesday night.

John Hryshko, UC, took second honors in the 880 and placed fifth in the 100-yard dash. SMC's George McMullen placed third in the 880 with Ted Gawinski of UC in fourth spot.

John Sobko of UC was runner-up to Kelly in the 100 as he came up with a 11.01 race and tied for third were Sam Neill of St. Mike's and Bill Miles, Red and White runner, who were a half-hundredth behind Sobko. Hryshko was fifth and Bill McMacken from Vic was in the sixth spot.

CHARIOTS GO TO POST TODAY

Race Participants In Campus Classic Hit Record Number

Final arrangements are almost completed for the World Championship Chariot Race, officials of the Engineering Society announced yesterday. At press time last night between 23 and 30 groups (we're confused) had indicated their intention of entering the Classic.

To Run In Heats

The race will be run in heats of three teams. Officials stressed that the first heat will begin at 1 p.m. sharp. Teams are asked to be in front of the Engineering building by 12.45.

The preliminary heats will be run to time. "We have secured an Electronic Watch Master to time racers," Pat Suddick, vice-president of the Engineering Society stated. Chariots will be supplied at the Engineering building. As there are only five, participants will have to share the use of chariots.

Impartial Judges?

Winners of the preliminary heats will run a final heat. This race will determine the winner—and will be decided by the judges. Judges will be members of the Engineering Society, "impartial Skulemen".

Society officials also released a list of Race Rules. The rules have rested for many years in the archives in Dean Young's office, and have been brought out to clear up some "unfortunate misunderstandings", Suddick stated. The rules: (1) Teams consist of 6 men and 1 driver. A reasonable facsimile will be accepted from Vic. (2) Freshmen will be suitably placed to indicate clockwise direction for the benefit of Artsmen who are unable to tell the time. (3) No interference will be allowed. Marshalls will be provided to make sure this rule is adhered to. We want this to be a clean fight. (4) Judges will be chosen from impartial Skulemen. (5) Judges' ruling will be final. No sobbing reporters from The Varsity will alter the decision. Mark Harrison, please note. (6) There is to be no girdle snapping when the School of Nursing entry runs.

Two hundred Skulemen (Mining Division) will act as marshalls at the race. They are all men who have worked in the mines and Skule officials expect that they will be able to hold back the crowds. The marshalls will be wearing mining hats. "Anyone giving any trouble will be severely dealt with," Suddick declared, "especially anyone giving trouble to Skulemen!"

'Land Down Under' Is Aussie's Topic At IRC-P. Sci Talk

Stewart Jamieson, Official Secretary in the Office of the Australian High Commissioner at Ottawa, will address a joint meeting of the Political Science Club and the International Relations Club in the Union Theatre at 4 p.m., Friday, Feb. 4.

The topic of his address will be "Australia, Outpost of Democracy."

Mr. Jamieson was born in Sydney, Australia, in 1903 and educated at Sydney University and Balliol College, Oxford. He was associate to the Honorable Mr. Justice Gordon (New South Wales Supreme Court), and was admitted to New South Wales Bar in 1931. He was secretary to the Chairman of the Royal Commission on Coal Industry in 1930 and counsel for the proposed new State of Riverina before New South Wales Royal Commission of creation of New States, in 1933-34, Mr. Jamieson was film critic for the Australian Broadcasting Commission in 1936-37. He travelled extensively in Eastern and Central Europe, the Middle East and Russia as a special correspondent for the Sydney Morning Herald.

In 1940 Mr. Jamieson joined the Air Intelligence Department of the Royal Australian Air Force. In 1942-43 he was loaned to the United States Army Air Force in New Guinea. In 1945 he was loaned to the British Pacific Fleet Headquarters Air Intelligence Liaison Officer. He was appointed to his Ottawa Post in 1947.

Speaks Here

Hon. Milton F. Gregg, V. C., minister for veterans' affairs, who will speak in Wymilwood at four o'clock this afternoon on the policy of the federal government as outlined in the speech from the throne. Former president of the University of New Brunswick, Mr. Gregg sits for the York-Sunbury constituency.

Something Fishy In The State Of S.P.S.

Engineering Society officials stated yesterday that judging of the World Championship Race will be "absolutely impartial". But dirt dug up by The Varsity yesterday disputes this statement.

A Varsity reporter disguised as an old beer bottle spent yesterday afternoon in the Society office and saw the trophy. On it, large as life are two small shields. They list the winners of the trophy for last year and for this year. Both plaques are marked S.P.S.

The following remark also supports the view that there is something rotten in the state of the little red school house. One engineer: "I hear the race is fixed." Society official: "Rot. We're not sure which Skule team will win yet."

Skule officials stated yester-

Meds Suspicious, Demand Saliva Test On Skule "Horses"

Today is the day. With more than 25 teams going to the post, the World Championship Chariot Race will be decided this afternoon. All day yesterday entries poured into The Varsity office, as group after group announced their intention of defending the titles they won last year.

Demand Saliva Test

The "Medical Madmen" (sponsored by first year Meds) are not only entering a team, they also demand the right to do saliva tests on all the "horses", and issued a long statement last night charging that there had been misrepresentation in the facts concerning the Chariot Classic. Excerpts:

"The true story of the Chariot Race has not been told . . . In reality it was started by Meds in 1909. Meds won it every year from 1909 to 1914 From 1914 to 1918 the trophy was taken by the engineers. Meds again won every year from 1919 to 1928. Wycliffe came out on top in 1929 . . . Meds again . . . from 1930 to 1939 . . . Skule on top from 1939 to 1945. Meds have won the trophy each year including last year, since 1945."

The "Madmen" are also offering free cadavers to everyone if they win. In addition they will operate a fully equipped hospital ready to take care of Skulemen injured by us in the race."

Torch To Be Lit

Skule has a lot to say. Some items: "The traditional opening of the Olympic Torch Lighting and parade will precced the Chariot Race. An Olympic Runner from Greece will carry the torch. His name is Demitriof Poponick (The Old Lamplighter). He was thumbing his way across in a tramp steamer with a Zippo he got from the American Liberation Forces when contacted. "The name of the trophy has been changed at the last moment from Jerry P. Jolte Memorial to Gerry P. Potts Memorial . . . The change was made at the irate request of Mr. Jolte, who walked into the Engineering office yesterday." . . . "We notice that Keith Davey is still after publicity at the expense of Skule" (see below).

An entry and statement are in from Astrology 3a: "The class of Astrology 3a, after nights of laborious research, have found that Jupiter being in conjunction with Saturn in 1330 B.C. and the average birth date of the class being 1.33 there is every indication that Feb. 3, 1949 is a favorable time for action . . . so we are entering a team. Predictions will be given to other entries for a slight fee."

Vic Has Program

Vic has a ten point program: "1) We realize said race is but a cheap publicity stunt by Skule-laughmen to peddle equally cheap tickets to the Engineering Foilies. 2) We realize that the judges with their warped sliderules and their equally warped brains will undoubtedly award the verdict to the minions of Godiva (ugh). 3) We congratulate Dean Young on choosing this auspicious occasion to retire from Skule's Deanery Gang. 4) We especially welcome the entry of U.C. We would suggest they take up a silver collection to recover some of the deficit incurred by this year's most uncrowded dance — The U.C. Arts Ball. 5) We shall ignore the Ajax entry. 6) We understand that the race is to be run clockwise; it appears that the genial Ukrainian Pat Suddick is so influenced by his hot-bed of reaction that even the races down at Skule are now moving to the right. Oh, God! Oh Reaction! Oh Skule! 7) We congratulate Skule's President, Mr. J. McCordan on becoming a daddy. White Owl cigars will be presented just prior to the opening of friendly hostilities. 8) We don't expect to win; we don't intend to let Skule win. 9) We plan on entering 4 teams (one a girls' team). We welcome Vic students and other hangers-on to join our Monster

R.C.I. to Feature Talk on Advance In Jet Propulsion

The story of jet propulsion will be told by Professor D. G. Shepherd of the Sibley School of Mechanical Engineering, Cornell University in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening Feb. 5. The address is sponsored by the Royal Canadian Institute.

Professor Shepherd will deal almost entirely with that aspect of jet propulsion using gas turbines as motive power, although noting the logical inclusion of both propellers and rockets in an all-embracing definition. After giving a simple explanation of jet propulsion he will trace the evolution of the idea of aircraft propulsion without propellers through the period between the two wars. Professor Shepherd will point out that the phenomenal rise of the gas turbine for jet propulsion is due to the progress in two dissimilar technologies, those of aerodynamics and metallurgy.

An account will be given of the pioneering contribution of Sir Frank Whittle and his associates whose gas turbine was pre-eminent in the wartime effort. The lecture will be illustrated with slides and concludes with a sound motion picture depicting the simple theory of jet propulsion and the operation of the gas turbine.

Born in England, Mr. Shepherd came to the United States at the age of seventeen. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1934 in Engineering Physics. During the war he was engaged in the development of aircraft gas turbines with Power Jets Limited, under the supervision of Air Commodore Sir Frank Whittle.

The Book Problem

Carries Investigation to Faculty Heads

By WILS HARRISON

This is the third in a series of articles on the text book problem. In this article Harrison interviews various faculty heads on the campus.

The next day, after I had made my survey of the book exchanges both past and present, two letters to the editor of The Varsity were received from students enrolled in engineering courses. One student complained of having ordered a book for his course a year ago and had received notification from the bookstore that the book was now in stock. The other letter was a complaint by an engineering student that he had purchased a text which had been recommended last year and when he started taking the lectures in the same course this year he found the book was of no use.

Since the first letter did not name any specific bookstore, I went to the one operated in the Engineering Society's Office in the little "red school house." I didn't know at the time that this store did not handle texts but merely handled stationery supplies such as note book paper, graph paper, pencils and other small items engineers require for their courses.

No Texts Sold

When I walked into the Engineering Office bookstore and saw that only sold supplies, I thought perhaps I had hit the wrong place, (unless they had the texts hidden under the counter). I went on into the inner sanctum of the Society's executive offices with the intention of finding where the other bookstore was that sold the engineering books. I was told that the Engineering bookstore did not handle texts and that all their books were purchased at the Press or other bookstores.

I brought out the letter we had received and let several members of the executive read it. Then I asked them whether any of them had met with the same difficulty or whether this happened to be an isolated case.

The three, G. Crossman, T. Medland and J. D. Breithaupt, practically stated in unison that they had had trouble gettings books and that many of the students in the faculty of Applied Science had the same difficulty. "We sometimes put in an order for a book, usable for one year only, and we get it the next year," they said. They complained of the constant changing of texts as well.

Texts Never Used

I asked them whether they had ever bought any texts for a course and then found out after they started the subject that the book was of no use. They said there had been cases where they had been told to get texts and then they had never used the books on the course at all. This was found in the chemical engineering and chemical courses they said.

I then asked their opinion on the switch in texts from Disha to Karer, two chemistry texts. They all agreed that the Karer text was more simplified and a better book for the course.

Since they had complained of the constant changing of texts, I asked them whether the lecturers or calendar indicated which texts would be used. They said most of the lecturers gave a list of books which would be used and then indicated which they would use as a text. They pointed out that many of the subjects in engineering cannot be found in any one book. The subjects are often found in two or three books.

Complaints

One complaint they were all agreed upon was that lecturers only recommended books by the year. Medland said he found in his III and IV years that he was using texts which covered the subject in the first two years as well, if not better, than the texts which were used for one year only. "The professors don't tell us this. It would save us a lot of money," he said.

I asked him for an example of this type of thing. Medland said the text Electrical Fundamentals by Corcoran and Kirsch was a good example. The Corcoran and Kirsch book was used in II Electrical Engineering. In the III year they used D.C. Machines by Langsdorff. The latter text contained material taken in second year as well as III year work.

Another instance where this same thing occurred he said, was in European Exchange Scholarships

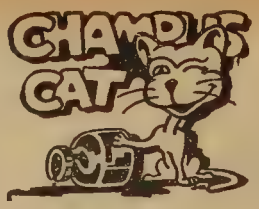
The twentieth century seems to be marked out as the age of "man bites man". That impression has a lot to justify it. We seem to be constantly quarrelling or fighting or arguing with our neighbors at home or with national neighbors across the border. That wasn't such a catastrophe in the last century. Our harried existence today indicates the need for positive measures to help us while "living in a crisis".



Modern communication methods magnify the differences and make for mere superficial contact. We don't know as much as we like to think about the happenings in our own country let alone in some land separated from us by barriers of currency, frontier, language or culture. The dangers of modern war—the atom bomb, bacteriological warfare or continental starvation and the like, we hear about every day. Misrepresentation, an error in interpretation or just plain ignorance may be all that is needed to shove us over the brink. The presence of someone on the councils of the other nations who understands what we mean and how we feel, someone to restrain impetuosity or blind prejudice, someone to act as a link and to spread the truth, would be a godsend. Ignorance on the international level should be feared equally with the atom bomb.

Certainly this is a question that is far removed from the universities and students—or is it? We fear ignorance and press hard against it in our country. Today we in North America accidentally possess the key to open the barriers of finance and frontiers in the wider world. Such an opportunity is being presented to students of this and every other Canadian university. The International Students Service of Canada has taken up a plan offered it by Canadian students, who themselves saw the need of action, to bring European students to Canada for a year of study.

An appropriate title for this project would be "Scholarships for Intellectual Reconstruction". We at this University can play a part in moulding international friendship. When we send material help overseas as we do with ISS relief, we send sympathy and goodwill. This is valuable, but such relief cannot alone carry ideas that will continue in the future. That overworked phrase "intellectual vacuum" does carry meaning. Most of us realize that war and oppression left such vacuum not only in books or in food or in information but also in "knowhow" about such things as democratic government, academic freedom, and liberty of the press.

A year's scholarship for some interested, intelligent and active European student would have an incalculably valuable effect when they return to their own lands. It will be good for us to learn at first hand the values, the dangers and the effects of foreign attitudes. We will gain in the future for they will be an appreciative and friendly audience in a place that has become not so far away and not so strange. We are proud of our institutions, of our culture, and of our life in Canada. It might even pay us in the long run to be generous. The local committee of ISS presents a plan that will benefit all concerned. The local committee will be responsible to the Dominion government for these European students. This is not a light obligation and it deserves the full support of all students.

Journalism—How Yellow?

This letter was written by the Cat to the editor of Toronto's greatest circulated paper and is reprinted for consumption and digestion.

Dear Sir:

It is after reading recent editions of your paper that I write this letter of congratulations. For years now I have been admiring your splendid style of journalism that sets a standard difficult to equal.

If someone invents a new can-opener, I can trust your fine journal to print a picture of the can opener escorted by at least one girl in a bathing suit, and perhaps more without.

Drew Brew

And Mr. Editor let me compliment you on the number of times Mr. Drew's name appears on your unprejudiced newspages. If any one is found inebriated in the province of Ontario, we can trust your paper to place the blame on the proper shoulders—not on those of the drinker, but on the wide double breasted ones of good old George.

And your outstanding editorial policy. Mr. Editor nobody could accuse you of being against anything (except good old George). Why everybody knows that you can't sell papers if you are against Palestine, Rev. Shields, liquor and war—any old war.

News Views

Let me congratulate you from my bottom on your coverage of the news once again. In the recent hit-and-run case, I knew I could count on your putting several full page pictures of the pretty girl with the broken leg. And I can not forget the tasteful treatment of the June Baker mystery. Even though the missing June wore glasses and was known as a scholarly type, your fine upstanding paper (largest circulation in Canada) appealed to the higher and better part of every reader. Did you not publish a picture of that poor lost girl who had gone astray as she appeared in the Can Can chorus of an awful college show. You helped find her by showing us her whole figure.

And Mr. Editor, one can not but admire the splendid coverage you gave to Mrs. Dick, not more than a year ago. (Mrs. Dick will be remembered for her baby cut-ups) Did you not picture that woman on the stand in all her glory and in the full length of her skirt—14 inches above the ankle.

Every red-blooded potential journalist looks up to your paper with great awe. Every Canadian who reads your funny pages can not but think of the better things in life.

Sex Rears

And Mr. Editor, what of your weekly supplement! Think of the many light-headed and light-brained housewives who wait with great expectation for the serial climax. You have lead the way in our understanding of sex. Your weekly supplement (largest circulation in Canada) brings us news from all over the world—except Canada. When the educated Canadian wants to know who has the smallest bathing suit in Hollywood he knows that he can find such valuable information in your picture section.

Mr. Editor as long as your type of journalism continues I know that I can be confident that the reading public will have nothing to learn, and will learn nothing.

New Society On The Rise Says Davies

R.E.G. Davies, Executive-Secretary of the Canadian Welfare Council, claimed last night the principle of laissez-faire was dead. He was speaking to a meeting of the School of Social Work.

"We are living in the midst of a period of profound social change," Davies said. "The crisis which faces our society at this time is a challenge to all those who recognize the issues at stake."

"There can be no return to the 'good old days'," Davies went on. "It is increasingly evident that the glorious age of laissez-faire democracy is coming to an end." He declared that a new class struggle had begun to take form. The industrial worker, the small farmer and the merchant are challenging the big capitalist; they demand to be taken into partnership, he said.

"We are heading," he said, "for some kind of a planned society." Davies said he believed our traditions of democracy would save us from becoming a totalitarian state. "Our whole war experience," he said, "should increase our confidence that we can build a planned democracy."

He said that the aim of a planned democracy would be, not regimentation, but freedom; that such a democracy would interfere as little as possible with the individual life of the people.

Davies felt that the social worker could play a great part in the fabric of the planned society. "We should view our task in the large perspective of the social needs of our time," he said.

Winning Script To Be Presented Tonight On CJBC

To-night at 9 p.m. over CJBC, Radio Playhouse presents the prize-winning student script "My Brother's Keeper" written by Mel Breen Gr. Std.

The $75.00 is offered by the C.B.C. to help uncover student talent in the university. In making the award, the panel of judges consisting of Miss Alice Frick of the C.B.C. Script Editor, Mr. G. Kristjanson, and Robert Gill, Drama Director of Hart House, made the following comment about Breen's script.

"The author has cleverly used his time and character differentiation to build suspense and to show varied moods and human reactions of four people who are under the strain of the experience they share." The above-mentioned experience consists of four friends waiting for a fifth companion to commit suicide.

Chris Taylor U.C., will play the part of "Jeff". John Howe U.C. will play "Al". Mike Tait, Trin. will be "Gus". Breen himself will take the part of "Pete".

Gala Night Is In Store For Dentistry At-Home, No Corsages Is Rule

The Faculty of Dentistry will hold their annual "Dental At-Home" tonight in the Crystal ball room of the Royal York Hotel. The demand for tickets have been overwhelming and it is expected that the number attending this year's dance will exceed all others for several years. No corsages will be worn.

The ballroom will be decked in blue and gold and Bert Niosi and his orchestra will supply the music. A professional floor show will be presented during the evening. The show will have Phyllis Marshall and Doug Romaine, well known entertainers, as stars of the show.

Following is a list of the patrons and patronesses: the President and Mrs. Sidney Smith; the Dean and Mrs. Roy G. Ellis; the Assistant-Dean Dr. Cowling; Dr. R. Sidney Woollatt and Mrs. Woollatt; Dr. Harold K. Box and Mrs. Box.

Tiddley, Eh

Bob Taylor, I, UC, places a decoration life preserver over the head of Eva Clark, 1 Vic. The Navy students have been working to complete decoration of the "York" in time for their formal dance of 1949 to be held tomorrow night.

Sea Horses to be Mascots Of Ball at H.M.C.S. York

Two newcomers to the University of Toronto will be guests of the Navy Cadets at their annual formal dance at H.M.C.S. "York" tomorrow night. It took a lot of persuading, according to Cadet Edward Jupp, IV U.C., president of the Dance Committee, but after many frantic signals and the use of secret naval underwater communication devices, two Bermudean sea horses were contacted and have consented to act as mascots at the Navy Ball. The two mascots, Cynthia, (who maintains she is a 'she-horse'), and her boy friend Sammy will rub noses to form a large blue and white arch through which the cadets and their guests will pass to reach the main deck of the ship.

The two sea horses will form only a part of the decoration of the ship which will be "dressed" with flags and pennants for the affair. Twin four inch guns, depth charge throwers and other pieces of naval equipment will add to the nautical effect of the dance.

No corsages will be needed by the University sailors as the committee has arranged special favors for the ladies. The favors have been designed to add that extra touch to a formal dance, while giving something more permanent than a corsage to keep after the dance is over.

The dance will be opened at nine o'clock (twenty-one hundred Navy time) by Captain and Mrs. F. R. Base. From then until one the mellow strains of Buddy Hill, his trombone and his orchestra will fill the "salty" atmosphere.

The patrons are the Honorable and Mrs. Vincent Massey, Dr. and Mrs. Sidney E. Smith, Captain and Mrs. F. R. Base, and Lieutenant-Commander R. F. McRae, commanding officer of the University of Toronto U.N.T.D.

The dance committee consists of Cadets Edward Jupp, Peter Shenstone, Stanley Kazman, Randal Kenny, Alexander Douglas, Robert Taylor, A. C. Gleason, John Meyers, and Sub-Lieutenant D. J. Forgie, advisory officer.

Up a crooked stairway to the second-floor book-binding department, across the room and seated beside a large window overlooking the roofs is Miss Helen McKenzie. The snow-covered roofs and leaden skies are in contrast to the sunny day, with a temperature of 103 degrees that she left a year ago in Australia.

With her, came her friend, Miss Margaret Anderson, whom you see every afternoon behind the main circulating desk in University Library.

These two cosmopolitans, starting out from Australia last January, are now laying plans for the trip back home next summer by way of England, Holland, Switzerland and all points west.

"We wanted to see how people do things in other countries," Miss McKenzie says, "how they act, what they say, and what they think about." "We are more interested in people than in things," says Miss Anderson. However, not having travelling money, they decided to work their way around the world by easy stages. The two girls are both nursery school teachers, and with $400, the maximum allowed out of the country, they felt confident that they could get along.

As you might expect, they each keep a diary. "The awful thing has to be written up every night or that's the end of it," said Miss McKenzie. The diaries aren't the type that have to be locked up.

And no matter where they are, the diaries are not forgotten. For example, the girls got jobs as dish washers for three weeks on a trail-ride operating out of Banff and run by Claude Brewster of the early settlers of the Banff district. "It was a marvellous chance to see the Rockies and during the three-week trip, they became as tough as leather. Every night in their tents, out would come the little books which meant keeping the camp fire burning brightly. It was on this trip that a misguided hedgehog ran right through the tent before the girls knew what had happened. They didn't say whether or not a P.S. was added in the diary that night.

By troopship, (no soldiers aboard,) the girls travelled to San Francisco, where they stayed with friends at the university. They were amazed with the number and size of the cars, particularly with those driven by university students, they said. Then they were off to Vancouver where they worked as housemaids, then on to Victoria to weed and hoe. "It nearly killed us," Miss McKenzie said.

Next stop, after Banff, was Alberta during "Stampede week." Here they were interviewed over "The Voice of the Prairies", a radio station. "It was terribly exciting but a great shock to hear how our voices sounded," they said.

By bus, they travelled to Chicago and New York. In Chicago they were given an idea of how the local police force works. "After leaving a street car, we realized to our horror that our shopping was still in the car," Miss McKenzie said. A police car, momentarily halted in traffic, caught their attention and making a dash across the road, they jumped inside to explain their predicament. "They were terrific creatures with revolvers," said Miss McKenzie. But they were very kind and helpful and they got their shopping back.

"In New York we were constantly getting lost in the subways, but people would stop and inquire if they could help us," said Miss Anderson. On Christmas day we went skating; ordinarily we would be swimming back home said Miss Anderson. Planning our trip to Toronto we decided to be at the sta-

Student Sympathy Swinging to Labor Says CCF Executive

Students have an important role to play in the trade union organizations in Canada and are gradually switching their support from management to labor, Ontario C.C.F. Vice-President C. H. Millard said in an address yesterday to the University C.C.F. Club.

Give Life Study Of John Locke In Vic Lecture

"From John Locke emerges the poetry of memory and association, yet Locke depreciates memory and association," stated Prof. K. MacLean yesterday at a lecture given in Victoria College Alumnae Hall.

"Locke was a plain man," continued Professor MacLean. "He liked whiteness, the whiteness of chalk, of freestone, of the paper that was to be his tabula rasa." A typical 18th century philosopher, all his life Locke was an amateur. During his undergraduate days at Oxford, he preferred the companionship of the witty and pleasant to intensive study.

In relating Locke's thinking to the modern mind, Professor MacLean said that the last 200 years had made a kind of philosophy of imagination. He outlined the various specializations of philosophy, touching briefly on the imagination of syn_ thy, eroticism, nature, present and past, and art, with their chief exponents: Sterne, Keats, Wordsworth and Blake. "Locke makes us aware of the image population of the mind."

According to Locke, the senses let into the empty cabinet of the mind those objects by which the mind perceives that it can perceive, name and recall. These objects are the means and ends of knowledge. "We see the mind moving among its furnishings, taking several views, postures and stands."

Locke's insistence on the substantial character of the mind and his notions of pain and pleasure relate him to Utilitarian thought. For him, action is the great business of mankind. Locke's God is a doer, a creator, an architect. "We know he has a heart," says Professor MacLean, "but especially that he has hands and fingers."

Unions Are Stronger

Mr. Millard, M.P.P. for York West, stated the industrial trade unions are stronger now than they were in 1940. To back this claim, he cited the formation of the Canadian Congress of Labor, the central body of the trade union movement in Canada. The C.C.L., he said, is completely autonomous and free to determine its political course in Canada. In Great Britain the unions affiliate directly with the Labour Party, while in Canada the unions support the CCF, but remain independent of the party. This provides a defence against the charges of supporting a political party.

In answer to a question from the floor, Millard said that a political party cannot be just anti-communist, it must be pro-something. He said that the CCF pursues a pro-middle-of-the-road policy.

Support CCF . . . Not Affiliate

Mr. Millard said that there were many political beliefs represented in the union movement and the movement has to be careful not to introduce too much controversy. He said the movement does not affiliate with the CCF but urges support of it. "We want to be able to send delegates to conventions of political parties that we support", he said. The delegates sent would be only those who were not members of an opposing political party. "This automatically bars the Communists", he said.

"The best informed and most interested groups of political leader* will come out of the trade union movement", he said. 'It has the greatest potential of future leaders because of the experience in political and economics fields gained in the movement".

Students Sympathetic

"In 1939", he said, "12-14% of the workers were unionized. Today that figure approaches 36%." He said that the students would play an important part in the labour movement, because the movement needs technical assistance and can get it from the students. "Students have an appreciation of the rights of Democracy", he said. "They are handicapped by being on the side of management, but are more sympathetic than they have ever been before."

"You have to be in the labour movement to see how strong it is", he said, "the division between the AFL and the CCL is not as serious as many people think. A great many people in the two unions have the same political beliefs". Millard said he is not sure that the division is a weakness. The keen rivalry between them stimulates activity, but that there is no disagreement on the main issues, he said.

Un'ons Follow Party

Millard said politically, the unio-s follow the British trend of favouring one political party, while the United States unions tend to support individuals irrespective of party. As far as organization is concerned, the unions follow the American pattern, since they are affiliated with American unions.

The CCF has co-operated with agrarian groups, he said, since the Canadian economy has been until recently an agrarian one. "The farmers are not moving politically yet", he said, "but when they do move, they will move as a herd and they will take a middle-of-the-road course".

"Organized Labour as a political force is not yet mature", he said, "but it has a great potential."

RAPS RUSSIAN POLICY

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

In "Varsity" of the 31st January there appeared a reprint of an editorial from the "Queen's Journal" apparently supporting a policy of appeasement towards Russia under the guise of a peace offensive.

The whole argument is based on the assumption that "our conflict with Russia is ideological". Russia has conducted a series of unprovoked attacks on five democracies on her border (Latvia, Poland, Esthonia, Lithuania and Finland) — subduing by force of arms the first four and part of the fifth. In addition she has supplied arms to communists in China (see Lt.-Col. G. A. Tokaev's articles appearing Saturdays in the "Telegram") for the purpose of the violent overthrow of the established government. The countries of Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, and Bulgaria have had their governments overthrown by political murder, threats of use of the Red Army, intimidation of the populace and other violent means. These things were done in direct contradiction to Molotov's statement when the army left Russian soil that they did so purely for military purposes and not for political ends.

It might be argued that the end justifies the means, and that the political system instituted has been such a boon that we may overlook the violent method of introduction.

Consider Russia first. Alexander Karensk:, the Prime Minister of Russia's last democratic government (which was overthrown by Lenin and Trotsky with their Bolshevik army some six months after its commencement) writes in the October, 1948, "Reader's Digest" that the country is full of unrest due to the peasants' loathing of collective farming by which he is cheated of the fruits of his labours, the extensive arrests for purposes of maintaining the army of slave labourers which he estimates at some 12,000,000, and for other monstrous wrongs perpetrated by the communists. During the war thousands of Russian soldiers, including a whole Russian army, deserted to the Germans hoping their country would soon be freed. Goebbels' diary is of interest on this subject. In this he notes that at the commencement of the campaign the Russian populace greeted the invading army joyfully as liberators.

From the countries which have been overrun by the armies of the USSR or gone under the communist yoke a constant stream of fugitives emerges with tales of wholesale night arrests, torture, and murder. Several tiny boatloads of people from the Baltic republics have actually attempted to cross the Atlantic ocean in a desperate attempt to escape from communist tyranny (see Albert Kalme "Soviet Terror in the Baltics").

In the light of these things it is folly to talk of our differences with Russia as ideological. Russia is conducting an imperialistic policy much like that of Germany in the thirties; and the result of our appeasement will inevitably be another ghastly war, when we can appease no longer. Churchill and DeGaulle repeatedly warned their people that if Germany was not stopped while she was still relatively unarmed, war would inevitably come—as it surely did. The democracies idly stood by while they were gobbled up one by one. This cowardly and dishonourable policy brought a bloody retribution; as our present policy of

Charity Ball Proceeds To Be Donated To DPs For Educational Purpose

The complete proceeds from the Pi Lambda Phi Charity Ball this year will go towards the education of two displaced persons here in Canada.

"It is hoped that the higher education of two of these new citizens of Canada may be facilitated as a result of these efforts," stated a member of the Charity Ball executive today. "We think that our goal this year is perhaps especially appropriate in view of the ever-increasing importance of rehabilitating those who have come to Canada to begin a new life," he continued.

The Charity Ball to be held on Saturday, Feb. 5, at the King Edward Hotel will be under the patronage of President and Mrs. Sydney Smith, the Hon. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Steinhardt, who in addition to being the new U.S. Ambassador to Canada, is Supreme Rex of the fraternity, and Col. and Mrs. David Croll.

tion early (three hours) to miss the anticipated queue. To our amazement there was not a line at all. In Australia all the seats are reserved, Miss McKenzie said.

"What do you think of Canada?" we asked. 'Everyone has been wonderfully kind," said Miss McKenzie. "We are amazed at the wealth of gadgets in the stores,—there is so much of everything." "And people are easy to talk to," said Miss Anderson. "In Australia, there is not the same rush after material things. You're rushing so hard, you miss everything", she said.

Canadians are not affected enough by the rest of the world. They're complacent. There is more world news in Australian papers. "Canada doesn't seem interested in the rest of the world," they said. "For example, in the nursery school where we work every morning, the other teachers are not interested in an exchange of ideas regarding nursery work in Australia. Perhaps it is the influence of the United States, like the feeling between a small brother and an older one," they said.

The children seem to be spoiled over here. In the Australian street cars, students must offer their seats if an adult is standing. It is part of the agreement, whereby students get "concession" tickets.

Although the girls have been friends for only 2½ years, their fathers have been pals much longer. The girls have been in complete agreement about the places they wished to visit. They work on a strict budget with no luxuries. The girls have no intention of writing their travels, and as far as marrying, once they're home, that remains to be seen, they said.

CELEBRITIES 3-STAR AWARD

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

The Drama Festival

The University Drama Committee, in further fulfilment of its being, sponsored a drama festival which took up the first two nights of this week. The stake: the Cody Award. There isn't much point in rehashing the who-did-whats-and-how-wells of the individual entries but I should like to go on record with one or two sub-appendages. Also there are several neurotic ideas on the subject of festivals in general and on this one in particular which might serve to kill a moment or two of your time.

In the first place I have never been a keen admirer of drama festivals. It seems to me that the only possible way of judging the best entry would lie in your working out a system something like duplicate bridge. You might decide on one play in advance and have each of the competing groups put it on—then you might be able to decide which one did it best. This would be hard on the average theatre-goer but for better or for worse you'd have me there. But as the present system operates, what is the basis of the decision? I can only decide that it depends upon what the group concerned chooses to do. This is, of course, to presume that even ordinary standards of good production and careful rehearsal are maintained, presumption which incidentally it was unjustified to make with regard to this festival.

Look at the results. It is natural to assume that the biggest college will have the best actors, the most competent direction, not bceause the best ones go to U. C. in the beginning but because the competition and opportunity are that much more spurring. An actor with the concentration and high-seriousness of a John Walker, a director with the intelligence and sensitivity of a Don Davis, would credit any college and would turn in just as good work. But they do belong to U. C., it's the biggest college, and it won the award. Then how can the little fellows make a showing?

Well, I think there's even an answer to that one. The little fellows can go a long way with greater care in the choice of play. Last year Vic won with 'The Happy Journey'; a while back they won with 'Riders To The Sea'. Vic and U.C. have divided the spoils between them. The way it looks it will always be the one or the other. But the others can do considerably better than they have done to date. Last year Wycliffe did 'The Valiant' as dismal a little piece of slush as you'd ever hope to avoid; this year they did 'This Is Impossible' a foolish but bright bit of business which, however, couldn't be taken seriously as competitive material. In fairness, their director told me they had presented it at the insistence of the Committee which found itself short of a play. This bespeaks the spirit of Wycliffe and the School of Nursing. One wonders about the spirit of the U. D. C. which seems to be: let's put on some plays and damn the torpedoes.

Vic put on a Canadian vehicle. One wonders if their train of thought ran like this: it's a Canadian piece, it ought to win regardless of intrinsic merit. Now patriotism in the theatre is something, along with college cleavage, which I can cheerfully do without. So what you had from Vic was a play well done—abeit on the level of the kind of thing you see at intra-mural year-night parties. All very well in its way but again not to be taken seriously by adjudicatorial pronouncement.

Then for the problem of the Trinity offering. 'Twentieth Century Lullaby' eliminated itself because it couldn't be judged by whatever metaphysical standards adjudicators go by. Nobody did much moving; nobody did, strictly speaking, much stage acting. The fact that Trinity didn't know its lines—about the only thing it had to do—didn't speak for its confidence in winning the award.

And then we come to St. Mike's. Here was vehicle which didn't suit its actors, didn't suit the stage, and last and apparently least didn't suit the audience. It was presented by the actors in a state of what appeared to be nervous exhaustion which all too easily communicated itself to the audience—an uneasy handful which dotted the theatre only a little more thickly than did the participants the backstage areas. That seems to be all that I can say about St. Mike's—except that Audrey Laurie was in it and we have never, never seen her turn in a bad prformance.

What the U. D. C. has to do is establish higher standards. There is no use talking about the promotion of college drama. The method and not the meaning should be chief concern of this body. The audience has an ordinary right to expect well-rehearsed shows, good plays. The safeguarding of those rights is a matter for the U. D. C. to think about. They might do it while they count their unsold tickets. Must be quite a stack of them by now.

standing idly by and watching our potential allies go down one by one under a horrible tyranny certainly will. Not a hand was raised to save Mikhailovitch of Yugoslavia who fought both the Germans and the communists; nor scores of other members of democratic governments in the countries mentioned before. We see history repeating itself; in that these same men, DeGaulle and Churchill, are warning us of the folly of appeasing Russia, and are greeted with the same chatter about being "warmongers".

The author of the editorial says that each year of peace lessens the probability of war. On the contrary each successive year of peace has seen us with fewer allies and with Russia better prepared to attack us.

If we persist in a policy of appeasement we will find Russia demanding more and more until war is forced upon us. On the other hand, if we maintain ourselves ready for war at any time, we will inevitably have peace; because the communist dictators in the Kremlin will not dare to risk war with us on even terms, since they know that they do not have the willing support of their own people.

The Book Problem

Glasstone's Textbook of Physical Chemistry. This text covered all the physical chemistry in chemical engineering and could have been used all the way through the course. First, second and third year texts were prescribed for the individual years. Yet all the material contained in them was found in the Glasstone book. The texts listed for the I, II, III years were usable for one year only, he said.

The next day I made an appointment with Dr. C. R. Young, dean of the faculty of Applied Science to get some answers to the questions which the interview with engineers had raised in my mind.

Asks For Examples

I asked him whether it would not be possible for the lecturers to let the students know in their first year in a course the text which covers the course from the first year to the fourth. I said that students had complained they bought books in their first and second years which were of use in that year only. Later, in their third and fourth year the lecturer recommended a text which covered the course from beginning to the fourth year. The students were left with old texts on their hands.

Dean Young asked me if I could give him a specific instance of this occurring. I told him the students had told me Glasstone's Chemistry was one where this occurred.

Dean Young said that Physical Chemistry was not taught by the faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. It was taught by the Arts faculty he said. "Perhaps the text covers the physical chemistry adequately but does not cover the other aspects of chemistry that the books purchased in the earlier years of the course do. I don't know about that," he said.

Dean Young said many of the books the student purchased could be used to build up a reference library for use in his own special field later on in life.

I asked him whether it would be possible for the professors and lecturers to prepare a list of the books to be used as texts before the term began and to specify the text they would use.

Prepare Lists

He stated that most of the lecturers and professors in the faculty of Applied Science did this and indicated the one they would be using as a text. This was done at the first lecture. "In so far as possible a list is prepared and made ready for the calendar when it goes to press in February or March. Between this time and the next session, new books may come out which are much better and which the professors prefer to use as a text. Often these books are on the presses of American publishers and we know nothing about them until they appear on the market," Dean Young stated.

He said they found students in the faculty of Applied Science were very tardy in purchasing their texts and not to any extent did they make use of the calendar for reference in regard to the proper texts to be used.

I asked him why there was a constant changing of texts. Some of the students, in the interview I had the day before, seemed to think the texts were changed at the whim of the lecturers. He said in most cases the texts listed in the calendar were for reference purposes only and were not prescribed books for the subjects. It might happen after the calendar was printed that a new text came out during the summer and that a switch to the new book would be better, in the eyes of the professor, Dr. Young said. "Most students don't buy their texts until after the first lecture and often ask the professor to designate the text which he prefers or is the best among those listed. I did this myself when I was lecturing," he said.

Most Co operate

"Most of the professors co-operate in every way possible with the students. One of our professors, J. W. Melson, has prepared a number of mimeographed texts, in which there is no text covering the course adequately. He has done this for all his subjects. Professor Melson sells these mimeographed books to the students at cost," Dean Young stated. He said this was just one example. There were others who did the same thing.

I asked him about texts being listed in the calendar and yet were no longer used on the course. I mentioned Meuller's Introduction to Electrical Engineering as an example of this and pointed out that I had seen it lying unsold in the book exchanges.

"I don't know about it being replaced as a text. There are two texts listed in the calendar for the course, one by Meuller and one by Christie. It would depend upon which one the lecturer preferred and this would be announced at the first lecture at the beginning of the term," Dean Young said.

Well, there is the story from the viewpoint of a faculty member. It shows there are two sides to every story and some justification in each case. The only thing students can do is wait until the first lecture and then get the professor or lecturer to designate the text he will use. Wherever possible the students should try to get the professor to name a text that covers all years of the course.

day that the judging would be fair. "If the race is run fairly, to the satisfaction of Skule, then the unthinkable might happen. Somebody else might win," a spokesman asserted.

If the trophy rests this evening in The Varsity office we will drop our investigation. But should the trophy return to Skule, you are allowed to draw your own conclusions.

Forestry's A Interfaculty hockey league entry shaded the SPS thirds at the local arena yesterday by a slim 4-3 margin. Scoring both goals of the first period, the Foresters managed to pop in two goals to Skule's three to take the decision despite the last frame drive by SPS.

Turnbull started the woodsmen on their way with a counter at 10:13 of the first. Kay was next at 16:35 and Hallwood was the first SPS contributor with his effort at the 23:30 mark. Hall and Poole gave Forestry a three-goal lead with half the last period gone but Mathews and Lawerance retaliated for Skule to end the scoring.

SPS registered a 33-23 victory over Dent Bees in the noon-hour major b-ball tilt at Hart House yesterday. It was a neck-and-neck race at the half until the Skule quintet pulled the scoring plug to drop in eighteen points to the losers' nine.

Strykowski stood out in the Skule cause as he sank twelve markers while teammate Cole followed closely with eleven and Yeomans got eight. Richmond, with ten, was top man for the Dentists.

St. Mike's A's wrapped up another impressive win yesterday as they trounced the Sr. Vic squad by a 39-16 edge. Lanky Ray Ryan was the big cannon for the collegians hooping thirteen points with McKeown counting ten for the winners. Munro and Ryback with six and four, respectively, were top Vic marksmen.

SPS V and Wycliffe A's battled it out to a 45-42 decision with the engineers on the favorable side of the sheet. Harper topped the scoring list with twenty-two points which he supplied toward the Wycliffe total.

Pre-Meds Seek Revenge

Pre-meds are in, to avenge the insult handed them by Meds over the Daffydill ticket sale. Maths and Physics Society have an entry complete with "radar, chemical warfare and jet-propulsion." The Philosophical Phylers (supported by 4th Year Philosophy) issued a statement last night: "On metaphysical grounds (cf. Zeno, Third Paradox) the race is physically impossible. The Philosophical Phylers have already won it." School of Nursing has a team (!) and announced yesterday that this year's team "will not be hired."

The Chemical Warfare division of II Year Arts announce that they have entered the winning team for the races tomorrow. "We serve due warning to all students that those attending the race are not covered by existing policies. You attend at your own risk."

U.C., in a pre-game statement offered a 2c bounty on all slide rules turned into the Lit office tomorrow. They also called on The Varsity for some impartial reporting of the Classic. (Note the impartial manner in which we report such ridiculous requests.)

PHE I downed St. Hilda's I 3-0 yesterday in a fast exciting game with the stronger PHE team held down to the three goals by the outstanding net minding of Mary Martin.

PHE made a goal per period with Ferne Watson starting off the scoring. Alice Jamieson finally shot the puck home in the second period after the Fizz Edders peppered Mary Martin most of the stanza. The last goal of the game was rung up by Ferne Watson whose play showed why she currently leads the scoring race.

The St. Hilda's team battled all the way with Dosse Ballantyne and Ros Lloyd the star attackers for the losers.

PHE II defeated St. Mike's 2-0 in a fast exciting tilt on Tuesday. Goals were by 'Muggs' Fox from Mabel Noel and Dorelle Monohan assisted by Audrey Barefoot.

High-Jinks Prepared For Montreal Clash

Meet McMaster

Intermeds. Invaded By Injuries, Srs.

The Varsity Intermediates are apparently playing hockey too ardently for their own good. After their lop-sided victory in Waterloo, Tom McKillop was promoted to the senior team, and now after whipping Western 13-2 last Friday, Bob Cooper, handsome rear-guard, has been kicked upstairs. Not that the seniors don't need the added strength, but take it easy tonight at McMaster fellows or your team will be decimated again.

Red Waldron, out with a bad ankle last week will be back on the defense again tonight to team with Clare Morrison. Artie Bell, making his debut last Friday, incurred an ankle injury and will not be dressed tonight. The rest of the players are in their usual top shape. Jovial Jack, the life of the team, is fairly confident of a win but realizes that McMaster will ice a powerful squad and the game will not be a repeat of the Western debacle.

The team leaves the north door of the arena at 1:30 p.m. and play in Hamilton at 4:00. A win will put the Blues in first place.

VARSITY SPORTS

Competition Lively For Puck Playoffs

The intramural hockey schedule ends on Feb. 14 and the 32 teams are eyeing the 11 playoff positions hopefully. Two teams enter from each of the first three groups while in the remaining five groups, only the leading team is represented.

In the first group, Senior Vic blanked Ajax 5-0 and tied Senior Skule 2-2 to assure themselves of participation in the post-season series. The second-place Skulemen need only a win to join the Scarlet and Gold crew in the playoffs. League-leading Senior Vic nosed out Senior UC 4-3 to clinch a berth.

The other Group Two representatives will likely be St. Mike's A who took over second spot by beating Senior Meds 5-3.

In the third group, Trinity A and Pre-Meds have clinched playoff posts. The two Forestry squads, along with Trinity B and SPS IV, will also be in the charmed circle, while in Group Eight, Trinity C are odds-on favorites to hold their present leading.

Wardrop Leads In 'Mural Puck Scoring Chase

Freshman Terry Wardrop of the goal-hungry Trinity A's played the chief hangman's role as his gang throttled UC II 16-0. He scored six goals in that rout to take a commanding lead in the intramural hockey scoring race.

Wardrop's 10 goals give him a two-goal lead over former leader Jay Watt of Knox and Trinity's Harley. Pharmacist Cook's four-goal spree against Institutional Management put him in a third-place tie with Johnny Leishman of Trinity A and Clark of the unbeaten Forestry B squad.

Another Trinity A player, Tom Crerar, follows with six goals to his credit. Deadlocked with him are Cousins of Pre-Meds and Jack Harper of SPS IV.

Skiing Is Tops At Collingwood

For the first time this winter, excellent skiing is reported from Collingwood, the site of the newly established Varsity Ski House. Consequently the House will be open this week end. There is accommodation for a total of thirty males or females who get their applications in first.

A snow fall of four inches was reported yesterday with more on the way. Detailed information is available at the Athletic Office, Hart House. Reservations must be in by noon Friday, February 4th. The expense runs to $6.50 if you leave Friday and to $4.50 for those leaving Saturday for Collingwood. Skiers will return sometime Sunday.

Meals and accommodation have been reported as first-class.

Campbell With Accordion Leads 'Twixt Period Songs To Urge Blues To Victory

Need Win Verdict To Keep Ahead Of McGill Redmen

By HAL HOLDEN

With the season at the halfway mark Varsity Blue pucksters have six games left in which to overtake the pace-setting University of Montreal Carabins. At present the Blues are tied with McGill for second place, four points behind Les Carabins.

Since the Montrealers are coming to town tomorrow Ace Bailey's lads have a golden opportunity to cut down the visitors' lead when the two teams clash in Varsity Arena. A win over U. of M. would put the Blues that much closer to a successful defence of the Queen's Cup which they retained as Senior Intercollegiate champs last year.

The Blues have tangled with the Carabins twice so far this season and boast a .500 average against the league-leaders. The only loss the Montrealers have suffered this year was at the hands of the Blues in the local season opener on Dec. 3. Varsity came out on top 5-2 as the Carabins failed to live up to advance notices which were loud in their praise after the Montrealers whipped McGill and Queen's as the Intercollegiate season got underway.

Since then, however, the Frenchmen have been setting a scorching pace with a free-skating brand of hockey that is making life miserable for opposing goaltenders. In their last game with Queen's the "Bleu et Or" popped in 10 goals behind the distracted Tricolor netminder.

The Carabins have the two leading point-getters in the Intercollegiate scoring race in Georges Emblem and Andre Charest. This twosome has 14 and 13 points, respectively with Bob Henry of the Blues, their nearest rival. Henry has 12 points and Bill Spence is one back with 11. However, Spence is deadlocked with three others, two of them being Carabin snipers.

Liz Russell Wins Badminton Singles Crown

By JOAN EDDIS

Elizabeth Russell, PHE I, ousted her classmate Pat Montgomery 8-11, 11-2, 11-3 at the B and R yesterday to remain the sole heir to the intramural badminton singles' crown, worn last year by Trinity's Jane 'Curly' Matthews, who was bypassed by Liz Russell this year.

In the doubles, Liz Russell combined with her sister Mary, IV Vic, to defeat Pat Montgomery and Mary Matthews, II Trinity, 15-6, 4-15 and 15-9. Mary, runner-up in the singles a year ago, was ousted from the singles finals by her Fizz Ed doubles partner but that didn't stop her from combining with Pat to give the Russell sisters a tough fight to retain the doubles title they won last year.

The PHE finalists won enough matches to give the Fizz Edders the high total of 14 points. St. Hilda's were the runners-up in the meet with eight points and Vic were shuttling close behind with seven. UC had four points and Physio gleaned one.

Intercollegiate Team

Toronto is sending a team to London on February 18, a week today, where they will come up against Western, Queen's, McMaster, and McGill, who won the tournament last year in Montreal with eight points, one point ahead of the Varsity foursome.

The blue and white shuttlecock quartet has not been chosen yet but will probably consist of Mary and Liz Russell handling the doubles, and Mary and Jane Matthews (no relation) in the first and second singles slots. As only one Fizz Edder may play on the team there will be no berth left for runner-up Pat Montgomery whose classmate Liz will indubitably make the team.

SKI AT NEWMARKET

A ski bus will leave Hart House Sunday morning for Newmarket at 9:00 a.m. Reservations must be in the Athletic Office Hart House by Friday evening.

Give Door Prizes, Pick Three Stars At Post-Game Frolic

By BRIAN LAND

Further details concerning the Blue and White Society's big post-hockey dance this Friday night were leased yesterday. Joe Prendergast, who is in charge of the dance, stated that all dance tickets will be numbered so that every person attending will be eligible for door prizes, as well as for the spot and elimination dance gifts.

There will be a grand draw at the end of the season for one master prize. Students are therefore warned to hang on to their ticket stubs Friday and save them until the final dance on March 4th. The players are to be invited to the game as the guests of the Blue and White Society, while the three stars will receive their awards at the dance which is being held in the COTC Hall on St. George Street.

Only 800 Tickets

Unfortunately there are only 800 tickets available for the dance since space cuts down the numbers who can attend. However 15 girls have volunteered to sell the tickets, while they last, between periods at the game.

The dance, which will continue until one o'clock, will climax the night's entertainment which centres about the Montreal-Varsity hockey game.

Between period entertainment has been arranged, highlighted by Alec Campbell, who will lead a sing-song with his accordion. The Blue and White has also provided 10-inch pennants for sale to students at ten cents each.

There is just one element that is necessary for the evening's success—your presence. The Blue and White therefore takes this opportunity of inviting all hockey supporters to Friday night's festivities.

SHAME!

The sports staff forgot to fill this hole in the page, but two roving Varsity reporters, (news staff), who got lost on their way home stepped into the breech. The question we would ask is: "Must the news staff go even to Oshawa to help our dear brethren?"

Starry-Eyed Charioteer

The astronomy chariot racers were very strong contenders for the Jerry P. Potts memorial trophy at its second running yesterday. The star-gazers left their telescopes long enough to field a very strong contender for the coveted trophy which was won last year by The Varsity but held by Skule.

Skule Forgets Chariot Loss By Planning For Stage Show

The Engineers break away from their slide rules and such and enter the cultural field with their annual production of Skule Nite. This last social event for the entire School consists of a stage production, written and produced by the Engineers and a dance. All this will take place in Hart House.

Due to the large enrollment in Engineering, and the limited seating capacity in the Hart House Theatre, the Skule Nite will be run on two nights with three shows per night. The first night will be Friday, Feb. 11 and will be for Ajax and third year Toronto students. A week later the entire night will be for fourth year students, royal party, and guests. The School Night committee are also planning to run a special show Thursday, February 17.

Pat Suddick, chairman of the School Night committee said, "We're sorry that we cannot accommodate every one that want to be at Skule Nite, but the present arrangements are the best we can do. The demand for tickets has been great and the extra show on Thursday night will give more students a chance to see the show."

Students will be allowed to buy dance tickets only on either of the nights if they cannot obtain the regular Skule Nite tickets.

In charge of production is Bill Walker who remarks that this will be the best Skule Night that School has ever produced. Garth McPowell, a third year student like Bill, is the director. He declined to release any information regarding the script, "but," he says, "there is a large cast in the show and we have real live women included."

Jack Breithaupt heads a large stage crew. This is his second consecutive year in this capacity. Jack also was responsible for most of the work in other School functions. "There are some very good men working on this production and the machine that is being built will be even more fabulous than before," he said.

The machine referred to, is a gadget that makes its debut in every production. Every year the Schoolroom dream up and build a machine, and this year, as Jack says, "even Einstein won't be able to figure this one out."

REMEMBER ISS

Remember to bring your one dollar to buy the blanket ticket for the ISS activities starting next Monday. This campaign will collect money to provide relief for students in war-torn and impoverished countries all over the world. This ticket entitles the purchaser to attend all tea-dances, concerts and entertainment at the various colleges during the week.

Race Ends In Double Steal Meds Get Cannon By Trickery Skule Gets Meds' Vice-Pres.

CHARIOTS ALL DIFFERENT; EACH TEAM HAS ITS OWN OPINION ABOUT WINNERS SKULE WON—SAYS SKULE

Before a crowd of more than 3,000 milling students, 21 teams from all faculties and colleges contested the second running of the Annual Olympic Chariot Race. Results were inconclusive.

Field Crowded

Up to 1 o'clock, 25 entries had been received in answer to the challenge flung down by SPS, 1948 losers of the classic but holders of the Jerry P. Potts memorial trophy. By post time, however, four entries had been scratched.

Dress for the affair was on the informal side. The Vic team turned out in football uniforms, compiete with helmets with nose guards. Skule and Meds were charmingly attired in red axle grease. The Varsity women's team sported long underwear covered with swim suits. Editor Harrison was nattily dressed in a Roman toga, laurel crown, and carried a flashing sabre.

Some Teams Confused

Official starting line was the front door of Convocation Hall. According to the rules, the course to be followed was a clock-wise circuit of the front campus. This complicated statement of the method of conducting the race seemed to lead to some confusion in the minds of the "horses". Vic's team covered the course with the steeds pushing the chariot; "horses" and the chariot proceeding in a contra-clockwise direction.

Rules of the race also stated the race was to be run off in heats. If

WELFARE DIVISION OF ARTS CLAIMS PURSE; DAVEY PROTESTS RESULTS BUT FIRST PLACE TIED

LATE BULLETIN—As THE VARSITY went to press it was learned that Vice-president of the Medical Society, Bob Hetherington, was "kidnapped" by a group of engineering students and is being held pending return of the Skule cannon.

A phone call late last night to THE VARSITY disclosed that Hetherington was snatched from his fraternity, the Phi Gamma Delta, by a group of about ten Skulemen, and herded into a truck which was rapidly driven away. Calls to the Phi Gamma house confirmed this report.

Ed. note: Regardless of what is stated in the following story by an unbiased reporter of THE VARSITY, the official winners of the Annual Olympic Chariot Race held yesterday were the men's and women's teams of THE VARSITY. These two teams share the top honors, crossing the finish line in a dead-heat.

Official results of the Annual Olympic Chariot Race, as recorded on the "winner's board" were: SPS, first place; Ajax, second; and Meds in third place.

Results were posted by officials of the Engineering Society, sponsors, instigators, and judges of the race, and were heatedly denied by all the other contestants.

Shortly after the conclusion of the race, (the official conclusion, that is) the various teams, en masse, began flooding The Varsity office. Each claimed they had won; none agreed that the others had been anywhere near the finish line when the winners crossed it.

Keith Davey, president of the Engineering Society — whoops — the Victoria College Union, declaimed loudly against the manner in which the race was conducted. "Just another example of the sloppy way Skule runs their affairs," he said. "A blind man could have judged

MEDS CAPTURE CANNON IN CLIMAX TO CHARIOT RACE BRAWL RESULTS AS SKULE TRIES TO RECAPTURE IT

In what was perhaps the finest example of student strategy in the history of the University, the Faculty of Medicine yesterday captured Skule's famed cannon. The old and revered symbol of the School of Practical Science now rests in the hands of the Medsmen.

Meds Strike Quickly

The scheme to steal the cannon was planned to climax the chariot race and ended in a disorderly brawl inside the Medical building when engineers made a vain attempt to recapture the weapon. Some property damage was caused in the building and one report indicated a medical student had broken his leg in the melee. The report could not be confirmed.

The first blow of the battle was struck when a medical student seized the cannon just after a salvo had been fired to start the second heat of the chariot race. Confusion broke out as several hundred students punched, kicked and fought their way through a mass of engineers. Many faculties joined in the fray in an effort to capture the prized cannon.

The crowd broke in front of the Medical building and a triumphant engineer raced back to the "little red schoolhouse" with the cannon tucked under his arm. Just as he got inside the door two unknown medsmen patted the gallant engineer on the back and shouted "Good boy! Give it to us."

Heaving a sigh of relief the unsuspecting engineer passed the cannon to the willing helpers who raced down the corridor, out the side door, and across the road to the Medical building.

Meanwhile, the irate Skulemen discovering the loss, organized a posse and stormed into the Medical building where they were met

OFFICE OF PRESIDENT

January 29, 1949

The Editor, The Varsity:

Permit me to disclaim entirely a recent bogus press despatch, datelined from Halifax and saying that I had charged Toronto University and McGill with being "hotbeds of Communism". In no public address have I ever criticized any Canadian university in any terms whatever, and even in private conversation I have not been guilty of the alleged phraseology.

The source of the recent press item was a brief chance encounter with a young journalist in a Halifax corridor. He asked me if Toronto and McGill "were not hotbeds of Communism". I replied that while some Communists had long been active on both campuses and Communist "L.P.P. clubs" were openly organized at six Canadian universities (McGill, Toronto, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and U. B. C.), I questioned whether more than two percent of the students were involved in any instance, and I urged him, if he wanted an authentic version, to consult a recent issue of Saturday Night, in which I had quoted from the Communists' own documentation on the subject.

Our whole conversation, which I assumed was private, did not last two minutes. The immediate sequel was a press despatch sent all across Canada crediting me with his own words, which I had just repudiated, and giving the impression that I had used them in a public address.

I have written to the Halifax press agencies, asking that this matter be set straight, in fairness to myself and to the two universities concerned. I am sending a copy to The Varsity, in the hope that it may receive as much publicity as the original canard, whose phraseology I deplore as much as you do.

Yours faithfully,

Watson Kirkconnell.

Big Brawl

All was not fun at the running of the annual Jerry P. Potts chariot races. A group of young hoodlums broke up the otherwise orderly proceedings with the brawl shown above. The race was a complete success in other ways and as usual no winners were declared.

Why Not Journalism?

Many years have passed since this newspaper first advocated the formation of a school of journalism on this campus. And although university officials have from time to time indicated that plans for a journalism school were being considered, there is still little sign of any action.

Recognition of the value of a course in journalism at the university level has increased in recent years. This country, which a few years ago contained no facilities for training journalists in the universities, now has two journalism schools, one at the University of Western Ontario, and the other at Carleton College in Ottawa. But Toronto, the largest university in Canada, has made no provision for undergraduates who seek a career in newspaper work and allied fields.

With the diversity and complexity of modern events the pace is getting pretty stiff for the traditional type of journalist who started out by carrying copy from desk to desk. News services have had to cope with increasingly complex stories and political and economic issues involved have required the serices of fully trained reporters, men who could translate significant events into curt, clear-cut language.

Inadequacies of reporters in dealing with modern events cannot be cured by an ordinary course in subjects of a purely technical nature it is true. There is needed first a wide knowledge of men and affairs which a liberal education should be able to provide, a background upon which rudimentary technical skills can be added.

Most journalism courses, both in Canada and the United States, are designed to teach newspaper techniques against a background of liberal arts subjects. Generally, the courses are of four years duration with the first two years spent in teaching courses such as political science, economics, sociology and psychology. During the last two years newspaper techniques are taught and practical experience on local papers is used to acquaint students with the rapid tempo of the news room.

Much of the groundwork for such a course is already laid at this University. Practically all of the arts subjects are already taught. The history and effect of the newspaper, and newspaper law are already taught although the material is scattered through a number of economics and law courses. The experience of other journalism schools could be used to organize such a course here, a course that might well be a boon to students who now are forced to cross the border to get the type of training they require.

Farcity Fails Ignominously; Tut-O-Tut!

The Retorter, fearless in the cause of justice and determined as ever that murderous underpaid union seamen shall not beat up poor innocent scabs, has discovered an appalling failure on the part of The Farcity. Only two weeks ago, a harrowing revelation was made in a trueblue paper, SaToryday Night by the head of Public School No. 272, in Four Corners, Nova Scotia. From this vantage point, and without having spent any time in Toronto at all — mark of sheer genius in itself — Doctor Smirk Kennel has discovered that Leon Trotsky and Adolf Hitler are not dead at all. They are both at the University of Toronto, masquerading as professors of gastro-psychology.

They Don't Mind

Now, the Retorter (natch) doesn't mind so much about Hitler, who, after all, has on occasion been commended by a man whose name we mention with reverence: our Leader, Mr. Florence - - oops, we mean Gorgeous George. But this Trotsky thing is serious.

Dr. Smirk Kennel has found out that no fewer than four students—a significantly large proportion of the student body—have organized a racket in hot beds. You've all heard of hot cars, haven't you? This threatens the very foundations of our society. We were saying that up at the Granite Club only the other night.

With Trotsky around, and obviously the leader of these unscrupulous students, the thing is . . . why, dammit, what I meantersayis, well, dam' poor show, what? And The Farcity, whose editors all have their pockest stuffed with Moscow gold, didn't even reprint the article from SaToryday Night. Actually preferred to write things about what's going on in the Students' Council, and criticize the Bored of Governors and the Book Store.

Phoey To Farcity

Well, you know what to think about The Farcity now, don't you? Lot of radicals. Distort the news. Now, you take the Retorter. Why, did The Farcity think of calling up Steve Nandicoot? And getting his voice nearly trembling? The Retorter knows how to deal with these radicals.

And then our columns. None of this nonsense about economics, just old-fashioned palmistry. And our analyst. Never been on a lake freighter at all. And did you read that crackerjack story about those murderous seamen? Never been in China, either. Just shows you, if you've got the right attitude, you can put down the right idea about anything. And when the Chamber o' Horrors and the Bored of Trade are giving us the right line, how can we go wrong? After all, what are facts? In the Retorter you're more libel to get ideas. Solid one-hundred-percent Canadian ones. None of this socialistic rubbish for us. No, sir!

Government Policy No Raise In D.V.A. Says Milton Gregg

There will definitely be no move by the Federal Government to increase the basic grants to student veterans at this session of parliament, Veteran's Affairs Minister Milton F. Gregg stated yesterday at a meeting of the University of Toronto Liberal Club. The minister was answering a question asking him to expand the position he had taken on the floor of the House of Commons last week. He went on to explain why the government was taking this attitude.

Explains No Increase

The rehabilitation scheme, as originally conceived, had the task of getting approximately a million veterans back into civilian life, he went on. "We hoped to do this by 1950, and expected that it would cost a billion and a half dollars," the minister said. To date the program has run very well and it will probably cost as much as originally expected.

Of the million veterans about 58,000 have received university training, 100,000 have taken vocational training, 40,000 have taken land grants and the rest came back into civilian life under the re-establishment grant, the minister said. "It cost about $4,000 for each student veteran, $2,000 for each veteran who took a land grant, $1,000 for those who received vocational training, and $500 for those who took the re-establishment credits," the minister explained. In view of these facts, Gregg said that he did not think "the Federal Government has the right to take any further steps that might create jealousy among veterans who didn't take the student grants and among the general public."

Outlines Liberal Work

The minister outlined some of the accomplishments of the Liberal administration during the past few years. He cited the National Health program as an example of what had been done. "There has been the most cordial co-operation between the provinces and the federal government on this scheme," the minister declared. "This co-operation gives the lie to those who maintain that it is not possible for the Federal Government and the provinces to co-operate."

The minister also outlined some of the steps which the government plans to take this year as expressed in this year's Throne Speech.

'Christianity And Politics' Is Discussed

Mr. C. H. Millard, trade union leader and member of the Ontario legislature, spoke on "Christianity and Politics" at an S.C.M. study group yesterday in Trinity College.

The speaker emphasized that Christianity cannot remain neutral in politics, and that the Church must take a stand on issues of democracy.

"It is not a matter of how long a political party stays in power, so much as a matter of the party's concern for the downtrodden and less fortunate," Mr. Millard said. He mentioned that only four out of every hundred students are able to reach university, yet only eight percent of Canadian university students normally receive state aid.

Liquor Solution

In regard to the liquor question Mr. Millard felt that public ownership, education, and local options were the solutions. He stated that churches and governments were shying away from this problem.

Mr. Millard offered two suggestions in solution of the troubles in China. He said Canada should refuse to send arms to either side, but that it should co-operate with the United Nations in seeing that other countries do not send arms to either Nationalists or the Communists.

New Building Nears Completion

Chemistry's promised land — this is the "Varsity Grad's" word for the new Wallberg Memorial Building. . article this month tells readers the history and purposes of the building, from the original bequest which made it possible, to the long list of advantages it brings to the campus.

Million Bequeathed

Emil Andrew Wallberg, a wealthy industrial engineer, died in 1929. The bulk of his estate went to his sister, Ida, who left one million dollars to the University when she died four years later. The money was to be used for an engineering building in memory of her brother.

When the building is finished next September its total cost will have been more than four times the Wallberg bequest. Professors believe its facilities will make possible improvement in undergraduate instruction as well as research acceleration.

Construction of the building began in 1946. When excavation was underway, trouble arrived in the form of a City Hall notice that St. George Street was going to be widened; The Wallberg had to be moved ten feet eastward.

Three-fifths of the new building's 2,600,000 cubic feet will be occupied by chemical engineering students and projects; the rest will be devoted to the work and teaching of the Department of Chemistry, which will continue to use the old Chemistry Building—"a pleasant place, fantastically crowded".

Has Latest Features

Many of the new and unusual features incorporated in the building came from the trunkful of ideas brought back from the U. S. tour of Professor Gordon of the Chemistry Department, Profesor R. R. McLaughlin, of the Department of Chemical Engineering, a member of the Building Superintendent's staff and the architects' representative. It was in 1943 that the four experts and a few others inspected American scientific laboratories and teaching facilities.

Among the results of the tour is an apparatus shaft rising the full height of the building in which practical experiments may be carried on under simulated industrial conditions; a volatile solvent room underground; an air-cleaning system for the whole building; an "outdoor" lab.; double walls to facilitate piping system repairs, and a vast two-storey teaching lab for Chemical Engineering. Lecture rooms and labs alike are windowless sections with mastic tile floors and glazed tile walls. A far cry from the old stock-type school-room desks are the custom built furniture units.

Do Pulp Research

In the new building, the Department of Chemical Engineering will begin special instruction and research in pulp, paper and allied products. Principles of distillation, petroleum production, heat transfer and fluid flow, filtration, crushing and grinding will receive special at-

LPP Banned From McGill Union House

Montreal, Feb. 4 — (CUP) — The McGill Union House Committee yesterday banned the LPP Club from using the union building for a period of five months. The ban came after the club "persisted" in selling copies of the Canadian Tribune on Union premises against Union rules.

The Students' Executive Council suspended the club temporarily until an investigation can be made.

McGill Daily Editor-in-Chief Cleman said it was possible the committee might discover that only certain members of the LPP group were at fault. "If such is the case it is the responsibility of the LPP Club to clean house and show students they are here as a study group, a law abiding study group" he added.

ISS Offers Dance And Show In Return For Dollar Ducat

The grand finale of the ISS campaign will be a Valentine Roam-Around, featuring Bobby Gimby and his orchestra at the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall. The Robert Simpson Co. has donated the services of Gimby's orchestra to ISS.

The Roam-Around will be held Friday, Feb. 11, following the Queen's-Varsity hockey match. Two bands have been obtained: Bobby Gimby's orchestra at the Drill Hall, and Buddy Hill's orchestra at Burwash Hall. Canned music will be heard at the Trinity Buttery, Brennan Hall (St. Michael's), the O.T. huts, and U.C.'s Junior Common Room. During the intermission entertainment from the All-Varsity Revue, the U.C. Follies and the Vic-At-Home will be presented.

Tickets for the Valentine Roam-Around go on sale Monday, Feb. 7, in all faculties. The tickets may be obtained at central spots in the large colleges and through year representatives and personal contacts in the smaller colleges and faculties. The ducats will cost 50c a person and all proceeds go to the ISS campaign fund.

Committee chairman, Jack Hoolihan, U.C. Lit., urges all students to buy their tickets early because of the limited supply. He also stressed the fact that nowhere in the city can one get such an inexpensive evening with talents like Bobby Gimby as well as all the other entertainment and dances which will be in progress.

The sponsors of the Valentine Roam-Around will be U.C., Victoria, Trinity, St. Michael's, O.T., P.T., School of Nursing, Institutional Management, and Wycliffe College. This dance will be the last All-

The Book Problem

University Press Manager Is Interviewed

By WILS HARRISON

This is the fourth in a series of articles on the text book problem. In this article Harrison investigates the case for the publishers.

After I had been working on the book problem for a week or ten days, I learned that the National Federation of Canadian University Students had completed their report on the cost of text books. I contacted George Wilkes, the chairman of the local NFCUS committee, and asked for a copy. I received it the next day.

I perused the contents of the NFCUS findings in their investigation of the book problem. This investigation, which started in May, 1948, had unearthed evidence in the local aspects of its scope, in support of the two points I had found after my interview with Jack Cole. The two points were (a) that texts were constantly being changed and as a result the used texts had little resale value to the students; (b) that the prices of texts sold at the University Press were higher than any of the other book stores selling University texts.

Local Conditions

The NFCUS report covered the problem under two headings. The local conditions and the conditions on a national scale. I chose to take the local conditions first, and then, in my last article, to present their findings on the national scale.

Since I had covered point (a) in my first two articles, I decided to have an interview with the manager of the Press, Mr. A. G. Burns, to find out why the prices at the Press were higher than other stores and also to get a reply to the charge Cole had made against them.

The first question I asked Burns was who regulated the prices of texts sold in the campus book store. I pointed out to him that the NFCUS report noted a discrepancy in prices charged by the University Book store and the one charged by other stores selling texts in the city. He told me the Board of Governors of the University set the prices for the books sold in the campus book store.

Phoned Cole

Then I referred to the statement made by Cole regarding Representative Poetry Volume I. I asked Mr. Burns whether he had called Cole on the telephone and told Cole that if he did not raise the price of his texts to a par with those of the University Press that he would no longer be supplied with texts published by the Press.

"Yes, I did. You must understand there is a price laid down for text books the same as there is for a car or a pound of tea, and it must be adhered to. The price must remain the same," Burns declared.

I then asked him what the reason was for the mark-up on texts coming in from the United States. I told him the NFCUS report showed that other universities across Canada were getting the texts at the American list price plus transportation charges. He said the maximum discount on imported texts was 20%. "We have transportation charges, customs duties and brokerage charges to pay. It is a standard policy of the University that any changes in the price of texts must be made by the Board of Governors and the controller," he said.

Funds Kept Separate

"Do the profits made from the University Press go toward financing the university as a whole?" was my next question. "On what basis does the Press operate?"

To my first question he answered, "No, they do not." To the second, he said, "The university owns the Press. The profits and funds of the Press are kept separate. It is self-supporting. All profits made from the sale of texts and the products published by it are used to operate the Press and to pay for buildings such as the new book store built near UC."

I pointed out that in the past we had had letters by students complaining that they had ordered a bookbook needed on their course for one year only. The book was not in stock at the book store so they had placed an order for it. A year later they had received notice that the book was now in stock. I asked him why that had occurred.

In Short Supply

He said that during the last few years there had been an excessive number of students on the campus and many of the books were in short supply after the war. Many books were out of print. Paper had the race better than Skule did. In fact, I'm not sure the judge wasn't blind. Vic walked all over the opposition. We even captured the Skule building. Let them talk their way out of that."

Vice-president of the V.C.U.—sorry—the Engineering Society, Pat "Suds" Suddick retorted, "Davey again! All he does is talk and he expects everyone to do the same. Take Skule!!! What rot! Davey always gets his publicity by riding on the coat tails of Skule." When last seen, Suddick was frothing at "The Mouth," a small tavern on Yonge Street.

Star Gazers Called It

From Astrology 3a came the following:—"The results of the race bear out the predictions as read in the stars which said inevitable success would follow our efforts in yesterday's race. In spite of the foul play and the false claims of the other competitors, we forged ahead to a spectacular win. Predictions for next year's race (or examination results) are available for a nominal fee."

A spokesman from second year Physics and Chemistry said, "The Chemical Warfare Division of Arts, announce they are the winners of the race. For anyone wishing to dispute this claim, the following evidence can be produced:

(1) a portion of the Skule blackboard inscribed with the name of the winning team,

(2 a written statement from Mike McEntropy, IV Mech., who says the winners were the P and C team. (McEntrophy was an "impartial" judge.)

(3) the undisputed superiority of chemical warfare tactics.

Furthermore, we know Skule stinks."

It Sure Does!

And it does! Three "stink" bombs, one on each floor, raised such a smell that afternoon lectures in the Skule house had to be cancelled.

Capture of the Skule cannon by Meds men was admitted last night by officials of the Engineering Society. In a near trembling voice, Engineering Society's vice-president Pat Suddick confirmed the infiltration of Meds men into the schoolhouse and the subsequent capture of the cannon.

Interviewed by The Varsity over the telephone, Suddick answered at least two questions about the rumor before exclaiming that he was "being called to dinner".

Here are the questions and answers that came out of the interview:

Q: The rumor says that the Skule cannon was taken by men from the medical faculty. Is this true?

A: Oh that. Well,—yes it's true. Those people have the cannon. (Pause).

Q: Are the engineers planning any action to retrieve the weapon?

A: We are making an attempt to retrieve the cannon.

One observer pointed out that Suddick was on a "hot spot". If he failed to answer the questions, he would inadvertently be confirming the rumor. By answering them, he placed himself in a precarious position within the Society.

From the Philosophy Club which did not contest the race, came this statement, issued before the start of the race, "The race is a physical impossibility. Before traversing the whole distance, it is necessary to traverse half. Before traversing half the distance, one must traverse half of that—etc. It is therefore impossible to leave the starting point.

Ergo: the Philosophical Phlyers, being the only team to realize this, automatically become the winners."

Bubbles Hay-Roe, Stroke-oar of the winning Varsity girl's team said, "Will the little SPS man who has my teeth imbedded in his leg please return them?"

Any other opinions about who won the chariot race?

T.S.O.

On Wednesday night the Toronto Symphony provided Mozart, Liszt and Debussy for the steady trade, Sir Ernest MacMillan directing. Arriving midway through the allegro of the Mozart Symphony No. 39, I found a sober and workmanlike performance underway, well-tooled and well thought out, if not inspired; the orchestra played with a decent level of competence and achieved real distinction in the minuet. This technical distinction was notably evident in "La Mer", Debussy's three "symphonic sketches", a taxing assignment for any orchestra. Sir Ernest's treatment was essentially symphonic and literal in approach, and the aquatic rather suffered as a result. Rhythms were excessively metronomic; too often Debussy's sighs became coughs, his fleeting smiles guffaws. At all times the magical clarity of the matchless Koussevitzky recording was lacking, but it was an absorbing and interesting performance withal, coldly received by a characteristic Toronto audience which sat ostentatiously on its hands.

Clifford Curzon, a British pianist, was associated with the orchestra in Mozart's "Twenty-Fourth Concerto." Mr. Curzon has accrued some reputation as a Mozartean, and for once it proved to be reputation and not notoriety, for his playing of this sober work was a triumph of mature restraint and poetry. The pianist tossed off the Liszt "Fantaisie Hongroise" with an appalling virtuosity which tended by its brilliance to highlight the enthusiastic mediocrity and painful vulgarity of the music with cruel clarity. Six or seven bows were required to dissipate the enthusiasm generated.

David Hughes

Highlights of baritone David Hughes' song recital at the Museum Theatre, Wednesday night, were the reverent, sonorous renderings of Rachmaninoff's "The Isles" and "In the Silence of Night", Ralph Vaughan-Williams' "Silent Noon", and a fluid, ringing delivery of Handel's stormy "From the Rage of the Tempest" (Scipio air).

Mr. Hughes commenced his concert with four Italian songs. Scarlatti's "Rugiadose Odorse" and Cavalli's "Donzelle Fuggite" were evidence of his near-mastery of bel-canto song. His crisp consonants and throatless vowels fused with an infectious spirit in the rollicking "Toper's Song" and "The Farmer's Pride".

The only drawbacks to the night were the singer's inept gesture, his absent eyes (no footlights on) and an ever present self-restraint in the program's final half. Effective gesture must always be in harmony with the sentiment, as an offshoot of integrated body response. Last night gesture only detracted from the performer's art. Under Albert Whitehead, his teacher, Hughes will no doubt remedy this in time.

Pianist Wilfred Powell accompanied Mr. Hughes. As soloist, he played Beethoven's Op. 89 Polonaise, Granados' The Maiden and the Nightingale, and Brahms' Op. 119 Rhapsody No. 4. All three were played carefully and methodically with clear pedalling and accurate notation, although the Brahms' offbeat rhythms were too often on.

DOUBTFUL EDITORIAL

The Editor, The Varsity:

We are wondering why The Varsity on Monday reprinted an article from 'The Queen's' Journal. It certainly has no literary value. There are two points in the article with which the average educated person will agree conditionally—(1) War is not inevitable provided that we, the Western Democracies, are strong enough to prevent it. When hooligans and gangsters begin to disturb and bully peaceful citizens you require more police, and not less. So it is in the community of nations.

(2) The other point on which we can agree is the statement that the peoples of the satellite countries are not completely lost to the West; that is we can agree if the writer is speaking ideologically and morally. We all know that Communist rule is a minority rule forced upon an unwilling majority and maintained by fear and the "rat-on-your-pal" system. Undoubtedly these people are with us spiritually and with yearning hearts look from their enslavement toward the West.

(3) We agree that the Russian people resemble ourselves and would love to share our freedom. When the Germans invaded their country in 1941 tens of thousands of Russian people, together with whole divisions of the Russian army flocked to surrender. They thought deliverance from tyranny had arrived at last. It was the cruel brutality of the invading forces that eventually stirred the Russians to resistance.

These are facts of history kept in the background lest they should prejudice sound business-like agreements with the Russian Government. But the present softening up peace offensive is a challenge to broadcast the truth.

The rest of the article hardly seems worthy of serious consideration. "We are surrounded by enemies"—these are not words that we have heard from our own government or from any Western power. They are the words of Pravda, and echoed by the follow-travellers in our midst as an excuse for overrunning all nations bordering on the Soviet.

When the writer of the article speaks of our 'ringing our frontiers with iron', he must be walking and thinking with both feet in the air. He will be telling us next that the Western powers have barricaded Berlin to keep out their own supply transports.

It would likely be futile to ask the author of this article but — would any person volunteer answers to the following questions? Why cannot correspondents and visitors roam freely around Russia as Russians may do on this side of the iron curtain?

Why are Russians only allowed into our country, or any democracy, after the most heavy Kremlin briefing, and then are controlled by some form of fear?

Why cannot even a man like Vishinsky talk naturally in a social gathering without a Russian agent or two sidling up to listen in and report? This is obvious to U. N. delegates.

Why cannot Russian wives leave Russia to join the men to whom they are legally married, when both parties so desire?

Why have there been desertions to the Western side of the iron curtain at the rate of about 1,000 a week since the war?

Why did so many Russian war prisoners, and other Russians, have to be compelled against their will to return to their native land?

It was, in the vernacular, a protrusion of the neck to attempt to compare our free, individualistic way of life with life under Nazi tyranny. The two are diametrically opposed; but who can perceive much difference between two totalitarian powers. Today's Nazis dwell in Moscow.

Having taken a very active part in peace movements after World War I, I feel urged to warn that experience has taught me the incalculable dangers involved in hampering preparedness. If the Politburo were composed of kittens and angels, we might be complacent. They are the ruthless directors of a Fear System.

Why have we not been at war since 1945? Because there was a small—now there is a much larger—stock pile under the control of those who love peace and freedom. This stock pile is feared by the only powerful aggressor in the world today.

The real reason for the iron curtain is that the average wage earner here lives as a prince by comparison with his opposite number in Russia. The Russian people must not learn this fact. We need not so much be concerned with avowed Communists as with those who, either in ignorance or just to be different, are trying to whitewash mud, and would have us relax our guard till we can be carried into tyranny in our sleep.

Remember that the present Soviet regime has violated almost every treaty she has made in thirty years. Remember too that millions of slave laborers are starving in Soviet concentration camps. Let us be strong enough to be able to offer friendship without fear to all nations of the earth.

Book Review

French Fiction

Gerald Manley Hopkins has produced an extremely fine translation of Francois Mauriac's "Therese Desqueroux" (Collins $3.00). Mr. Hopkins intends to publish a complete translation of Mauriac's work and this novel indicates that he has made progress over the earlier "Woman of the Pharisees" which presented many difficulties to a translator because of the variety of style. "Therese", however, has been beautifully handled. Allusions which would be significant only to French readers have been given an English equivalent and the explanatory notes are most helpful.

The life of Therese is the story of one of the most notorious femmes fatales of literature. One feels, however, that despite the author's obvious desire to present his heroine in a sinister light, the essential horror of her life is not as clearly brought out as in "The Woman of the Pharisees". The reason for this is that M. Mauriac is almost completely dominated by his character creation in "Therese". The novel is a truly great psychological study, although as a work of art it cannot be ranked with "The Woman of the Pharisees". The style is unified throughout, and the author shows an almost Balzacian zest for documentation, but as a novel it is not complete. Unless read with some of the short stories about Therese from "Plongees", two of which Mr. Hopkins has included, it cannot be seen as the complete study in degradation for which the author intended it.

For exquisitely textured prose, fidelity of description and biting irony, Mauriac is unsurpassed in French literature. The bourgeois world of greed and lust he depicts may not be an attractive one, but his characters are integrated with their surroundings to a greater extent than those of Gide, whose methods are similar to his. The concept of grace which runs through Mauriac's work saves him from the sterile agnosticism of Gide, and gives his characters hope and life.

Jean Paul Sartre's novel "The Chips Are Down" (Ambassador $3.50) provides us with rather a sad commentary on the state of modern French literature. Not having read the original, I cannot pass judgment on Mlle. Varese's translation, but there is a certain awkwardness of phrasing throughout which is most disturbing. Perhaps the "montage" technique which is not as well-adapted to the novel as to the movies, is at fault. The story concerns the after lives and loves of a revolutionary factory worker and a wealthy Parisian who are granted a short reprieve from death in order to prove their right to live. They fail, and so does M. Sartre's tale, despite his whimsical touches which endear him to many. Perhaps existentialism, like all literary fads, will pass —the sooner the better.

tention. Wartime co-operation with the National Research Council has been continued since 1945 and projects of the Council will be given space in the Wallberg Building. Two of the Department of Chemical Engineering's current projects have a bearing on atomic research.

Like Length Problems

The Chemistry Department works on many theoretical problems, and much of its research is varied and complex. The head of the Department, Professor Gordon, does not believe in setting scientists' short-term problems which limit their use of imagination and initiative. He cites the study of radioactivity as related to cancer as an example of the results attained by allowing researchers to follow their own particular bents.

The first two labs in the building were put into service last November. Next year's first term classes will have full use of the Wallberg facilities.

Meds Capture

by medical students who fought desperately to retain their prize.

Skule Takes Hostage

Failing to recapture the cannon, the engineers captured II Pre-Meds president, Bob Sheppard, and carried him back to SPS where he was held as hostage pending the return of the cannon. He was released later but the cannon still remains in the hands of the Medsmen.

Victoria College Union president, Keith Davey, later offered the congratulations of his college to the Medsmen.

Jack Hoolihan, UC Lit executive, said his college would "offer three cents" for the cannon.

Chariots All

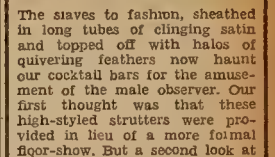
this rule was carried out as prescribed, it was not evident to the spectators. Teams started when ready and finished if they could. However, the official clocker maintained The Varsity girl's team won the third heat with a record time of 5:24:5 to be acclaimed winners. The second place team crossed the wire in 6:15:0.

The first heat seemed to have been won by SPS (timing unavailable), and winners of the second heat was Ajax (according to Ajax).



Varsity Girls Win

Plans called for heat winners to run off a fourth heat but plans again seemed to go awry. In lieu of the fourth heat, times of the various heat winners were compared and The Varsity women's team declared event victors. The official score board did not indicate this result but listed SPS as final winners. The Varsity team attributed this error to confusion on the part of the scorers.

Two hours after the close of the race, Engineering Society executives still maintained SPS the winners.

The slaves to fashion, sheathed in long tubes of clinging satin and topped off with halos of quivering feathers now haunt our cocktail bars for the amusement of the male observer. Our first thought was that these high-styled strutters were provided in lieu of a more formal figor-show. But a second look at the self-conscious swaying confirmed the seriousness of the role they were playing. Startled hens and English sheep-dogs, but no matter what, cocktail hats shall be worn this season! As most of the top arbiters of feminine fashion are men, we wonder how acute woman, prideful of her keen perception allows herself to play the constant buffoon.. It's obvious to most men just what a huge joke is being played and it's worth footing the bills. How ridiculous can woman be made to look before she wakes up?

The Book Problem

been in short supply as well. They weren't able to get the books. This was especially true of books which were published in England, Burns said.

Mr. Burns then indicated to me that he was in a hurry and could not allow the interview to go on any longer. He had to attend a conference. I asked him to answer one more question before I left. He consented.

I said Cole had charged that he had been refused books published by the Press from S. J. R. Saunders and Company, who are distributors to the trade. Cole said he had been told by the S. J. R. Saunders Company that he would have to buy his Press publications directly from the University Press itself from now on. Cole said he had not been able to get books from the Press for the past two months. Why?

None From Saunders

"He could never get books from Saunders, I wouldn't say he didn't ever get any books from them, that is, not in any quantity. Our understanding with Saunders is that we handle all the books printed by the Press which will be sold to universities," Burns stated.

The next day I telephoned S. J. R. Saunders and Company to find out whether they had ever sold Cole any University Press publications. They said they had.

I asked them if they had sold him any in the last two or three months. The girl said she would have to check through the files and see. She checked through the files and said they hadn't sold any during the months of October, November or December.

Then I asked her if they were distributors to the trade. She said they were and that they filled library and personal orders as well.

"Are you the representatives of the Press in Toronto?" I asked. She replied they were supposed to be the Press representatives in the city and any orders phoned in were filled.

McGill's Hoop Redmen Face Blues Tomorrow

By ED VOIGHT

Howie Ryan's McGill Redmen arrive in town tomorrow afternoon to take on the Varsity Blues hoopsters in the main feature of the Athletic Night in Hart House gym Saturday evening. For the Redmen, it will be their second game in as many nights, as tonight out in London, McGill plays the Mustangs of U. of W. O.

McGill has at present a one loss-one win record. The Redmen dropped their Intercollegiate opener to Western two weeks ago, 61-35 in Montreal. Last Saturday, Ryan's Raiders knocked off Queen's (as who doesn't these days) 58-49.

The Blues have played only one league game yet, that also against Western, which they lost, 42-37.

Coach Masterson was far from pleased with the Blues' showing here last Saturday against the Metrasmen. Masterson feels that if the Blues had fought as much against the Mustangs as they had the previous week against Assumption, his charges would have walked off the floor the victors instead of the vanquished.

Masterson repeated this sentiment yesterday after the Blues had polished off Central "Y" Seniors Thursday night 66-50, in an exhibition match as a preparation for tomorrow's contest with McGill.

During the week, Masterson made two player changes on his squad. Bill Henderson, who has dressed for the last three home games but hasn't played, and Tony Adams, who wasn't dressed at all for the Western game, have both been cut from the Blues' roster, and will play for Barry Lowes' Intermediate team.

As for the McGill Redmen, coach Ryan has six of his last year's regulars back. Vivacious George Davidon, however, one of the best all-round players in the league last year and the Redmen's captain, has graduated; which fact the Blues will not likely regret in the least.

Meyer Bloom, Bob Duford, and big Bud Fraser are three regulars from the '47-48 season still with McGill, and so far this year have been pacing their club in most of their games. Duford sank 11 points against Western, Bloom 8, when the two teams played two weeks ago.

Blue and White All Organised For Puck Party

A supplementary program has been planned for tonight's hockey match by the Blue and White Society of the S.A.C. guarantees to entertain the anticipated capacity crowd. Pennants, ribbons, a singsong and big post-game dance will highlight the evening.

Admittance to the game is by admit to lectures card. Once inside the next move is to purchase one of the special 10 inch pennants from one of the girls who have volunteered their services to the Blue and White.

Between periods, the 800 dance tickets for the C.O.T.C. Hall will be on sale. Each ticket is numbered for the lucky prizes draw which will take place later in the evening. A master draw will be held at the end of the season when a grand prize will be given.

A special celebrity is to be present as the guest of the Blue and White. His chief function will be to choose the three stars of the night. Awards will be presented to these winners at the dance.

Through the courtesy of the Athletic Office a larger program has been provided as another part of the plan to publicize intercollegiate senior hockey. The game is called for 8.15.

Entrance to the dance will be by the front door of the C.O.T.C. Hall on St. George Street. Dancing will continue until one o'clock. Don't forget to hold your ticket stub for the big master prize drawing to be held after the last game of the year.

Bailey's Blues To Meet 'Bins Here Tonite

By HAL HOLDEN

"Our best is good enough to win," said Coach Ace Bailey last night as the hockey Blues concluded their final practice session before meeting the league-leading U. of Montreal Carabins at Varsity Arena.

"The Blues have every reason to shoot the works at the Montrealers tonight. The boys realize if we lose another game we're just about out of the race," Bailey said. This will be the third meeting of the two clubs, each has won a game.

"We were tired out for the game we lost to the Carabins in Montreal," added the Blues' skipper. "We won a tough game against McGill the night before and took a lot of punishment. But I feel confident about this game tomorrow."

Part of yesterday's workout was designed to sharpen shooting eyes. Bailey had the boys skating in alone on goalies Bill Prince and Paul Hutzulak at either end of the rink.

Bob Cooper, late of the Intermediates, will team up along side of Wilf Digby on the defense for the game tonight. Bud Hayes will not dress. Neither will Bob LaRose, Blue rearguard who hasn't recovered from a knee injury received in the McGill game. Dan McDougald was out skating yesterday but didn't partake in the practice. He won't dress for tonight's game either, his sore shoulder is still troublesome.

A Varsity victory tonight would put the Blues two points back of Les Carabins and the same number ahead of McGill. At present McGill are tied with Varsity but have lost one more game. Defeat would be costly to the Blues' chances since it would put Montreal a full three games up with only five games left to play.

There are no playoffs in the Intercollegiate loop unless there is a tie for first place. Second isn't good enough, the Blues will have to climb up into first if they are going to retain the Queen's Cup which they have won for the last two years.

McMaster Wins— Had Four Goal Lead

By JOHN KENNEDY

Largely due to an inept, logy showing in the first period of the intermediate hockey game yesterday in Hamilton, the Varsity seconds lost to McMaster by a 6-4 score. The Macmen were not long in finding out that the Blues were not as potent as their 13-2 victory over Western last week would indicate and had little trouble in ramming in four goals in the first canto while holding the Blues scoreless.

The first McMaster score came at 6:45 with McGee scoring from right in front of the net where he was left unguarded. Barnes centred it out and McGee had no trouble beating Jack Foote in the nets. Morgan got the second Mac score on a rebound shot with Foote lying helplessly on the ice. Count Morrison was the only bright light for Varsity in this period as he stopped many attacks with his sliding body checks.

McGee scored again at 16:24 after taking a drop pass from Barnes. Barnes picked up his third point just before the end of the period when he set up Harris, who took a screened shot that Foote didn't have a chance on. Varsity were missing their men left and right and consequently giving the Macs ample chance to score. In this period the Blues might as well have been on roller skates.

Apparently they got a shot of life between periods for they came out in the second frame in fine fettle and narrowed the score to 5-4. From a face-off in the Rams' zone Bill Paterson made sure of one after Len Turner got the draw and gave it to him out in front of the Ram goal. Jerome scored next for Mac on a screened shot from the blue line after a Varsity player, in trying to clear, put it right on Jerome's stick. Around about now the Varsity goalie was ready to sue for non-support.

The Blues came to life briefly for the rest of the period and ran in three goals. Dies got one from Turner, identical to the first Toronto goal following a face-off. Griff Pearson carried into the McMaster zone and centred out to John Fingland for the next Varsity score, Waldron also getting an assist on the play.

The last goal of the period came off a breakaway with Pat McLaughlin rushing the length of the rink and carrying a Mac player for the last five yards, but succeeded in sinking a high hard shot.

Trailing 5-4, the Blues came out in the last period frothing at the mouth but only succeeded in gathering five penalties. The high point of the period, in fact of the game, was a fisticuffs fray at the 15-minute mark of the session, when Red Waldron dropped Piasecki with a left hook. Rocky Howson tried to get into the act but was thrown by Jerome. Four major penalties resulted. Piasecki sewed up the game at 18:45 on a breakaway goal that crushed the Intermediates.

Blue Juniors Win From Central "Y"

By BOB DNIEPER

The Varsity Junior Blue basketeers took a hard fought decision from the Central Y. M. C. A. team to win 59-49. Both teams were deadlocked on play for the first half but the Blues, led by Johnny Braithwaite and Burns Burnstein, surged ahead in the third quarter to gain and hold a ten point edge.

"It was the nicest game we have had so far," commented coach Barry Lowes. "They beat us by one point the last time we played, and it's nice to win from the top dogs of the league."

Varsity grabbed a six-point lead in the first minutes of the game on quick shots, only to have the Y-men overtake and pass them to lead by one point. The edge in play alternated between the two teams for the second stanza with the Blues showing some smart footwork. The third and fourth quarters showed Varsity's ability to hold on to the ball and to get the rebounds, although they were slow on passing and floored balls.

Braithewaite, Burnstein, Al Dancy and Ken Brown played good games both on offence and defence. Bill Huycke, Tom Orr, Carl Howard and Horace Wilson played well for the losing cause, but the Blue quints' shots were too accurate. The Juniors play again this A-Night against Kitchener.

This win against the Central's gives them a tie for first place, but the Y-ers have a game in hand. If the intermediates or seniors don't raid the juniors for talent, they should win handily on Saturday if they learn to dive for loose floor balls and keep their shooting eyes in the same shape as they were tonight. Come out early Saturday and see a good game.

Line-ups:—

Central Y.—Howard, 10; Orr, 10; Huycke, 10; Wilson, 8; Redding, 3; Fowler, 2; Smith, 2; Porter, 2; Thomas, 2; Maynerich, 1; Redding, Robertson.

Varsity Jrs.—Brown, 8; Braithwaite, 8; Glover, 7; Bonsall, 6; Burnstien, 6; Freeman, 6; Denton, 4; Carruthers, 3; Dancy, 8; Carr, Austin, Hamilton.

HOCKEY

Good defense on both UC II and Physio teams proved to make the game less exciting yesterday when UC came through with a 2-1 victory. Lil Batanoff shone for Physio and shot home the first goal of the game. UC came back a minute later with a marker by Pat Murton.

The second period saw scrambles first at one end and then the other but nothing spectacular came out of them. The game pepped up a little in the last period with some excitement in front of both nets. Bev Rush shot in the puck on a pass from Pat Murton for UC's final goal—and victory.

CHARIOTTEERING

Led by the women sportswriters (natch), The Varsity women stampeded past, through, over, between, and under all opponents yesterday, pulling their editor to the fore in the savagely contested contest.

The Sportswoman in verifying this statement told sputtering Skulemen that this was perfectly obvious to anyone 'on the sideline'. The red, greasy Skuie teams claimed that they (hic) saw a pink elephant which distracted them so much that they poured water on their own brethren and pulled Godiva (who, they claimed, was a Varsity reporter) from her horse.

The Intermural womens' ski meet will be held Sunday at the Varsity ski grounds for all the women's faculties. The Proudfoot Cup and intermural championship competitions will be held in the downhill and slalom events. Coon Sparrow will be on hand to select skiers for the intercollegiate womens' team.

CANNON INTACT TILL NOW MAY BE MELTED—GANG

Ticket Sales For ISS Week Begin Today

The University of Toronto's official ISS campaign opens today with the selling of one dollar blanket tickets. These tickets entitle the purchaser to attend all ISS activities on the campus this week. More than 200 taggers will be on the campus today asking for student donations.

What activities will be given to the students for a dollar? Plays, auction sales, concerts, raffles, and tea-dances are offered to the students.

Starts Today

The taggers will be out today selling the blanket tickets. The rest of the tickets will be sold through personal contact until Thursday. Following through today's activities will be a concert at the Therapy Huts from 1:30 till 2 p.m. Trinity's presentation of "The Alchemist" will present the ISS with the first play and evening attraction of the campaign at at 8:30 p.m. Proceeds from their production of "Saints Alive" will also be donated to the ISS campaign.

Vic promises to present daily attractions to the students with the blanket tickets. There will be a tea-dance at the Therapy Huts from 4-6 p.m., Tuesday afternoon, with the music supplied by the Eaton's Band Box.

Give Eye Exams

Optometry and Vic will give presentations on Wednesday, although their programs are not known except for free eye examinations. There will be entertainment in the J.C.R.

Thursday will be the big day for the holders of the blanket tickets. There will be a concert in Trinity. Another concert will be presented by the Medical Arts and Letters Society and the Musbacs in the Conservatory Theatre at 8 p.m.

On Friday the scheduled activity is the auction sale in Trinity.

The Occupational and Physio-Therapists are conducting a small campaign in the Therapy Huts. Although their buildings are too small to open to the university as a whole the girls have provided entertainment in their faculty for the entire week. They are having movies, raffles, and shows each day.

Skule Helps

The Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering have set aside one evening's performance of "Skule Night" to aid the ISS campaign. The entire proceeds of the Thursday, Feb. 17, performance will be donated to the ISS. Also, School will donate the proceeds from all three nights in the Tuck Shop in Hart House.

Other important developments in the week's activities are to be reported in The Varsity.

Hart House Committee To Sponsor Lectures On Debate Technique

The first of a series of four informal lectures on the debating methods will be given in Rm. 37, UC, at 1.10 p.m. today. The lecture, by Prof. D. M. Hayne, will be on the general aspects of public speaking. A second lecture, on Feb. 14, will deal with general aspects and rhetorical devices; the third, Feb. 21, on academic debating; the fourth, Feb. 28, on Parliamentary debating.

The first and third lectures will be delivered by Dr. Hayne, and the second and fourth by Prof. Gilbert Bagnani.

These informal lectures, which afford the only opportunity to study debating on the campus, are sponsored by the Hart House Debates Committee. They are open to women.

CLAMP ON L.P.P.

Montreal, Feb. 7 — (CUP) — The McGill L.P.P. Club has been denied the use of the McGill Union building for a period of five months effective as of noon last Thursday. Union House Committee regulation prohibits the sale and distribution of periodicals and pamphlets on Union property without authorization.

Captive Meds Head Praises Skulemen

By STAN FILLMORE and JACK GRAY

"Skulemen are a pretty good bunch of guys," declared Medical Society Vice-President Robert E. Hetherington, in an interview Saturday afternoon. The Varsity reporters were allowed to talk to Hetherington at a meeting arranged by his jailors.

"The boys have a lot of spirit and they certainly have good organization," Hetherington continued. He was referring to more than 500 Jaxmen who were organized to guard him from possible re-capture by Meds.

Abducted Thursday

Hetherington was abducted early Thursday evening and whisked to Ajax where he was held captive over the weekend. He is now being held in Toronto, Skule officials report.

Here is Hetherington's account of the snatch: "I was in my room at the frat, sleeping. One of the boys woke me up to tell me that there was somebody at the door to see me. This chap was standing on the verandah when I went down. I was rather annoyed that the fellow had not asked him in. When I opened the door he asked me, 'Are you Bob Hetherington?' I answered 'Yes,' and then—wham!"

At this point Skuleman interrupted to tell how two engineers had gone in the back door of the frat and come up behind Hetherington and pushed him out onto the verandah into the waiting arms of two more engineers who were holding a fish net.

"That's right," Hetherington continued. "They threw the net over me, and whisked me out into the back of a waiting truck. They had an overcoat there for me." Hetherington explained that at the time of the capture he was wearing only a shirt, a pair of grey flannels and his slippers.

Stop for Coffee

"They stopped once on the way to Ajax to buy me a cup of coffee and a chocolate bar. When we got to Ajax I was taken into a hut where there were about ten guys waiting for me. We sat around for awhile shooting the breeze and went to bed about three-thirty."

Hetherington told me how he had spent his time out at Ajax being shifted from place to place, eating in the cafeteria, and looking for a chance to escape. "I only had one chance and I muffed it," Hetherington said.

"Friday night a rumour swept through Ajax that Medical men were arranging an expedition to rescue me. Two buses appeared on the road and set off a general alarm. I was left in the room with only two guards. The window was open so I made a dive for it. I only got half way out before they got me and pulled me back. I don't think I could have escaped anyway. I only had forty-five cents in my pocket and I was still in my slippers."

Skule Organized

According to Skule accounts he certainly wouldn't have had any chance to escape. Skule was organized! "We had over 500 guys actually organized," a Skule official stated. "Men were on duty at every residence phone, we had a detail in the Taxi office on the road in to warn up if anyone came in, and there were barriers at every second residence on Queen's Road. It worked fine, and nothing happened."

The spokesman said that the false alarm had been caused by a bus-load of contestants for the inter-collegiate bridge tournament held last weekend at Ajax. "It almost ruined inter-collegiate relations" the spokesman declared.

There was one other false alarm, according to Hetherington. "This time they took no chances," he explained. "They put me in a trunk room. There was a lock on the inside of the door, and another on the outside. The room had no windows and just to be safe they put a man in with me. We played a couple of hands of rummy, but after awhile it got a little stuffy."

Hetherington complained that he had no privacy at all. "There were always people around no matter where I went," Hetherington said.

Why Hetherington?

Skule spokesmen, when asked why it had been Hetherington that had been snatched replied that he was the highest Medical Society official that lived in a frat. "It was not a question of who we got," the spokesmen stated, "We just wanted someone who would be a symbol of the Medical Society."

Hetherington said that he spent most of his time playing bridge. He also attended lectures on Friday morning. "They took me to a Chemistry Lecture and I corrected the professor on a fine point of medical chemistry. He didn't appreciate it, I guess he hadn't read The Varsity."

"They treated me very well,"

'Jever wonder what to do with the drama award plaques that are cluttering up your bedroom? Note what happened at Vic last week for an example.

General pandemonium broke out one day last week when the Cody Award, coveted inter-faculty drama prize mysteriously disappeared.

It was later turned up in the Vic Common Room. The reverse side was being used as a dart board.

Make Ashtrays Of Blunderbuss Meds Threaten

By JACK GRAY and STAN FILLMORE

We saw the Skule—oops, the Meds Cannon!

For two hours Friday night we sat and talked to members of the Femury Gang the group which snatched the Skule Cannon. The Femury Gang is an "activist group" within the Medical faculty and claims to represent all members of the Medical Society. They have renamed the weapon the Meds Cannon.

Call Preceded Rendezvous

The interview on Friday came as the result of a mysterious telephone call to The Varsity Thursday night. The call disclosed that the cannon was in the possession of the so-called "Femury Gang," and that if The Varsity was willing to "co-operate" a rendezous "could be arranged" at which The Varsity reporters could see the Cannon and talk to "the men who did the job."

We were told to stand by a certain telephone at 5.30 p.m. Friday and wait for a call that would give us further instructions. At 5.45 the call came. Arrangements were that we should go to the corner of Avenue Road and Yorksville at 6 p.m. "sharp." We, along with The Varsity photographer, were to stand on the corner in a line, with coat collars turned up and our hands in our pockets. We were warned that if there were any Skulemen around the Femury Gang would drive right on, and that the "proper disciplinary steps" would be taken against The Varsity.

Blindfolded Immediately

A few minutes after six, a big black limousine drew up to the corner. Masked figures leaped from the car, pushed us into the back seat and we were off. Immediately, paper sacks were jammed over our heads and were given femurs to hold "to get you into the proper mood." A drawling voice that seemed to come from the front seat informed us that we would "meet the men who did it and see the little cannon."

Several times we attempted to raise the paper bags to see where we were, but each time we were rapped over the knuckles with a femur.

For forty-five minutes we raced through the city streets, backtracking to throw off any pursuers, and stopping entirely at times to see if certain suspicious looking cars would pass. When we arrived at the hideout we were led from the car into a building, still blindfolded. When everything was ready the paper sacks were removed.

Hideout a Dungeon

We were in a small, concrete room, entirely surrounded by members of the Femury Gang. Before us, in the centre of the room was a small, varnished, kitchen table and on the table, lying on a Meds sweater, and flanked by two candles set in gin bottles, was the "Meds" Cannon.

"I guess you want the whole story," said the drawling voice again, this time identified by other members as "Number 1." Meanwhile bottles of beer were distributed to all present.

We asked to be shown the man who had actually taken the cannon. "He is here among us," Number 1 said, "but he cannot be identified." There was a murmur among the members. "Right," demanded Number 1. "Right as Rain!" chorused the others.

Today's Need

"Certain if knowledge brings the sword,
That knowledge takes the sword away".

These words of a famous poet are appropriate today especially if we back our thought and knowledge with action. The opportunity for action is at hand.

Today I.S.S. starts a campaign to raise $10,000—approximately over a dollar from every full-time student. Part of the money raised will be spent on relief, giving the necessities of life to a student in a devastated land. The effect of such a gift, freely offered, is hard for a Canadian student to understand when he has not suffered under similar circumstances. To receive some food when you are hungry, medicine when you are sick, or books when you have none, evokes a feeling of gratitude which will remain unassailed by political currents. The facts are plain: they need our help for continued existence and continued study. We cannot fail them.

A second part of the money will be used for scholarships. In western Germany there are quartered almost a million people, mainly from the Baltic States, Poland, and Eastern Germany. The resentment against these unwanted, homeless people by the resident Germans amounts to hatred. To bring D.P.'s from the deplorable conditions of their crowded camps to a new free life in Canada is a humanitarian purpose of the highest order.

But of different purpose is the provision of scholarships for European students to study at this university. No culture or society can live within itself, and these guests would bring welcome additions to our thought and culture. They will be carefully chosen for potential leadership in the land of their birth, and according to the amount they could contribute to our university life. To give these European students the opportunity of partaking of our way of life would be beneficial to them and of mounting influence on international affairs in the future.

The purposes are high; and the need is urgent. Individually it is a small sacrifice. Collectively we can be of significant influence. Let's pull together. Support the I.S.S. campaign.

Colgate Wins In Swimming Over Varsity

Spectators at Saturday night's swim meet in Hart House were left wondering if Colgate University is a replica of canal-studded Venice, when the visiting Americans captured all but one event to dunk the Varsity natators, 54-21.

The Blue victory came in the 300 medley relay in which Colgate was disqualified for an incorrect changeover. Paced by backstroker Joe Reiners, the Maroon team completed the distance in 3:07.8, four seconds under the intercollegiate record.

Colgate captain Stewart Miller won his specialties—the 220- and 440-free style events. He swam the 440 in 5:20.2, twelve seconds below the intercollegiate mark.

Colgate's Walker also scored two firsts. His time of 56.2 seconds in the 100-yard free style tied the intercollegiate record. He also won the 50-yard free style sprint.

The Blue squad only collected three seconds in the individual events. Sig Wigle, who last week cracked the senior interfaculty backstroke record, finished behind Colgate's Ralph Coxhead in the 150 backstroke. Varsity's Thom was edged out on the last optional dive by Simons of Colgate, while John McEwan stood second in the 440 free style.

Varsity swimming results:—
300 Medley—1, Toronto; 2, Buffalo. Time—3 25.4.
220 Free Style—1, Miller (C); 2, Strickter (C); 3, Teskey (T). Time—2 27.4.
50 Free Style—1, Walker (C); 2, Hall (C), 3, Fydell (T). Time—24.4.
Diving—1, Simons (C); 2, Thom (7); 3, Wortley (T).
100 Free Style—1, Walker (C); 2, Strickter (C); 3, Crang (T), Arnold (T) tied. Time—56.2.
150 Back Stroke—1, Coxhead (C); 2, Wigle (T); 3, McCallum (T). Time—1 39.
200 Breast Stroke—1, R. Reiners (C); 2, Burr (C); 3, Smith (T). Time—2:37.4.
440 Free Style—1, Miller (C); 2, McEwan (T); 3, Hubbard (T). Time 5.20.2.
400 Sprint Relay—1, Colgate; 2, Toronto.

Forestry Group Journeys North On Woods Trek

Seventy University of Toronto III yr. Faculty of Forestry students left over the weekend on their annual trek into the north woods to compile reports on logging and pulp wood operations.

Approximately 20 of the students left Friday night for lumber and pulp wood camps operating in the areas around Kapuskasing, Iroquois Falls, North Bay, Temagami and Long Lac. The rest of the group left Saturday and Sunday for points in the Huntsville district. Three of the students are going to Quebec.

The trip is made to compile a 5,000-word report on all types of logging. Each forestry undergrad must turn it in as part of his third year work. Photographs of the operations must be included in the report.

In former years the foresters went singly or in groups of two to firms with which they had made arrangements on their own accord. This year they are going in groups of eight to ten to firms who have asked that the students be sent to observe operations on their limits.

The finances for the expedition are partly met from subsidies received from the DVA and the firms themselves. The students make up the rest.

In their report, the student observers note the type of equipment used, the utilization of the product, number of systems used in the operations, (there are 15 different types), and the method of logging with reference to site conditions, (that is whether clear cutting or selective cutting has been carried out). The students make comments and express their own opinions about the operations.

Last year's group worked out a cost schedule, which was a comparison of costs in the various types of logging and pulp wood operations. Some of the boys made comments on the accommodations which the firms supplied for the bushworkers. One student's report was published in the Canadian Lumberman.

R. A. Smith, IV Forestry student, who was on the trek last year, said the boys were in for some good hearty meals during their stay in the lumber camps. He said the camp where he stayed last year, they ate six times a day, three heavy meals and three lunches. Breakfast begins at 6 a.m.

Last year one of the groups was burned out and lost all their equipment. The firm reimbursed them this year.

The students will be away a week.

BLUE FENCERS LOSE

University of Buffalo's fencing team pinned the Varsity fencers to the floor for the second week in a row as they won the foil epee and sabre events for a final score of 15-9.

Grecian Student Canteen

In this dining room of the university students' club at Salonika, Greece, 500-600 students eat every day. This canteen has a capacity for 1000 students, but because of lack of equipment and food, only this smaller number can be served. ISS funds are to be used to aid similar European student activities.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas the European student faces the ordeal of intellectual and spiritual re-organization;

And whereas the staff and students of the University of Toronto recognize that they have a peculiar responsibility in supporting and strengthening the freedom of the mind and the freedom of the spirit throughout the world;

And where as the International Student Service has shown, both by its ideals and by its practical endeavor, that it is an invaluable agency for discharging this collective responsibility;

Therefore, be if proclaimed that the week of February 7-12 be designated "I.S.S. Week" within the University of Toronto, and that the members of the University will hearken to the appeal by I.S.S. that will be launched at that time.

SIDNEY SMITH,
President.

Annual Liquid Air Lecture Presented By Dr. Satterly

Professor John Satterly gave his annual liquid air lecture on Friday afternoon to a packed house in McLennan lab. Any lecturers who found their classes depleted could have found the reason at Prof. Satterly's lecture.

The professor opened his lecture by singing Hymn no. 698 of the United Church Hymnary in a cracked baritone accompanied by a student on a harmonica. The hymn was to illustrate the connection between religion and liquid air.

To show the danger of contact between skin and liquified air, Prof. Satterly threw some on the front row of students and asked them to notice how white their skin became. He continued with various spectacular experiments such as cooking a stew in the liquid and spraying mouthfuls of it over his audience.

When questioned on retirement, Professor Satterly merely exclaimed "Bah!" His remark indicated that he intends to give the lecture again next year.

Dutch Government Indonesian Actions Rapped By Forum

Dutch Indonesian policy was condemned by two members, and not actively supported by one, of the four-member forum who discussed the Indonesian situation in O.C.E. Auditorium last week under the auspices of the Toronto branch of the United Nations of Canada.

Single Supporter

The lone speaker to support Dutch policy was Mr. L. Schlitchting, press attache of the Netherlands Embassy in Ottawa. The forum consisted of Mr. Schlichting, Mr. U. Nayar, an Indian doing graduate work in sanitary engineering at the university, Sayad Almassawa, a member of the Secretariat of the Provisional Indonesian Federal Government, and Andrew Brewin, president of the Ontario C.C.F. party.

Desire Federation

Concerning the discussion topic, "Do the majority of Indonesians want a republic or a Netherlands federation?" none of the speakers supported the idea of a centralized republic, and Mr. Schlichting and Mr. Almassawa said a federation of many states is the desire of most Indonesians.

The Netherlands government representative justified recent Dutch "police action" in Indonesia on the grounds that raiding bands from the Republic of Indonesia, "too powerful even for their own government to control," have infiltrated repeatedly into areas surrounding the Republic. Mr. Almassawa substantiated Mr. Schlichting's statement that these bands killed scores of representatives of the native states surrounding the Republic.

Action Condemned

Mr. Brewin condemned the Netherlands government for resorting to force, and thus weakening the United Nations. He said: "The essence of the United Nations is the establishing of the rule of law, which means the abandonment of aggression. It also means the acceptance of third-party judgment. The Netherlands government has defied such judgment twice."

In asking the Dutch to withdraw from Indonesia, Mr. Nayar appealed to "the basic rights of freedom and liberty." Mr. Almassawa complained that the U.N. Security Council has tended to listen only to the arguments of the Netherlands and the Republic of Indonesia, forgetting the existence of 13 native federal states who will also be involved in any settlement.

Political Events Transform Canada To Larger Power

Major difference between the foreign policies of Australia and Canada is that Australia follows a "small power" line, but Canada has shifted into the "larger power orbit." So declared Stewart Jamieson of the Australian High Commissioner's Office in his address on "Australia—Outpost of Freedom," to the Political Science and International Relations Clubs, Friday.

Canada Shifts

The reasons for Canada's shift to the side of the larger powers, according to Jamieson, are (1) she is the largest per capita trading power in the world, (2) she has taken the lead in supporting the western powers pact, and (3) she possesses the third largest atomic pile in the world.

"Both Canada and Australia," he said, "have two important functions. Canada interprets the big powers to the little powers and acts as an intermediary between the U.S. and the U.K., keeping them both on the same general line of policy. Australia is a spot of white in a region of brown, it is a bridge between the west and the far east."

Peace Possibility

Australia, Jamieson said, believes that all is not over between Russia and her satellites and the West, that there is still a possibility of getting the East and West together. While the Canadians are sick of trying to get along with the Soviet delegates, he said that the Australians are still willing to try.

Australia can still afford to take a line of higher ideals in foreign policy. "She is lucky," he said, "to be free enough to take such a high moral stand." The big powers say it is easy for Australia to criticize because she does not have the responsibility that the big powers have.

There is no basic variation between the final ideals of Canada and Australia, he emphasized.

CANADIAN GAME GETS VOTE

Fredericton, Feb. 7—(CUP)—In a plebiscite held last week to determine whether the University of New Brunswick would switch to Canadian football from English rugby, 83 per cent of the votes cast were in favor of UNB playing the Canadian game this fall.

FORESTERS' CLUB

The Foresters' Club will hold a meeting Tuesday, Feb. 8, in the Debates Room of Hart House from 8 p.m. Speaker will be Mr. J. B. Matthews, chief forester, Abitibi Power and Paper Co.

Joe Potts

Genius, Gentleman, Or Jerk?

BY THE FEATURE EDITOR

The young gentleman with the military manner and moustache to match, huffed in his brass-knuckle voice at the meek clerk: "I want to see the mayor."

The clerk asked who was calling.

"Joe Potts, S.A.C.," Potts puffed.

Sure enough, Joe blew the mayor's door down — almost. He walked his way into a Board of Control meeting and talked his way into having a very large sign placed outside the City Hall for the Homecoming Weekend — a privilege reserved for national emergencies. This was Joe Potts, S.A.C. in action.

What makes Potts percolate?

As the now coon-coatless Potts is himself, nobody can be impartial to him. They either like or dislike him. He has been called a genius and a fool; a gentleman and a boor. One thing is obvious, wherever Potts goes he stands out like a pinball machine lighted up.

Potts Profile

The Potts story has its beginning 23 years ago in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. Born Joseph Henry, he soon became just plain Joe. Nothing spectacular happened when Joe was born, except that he had a twin brother born 15 minutes later. (I'm second youngest"). Oddly enough younger brother Art is completely different. He is short, blond and has a handlebar moustache. ("We're so different, that we always get along.)

Joe's father is a retired Major-General and is now with the Department of Veterans' Affairs. He was a dairy professor in civilian life.

In high school Potts had his first fling at leadership as student-council head. As school-chum Malcolm McDonald explains, "Nobody ever wanted to run against Joe. Maybe the explanation to his two-viewed personality is that he is old fashioned — he's enthusiastic."

He played championship rugby as middle an commanded the local cadet contingent. As a Boy Scout he led salvage drives. ("This was the first time I headed a committee.")

Joe has been called committee crazy. But he has proven to himself and to others that he can get results. The spectacular growth of the Potts-headed Blue and White society is evidence of this. ("With Committees you avoid a schlomozle".)

Oddly enough, Joe was a private during the entire war years, having enlisted at the pre-moustache age of seventeen. Soon after V.E. day he was made a lieutenant. On entering university he was offered the position of adjutant in the C.O.T.C. He is now a captain adjutant.

As much a part of Joe as his bull-frog voice, was the famous coon-skin coat, now a pile of ashes on the front campus. It began its career on his grandfather's back, worn while walking to work in Montreal's St James street. ("It was a good coat in the old days"). The Maj. Gen. wore it when he was still a professor. It then turned up in his brother's wardrobe in British Columbia. It was the spring of 1946 that it arrived by express as a gift. At first Joe didn't know what to do with it, but as has been seen, they soon fitted together like the Smith Bros. do to cough drops.

Joe's first year at college was spent in an attempt to find what suited him best. ("You've got to get your old finger and nose into things.") Perhaps his chief failing is his eternal curiosity, "to find what makes things tick".

In second he became secretary of NEAT JOB in a cover-all-coat ... we mean Northway's new Gabardines, zipped in lining of chamois keeps 'em warm as fur, comes out and you have a campus leader for Spring. Peter Pan collar is the one you like in smart new fashion futures, the swing back very good, the entire set-up a worthy buy because you'll finish the Spring season with it, start the winter next year without a winter coat problem.

WALKING-OUT SKIRTS .. AT WATT's, Park Plaza ... they're assembled in one grand collection which gives you an idea of how imaginative designers have been on the subject. Some of them have three pleats on one side, no other detail, some come in all-round kilts, some plain, some swing ... tartans, plain woollens, tweeds in all the new varieties of sportswear fabrics F. J. Watt, Sportswear specialize in such wear-it-all day items, are also showing masses of sweaters, ranging from 3.95 on and up. And remember that Watt's are pretty good at arranging budget payments if budget financing is more convenient.

NEXT TIME you're in the mood for an ice cream dessert, make it Acme's Tudor Tudor is not just another trade name in ice cream, it is a new development in ice cream technique, and you'll be glad you investigated. Try the Grape-Pineapple combination for instance and if you have gourmet tendencies you will be very, very happy New flavour is not like any flavour you have ever tasted, but the chances are you will go on re-ordering it for some time. It is, in fact, very delicious indeed. As is the Fruit Salad combination, the Crushed Strawberry job and the others. This Tudor ice cream is Something New in Your Life.

LEST A LADY'S enthusiasm for the new liberty in tie designs carry her out of control why not suggest that she take her Valentine gift shopping if such there is likely to be, to such staunch advisers as Teasdall's. Also Teasdall's will provide a steady hand in the matter of sock-choosing which can, believe this shopper, get pretty imaginative. Teasdall's specialize in grooming the campus man, have opinions to impart to ladies on the subject, and are always ready to oblige in deferred payment questions if properly approached. 804 Yonge Street, at Bloor.

AND SINCE ST. VALENTINE'S DAY is a day for making known one's personal preferences, a phone call to Jerry Cooper will have a box of cut flowers delivered to the preferred one with a minimum of toil and a maximum of eclat. Jerry Cooper is an old hand at choosing the sort of flowers that make a girl think well of your judgment, and he is also happy to build a corsage which adds up to the same result. Jerry's at the Park Plaza corner is a friendly answer to the purposeful lad who wants to do the thing right.

ANNUAL ACTIVITY AT SCHEUER'S around about Valentine's Day indicates that it is still standard practice to give an engagement ring if circumstances are appropriate at this time of year. Scheuer's feature a specially priced group at one hundred dollars, one selective set with three beautifully matched blue-white diamonds, finely mounted in white or yellow gold. They feature another group in solitaires, also very good to look at, for the money. Go to 131 Yonge Street, facing Temperance and compare values with others around town. Scheuer's policy is to buy for cash, sell for cash, hand on savings in value.

THERE'S SOMETHING almost Latin in scope, about the new blouse'n skirt styles for evening, semi-formal. Choose as plain a set as you like, build it up with costume jewellery or any old bit of colour you hanker for. Basic thing is to make sure your blouse and skirt are well cut, classics to begin with, add your own to taste. The Evangeline Shops are top-drawer people in the blouse and skirt field, can offer a wide choice at prices which are very kind to the pocketbook. Also there's plenty of interest in casual costume jewellery these days, assembled for spectator-sports wear.

JOAN RIGBY IS your shopping ground if you are looking 'way 'way ahead in the matter of fashion prestige. Not only do J. R. things set the pace in their own right, they are so constructed as to keep right on being fashionably secure after the third or fourth year of steady service. H. Adaskin

The Canadian violinist Harry Adaskin and pianist Frances Marr, his wife, brought a new twist to concert custom at Eaton Auditorium Friday night.

Mr. Adaskin chose a concerto, the D major Beethoven work for his program's entire first half. In a quarter-hour down-to-earth discussion before his bow touched the strings, he explained why.

Because the piano is a poor substitute, violinists rarely include a concerto in their solo tours. Since Canada maintains but three symphony orchestras, Mr. Adaskin held that a soloist would wait a long time to play the Beethoven or any other concerto.

In an engaging, highly-inflected voice, the University of British Columbia's chief music professor opened our eyes to the structure of Beethoven's Concerto in D Major, to its history and to sonata form —then he opened our ears.

Pianist Frances Marr set forth the thinly-scored exposition by a subdued, but crystal-clear statement of the primary theme. Quiet clarity characterized her performance throughout the night. Not until the Rondo (movement 3) did she finally let go . . . where her crisp leggero and acute damper control brought the Concerto to a rousing close.

The Adaskin violin vents an earthy, husky timbre, from which he drew a florid, lyric tone in movement two, which he explained was in ternary or song form (A-B-A-C). Professor Adaskin's keen sense of melody and phrase, his mild vibrato and knife-like trills and runs combined with a fidelity to the score that most Canadian violinists will find hard to beat. This fidelity was no doubt enhanced by having the score onstage.

Barbara Pentland's new tone cacophony "Vistas" had both piano and violin striving for something that certainly wasn't there. Jean Coulthard's "Poem" fared better with bits of melody here and there, but the structure eluded me. Best new piece on the program was Henry Brant's re-arrangement of his "Symphony About the 1930's" 2nd movement, which he termed "Ballad". Here were unity of theme and real note-to-note continuity, that Deems Taylor once called melodic line.

Vic Glee Club

Our faith in the singableness of the English language has been restored. In their "Five Hundred Years of Music", admirably compressed into an hour and a quarter, the Victoria Glee Club presented a refreshing programme of English song ranging from "Sumer is Icumin in" (John of Fornsete) to Stanford's impressionistic "Blue Bird". Of the earlier works "Now is the Month of Maying" (Morley) was the most effectively sung, with Gibbon's "Silver Swan" losing by a nose. Among the modern compositions Sullivan's "O Gladsome Light" and the orchestral "My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land" (Elgar) were outstanding.

Conductor Gilbertansullivan Ridout lacked neither the courage nor the musicianship necessary to undertake a complete programme of unaccompanied songs. If the choir seemed unrelaxed, which tended to make the sopranos somewhat brittle, it was probably due to the absence of instrumental support and to the constant effort to sustain pitch.

No one can deny that Francis de Carrol, soloist with the Glee Club, has tremendous vocal potentialities. The sound he produced was nice, just as plush-voiced crooners are nice, but there was no more evidence of the art of singing than there is when one warbles in the bath-tub. The spirit and style of the music was utterly disregarded; there was no depth to his interpretations; his high notes were harsh, his breathing poor. If he sang with ease, it was not the effortlessness of consummate art but of indifference. And why, lad, why choose such tired warhorses? Cheer up, Mr. de Carrol, we think you could sing if you tried!

Glenn Gould

It cannot be said, on the whole, that this season's Friday afternoon recitals at Hart House have been uniformly well attended, a circumstance which is probably causing some concern to the management. It is to be deplored inasmuch as the recitals, apart from one unnerving exception (well, and a possible second), have been of as high a standard of excellence as you'd find elsewhere in the city. Provided, of course, you aren't still fascinated by the flashy goings-on of the top-drawer visitors downtown.

However, word must have got round about Glenn Gould, because a large audience enthusiastically received his piano recital last Friday. With his opening numbers Mr. Gould made it clear that here was a teen-ager who couldn't be damned with faint praise as a child prodigy. A generously endowed youth (his introductory commentaries would be the despair of a public speaking class), he is a sound musician as well as an adroit pianist. It was possible to relax in the confidence that there was no danger of his trying to pull off something cute or precious. He clearly has ideas of his own, all of them artistic, which he is not the least self-conscious about conveying to you. I recommend that you hear him at the earliest opportunity . . . before someone takes him aside to point out that the best pianists get away with more objective and less strenuous performances.

Although forearmed with strictures as to the advisability of entrusting a Beethoven sonata (81A) so avowedly programmatic to the hands of the very young, I am left without a decent complaint to offer. I find it difficult to explain that this sonata was performed with a profound insight into its form, and yet with a freedom of treatment which underlined its emotional content. "L'Absence" (second movement) was a moving experience.

I do not think that the "Variations Serieuses" of Mendelssohn quite came off: it smelled, ever so slightly, of the Lamp. Mr. Gould might be well advised to let this thing jell for a decade or so until he is, say, in his twenties.

Alan Atkins.

Today's forum of the Labor Progressive Club of UC will hear guest speakers from the national convention of the Labor Progressive Party. This convention is the highest body of the L.P.P. It has the power to criticize national leaders of the party and to elect the national committee of the party. Campus Shows

Health's A-Poppin'

The P. and H. E. People are as natural as the date today. Their healthy Health's a-Poppin' review which appeared in the Hart House theatre for the first time last week was two hours of uniformly excellent entertainment.

The more traditional college shows can learn much from their younger brother. P. and H. E. had something new to sell and did it well. Their humour was at all times fresh and bright. Even without an orchestra their musical numbers were melodious and soothing.

The Phizzedettes are probably the only girls on the campus who can do interpretative dancing and make it look like something. This modern type of expression combined with a number of well-synchronized leg routines was enough to keep the audience applauding enthusiastically. Then again, with girls who look like Ruthy Pullan and Timy Martin, who wouldn't want to show appreciation?

It is difficult to pick out any one comedy star in the many-starred production. A reprise on a "Button's and Bows" dance is the cleverest thing of its kind I have seen to date. Dannylchuck the wolf, and the narrator in the 'Peter and the Wolf' sequence were performed with wonderful enthusiasm. The Peter act consisted of one laugh after another. By now, we think Al Goodman does Durante better than Durante.

Pat Watson is to be congratulated for his satisfying choral direction. Betty Johnson's vocal solos showed her wide range and ability.

There were much gymnastics in the health-college show, all of it better than professional. We are convinced that John Laxton who balanced himself, a ladder and an assorted number of implements on a very thin wire has muscles on his muscles. Tulley and Goodman are as at home somersaulting on a tramboline as most of us are lying in a hammock.

Much credit is due to the very busy muscle men and maidens for producing one of the best college shows of this or any other year. Director John Life is to be complimented for the perfect pacing and able direction that made for an always entertaining fast-moving review.

the U.C. Lit. Still carrying out his adjutant's duties, he directed the C.O.T.C. Ball, bringing it up to its former pre-war level. The C.O.T.C. drill hall has often been called Pott's gymnasium.

It was in this year that he made his first appearance in politics. He became publicity-director of the Liberal Club, and is now vice-president of the Liberal Committee of University students in Ontario. Although he is the first politician in his family, he seems to be as natural a politician as Mackenzie King.

Having worked in Liberal headquarter this summer he is now well known to most Liberal big-wigs. ("They sometimes call me Pottsie").

As S.A.C. rep for U.C., he has taken on the positions of Blue and White head, and All Varsity review chairman. Both of these were new activities and no one can argue with their success.

Joe Plus Twitch

Personally Joe is always friendly, and sometimes rough. Six foot one in height he seems to favor bowties. By habit he sometimes winks while speaking and twitches his cheek and moustache while shaking hands.

Many have tried to explain him and often he has received 'titles". He has been referred to as 'The male debutante of U.C.' and 'the Joe that wished his last name was College'.

Where does his future lie? Definitely in politics. ("I wouldn't mind being Prime Minister, but it's not my ambition").

Mr. St. Laurent, just warm up that seat. But don't get comfortable.

Cannon Intact

us the "true story" of the Cannon's capture. His tale:

"Here's how it happened. Skule heard Wycliffe was coming down to take the Cannon. Skulemen were scared. On their knees they asked some Medsmen to defend them and take care of the Cannon.

"Now they say we stole it. This hurts us deeply. Right, Fellows?" "Right as Rain! ! !"

"The Cannon wasn't taken to the Meds Building at all," continued Number 17. "Our boys sat in the Engineering Society office all afternoon, wearing Skule sweaters and guarding the Cannon. It wasn't till after five o'clock that the Cannon was taken from the campus."

Meds Horrified

At this point, Number 1 stepped forward again. "We are horrified at Skule's tactics in kidnapping a member of the Medical Society. He had nothing whatsoever to do with the capture of the cannon. We think Skulemen are uncouth, unscholarly, and effeminate to stoop to such low things as kidnapping. Right fellows?" "Right as Rain" came the thundering reply, and it took several minutes for the echoes to stop resounding in that small, dank, lit-lit room.

We asked them if the Meds Cannon would be returned if Hetherington was released. Number 1 replied "The Femury Gang unanimously declares that the Cannon will be melted down to make ashtrays if Hetherington is not returned. We will not even consider negotations until the Vice-President is back."

We suggested that Hetherington, also, might be melted down. "But what kind of ashtrays could you make out of him? We can always get a new vice-president but they can't get a new Cannon."

Cannon To Be Fired

Members of the gang also told us that the Cannon will be fired off every day this week, at 1:15 p.m. "We would advise all faculties to be ready to set their watches by the boom of the Meds Cannon at 1.15 beginning Monday! It will be useless for Skulemen to try to recapture the Cannon. After it is fired it will be immediately taken from the vicinity of the campus."

"Right, fellows?" came the call. The walls shook as the Femury Gang came back with "Right as Rain! !"

The Fermury Gang then announced the interview was over. The paper sacks were jammed over our heads again, and after another long, hectic ride through the city we were pushed out of the back seat of the car at the corner of College and University. The Femury gang roared away in their black limousine into the night.

Pullman Porter: "Brush you off, sir?"

Mart Kenney: "No thanks. I'll get off in the usual manner."

Negotiations are now being conducted by Skule and The Medical Society to arrange a trade — the Meds Cannon for Skule captive Bob Hetherington.

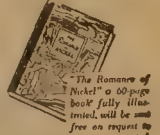
60 YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

1889 1949

The pioneer woman made her own soap. Water seeping through wood ashes in a barrel or piece of hollow log, produced lye. Soap was made by boiling this lye with fat in an iron kettle. In the soap plants of today, soap is made by boiling vegetable oils with caustic soda (lye). Salt is added to cause the excess alkali and by-products to settle to the bottom. Lye and salt corrode most metal vessels. Corrosion affects the color, purity and keeping qualities of soap. So most vessels and containers are made of Nickel alloys. They resist corrosion, last longer, protect the purity and color of the soap.

Nickel Brings Dollars to Canada

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.



These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

Varsity 2nd In Intercoll. Bridge Meet

A team from Queen's University won the third annual Intercollegiate bridge tournament Saturday afternoon and evening in Hart House.

The members of the winning team an first holders of the Evening Telegram trophy were Les Voynich, Bill Lyttle, Bob Frost and Jack Warrell.

The tournament, won in 1947 by Queen's and in 1948 by Varsity, was the biggest ever this year with 17 teams from Toronto, Western, Ajax, McMaster, Queen's, McGill, Carleton College and the University of Ottawa competing.

Proceedings got under way Friday afternoon with the arrival of the players at Ajax, where they were housed.

The same night the Intercollegiate pairs championship was played with Eric Murray and Don MacTavish of McMaster winning. Earl Lefebre and Bill Mayo of the University of Ottawa were second.

In the team game the next day, Queen's were on top with 31½ points with a Varsity team of Bill Lim, Fred Whitehead, Paul Schweitzer and Bob Whitten only one point behind. A second Queen's team of Bob Clayton, John Quonce, Bill Campbell and Phil Hooper were third with teams from Western, Toronto and McMaster tied for fourth place.

At a meeting of the Canadian Intercollegiate Bridge League on Saturday morning, it was decided that next year's tournament will be held at Queen's.

Juniors Edge Kitchener In 'A' Night Tilt 46 to 36

Varsity Juniors were never headed as they swept to a 46-36 conquest of Kitchener Juniors in the exhibition preliminary game at Athletic Night Saturday night in Hart House.

Building up a 31-19 lead at half time, the Blues held on despite a determined second half drive by the Kitchener quintet. But the visitors had nothing to match the versatility of Johnny Braithewaite who counted 13 points for the Blues—10 in the first half—or Dancy who added another 12 Ten of his were also in the first half.

Braithewaite barely under six feet, had little trouble picking off rebounds from both backboards as he leaped above the clutching fingers of the Kitchener players.

Bonsell and Brown each racked up seven points for Varsity and looked good both ways. Glover picked off four, Bernstein two and Hamilton one.

Ken Berlet was high scorer for the Kitchener team with 12 points to his credit, and he threatened every time he was on the court Joe Fedy snared eight. Joe Karai six, Hett five Armour and Miehm two apiece and Lavigne one.

Montreal Wins Twice In Hockey Sorties

Fickle Luck Helps Both, Blues Blast McGill 66-52

By HANK WESTCOTT

It may not be a good idea to change horses in mid-stream, but Lady Luck did it Saturday night at Athletic night. Even with luck against them in the second half, Varsity senior basketball team came up with an impressive 66-52 win over McGill for their first win of the intercollegiate season. It ties McGill and Varsity for second place in the intercollegiate standings—behind Western.

The fickle "Lady" smiled benignly on the Blues for the first two terms, and they made plenteous use of her to rack up a 35-9 half-time lead. They hooped 40 per cent of their shots and completely outplayed the McGills in every department. It looked like Varsity might better the 68-17 drubbing Western handed McGill Friday night.

Luck Changes Horses

But in the second half, Madam Luck aimed most of her affectionate overtures at the Redmen. They were a changed team, playing an aggressive fast-breaking game that paid off with 43 points for the half.

The Blues made up in skill what they lacked in luck in the second half, hooping 31 points, to keep their lead throughout the game. The closest McGill ever came to the Blues was 10 points midway through the fourth quarter—before Varsity recaptured their first period scoring hunger.

Varsity bounded into the lead right from the opening whistle and potted 13 points before McGill snared a basket. The first quarter score was 19-2.

The payoff twins, Glen Pettinger and Ed Brennan, were the big scorers for the Blues with Pettinger bagging 16 and Brennan 13. Both played a harrying defensive game, several times stealing the ball from a McGill player. They dazzled the fans with their nifty passing displays too. By halftime the whole house was smiling but Ed Brennan. He always scowls.

Johnny McManus again showed he's about the smoothest ball-handler on the circuit, which every one knows—and also showed he's a set shot artist, which every one didn't know. His long shots were worth 10 points.

Bill LaChance added another 10 for the Blues and toiled expertly in the rebound department. Doug Tyndall, the other centre, bagged 11, and played well throughout. Jack Gray with three, Bill Stockman with two and Wally Zeaton with one were the other Blue marksmen.

Meyer Bloom was the best of the

He Tried

McGill didn't fare very well in their trip into Upper Canada over the week-end, but it was not because Meyer Bloom didn't try. He was among the top scorers Friday night against Western with two points and paced the McGill marksmen against Varsity with 14.

We Say We Win So Does Buffalo Both Are Official

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The wrestling teams from the University of Toronto and Buffalo both went away happy from the wrestling meet at the Athletic Night in Hart House Saturday night. According to Canadian rules, the University of Toronto mat men were the winners 16-13, while according to the N.C.A.A. rules which the Buffalo men follow, the visitors won by an 18-16 count.

But since Varsity was the host for the Yanks, they fought according to Canadian rules, thereby declaring Varsity as the winners. University of Buffalo's records must state the outcome of the meet following the N.C.A.A. rules and when they return home they will officially be the winners.

With five points for a fall and three for a decision, Varsity totalled 16 points with Buffalo capturing 13. N.C.A.A. rules state that a team shall consist of eight men and since Varsity had only seven weight classes, Buffalo claimed five extra points by default, and according to their way of thinking, they won 18-16.

Confusing isn't it.

Varsity Wins Four

Oswald of Buffalo fell Harry Lubbock after twelve seconds in the third round to give Buffalo the first five points. Bob Leewright got three of the points back by getting the decision over Stewart of Buffalo. Walter Cassels added five more points to the Varsity's score when he defeated Smith by fall with 30 seconds to go in the final round. In the 145 pound class, Krysczuk gave five more points to his team when he fell Jack Kirkup of Varsity at 1.18 of the third round.

Bernis Shaver and Cesar gave the best performance of the evening in the 155 pound class. Shaver of Varsity came out on top when he dropped Cesar in the third round.

Buffalo took the 165 pound bout when Price won the decision from George Davies. Hugh Graham gave Varsity their fourth win of the night when the referee gave him the nod over O'Donnell.

Buffalo Here For 2 Games On Wednesday

For all those unfortunate sports fans who are chronically unable to procure tickets for the regular athletic nights, the Athletic Association are putting on a special Sports Night Wednesday.

The University of Buffalo will play a return basketball engagement with the Varsity Blues while an added attraction will be a contest between the Intermediates and the Buffalo freshmen.

Before Christmas the Blues lost a close decision to Buffalo but that was before the team really started to roll. After their narrow loss to Western last week the Blues are anxious for a win over an American rival to put them in shape for their next league start against Queen's. This will be their second last home game of the year, the last being Feb. 26 against Queen's. After the games there will be dancing till 12 o'clock. There will be the usual 50 cent admission fee and tickets will be sold only at the door.

McGill Rags Ball To Stop U.W.O. Lose By 68-17

By CY. LEWIS
McGill Daily Staff Writer
Special to The Varsity

London, Feb. 6—McGill's luckless Redmen fell before a mighty Western onslaught last Friday eve as the mighty Mustangs trampled them, 68-17, to move far into the lead of the Senior Intercollegiate standings.

The McGill squad were able to sink only five baskets in what was probably the weakest showing of any team ever to face the Mustangs. McGill's shooting was erratic and the Western checking system was efficient. The Mustangs also frequently capitalized on opportunities for fast breaks and this was another glaring weakness in the McGill defence.

Losers Rag Ball

The McGill men became so desperate in the closing minutes of play, that despite the fact they were on the losing end of the score, they began to freeze the ball in the hope of preventing any further Western scoring.

Metras dressed only seven men for the fray and they all played well. Smooth Bob Phibbs was high man for the Purple and White with 17 points, while Captain Paul Thomas and teammate Ford were next with 13 points each. George Wearring was in for all the rebounds under both his own and the McGill hoop.

Line-ups:—

McGill — Plewelling, Caldwell (3), Endmen, Wilson (4), Fraser (3), Berger (1), Godel (2), Duford (2), Bloom (2).

Western—Phibbs (17), Ford (13), Mathews (1), Wearring (6), Thomas (13), Arnott (8), cott (10).

Ann Sharp Proudfoot Cup-Winner

Newmarket, Feb. 6—(Staff)—Sunday afternoon saw 25 female skiers competing in a meet for various titles at the U. of T. skiing property near Newmarket.

The Proudfoot Cup, open to competition for all students, and combining the downhill and slalom events was won by Ann Sharp (PHE). Joy Hallett and Conn Sparrow placed second and third respectively.

The individual intramural title, open only to Class B skiers was copped by Joy Hallett with Misses McKee and Oakes rounding out the top three. Competition here was in the same combined events listed above. From all accounts, Miss A. Oakes of Vic grabbed off the "show" spot with an effective, if unorthodox display of the "snow-plow" method.

Ann Sharpe's 30.3 and 62.46 marks in the slalom and downhill events, respectively, were very creditable performances as was Conn Sparrow's 33.1 time in the former run. These two girls were the only Class A contestants available.

UC had a comfortable 32 point margin over Vic in the faculty title quest. Trinity ranked third and St. Mike's grabbed off the fourth spot.

Beat Blues By 6-4 With 4 Fast Goals Douse Queen's 8-7

BY BRIAN LAND

The Carabins from the University of Montreal won their seventh senior hockey game Friday night, defeating the Varsity Blues 6-4, before about 3,500 fans, but they had to score four goals in the last period to do it. With their 8-7 victory over Queen's Saturday, they now need but two more wins to clinch the championship.

As in the previous Varsity-Montreal game here in December, the losers outplayed the winners for most of the night, and it was only in the third period that the Montrealers could get untracked enough to flash their fancy attack. Day and Emblem of Montreal, and Ferguson and Spence of Varsity had two goals apiece.

Bill Spence started things off right for the Blues by back-handing a shot into the net while Menard was sitting out a penalty. Pete Ferguson ran the count to 2-0 when he blazed a shot past Rainville on passes from Boyd and Fry. Play was held up in the first stanza when Paul Hutzalak was forced to make repairs to his equipment.

Ferguson, who gave his best performance to date, opened the scoring in the second when he scooped the puck in from behind the net. George Emblem and Albert Day counted their first goals of the night scoring on quick breaking plays from close in. Bill Spence notched the final Toronto score when Perrault was in the penalty box for interference.

Blues Tire In Third

Leading 4-2 going into the third period, Toronto began to tire as the fast skating Carabins threw the game wide open in an all out effort to whittle down the lead. At the 7:40 mark Giguere started the four goal splurge when he fired one by Hutzalak. Emblem tied the game up six minutes later.

Denis Lazure scored what proved to be the winning goal at the three quarter mark in the final period making it 5-4 for Montreal.

Outshoot Montreal 31-28

Forced to open up in an effort to gain a tie, the Blues were caught out of position when Day broke away to score unassisted, putting the game in the bag for Montreal.

The win gives the U. of M. firm hold on first place since they have lost only one decision this season, that to Varsity. Varsity out-shot the Carabins 31-28.

Dave Price, C.J.B.C. sports commentator was the guest of the Blue and White Society and chose the three stars. His selections were Emblem, Flynn, and Ferguson.

U. of Toronto—Goal, Hutzalak; def., Kavanagh, Ecclestone; centre, Turco; wings, Henry, Spence; alternates, Digby, Cooper, Frey, Boyd, Ferguson, McKillop, Howson, Fox.

U. of Montreal—Goal, Rainville; def., Laperriere, Menard; centre, Perrault; wings, Lazure, Bruneau; alternates, Gariepy, Day, Flynn, Charest, Pinard, Giguere, Emblem, Bouchard, Brissette, Guertin.

Skule Cannon, Meds Official Back At Home

All is sweetness and light on the campus today. The engineers have their cannon back, and the Meds vice-president Bob Hetherington is home, none the worse for wear.

In a quiet ceremony yesterday afternoon officials of the Medical Society and the Engineering Society conducted the swap which returned the cannon to Skule and Hetherington to Meds. The swap followed several days of discussion and negotiation. Several times negotiations threatened to break down, and possible mediators were suggested to solve the problem — among them Vic President Keith Davy, U.C. SAC Rep. Joe Potts and the ISS.

Swap In Meds Office

The actual exchange took place in the Medical Society office at 5:30 yesterday afternoon. Officials of the Engineering and Medical Societies, Bob Hetherington and The Varsity reporter were present when a representative of The Femury Gang handed over the cannon. Hetherington's release was made official, although he had been allowed his freedom earlier in the day to enable him to attend classes.

Hetherington expressed surprise when he saw the cannon. "Is that all it is?" he exclaimed. Skule officials were also a little shocked to see engraved on the barrel of the weapon the inscription — "Captured by Meds 5T2 3 Feb. 1949."

Statements Issued

Statements were issued by The Engineering Society and by The Femury Gang. Said Skule:

"After considerable negotiation between the executives of the two societies as to which was more valuable, Hetherington or the Skule Cannon, Meds decided that they would rather have Hetherington than the Cannon. As far as the Engineers are concerned Hetherington was becoming much too expensive for our modest means, what with cigarettes, food and beer.

"On the whole both societies parted quite amicably. Next time we'll chain the Cannon to a three."

Gang Makes Statement

And from the Femury Gang: "Members of the Femury Gang accuse Skule of faulty care of the 'Meds' Cannon. The gang spent a whole day rubbing the Cannon with a femur before it looked the least bit clean. And the smell! Lord how it stinks. Three hours soaking with Labatt's Solvent was necessary before the cannon could be brought into the presence of the Gang. We ask Skule to take care of the 'Meds' Cannon or else we'll take it back and they won't be able to play with it any more.

Joe College Wins — Loses As Taggers Get His Dollar

Joe College zig-zagged across the front campus avoiding taggers at every turn. Finally a young co-ed grabbed him by his Achilles' heel—she grasped his vanity with the words: "Just a minute, handsome." Joe was trapped. He knew that he would have to do some fast thinking to get out of buying his ISS tag. He lifted his earmuffs and began.

"I don't see why I should buy an ISS tag. I don't know what my dollar is going for. In fact I don't know what ISS means."

Bucks for Books

The tagger replied: "ISS means International Student Service and a lot more. Your dollar and 9.999 like it will leave your pocket and head for history. Your buck will buy books. It will aid students to continue learning, and in some cases, to continue living."

"Where will my dollar land? What countries will benefit?" asked the weakening Joseph.

The shivering young lady fingered one of the cardboard credentials and replied: "ISS is going to help keep the students' feet warm in Hungary. There's a hostel in Bombay that is being constructed for student refugees. There are a lot of lean hungry-looking students in Paris who will receive food and clothes from you, by way of ISS."

What About Seminars?

Mr. College knew that the dollar was becoming less his and more hers every minute, so he decided to use his secret weapon. "All that sounds very good. But what about the Toronto students who went to seminars in Europe last year. Do I help pay their car-fare?"

The ISS saleslady knew the answer to this one too. "We don't use a cent of the donations to send local learners over to Europe. The money for the trip comes from such sources as the government circles."

Joe felt weak about the knees and pocketbook. "How about I.S.O. and I.U.S.? Are they related to ISS?" He glanced over his shoulder

"For Tomorrow — Today"

When you were approached yesterday and asked for one dollar for I.S.S. you were being asked to help in the most vital task of today—reconstruction. Your money will:

1. Provide scholarships for foreign students to come and study in Canada, to receive ideas of our way of life which would be helpful in rebuilding their own country;

2. Provide material aid to the devastated countries of Europe and Asia in the form of books, clothing, buildings and food;

3. Bring D.P. scholars from their wretched conditions in Germany to a new life here.

These are the real purposes of your donation. In addition there is a week filled with "more than a dollar's worth of entertainment." You may still buy your I.S.S. cards from representatives in your college or faculty.

City Gives U of T Two Million Grant; Aids Drive — Smith

Toronto City Council yesterday approved a $2,000,000 dollar grant to the University of Toronto. The grant, which is believed to be the largest ever made by the city to a private institution, is to be paid over a period of five years.

Objective Assured

"This grant ensures the success of the Varsity appeal for $13,000,000, although it doesn't complete it," University President Sidney Smith stated last night. "We are asking for $6,000,000 from sources other than the province. The city's grant will enable us to plan our building program more definitely."

President Smith said that never before in the life of the university had the city made a capital grant to Varsity. "It is a very generous donation, and really gives significance to our title of The University of Toronto," the President declared.

An Asset To City

"The University of Toronto's advantages to the city on the educational, cultural and scientific side must speak for themselves," Dr. Smith said. He pointed out that the University's request to the city had also outlined some of the more practical considerations that should be taken into account.

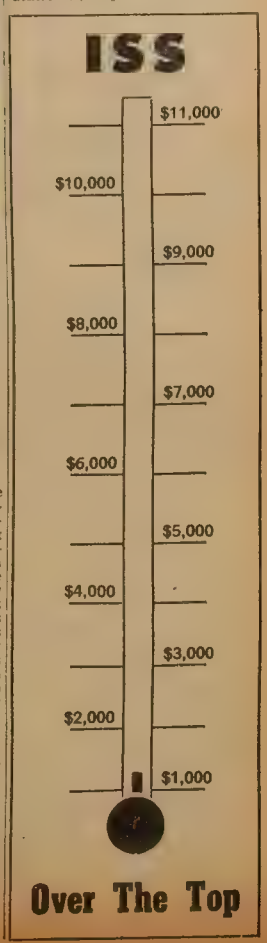
"Just in terms of dollars and cents, and as a purely secondary consideration, we pointed out to the city that our current annual budget is $12,000,000, and in addition to that amount our construction budget calls for an expenditure of $3,000,000 a year. We pointed out that about 8,000 students came to the city from outside points, and that the money these students spend in Toronto amounted to over $5,000,000 yearly.

Grant Opposed

The grant did not go unopposed in City Council. Aldermen Freed and Sims voted against the motion. "According to the report, the university doesn't need this money at once, and it may not be needed at all," Sims said. He retered to the proposal as "the most absurd piece of business that has hit this Council for six years, a half-baked proposal."

Alderman Freed suggested that some move be made to investigate possible federal aid to universities. He wanted the recommendation reconsidered and re-introduced.

Other members of the Council were strong in their support of the grant. "Freedom, health and education cannot be valued in terms of money," said Ald. Nathan Phillips. Ald. Roy Belyea felt that Toronto should have "the foremost university in Canada."



Balfour Speaks

Controller Balfour, who was in favor of the motion, said that he was "surprised this hasn't come up before. This is our university. Of course students come here from other sections and other countries but it is still our university." The controller said that one thing he would ask for would be an investigation of professors and students, "to assure they're being taught the democratic way of life."

Chief Justice

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer will be guest speaker at the Political Science Club, meeting Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. in Brennan Hall, St. Michael's College. His subject will be "The Judicial Branch of Government."

The Book Problem

NFCUS Survey Shows How To Reduce Prices

This is the fifth in a series of articles on the text book problem. Today, Harrison examines the results of a national inquiry into costs.

By WILS HARRISON

In my fourth article I dealt with the book problem as the local NFCUS committee, and myself had found it. Since the NFCUS report was national in scope, as well as presenting the local conditions, it was impossible to deal with its two aspects in one article and at the same time do justice to both. In this article I will try to give their findings on the situation on a national scale.

NFCUS Investigation

The NFCUS investigation began in May of 1948 and comprises a survey of the systems of handling books and the selling price of these books at 22 universities across the Dominion. A questionnaire wes sent to each of 22 universities asking them to give answers to five main questions.

The questions were as follows; What in general was their mark-up policy for books imported from the United States and books purchased from publishers' representatives in Canada? Did they give any discount to staff members and if so how much? How was their book store operated? Are textbook prices to Canadian students too high? Were there any other comments they would care to make relative to the book problem?

Check Questionnaires

When the questionnaires had all been returned and checked, the committee found that conditions existing on other campi were very similar to those found in their investigation at the University of Toronto. These conditions were that textbooks were being changed rapidly from year to year and were of no resale value to students and that the prices of texts were too high. They found that the conclusions reached and the suggestions made to remedy the problems would in general fit the conditions existing at the University of Toronto.

But the one outstanding criticism on all campi was the Canadian list prices as set by exclusive Canadian publishers' representatives on textbooks imported from United States publishing firms. The NFCUS committee found there were two methods of importing books from the United States The texts could be ordered either directly from American publishing houses or indirectly ordered through an exclusive Canadian agency of the American firm.

Obtain These Results

The results they obtained in their questionnaires are as follows:

(a) That the majority of book stores sell the imported American texts at the list price in the United States. Some of the book stores added five to ten percent to the U. S. list price, while others added 56 cents for transportation charges.

(b) That book stores who purchase American texts from exclusive publishers' representatives in Canada sell the imported books at Canadian list prices, which are usually higher than the American list price. There was no justifiable reason for this latter fact, since there were no customs duties to pay on educational books. As the report pointed out, the only additional cost would be for transportation. American texts were being sold in California 5% to 10% cheaper than they were in Canada after being transported across the American continent from New York. The report pointed out that the University of Toronto Press would not be able to sell the books at the U. S. list price when they purchased the American texts through an exclusive Canadian agency. They would be forced to buy at a price sometimes higher than the American list price.

Give Professors Reductions

In answer to the question regarding reductions in texts to the members of the staff, 12 universities out of the 22 stated they gave reductions to the professors and lecturers.

Sixteen of the universities said their book stores were operated by students and three by private business men.

It was hard to determine from some of the replies to the quest-

Big Boost

For the first time in its history the City of Toronto has given a grant to the University of Toronto.

The news that city council last night approved a two million dollar grant to the University will came as a pleasant surprise to many members of this institution. It means that the University's expansion campaign for badly needed facilities on this campus has taken on a rosier hue. A new arts building, residences, laboratories, and a library are closer to reality as a result of last night's announcement.

A few months ago we suggested that public support of universities might well be increased and that average citizens should be made more aware of the immense importance of the university to the community and to the nation. The city's two million dollar grant is ample evidence that public recognition has increased. Alderman Phillips is reported to have said: "We are not giving anything to the University but are buying at a cheap sum something that cannot be valued in dollars and cents." The municipal council's gesture to the University is a sign of a greater public awareness of the university's role in the scheme of things.

It has often been said, however, that universities must shun government aid. It has been suggested that state subsidization of universities would inevitably bring state interference and a more rigid control of education. This argument has been used to promote private support of universities and to encourage assistance from businessmen and financial interests.

Earlier in the year we suggested that universities supported by private endowment or financed by business interests are even more likely to succumb to outside interference than are the universities which are subsidized by the state. We felt that pressures exerted by private individuals or business groups could be more easily concealed and, therefore, more dangerous. State subsidized universities might be faced with a certain amount of government interference, it is true. But abuses in government control are more readily discernible to an alert opposition party and to a well-informed electorate.

Last night's announcement offers one mild example of the type of abuse that might be expected. Controller Balfour, who delights in casting rose-coloured glances at this institution, is reported to have said he would ask for an investigation of professors and students "to assure they're being taught the democratic way of life." Like other misguided individuals recently, Controller Balfour feels this university is "pretty red."

Our joy would be short-lived indeed if the city council's generous offer were contingent upon an "investigation" of staff and students. And if the "democratic way of life" of Controller Balfour were to be used as the basis for such an investigation we shudder to think of the consequences.

Fortunately, Controller Balfour's remark can be dismissed as idle chatter, not worthy of serious consideration. It does not detract from the city's magnificent contribution to this university.

very work.

All personnel in the flight, with the exception of the officer commanding, are to be appointed and hold the new officer rank of Flight Cadet in the RCAF Auxiliary.

A winter training syllabus, covering a three year period, has been prepared. This training will be developed progressively. The first winter will cover general subjects and indoctrination. The second and third winter will cover specialized training.

Summer Training

A summer training scheme has been devised, such that, in 1949, 35 members of the University Flight will receive approximately 16 weeks summer Contact-employment training. This scheme is in no way connected with the present RCAF summer employment plan. In 1950 this number is expected to be increased to 70. In 1951, it is hoped that no less than 100 university flight cadets will undergo summer training.

Recruiting for the new flight will commence immediately. Thirty-five vacancies are open to men who have at least three more years at the university before graduation. A further 35 vacancies for men, who have one or two years to go until graduation, are open for recruits.

All men, falling within these two categories desiring further information or desirous of being associated with the flight, are asked to attend one of the "open meetings" to be held today at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. in Room 26 of the Mining Building.

Is ISS Red?

The I.S. Sister looked Joe in the eye and then thought better of the idea. "We are not related to either of the aforementioned. I.S.O. is an organization on the campus composed mostly of foreign students here and others who try to make them at home, while away from home. I.U.S. is a student government body on an international scale. We aren't dominated or infiltrated by Communists or anybody else. It was 1919 when we began and we are still going strong."

Joe wished he were somewhere else, but continued the fight.

"Do I get anything back for my buck?"

What You Get

The tagstress knew that Joe was a materialist, so talked of material things — dances and things. "You get a week of entertainment worth at least twice the price of the token tag. Tea dances, shows and your eyes examined. Like so many painless dentists you don't feel a thing when we pull that dollar from your pocket."

Feeling very much like an engineer in the Meds building, Joe said bravely, "Let's try it and see what happens."

Sure enough, Joe didn't feel a thing.

University Auxiliary Flight Of RCAF Fighter Squadron To Be Established On Campus

Plans to establish an Auxiliary University Flight at the University of Toronto in the near future were announced Saturday by Sqdn-Ldr. F. L. Hutchison of the University of Toronto RCAF Auxiliary staff. "In order to stimulate interest in the RCAF at Canadian universities and to provide a flow of trained university students into the Regular, Auxiliary or Reserve Air Force, as commissioned officers, it has been decided to form RCAF (Auxiliary) university flights at certain universities," Sqdn.-Ldr. Hutchison said.

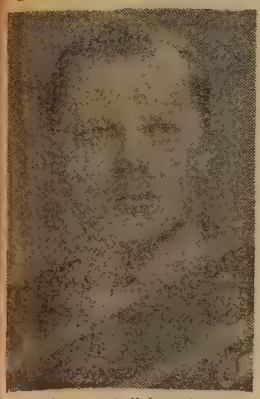
R.C.A.F. Policy

The move is in keeping with the RCAF policy of enlargement, which includes the formation of university auxiliary flights at various other universities throughout Canada. "However, until such time as practical experience has been acquired in the feasibility of and benefits derived from operating university flights the formation of these flights in Central Air Command will be limited to Toronto, Western and McGill University," he said.

The new University of Toronto unit is to be a flight of number 400 (F) Squadron RCAF (Auxiliary) and will have an initial strength of 100. To have the flight established on a satisfactory basis, it was decided that the air force would be represented continuously on the campus by an appropriate member of the RCAF Regular. To aid in effective co-ordination and continuity in the training program a Regular Force Flight Lieutenant, with a staff of one administrative Corporal Clerk, will be located in the RCAF Orderly Room, 119 St. George Street. This officer will be Flt. Lt. M. A. Everard, who will be advisor and will assist the officer commanding the University Flight in administration and ground training of personnel. Sqdn. Ldr. Hutchison will be OC of the the Toronto flight.

Graduate of Osgoode

Sqdn. Ldr. Hutchison is a graduate in Biochemistry from the University of Toronto and a graduate of Osgoode Hall. He was winner of three scholarships for general proficiency and chemistry. In 1921-22 he was vice-president of the SAC and in the same year was elected the first president of the UC Literary and Athletic Society. From 1917-19 he served with the Royal Naval Air Force and the Royal Air Force as Probationary Flight Officer and Second Lieutenant (Pilot).



He was appointed Squadron Leader of the University of Toronto Squadron of the University Air Training Corps in 1942. In 1943 he undertook active service duties with the R.C.A.F. and was demobilized in 1945 with the rank of Squadron Leader.

Former Navigating Officer

Flight Lieutenant Everard is a graduate of Queen's University and the University of Toronto. During the second world war, he served with the RCAF and the RAF as a navigator. Prior to his present Toronto posting, he was a navigation officer with 413 Squadron, Rockcliffe. Last spring and summer he spent in the Arctic with the RCAF doing exploration and geodetic sur-

In charge of liaison between the new Campus R.C.A.F. auxiliary unit and the Regular R.C.A.F. will be Flight Lieut. M. A. Everard. He will assist the officer comanding the University Flight in administration and ground training of personnel.

S-L Hutchison

The Officer Commanding the new University of Toronto Flight of the R.C.A.F. Auxiliary will be Squadron Leader F. L. Hutchison. The O.C. of the campus unit is a graduate of Varsity and Osgoode Hall. He has seen extensive service with the Air Force in both the First and Second Great Wars.

Hold Contest For Writing On Tolerance

A literary contest, to be held in conjunction with Brotherhood Week, was announced recently by the Inter-cultural Affairs Committee of the S.A.C.

Brotherhood Week will be held at the University of Toronto, at the same time as the rest of Canada, from Feb. 20 to Feb. 27. Literary work submitted in the contest must concern the general theme of Brotherhood Week of tolerance and understanding in place of prejudice.

Entries may be in the form of a poem, an article, a short story or an essay. Prose contributions are limited to less than 1500 words. Judges will be John Yocom and Rodney Grey of the Saturday Night editorial staff. Fifty dollars in prizes have been allotted — first being $25, second prize $15, and third $10.

Entries must be submitted before Feb. 20 to Patricia Ketchum, St. Hilda's College, Devonshire Place. Winners will be announced Friday, February 25.

VARSITY REPORTERS

Will the following Varsity staff reporters meet on Wednesday Feb. 9, at 1 p.m. in room 13 of U. C. It is important that everyone attent.

Social Security To Be Raised By CCF Party

Professor Cass-Beggs of S. P. S., a member of the C. C. F. Advisory Committee addressed the C. C. F. club yesterday. He posed the question, "Can we afford one billion dollars annually for social security?" The professor pointed out that this was three times the present expenditure on social security, one third of the total government revenue and eight per cent of the total national income.

C. C. F. Program

"A plan drawn up at the recent national convention of the C. C. F. party advocates the feasibility of diverting that much money and possibly more. A plan of this magnitude could only be carried out by the federal government to be satisfactory, it is impossible to consider the provinces making such an expenditure." he said.

"The C. C. F. has accepted a figure of $50.00 a month at the age of 65, without a means test as the basis for old age pensions," he continued Dr. Cass-Beggs also objected to the name old age pensions and advocated calling it "retirement pay" or a similar name.

"In the case of married couples, both parties would receive the grant, provided that the younger is not working." This would mean that the couple would receive $1200.00 a year. "When the general level of income has been increased throughout the country," continued the professor, "the figure should be revised."

Outlines Program

Prof. Cass-Beggs described the full social security program of the C. C. F. as involving: (1) Old Age pension at the age of 65 plus a supplement if required, plus free medical and hospital services. (2) Invalidity pensions for anyone who cannot support himself. (3) Blind pensions equalling old age pensions. (4) Sickness benefits for loss of wages during sickness not covered by Workmen's Compensation. (5) Widows and orphans allowances, mother's allowances, allowances for wives of the insane. (7) Funeral allowances.

The Professor went on to state that family allowances are already in force and that the C. C. F. will

Manitoba Student Says West's Pact Harmful To UNO

"The LPP opposes the North Atlantic Pact because it is a war-pact, a power block, not a regional pact and thus is denying the letter and spirit of the UN Charter," announced Roland Penner, a delegate from the University of Manitoba to the Third National Convention of the Labor Progressive Party being held in Toronto from Feb. 5-9, during his address to a meeting of the campus LPP club yesterday.

Penner added that the main emphasis of the convention has been on the "fight for peace."

"The convention has decided not to support the CCF because they are supporting the government's war policy and the selling out of Canada's independence," said Steve Endicott, chairman of Toronto University LPP club and also a delegate to the convention. Endicott explained that the LPP will appeal to the "genuine socialists" in the CCF to unite in a fight against the "war interests of big business" but will oppose the "opportunist elements" in the CCF. Convention delegates have also charged that E.R.P. is merely putting "false labels on poisonous packages," Endicott said. The dumping of surplus Coca Colas and American cars in Italy has not alleviated the increasing unemployment there.

Roland Penner who described himself as a "congenital communist", being practically born into the party, described the amount of discussion that was devoted to Canadian cultural life as one of most unique aspects of the Convention. "The delegates realized that culture was going to be used as a war-weapon to orientate the

High Ticket Sale Gives Good Start To ISS Campaign

The ISS drive gathered momentum yesterday with ticket sales and donations piling up a first day total of $1325. More than 200 taggers criss-crossed the campus in search of dollar bills. Their search was rewarded in such a way that the local ISS committee officials express satisfaction in the amount raised on the first day of their national campaign.

For the purchasers of the blanket tickets there will be a tea-dance at the Therapy Huts this afternoon from 4-6 p.m. The music for this event is being donated by Eaton's Band Box. Refreshments will be under the auspices of the OT. and PT. girls.

The Chairman of the local committee, Warren Goldring, urges all students to continue their support of the campaign during the coming week. The committee would like to see each student on the campus give one dollar to the campaign. In this way the University of Toronto can surpass their quota of $10,000.

Annual Hillel Lecture To Feature Dr. Kaplan On Judaism In Culture

Professor Mordecai M. Kaplan will give the Annual Hillel Lecture at the Museum Theatre on Wednesday, Feb. 9, on the subject "Judaism as a Dynamic Civilization."

An eminent scholar and lecturer, Dr. Kaplan has greatly influenced many sections of American Israel. He lectured at the Hebrew University in Palestine for two years, and headed the Teachers Institute of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York City.

Several important works including "A New Approach to the Problem of Judaism," and "Judaism as a Civilization," have been written by Dr. Kaplan.

Robert Gill

There's No Business Like . . .

By PEARL PARNES

You've all heard about the little bug that bites theatre people and keeps them in show business—well, there's a group of people backstage at Hart House who really have it bad (or rather good for undergraduate drama at U. of T.)

Mr. Robert Gill, (or Bob to almost everyone involved in his shows) has a story that reads like a list of honorary degrees. Although his grandfather was a Canadian, Mr. Gill is an American. Graduate B.A. and M.A. from Carnegie Institute of Technology and holder of the Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship to the Cleveland Playhouse for two years, Bob was instructor in acting, direction and radio technique at Carnegie for four years.

Director At Banff

Several years of summer stock as both actor and director culminated with three seasons at Woodstock, N. Y. with Elissa Landi. Last summer's position as acting and directing instructor at the Banff School of Fine Arts brings the career of Varsity's drama director up to date.

The director's inseparables are the other three people in the theatre office cubicle, James Hozak, Marian Walker and Barbara Allan. Jimmy started as box-office secretary in 1935, replacing Willard Thompson as business manager in 1939. Except for four years in the army, he has been the competent and incredibly patient business manager that an undergraduate theatre requires.

There are occasional gripes heard on the campus from those who don't know the facts. The grousers don't realie the inadequacy of space due to the over-crowded condition of the university, and the insufficient rehearsal time on the stage. Mr. Hozak pointed out that there were just so many hours and so many days in a week. Seventeen producing groups on the campus lay first claim to the use of the theatre, and there are academic lectures in the theatre every day.

Low Tariff

Evening rental to undergrads is $60 and to non-campus groups $120 (a far cry from the Royal Alexandra's $2,500 plus extra for the stage per week). From October to March no non-campus group is booked, giving every possible opportunity to the students. The $60 does not begin to cover operating expenses, and the University loses almost $14,000 every year on the theatre.

Marian Walker, general secretary and Girl Friday, and Barbara Allen, box-office secretary complete the office quartet. Marian handles everything from appointments to furniture.

A Fine Stage

The theatre itself has 492 seats, and the stage is the pride and joy of campus actors. George Pennie, electrician, and Jack Richardson, technical director are the men responsible for the excellent lighting and scenic effects so much a part of Hart House shows.

Theatre business is hard work, but full of interesting people and unpredictable situations. To all these backstage bosses show business is tops. The bug has bitten deep and the soothing ointment is grease-paint.

Your Part

The ISS campaign will be the talk of the town this week with most of the campus ISS conscious. However, there are still a few of the students who either don't realize what the drive is about or don't know all the interesting things that are taking place just for their entertainment.

The women on the campus are doing their share in the organization, with the girls commandeering the tag boxes for the week under the guidance of Nancy LeSueur, IV U.C. The Occupational Therapy women are entertaining the students today at a tea dance in their home on Devonshire Place. The U.C. Derby will take prominence on Wednesday afternoon.

These are just a few of the shows that are coming up for the students of the University. However, the success of these programs depends on you and if you are part of this University you will be there.

Back to the women of this campus and in particular the Physio and Occupational Therapy girls. For such small faculties their programs, a different one for every day of the week, are stupendous and put the rest of us in the background unless we rally to the fore and turn out to the functions during this week.

From London — To Churchill By Compass, Canoe and Foot

By JANET HARBRON

Have you secret longings to be an explorer? Then visit Mrs. Brian Bird who spoke at the University Women's Club yesterday. Mrs. Bird graduated from Cambridge in 1944 when she was employed in London by UNRRA doing research in food and agricultural problems. Moved to Washington she continued geographical studies and came to Canada early in 1948 as the bride of Brian Bird, a lecturer in the Department of Geography.

Flew As Freight

This summer the Birds were employed by the Geographical Bureau in Ottawa to do Arctic studies in topography and glaciology. They left Rockcliffe in June as air freight. The lack of insulation and seats resulted in their arriving a little the worse for wear.

They were held up in Churchill for five weeks, because small planes were in service aiding fire-fighting in the east and relieving flood conditions in the west. Churchill, a small town with a railway station and a grain elevator, boasted two trains a week, and provided little in the way of accommodation for members of the weaker sex. The presence of Mrs. Bird caused some difficulties. However, the problem was solved when the Birds were given room in the officers' wing of the army camp.

Louis Impressed

When the party did get under way they were accompanied by an Eskimo guide, Louis, who insisted they eat only sirloin steaks of caribou. His opinion changed when he was confronted with a pressure cooker which did wonderful things to the less choice cuts. Louis was sure the Birds wouldn't be interested in fish which was fit only for the dogs. As a matter of fact, to Louis the Birds were very important people. He had at one time seen a movie of the King and Queen and the fact that Brian and Beryl had seen the King and Queen in person gave them great prestige value in his eyes.

One of Mrs. Bird's jobs was to act as a "measuring stick" for pictures her husband took. One day while performing her duties, she was surprised by a wolverine, one of the most vicious of Canadian animals.

Extended Tea Party

According to Mrs. Bird, Eskimo hospitality is the finest. The party met a group of Eskimo and Louis asked them if they would shake hands and give the Birds a cup of tea. They did, and the tea party lasted longer than had been expected, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

In this early part of the summer the tundra was covered with beautifully coloured flowers but as the season grew, everything dried up and the country became a curious combination of greens and browns dotted with low-lying lakes.

Unnerved By Wolves

Sometimes the party camped for three days and Mrs. Bird said she found the stillness eerie. The lack of trees made it difficult to estimate distance. A person standing a short distance away over a ridge for example, appeared as a mirage much larger than they would normally be. While they camped Beryl spent her time doing detailed mapping of the area by pace and compass survey. Once or twice she was startled by a wolf which wakened from a quiet sleep, got up, looked at her and ambled off. It doesn't sound very dangerous but it was unnerving.

Having travelled 730 miles by canoe and on foot and 500 miles by air, they returned as the caribou were migrating south and the Hudson's bay and R.C.M.P. were preparing for the long winter ahead.

Anthropology Survey

By ANNE BURTON

For the past two weeks, Varsity students have been getting a taste of just how Dr. Gallup predicts. According to Dr. Brown of the Anthropology Department, head of the University Community Survey that is going on in Toronto's West End, predictions will lead to the improvement of certain districts in the city.

The purpose of the survey, sponsored by the Civic Advisory is to find out the needs of a city community. Dr. Brown undertook the survey in order to show his students something of the technique of discovering community attitudes and, also, to be useful to the Civic Advisory Council. Voluntary participants are over 250 students of honor Anthropology, Psychology, Sociology, and Philosophy, second year Pre-Meds, and the General and Pass courses. Planning work is done by seniors and graduates.

The survey covers almost every aspect of the community. Techniques in conducting it are various. The first method is statistical, a "sampling" of a certain proportion of the district. The results of the sampling are computed by special machines for the purpose. Another method is through more comprehensive interviews with a smaller fraction of the residents. A third way is through talks with church, Y.M.C.A., and similar organization officials to find out just what these institutions have to offer to the community at large. Lastly, the surveyors resort to observing "the man on the street", in order to discover his views and reactions to incidents in the district.

The results of the survey will be presented to the Civic Advisory Council, to indicate to them what improvements are desirable and feasible in the city.

"The raw data", stated Dr. Brown, "is not turned over to the Civic Advisory Council as such. It merely forms the basis of a report given to the council. This is to prevent the animosity of the residents of the district".

This is the second year that such a survey has been attempted. The purpose of last year's survey was mainly to perfect techniques used at the present time. Assisting Dr. Brown in the work of the survey are members of the Anthropology Department, one member of the Sociology Department and one member of the Psychology Department.

Canada Exports Professors Few University Jobs Here

By PAULA ZUMSTEIN

What is Canada's future in the intellectual world? Of the 45 universities and colleges in Canada only Toronto and McGill have separate Schools of Graduate Studies and only Toronto offers courses leading to a Ph. D. in all departments.

Lack of openings for teaching fellowships and the scarcity of scholarships in graduate schools have forced young Canadian students to seek higher education at Oxford in the United Kingdom and most frequently at Johns Hopkins, Harvard and Chicago in the United States. South of the border Canadian students with first class honours in honour courses usually have a choice of two or three fellowships from American colleges. While Canadian education would suffer without the free intercourse of study between the two countries we also suffer a great loss in the number of students who remain in the States after completing graduate courses. For this reason Canada may be said to number professors among her exports. Here it may be interesting to note statistics of Canadian graduates taken in 1942. At that time of 412 Canadian scholars who went to the States to complete their education 208 are now teaching in Canada and 204 are teaching in the United States. Almost 20% more of those remaining in the States went on to obtain their Ph. D. than those who returned to Canada.

These losses to Canadian culture are alarming when we realize that one-half the intellectual class are leaving the country. And yet what has Canada to offer these students educated and fitted for special positions?

Students trained in the sciences have openings waiting for them in industrial research and as our natural resources increase the number of openings will increase. Those graduating in the social services may find employment in the civil service or in commerce but for graduates in languages, history, music or philosophy almost the only opening is teaching.

The lack of positions in Canadian secondary schools and universities and the added attraction of higher salaries offered in the States draw these graduates across the border.

But a large percentage of these emigrants go to live in cities where the higher cost of living results in a very small increase in their net income. Loyalty to Canada and the inconvenience attached to moving out of the country would keep skilled technicians and the professional class at home if Canada were able to supply satisfactory employment in the fields in which they are trained.

These are the people we need if our country is to expand intellectually as well as materially towards a higher civilization. Scholars have never been nor expected to be a wealthy class. They are willing to impart what they know to students wherever facilities are available. It is to be hoped that educational expansion in Canada will make jobs for the fine graduates we are already turning out.

Art Hallman says there's a lot of truth in the saying that a fool and his money are soon parted but the puzzle is how they ever got together in the first place.

To Ice University Women's Hockey Team Here on Friday in Match Against McGill

Women's Intercollegiate sports both on the invitation and official meets are to be the main interests in the realm of sports in the next few weeks with Badminton, Skiing, Volleyball, Hockey and Basketball the main fields.

Each year the battle for the Bronze Baby, the Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Trophy, becomes the important event for 'the eleven' the University of Toronto Women's Basketball Team. This year the importance will be more acute with the competition being on home territory. Varsity is to play host to the Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Meet this year on Feb. 25, and 26, and is hoping to regain the title from last year's winner, the Gaels.

There are to be two pre-season games when Varsity and McMaster play a home-and-home series starting tonight at Hamilton. The return game will be at the Athletic Night of Feb. 19, at 7:15.

Arrangements are already well under way for the tournament with the draw having taken place last Saturday. The method this year was carried through in the true vein of sportsmanship with Mr. McAndrew, registrar of the University College, carefully drawing lots for the Round Robin Tourney.

Into the fray of intercollegiate competition this year has returned the Women's Intercollegiate Hockey. Although only on an invitation basis, the University of Toronto will play host to the McGill team this Friday when they play at 3 00 p.m. at Varsity Arena and will be the guest of Queen's University the following Friday at Kingston. This latter game will be a direct sequel of last year's Victoria College — Gaels tilt in the same city.

The difficulty in obtaining ice appears to be the main difficulty for all hockey teams and this year in particular threatened to upset the invitation meet. Varsity has for the first time since before the war sported a women's Blue and White team.

THE DATING OF MILLY

A Drama In One Act

(The characters, Milly Mulchface and Sporran MacPherson talk in a restaurant over a cup of coffee. They take turns sipping.)

Sporran, (idly counting his pennies) – Och, Milly, my love, 'coo-r-r lak' a red, red r-rose. Hoot an' what are ye doin' Friday nicht?

MM—This coming Friday night?

SM—Aye. If it's a braw, bricht moonlicht nicht, we twa'll hae the time o' our-r lives. It's the Valentine Roam-aboot I'm talking aboot. Will ye coom wie me, Milly, my Bonnie lassie?

MM—What Roam-about is this, Sporran?

SM—Hoots, lass, dinna ye ken aboot the Valentine Roam-aboot? They'll be strath spey'in an' reelin' at six dancin' halls tae the skirling o' Robbie MacGimby, Buddy MacHill and recorded tunes includin' selections by Harry Lauder. Aye, an' best o' all, it's verra economical—only fifty cents a buddie wie a FREE hockey game tae boot.

MM—Sounds very nice.

SM—Well, Millie, if yo think ye can scr-rape up th' fifty cents, It'd gie me great injoyment tae tak' ye.

MM—I'll get the fifty cents from Father, Sporran. (Aside—I'd do ANYTHING to go to the VALENTINE ROAM-AROUND).

SM—Whee-e-e (dances a jig and sings) –
Look a' the dancin' lassies,
Wie their kilts upon their chassis.
Who've forgotten a' aboot the hie'land fling.
Och! MacPherson is rehearsin' tae swing.

General Employment Opportunities

What are you going to do when you graduate this Spring? Perhaps you are one of the fortunate ones with a good job waiting for you to come to it. Perhaps you have a very definite idea of a limited field where you know you have a good opportunity of finding an employer who will offer you the type of work that you want. Perhaps, however, you are one of the group who are looking in a broader field and are devoting a considerable amount of your time to research work in the daily newspapers and among the downtown offices. There is no royal road to finding a job, but for those who may fall in the latter classification, The Varsity offers this new feature which will appear under this heading whenever opportunity knocks.

The Placement Service, 67 St. George Street, is frequently approached by employers who would like to come to the campus and talk to any interested seniors about openings in their firms. When the employer is looking for men or women from a particular department of the University it is not difficult to advise the few concerned through the medium of class notices. But when the employer is willing to accept applications from the whole of the graduating year, it is only possible to circulate notices to the college Registrars and rely on notice board publicity. In the future, in addition to the regular bulletin to the college, The Varsity will publish a short description of the opening and the method to be followed in making application.

My Brother's Keeper

It is unfortunate that the CBC rendered a full discussion of Mel Breen's prize-winning play broadcast last week impossible by going off the air for four crucial minutes. It is not for me to say that the relative frequency of technical mishaps during Varsity programmes is no accident, but one cannot help feeling rather sad that the breakdown should have struck a programme that had greater claim to literary distinction than anything that preceded it on the series. No one will criticize Breen for having designed his play in such a manner that its shape and purpose should only become apparent at the very end as the liberating pistol shot is heard. Writers usually work on the assumption that the printers do not run out of paper, or the radio station out of electric power.

With all allowances for the inevitable distortion made, I still feel that Breen tended to forget that economy of dialogue is likely to underline its quality. What was said was fine but there was just a little too much of it. Granted, Breen had to create an atmosphere of nervousness and aimlessness among the three students who were under the spell of the mental struggles of an absent protagonist. Granted, too, there were sounds which dented the wall of talk with which they surrounded themselves (e.g. the cigarette lighter, bebop record, City Hall clock). But these sounds seemed squeezed into the proceedings rather than being allowed to act as articulating agents. There must be a wide range of devices up to and excluding the conventional musical "bridge" (which was not used nor missed) capable of lending a discernible shape to 25 minutes of internal action.

All this should not obscure the fact that Breen's play was fundamentally sound and intelligently written; it is far from easy to reproduce the casual and limited idiom of the undergraduate in its more informal moments, and it became apparent after a very few moments that the script and its interpreters were displaying sufficient tact and imagination to permit the listener to follow the story without fear of embarrassment, the greatest potential enemy of such enterprises.

Trinity Recital

A large audience responded enthusiastically to a concert by Marjorie Elliott, pianist, and Maud McLean, soprano, at their Sunday Evening Concert in Trinity. However, I must temper my response slightly from that of the audience. Miss Eliott often varies both tempo and volume excessively, while the timbre of Miss McLean's voice is too uniform and thus lacks drama.

Miss Elliott opened the program with two Bach numbers, the "Choral Melody" from "Come, Sweet Death", and the "Toccata and Fugue in D minor". The Fugue had especially good intonation and a relaxed mood. Chopin's "Etude in F minor" opened well but suffered in later parts from poor rhythmic balance.

The "B Flat minor Scherzo" was generally exaggerated in effect and suffered from an uneven tempo. Liszt's "Les Funerailles" was sensibly played with melodrama.

Two Handel songs, "Art Thou Troubled", and "Silent Worship" were well performed by Miss McLean. Her voice is thin, but well modulated, and except in the high register, very pure. In "Art Thou Troubled" she had difficulty negotiating some of the turns. She sang "She Never Told Her Love"—Haydn, with excellent control and interpretation. Two other songs completed an enjoyable evening.

Jack Ferguson.

Wymilwood

Sunday evening an appreciative audience heard four Victoria College students present a charming program of art songs and piano music in Wymilwood's green room.

Robin Paterson, soprano, III Honor Music, was very much at home in a group of four German songs. Included were two Brahms sung with understanding and feeling by the artist. She was support by the fine accompaniment of Mary McDonald. Helen Collymore, III Honor Music, played three Chopin compositions with an accomplished technique that was especially evident in the "Polonaise in C minor." In the Three Preludes Miss Collymore skillfully whisked her audience from one mood to another.

Marie Evans, remembered by all who took in "Iolanthe", sang a group of four songs with warmth and artistry. "Miranda" was outstanding for its "joie de vivre".

In the last group, Francis DeCarroll, II Arts, included the favorite baritone solo "Thou Art Gone Up On High" from "The Messiah." The smooth production and the beautiful diction of Mr. DeCarrol was apparent in all his numbers. The duet from "Iolanthe" by Marie Evans and Francis DeCarroll concluded the program.

maintain them and possibly simplify them.

Prof. Cass-Beggs pointed out that by 1971, the number of people eligible for the old age pension will be double the 1941 figure. He said that there is a good prospect that we will be able to pay twice as much in 1971. The costs of items such as health would decrease, as it is reasonable to assume that the national health will become better as time passes. The money saved could be applied to increasing other social security he said.

REPORTER EDITOR RESIGNS

The Editor, The Varsity:

I would like to make public my resignation from The Reporter, which became effective last Wednesday. I took this step over a difference in policy. The first edition stated "editorial views will be confined to the editorial page" and that "editorially The Reporter will stand up for belief in the worth of the individual and the free enterprise system" which is a very general proposition. I also believe that to stand up for an ideal implies a positive approach to the problem.

The Book Problem

tionnaire, whether any mark-up was placed on books directly imported from American publishers or not. The majority did sell the directly imported texts at U. S. list prices. Those who purchased from Canadian agents sold at a mark-up of from 5 to 20% over the American list price. The majority of the questionnaire stated they could see no justifiable reason for this mark-up when there was no duty or sales tax charged on imported books.

In this mark-up on American texts purchased through Canadian representatives of United States firms, the book sellers, to whom the questionnaires were directed stated they were forced to make this mark-up because the Canadian agents charged a higher price than the American list price. This additional mark-up allowed them their normal 20% profit made on texts.

Since there are two methods for purchasing American texts, (direct and indirect), and since, in the former case, books bought from American firms can be brought to Canada and sold at the American list price or with a slight additional cost to cover transportation charges, the obvious solution would be to import all texts directly from the United States publishers.

A Sight To See

COLE SLAW

An opinion that we've held for some time has just received official confirmation by the M.O.H. of Sault Ste. Marie. To combat that city's current flu epidemic he has prescribed a dose of two able-spoonsful of liquor (type decided by personal preference) every hour on the hour. To us, this prescription marks a noteworthy, though possible uneven, step forward in medicine's fight to overcome the flu. In the interests of science we tried the new prescription on our own cold. We'd like to report that it's a definite advance over the mustard plaster, hot lemonade or the hot water bottle. One suggestion we'd like to make, however, is that the dosage be increased to one half-tumbler of liquor every hour on the hour. We secured admirable results with the increased dosage, the only trouble being that after knocking out the cold we were not far behind.

The women's Intercollegiate basketball team has been chosen and practices are well under way. Mickey Barnett is coaching a team of 12 girls: Ann Bradshaw, Gwen Smith, Jane Cloke, Betsy McFaul of PHE, Rosanna Kelly, Mickey Thomas, Lil Laakso, Shirley Speck, Percus Hughes, UC, Joan Sothern, Trinity, Betty Fitzgerald, St. Mike's, and Eleanor Lever, Archeology. Lil Laakso is really a veteran, this being her fourth year on the team, while Rosanna, President of U of T basketball, is playing for her third year. Four others are back for a second season: Gwen, Mickey, Jane and Eleanor.

The team has played one game, defeating OCE 27-11, displaying good team work with passes clicking and shots on.

Tuesday, Feb. 8, the girls meet the McMaster hoopsters, who will play a return game in Hart House, Feb. 19. It is hoped Western will come here on the 12th for a friendly game. Mickey Barnett's sister is coaching the Purple and White.

The big Intercollegiate meet takes place on the weekend of the 25th and 26th when Varsity, Western and McGill will try to take the Bronze Baby from Queen's. The games will be played on Friday and Saturday afternoons in Hart House, and Saturday morning in OCE. The competition should be keen since the out-of-town teams have been practising quite a while. Varsity, although starting later, is shaping up very well.

Since the war the Bronze Baby has been held by McGill '46, Varsity '47, and Queen's '48. Western held it several years previous to the war. The Baby, donated by McGill back in 1926, is supposed to represent a typical 14-year-old girl, (must have started to college young in those days). The winners usually dress her up in some sort of a tunic and a blue and white one would be very becoming on her this year.

SR. INTRAMURAL BOXING & WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIPS

Weigh-in today (Tuesday)—12:00 noon to 2:00 p.m. and 4:00 to 5:30 p.m. Pick up weigh-in slips in Intramural Office.

Betting circles revealed last night that the 15-point margin favoring The Varsity over the SAC has been shaved to 14 as a result of the startling announcement that "Easy Ed" Voight has been stricken with the 'flu.

Voight had been counted on heavily to stem the potent punch line of Doug "Free" Love, Suds Suddick and Jumpin' Joe Potts.

The culmination of a week of hectic preparations, charges and counter-charges in which SAC Publicity Director Love vilified the press in general and the staff of The Varsity in particular, in a startling display of bad taste and bad manners, comes to a head today at 2:00 p.m.

At that hour the sad SAC'ers will dash onto the floor of Hart House gym to test the mettle of the newsmen in what has been touted as the game of the era.

"Hoops" Is Sidelined

A bone of contention has raised its ugly head in the form of Doug "Free" Love's adamant refusal to release "Mark" Harrison, fleet-footed guard from his pledge to remain impartial, and as a consequence, Harrison will not dress for today's game. Harrison, known as Hoops to the sports fraternity, will have to content himself with master-minding the newsmen from the bench.

Flyin' Phil Ashmore, Gord G.T., the breathless SAC president, Torontonensis rep. Sullivan, Meds president Bunker, Richard Cline, Gord Wilkes and Gord Jocelyn round out as formidable and impotent a squad as has ever graced the Hart House Gym. An attempt to include a seven foot 10 inch. student from Swiss Watchmaking 3c on the SAC line-up was foiled by the vigilance of the Varsity staff in enforcing the no freshmen rule.

Charges Professionalism

Earlier D. "F." Love had charged The Varsity with professionalism when it was reputed that Red Rocket Jones, starry pivot man of the newsmen, had accepted a stick of chewing gum after playing a game with St. Mike's 'Z's' in the Intramural League. However, a tribunal of sports writers speedily cleared him of the charges, deciding that it was only another sample of Love's obstructionist tactics.

The SAC had contemplated using some of the members of its satellite committees, such as Keith Dribbbler Davey, but refused to weaken its line-up in order to broaden its representation.

MacDonald Referees

E. A. MacDonald will referee the contest. Admission is free to those wearing the I.S.S. tag and 10 cents to others. (laughable prices for the type of ball being exhibited).

John "Buckets" Kennedy is the big cog in the news machine, being particularly noted for his clever ball handling. Tiny Dnieper, six feet two inch. pygmy, and Fancy Frank Moritsugu, four feet nine inch. giant, favour a crowd-pleasing brand of ball guaranteed to keep the fans on their feet. Arrangements are being made to have chairs moved in.

Junior Bees Need Win To Keep Loop Lead

Lost Last 2, Meet Marlies In Late Tilt

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Juniors, the only Varsity team that is leading a circuit at the present time, takes to the ice tonight in the second game of a double header at the Varsity Arena. They play hosts to the Marlboro Juniors, while in the first game, the Corner Boys tangle with the St. Michael's College Buzzers.

The Varsity Juniors, who lost their last two games, hold a two point lead over the Corner Boys, while the St. Mike's Buzzers moved in to tie the Marlboro team for third place when they swamped the Marlboro team last Saturday.

Irish Pushing Ahead

The Irish team have been putting on the pressure in the last few games and have defeated the other three teams in their last three encounters.

Coach Bill Wade's charges have been having trouble in their last two games. After starting the year out on the right foot, they now have hit a slump and they didn't look as good in the last two encounters. The Juniors are the same team, but the opposition has become much tougher. The schedule is nearing the end and all are trying to be the two teams that will be in the playoffs. There is only a four point difference between the Varsity Juniors and the last place teams.

Raftis Is Steady

Jack Raftis has been one of the steady players for the Blues. He is a fast two-way player and can play it rough too, if need be. His line mate Al Conboy also is one of Wade's steady men.

The team itself seems to be a little weak in the checking department. In the last game, the Bees were outshot and netminder Leuty had one of his busiest games.

The Juniors have three more games after tonight to wind up their schedule and all games are important from now on.

Blue Seconds Win 6-5 Over OAC In Hockey

By JOHN KENNEDY

Guelph, Feb. 7—(Staff)—Varsity Intermediates eked out a narrow 6-5 decision over Guelph in a brand-new Guelph Memorial Stadium last night. Paced by Paterson and Doug Dies, who fired two goals apiece, Varsity forged into the lead early in the second period, and never relinquished it to the fighting Aggies.

Jack Foote played a sensational game in goal for the Blues especially in the second period, kicking out several shots that should have put O.A.C. into the lead.

The game was played in the new $500,000 arena that seats 4,200, which was erected last year. It was the first time a Varsity team had played there. Toronto earned applause from the fans near the end of the game when a fan was injured. Griff Pearson, captain of the Blues, who is in Fourth Year Meds, skated over from the players' bench and administered extemporaneous first aid.

O.A.C. moved into an early first period lead when Bill Dies, brother of Doug Dies of the Varsity team, flicked one past Foote. Toronto tied it up five minutes later with Paterson scoring the first of his two goals. O.A.C. moved into the lead again with a goal by Brennan.

Dies scored twice for Varsity in the second period, and Paterson added his other goal. Shervin was the lone O.A.C. marksman in the period.

Shervin added two more in the third period to complete the hat trick but goals by Moore and Howson won the game for Varsity.

Line-ups:—

Guelph—Goal, Campbell; defence, Stewart, Patterson; centre, Sherven; wings, Starrack, Hammill; alts., Sullivan, Bill Dies, Barnes, McKay, Treleaven, Reeves, Stewart, Patterson, Doseger, and Brennan.

Toronto—Goal, Foote; defence, Morrison, Waldron; centre, Pearson; wings, Moore, Howson; alts., Bell, Doug Dies, Fingland, M'Loughlin, Campbell, Kane, Turner, Paterson.

First Period

1—OAC, Dies (Sullivan) 3:55
2—Toronto, Paterson 8:40
3—OAC, Brennan 12:35
Penalties — D. Campbell, Waldron, Barnes.

Second Period

4—Toronto, Paterson 3:00
5—Toronto, Dies 16:35
6—OAC, Shervin (Hammill) 18:53
7—Toronto, Dies (Campbell) 19:03
Penalties—D. Campbell (2), Patterson.

Third Period

8—OAC, Shervin (Hammill) ... 6:57
9—Toronto, Moore 9:25
10—OAC, Shervin 13:25
11—Toronto, Howson (Waldron) 17:43
Penalties — Doseger, Turner, McLoughlin.

Vic, Trinity Are Still Best In Hockey

Last week's Group One hockey games produced two shutouts. The league-leading Senior Vic whitewashed Senior UC, 6-0, while the second place Skulemen clinched a playoff spot by blanking Ajax, 2-0.

Group Two standing is unchanged with St. Mike's A and Senior Meds battling for the playoff post.

SPS II were the victims this time as the potent Trinity Ayes blasted them 10-2 in Group Three's only contest.

UC IV find that the only way they can win a game is to 'pack' the team, but the Intramural office won't sympathize with them. A week ago they edged out St. Mike's B 4-3 with the aid of Masters from Junior UC and so were disqualified. Last Thursday they not only played Masters again but also half of the UC thirds, and the combination beat Vic IV 4-1. Disqualified again!

Playoffs start on February 17 with Forestry B meeting Trinity B and SPS IV taking on Trinity C.

Meet Blues In Year's 1st Sports Nite

Mac McCutcheon's face lights up like the city hall clock when you mention tomorrow night's sport night in Hart House.

"Why the two games tomorrow will be about the best basketball Varsity fans can see all year," he ad libs. "This Buffalo senior squad beats out Niagara just last week while reports from Buffalo tell us that their Freshman team is pretty good too."

Buffalo meets Varsity seniors in the feature game in Hart House while their freshman take on Varsity intermediates. After the games, dancers will cavort on the floor till midnight. Tickets for the occasion cost 50 cents at the door tomorrow.

"I was talking to Masterson and he figures the Blues will give the Buffalo quite a battle on our own floor. They didn't do too badly when we played them in Buffalo losing only 68-42 even though they were tired from the trip," explains Mac.

Night Is Experiment

"This Sport Night is in the nature of an experiment, really. It's the first midweek display we've had in Hart House since the University of Ecuador were here last year. We'd like to know if the students are interested in the venture, and we figure the best way to find out is to try it.

"If enough people turn out we may stage another one later in the year. From the way the students gobble up the tickets for Athletic Night, there's plenty of interest in basketball and for an inexpensive night out with the girl-friend. We hope that some of the fans who can't get a seat Saturday at the athletic nights will try tomorrow.

Is Second Last Showing

"This is likely the second-last appearance of the Blues in Hart House this year," adds McCutcheon. They have only one league game with Queens left after this."

It's the second last appearance in Hart House for some of the players too. Wally Zeaton, only fourth year man on the team is in OCE and leaves this term. Nick Volpe is also at OCE. Doug Tyndall, Bill LaChance, and Bill Stockman are all in their graduating year and, unless they return in Grad Studies will be leaving the Blues this year.

LOVE ASKS HELP

Doug Love, coach of the SAC basketball team which plays a team from the Varsity at 2:00 today in Hart House sent out a last minute call last night for all SAC members to be in the SAC office in Hart House at 1:45 today. Love was obviously cracking under the pre-game stress.

WESTERN FEES UP

London, Feb. 6—(CUP)—Lack of sufficient support for the University of Western Ontario from the provincial government coupled with expansion of services in recent years has placed the university in a precarious financial position, Dr. G. E. Hall said last week.

In an address, Dr. Hall said that unless government grants were increased, student fees, which "have already reached a danger point," would have to be raised.

The present government grant is $350,000.

Barry Lowes

First And Always A BB Fan

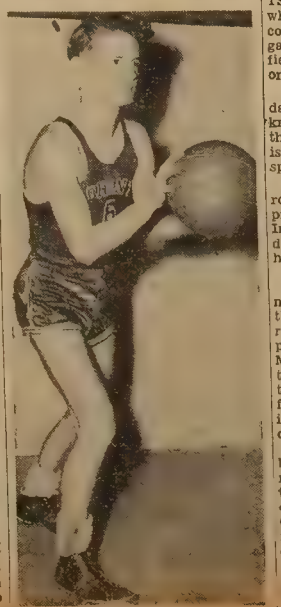
By BOB JONES

Anyone who has had occasion to visit the Intramural Athletic Office, in Hart House, during the past five months has doubtless become aware of the fact that there are two desks now gracing the limited space behind the room's big counter.

Occupying the advance-guard position is Miss Boyd, right-hand, assistant of "Mac" MacCutcheon, director of the intramural sports program. Since last fall she has shared her spacious quarters for a good part of each day with a blonde-haired, well-groomed, young fellow, who makes use of the other desk, placed strategically near a window overlooking the back campus.

He's Named Barry

The gentleman's name is Barry and the position he now occupies is that of associate in the Department of Physical and Health Education.



Barry Lowes needs little introduction to Toronto sport-fans. Although born in England, Barry moved to Toronto, with his family, at the age of four, and settled in the city's west end. That trip proved to be a break for Duke of Kent Public and Bloor Secondary Schools.

At the latter institution, Barry's ball-handling prowess first put him in the sport spot-light. Although his first love has always been basketball, the Bloor teams for which he acted as playing-coach never advanced to the play-off stage.

Is Referee At 16

His knowledge of the game did pay off in a big way, though, when, at the age of 16 years, Barry took the course and exams requisite for a senior refereeing post in Canada. The Western Toronto product not only qualified as an official, but, in his freshman year, went on to referee the Dominion finals in all groups!

He followed up his remarkable first-year record by continuing his officiating chores in senior and high-school circles during the next few seasons.

BARRY LOWES

Plays Football Too

Although the 145 pound speedster is known primarily for his basketball accomplishments, he was chosen on Junior and senior TSSAA all-star football teams while attending collegiate. "One coach told me I played a terrific game of basketball on the football field," Barry laughingly comments on his gridiron record.

As a matter of fact, his football days were cut short by an ailment known as chronic osteomyelitis of the knee, which, when aggravated, is as hard on the leg as it is on the spelling.

But when young Mr. Lowes enrolled in the PHE course here and proceeded to cut capers in the Intercollegiate BB loops, there didn't appear to be much slowing him down.

Moves To Seniors

After one year with the Intermediate team, Barry graduated to the Senior Blues and proceeded to ram his head, along with fellow-players and coaches McNair and Masterson against the Western title monopoly. They didn't cop the title but Barry bade an auspicious farewell to the loop when he helped in last year's final-game triumph over the Mustangs.

Barry's formal duties, as a member of U of T's athletic instruction roster, include lectures and practical demonstrations to the PHE classes and assistance to Mr. McCutcheon and Miss Boyd in the intramural program. He also coaches the Junior and Intermediate Blue basketballers. Barry makes no promises about the future of the seconds, since they seem to be off on the wrong foot, but he does hope that Adams and Henderson, down from the Blues, will aid their chances considerably.

His Juniors Are Top

The Juniors, on the other hand, are leading their group and are developing players of a sound calibre. Barry's special interest in them ties in with his conviction that "you have to build from the bottom" to get a champion in any sport. His institution of early-morning clinics at Varsity in September and October is the beginning of an era which may see Varsity rise to contender status in major hoop circles. In the same connection, Barry, cooperating with Dalt White of the Ontario Health Department, supervised fall, week-end clinics in various sectors of the province.

At present, Barry "vacations" in summer by working on a Master's Degree in PHE at New York University. This holiday grind will last one more summer and Mr. Lowes will then be prepared for a full-time contribution to the athletic-training field. Wherever he does set up camp, Toronto, Varsity, and sport in general are going to be proud of the job he does.

Small Faculty Reaches Goal In I.S.S. Drive

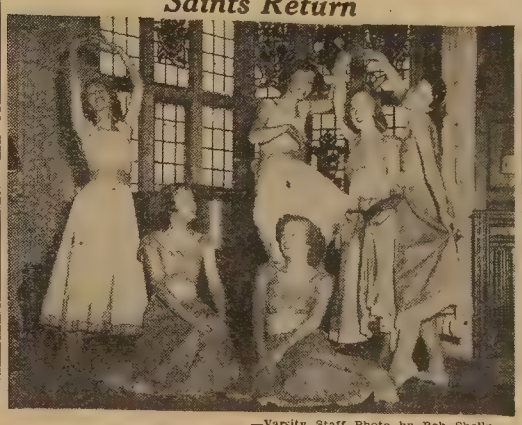
Warren Goldring, local I.S.S. chairman announced last night that $2,000 has been raised in the relief campaign so far. Of this amount approximately $1,100 has come from individual students contributing a dollar.

He went on to announce that the School of Nursing have raised 99% of their quota, and it is expected they will exceed it to-night. Goldring pointed out that students who wish to take advantage of the entertainment provided by I.S.S. this week, may purchase the dollar cards from the places of entertainment, or from their college and faculty representatives.

"There will be a full scale tag on Friday," said Goldring, "It will give students an opportunity of contributing a smaller amount than one dollar. For those who have purchased the dollar card, there will be a Derby dance in UC to-day at 4 o'clock, and noon-hour ski movies in the Therapy huts. To-morrow, Trinity are having a concert, and in the evening, another concert will be presented by Meds and Music combined. If the students watch The Varsity, there will be announcements of all the big events of the campaign."

Commenting on the campaign yesterday, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, SAC President said, "It seems to be going well so far, but not much more than one-tenth of the objective has been raised.

Robin Godfrey Winners To Be Staged By Guild



University Players Guild will present the three winning Robin Godfrey plays, written, directed and acted by U.C. students this Thursday at 8.15 in the Women's Union.

"Bonanza", by Alex Dixon, IV Pol. Sci. and Econ., won first prize in this year's contest. It is a satire on ardent fans of quiz programs who disrupt their lives after winning a contest. Sheila Craig directs the play in which Isabel Ward, Joyce Kamens and Murray Cohl are featured.

"Double Engagement", second prize winner, was written by Hugh Shaw, first year student. Its action takes place during the war on an air-base in England. It is directed by Alvin Shaw.

The third prize winner, "Farewell Hope" by Raymond Baker, completes the bill for the last studio night for the year. Eric House directs this story of an artist whose mind has been warped by an unhappy love affair. Its all-star cast includes Christopher Taylor, Bea Goldberg and John Howe.

Saints Return

Thousands Die On Journey In Search For Education

With the help of $5,000 from ISS of Canada an urgently needed student hostel will be built in Bombay, India, to help penniless students like M. A. Hasan and A. Inamuddin.

A year ago these two Indian students were studying engineering. All was well, except that the two students were Moslems in a Hindu area. When religious warfare broke out they were forced to leave their remote city, Patha-Bitar, and make their way to Moslem India.

The two students were lucky in their journey. Thousands of their compatriots died, but they made their destination. They travelled first to Calcutta and then made the hazardous journey across central India to Bombay where they found a ship to take them to Karachi where they arrived after a journey of two months.

They found themselves in a strange city packed with refugees like themselves. They had no money yet they wanted to resume their studies. But Moslem students from all parts of Hindu India were also clamouring for a place in the university.

For three months Hasan and Inamuddin pleaded with university authorities who finally admitted them to the engineering school, nearly a full academic year after they had been forced to leave Patha Bitar.

SAC Meeting

The Students' Administrative Council will discuss several important committee reports at its meeting in the Medical Board Room in the Medical Building.

One of the more important reports discussed will be the NFCUS brief on the text book problem, which will be presented to the SAC for forwarding to the Board of Governors.

The meeting will start at 7:00 p.m.

Frantic Search For Space Ends In 'Saints' Success

"Saints Alive's" co-authors, MacMillan and Bryden, Director Michael Ney and their Trinity College cast suddenly discovered early this week that hitherto unavailable Hart House Theatre had unexpectedly become available for next Monday night.

With the aim of donating proceeds from the performance to ISS, the producers had been searching frantically for some other place and time to produce the show a second night. Tickets for the original night, Saturday, February 12, were sold out completely after a day and a half on sale.

Giving up all hope of obtaining busy Hart House for another night, producers MacMillan and Bryden soft-pedalled all publicity, turned would-be customers away from the box office. Fortified with the idea of another cast party, as well as that of providing funds for ISS, cast members have cancelled previous dates and are getting ready for another stand.

Canadian Students Will Fly To Europe For Reduced Price

Plans to fly Canadian students to Europe next summer for as little as $350 return fare were given the go-ahead signal by the national executive of The National Federation of Canadian Univrsity Students at a meeting held over last week-end in Hamilton, National President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy announced yesterday.

Room For 40

NFCUS will organize a scheme to fly students on TCA planes from Montreal to London, provided at least 40 students are interested. Further details are expected within the next couple of weeks, Gwynne-Timothy stated.

The national executive also decided that the proposed Quebec Seminar will not be held this summer. A grant of $16,000 has been received from the Quebec government to assist the Seminar, but NFCUS officials felt that there was too little time between now and August to adequately organize the project. The Seminar will be held during the summer of 1950, and will tackle the problem of "Canadian Unity".

Fees Brief

Plans to present a fees brief from NFCUS to the federal government were discussed.

"We intend to take the Toronto brief and revise it to meet the terms of the resolution on fees adopted by the national convention held in Montreal at Christmas," Gwynne-Timothy explained. "It is hoped that this will be ready in time for presentation in the fall." The Christmas NFCUS resolution called for a continuation and extension of the Dominion-Provincial Scholarship program, and a continuation of sustaining grants to universities on a per student basis as has been done under DVA.

May Meet in Ottawa

The national executive also decided that the September Conference will be held in Ottawa this year if possible. Officials hope to hold the conference in early September and plan to have a longer session to allow more time for delegates to discuss problems.

NFCUS will proceed with its national investigation of the textbook problem. A complete report is expected by March 15, Gwynne-Timothy said.

Other matters discussed included the question of sending observers to the Assembly of The International Union of Students in Europe next summer and a proposal to invite the Memorial College in Newfoundland to join NFCUS when Newfoundland becomes a province.

Vice-presidents from the Maritime, Quebec, Ontario, and Western Regions attended the conference. "We worked pretty hard," Gwynne-Timothy said, explaining that the executive covered most of the work they had on hand. "We have re-allocated a lot of the jobs on a regional basis," he said, "and hope that this way the work will be spread more evenly and will go faster."

Confidence Vote Vindicates Staff Of Vic Magazine

A vote of complete confidence in the editor and staff of Acta Victoriana was passed unanimously by the Victoria College Union Assembly at its Monday night session.

In reply to student complaints about over-balanced literary nature and low interest value of the college magazine, editor Doug Fisher presented a 25-minute report giving the staff side of the question. While admitting the Acta staff was not entirely satisfied and realized Acta's room for improvement, Fisher pointed out the difficulty in soliciting material from student contributors.

"We have made an honest effort to provide a wide number of interests in the past three issues," he said to the criticism that Acta was dominated by a "highbrow English Lang and Lit clique," and lacked coverage of Vic events. Fisher mentioned articles printed in past issues on VCU finances, World Government, Newfoundland, sports, etc.

A Keith Davey motion that the staff include in its out-going report to the new staff recommendations for a better-balanced magazine more closely reflecting Victoria interests was defeated.

The Book Problem

Summarizes Highlights Of Survey

In this article Harrison concludes his investigation of the Book Problem on Canadian Campi.

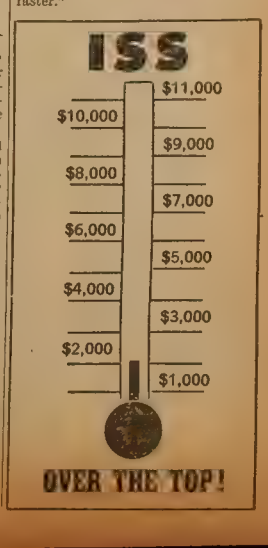
By WILS HARRISON

In this, the last article on the book problem, I will summarize the paramount points, which cropped up during the course of my investigation into the text book situation.

You will remember the predominant factor, which arose from the Cole interview, was the one of the constant changing of texts, sometimes for very minor reasons. This one fact was also substantiated when I had the interview with Pete Horner of Horner and Bowes. He, as well as Jack Cole, pointed to the necessity of having a prepared list of texts made in adequate time for all the book stores and exchanges to make note of the books to be used on the various courses. This would not only save the students money, but would also give the book stores and exchanges something concrete to work on and save loading themselves down with books which would not be required. The students would be saving money because they would not be buying books from the calendar, later to find them of no use or a different edition preferred by the lecturer.

Faculty Had Helped

In my interview with Dean Young, I found that many of the faculty members were assisting the students in every way possible. Both Cole and Horner stated the same fact, that many of the faculty members did give co-operation in the naming of the texts they would use. Dean Young also pointed out that at times there were books appearing on the market, which were much better texts for student use than the one listed in the calendar, and which, at the time of preparing the list for the calendar, the staff knew nothing about.



The point raised here is, whenever such a change is necessitated, the book stores and the exchanges should be notified as soon as possible. If the book stores cannot be notified of the change before the fall session of university commences, the only solution for students is to wait until after the first lecture before purchasing any texts. In all events the professors should give due consideration to any alterations of texts from the prepared list, bearing in mind the burden placed on students by asking for a change or by asking for a wide variety of texts at all levels

Offers First Remedy

My fourth and fifth articles, which covered my interview with Mr. Burns of the Press and the review of the NFCUS report, respectively, showed that the Press was using restrictive measures to keep the price of texts high and that book store operators across the Dominion were all agreed the mark-up policy on texts imported through exclusive Canadian representatives from American firms was not justified. These importing firms had neither duty nor sales charges to pay on the imported books. The first point could be remedied by an alteration of the policy of the Press towards private book sellers whereby it would sell them texts at the regular rate whether they can undersell the Press or not. The second factor raised could be remedied by purchasing the American texts directly from the book publishers in the United States.

In the 22 universities canvassed by the questionnaire, it was shown that three of the universities questioned had book stores operated by the students. The three universities were Queen's, The Ontario Agriculture College and St. Francis Xavier. A reply to a letter I sent to the editor of the Queen's Journal gives the following information regarding the operation of their students' book store and exchange: The book store, operated by the Engineering Society, sells technical supplies and takes in used texts to sell. The store takes 15% commission for the sale of used texts. The Technical Supplies, the name given to the book store, gives a 10% discount to students on sales over the counter of books and stationery. This discount is in the form of coupons good for purchases in this store. Most sales

Something Tangible

In today's issue Assistant News Editor Wils Harrison winds up his series of articles on the local textbook problem.

Although students on this campus have struggled along for years facing unsatisfactory conditions, little has been done to mitigate the conditions. And although various disgruntled voices have arisen in the past, it has been only recently that any comprehensive survey has been taken.

With the information now available it is evident that certain abuses exist on the campus. Not least of these is the attitude of the University Press which persists in charging high prices for texts and refuses to furnish texts to commercial booksellers who can undersell the campus book store. When the University's own book store—ostensibly a student service—neglects that function to promote profits, then it is time for a change. Or is the University Press a commercial profit-seeking venture? If so, it has been masquerading under false pretenses.

In any case, the matter should not be allowed to drop now. The Students' Administrative Council meeting tonight will discuss a brief on the book problem. If the brief gets the consideration that it should—and there is no reason to suppose it will not—the matter will be placed in the hands of the Board of Governors for its consideration. If any action results, we will have made progress.

Movie Review

Symphonie Pastorale

The film adaptation by Jean Delannoy and Jean Aurenche of Andre Gide's Nobel prize winner, "Symphonie Pastorale," featured at the International Cinema is a masterpiece of subtle, sincere and realistic translation of a work almost exclusively introspective into visual images.

The dominant quality of the film is its emotional intensity, which is so strong that movie-goers on this continent may find it hard to take. The feeling that sustained show of emotion is repellent has been ingrained in us by our society, so that we are ashamed of honest feelings if they are strong and vital. There is something of hypocrisy in our attitude. We miss much of life because we are afraid to live our emotions to their full depth. Of what use is our self-restraint when it sterilizes our activities of joy and sorrow, love and hate, which are the essence of life?

The picture photographically portrays the story of a mountain pastor and his wife who take a blind orphan girl into their home. Pierre Blanchar's intelligent and sensitive interpretation of the role of the pastor who deliberately hides from himself the fact that he has fallen in love with a beautiful blind girl is literally a screen triumph. Nearly as well done is Michele Morgan's portrayal of the perhaps more difficult part of the emotionally responsive blind girl who, when forced to choose between the pastor and his son, accepted neither but rushed to the highly dramatic climax of the film story. The sheer acting ability displayed by Line Noro as a wife and mother who sees the family ties that exist among her loved ones become hopelessly distorted is beyond description.

The entire film represents a high level of artistic endeavour.

Junior Bees Top Marlies As McDougal Scores Duo

By ED SOKOLOWSK

The Varsity Junior Hockey squad gained another two points last night when they defeated the Marlboro Juniors 5-2 in the second game of a double header at the Varsity Arena. The St. Mike's Buzzers moved to tie for second place with Corner Boys when they defeated the Corner Boys 3-2 for their fourth straight win.

The first game again was the better of the two and even a minor brawl was included at the end of the game. Seventeen penalties were dished out in the second fixture while only six minor penalties were given out by referee Perc Allen in the game between Varsity and the Marlboros.

The Varsity Juniors now have a four point lead in the Junior B circuit with the Corner Boys and the St. Mike's Buzzers deadlocked for second spot. The Marlies now hold the cellar.

The Varsity Bees seemed to have improved since their last game and gave a good display of two-way hockey.

Ron Hurst started the scoring for the Marlies with his teammate Paul Oliver helping out. Jack Raftis got that one back four minutes later with Artie Holmes assisting.

Porky MacDougal broke the tie in the second frame after Phil Arrowsmith shot the puck out from the corner and Porky banged it in. Porky later added another goal in the middle frame when he beat goalie Vic Hunt from a way out.

Irwin brought the score a little closer together in the final stanze on a pass from Ron Hurst. The Juniors began to play even better hockey and they scored twice more in the last period. Phil Arrowsmith scored at the 6.55 mark when defenceman Porky MacDougal set him up. Jack Raftis tallied the last and best goal of the game. Artie Holmes and Al Conboy carried the puck up and Jack Raftis received a pass and went in on Hunt to outsmart him and score.

The Book Problem

of used text books are made through notices posted on the bulletin boards. The conventional second hand price asked for used books is two-thirds of the original cost.

Western Exchange

A similar letter sent to the editor of the Western Gazette, in London, revealed that students on the Western campus did not operate their own book store but did operate a book exchange. This exchange is managed by students, who obtain a franchise for running the store from the Student's Council. The students operating the exchange get all the profits, which amount to 5% on each book. At the end of the year, the students turn in a report on all transactions. The Student's Council audits the books. When the exchange closes, any books not sold or picked up by the owners within two or three weeks, become the property of the book exchange.

Both the exchanges operated by the two universities and the student-operated book store at Queen's could well serve as an example of remedies to meet the situation on our own campus.

That is the story of the book problem as I found it. The remedies are obvious. It now remains for appropriate action to be taken.
